When the Crest must be Removed.

When the Crests are very heavy we cut them off, but they must not be cut too near, or the eyes of the bird may be injured. The young birds should not be given water the last thing at night, as they nearly always dip their heads in, and begin to wash themselves, and many birds are lost in this way, through catching a chill. We like the enamel drinkers, as they may be scoured with boiling water without fear of breaking.

It is very often found that large birds, just as they begin to peck, get neglected by the parents and begin to cry for food. Such birds should be taken in hand at once and fed by hand. We have saved several good birds in this way, but if you have other birds feeding about the same size or age, put these birds in with the other brood and they will generally take to them. A scalded Osborne biscuit once or twice a week will make a good soft food, but don't give the young birds too much sloppy food.

Care should be taken to change the food once or twice, if possible, every day, as the cause of the death of many young Canaries is sour food. Fanciers very often find nests of young dead, with their crops full. In many such cases sour or bad egg-food must have been the cause, and if success is to be attained these small items must be given the greatest attention.

The best time to make egg-food is overnight, and give the birds a supply at night, in the tray, ready for the morning, as birds are about very early, and the food will keep good and sweet for the night.

Mr. Norman's grand coloured plate should set fanciers thinking, especially those who are breeding for yellows. It shows four grand ideal specimens to breed to, such lovely, broad leafy feathers. The self-green looks charming, and the clear Crest is grand, as are the dark Crest and even wing-marked. They all reflect great credit on the artist.

THE MASTER SINGER OF THE CANARY TRIBE

By J. TOML·NSON.

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

NO difficulty should be experienced in distinguishing the Glucke: it is known by the names of the Hard, Dry, and Hollow Glucke, but they all refer to one and the same tour. There has been a great demand for this class of singer, and I am inclined to believe that sufficient care has not been exercised in the choice of the breeding stock for its production, as many birds that are called Glucke can lay very little claim to the title, judging from their abilities to sing a good bass-voiced Glucke tour. It may also be said to be a forgettable tour, as we find many birds will gradually leave it out of their song, and some will be found to bring one of the water tours to recompense the loss of the Glucke. Yet in spite of this there is no doubt that it is a very acceptable addition to our bird's song.

Different Tones of the Voice.

A good tour will be as a deep sounding Gluck-Gluck Gluck-Gluck, with a distinct break between each note, as in the case of the flute note. The bird's throat will be noticed to rise and fall, the beak will open slightly, and as each note is emitted it will be noticed to nearly close again. The Bell Glucke does not appear to be so popular as the Hollow Glucke, and some of our old fanciers care nothing about it. If I might class the tone of the Roller's voice under the three headings, light-toned, medium-toned, and deep or heavy toned, it will be found that the second-named, as well as the third, is capable of delivering this tour in its best form.

To revert to the Hollow Bell, the same may be said of this tour; the medium-toned bird's voice lends itself very kindly in bringing out, or delivering a clear and ringing bell note. In singing the Bell Glucke, the throat will be noticed to vibrate, and the beak will partly open, and nearly close again on each beat of the bell. The sounds emitted are Gluck-Gluck-Gluck-Gluck, together with a clear and distinct bell note (or the ring of an anvil being struck with a hammer), and they form one of the nicest tours we have. It is quite a separate tour from the Hollow Glucke, and should be regarded as such. It is also more difficult to sing, because it is more difficult for a bird to sing a double tour, or two separate notes at the same time, than it is for it to sing a single tour.

The Most Difficult Tour of all.

Probably there will be fanciers who will not agree with my views on the Bell Glucke. I have no desire to force my opinions on any who read these lines, but I would with all deference to their views point out that the trio of tours comprising the re-introduced Koller tour make this the most difficult song passage the Roller can produce—difficult because of having to sing at the same time a blending of three tours. And I base my contention on this, i.e., that if this combination is the most difficult, because of the diphthongs, or of the rapid moving of the vocal organs from one consonant position, or one vowel position, to another, then two combined tours must be harder to produce than a single one; so credit should be given on the show bench to birds singing a Bell Glucke, quite apart from the points that are awarded for the Hollow Glucke.

Unpopular with Lancashire Lads.

For some time past some of my Lancashire friends have spoken strongly against an objectionable clattering and flat-sounding Glucke tour, and have said that if steps were not immediately taken to breed and train it out, we should ultimately be back again with the "chop." A German gentleman—Herr Frisch—has now named this tour for us as the Flat Glucke. While staying at the home of one of my London fancier friends, I had the opportunity of studying this tour in one of his own birds. This bird was, if my memory serves me correctly, about six years old, and had been imported from Germany. It had a depth of tone that is rarely heard, and, in addition to the different water tours, sang the Hollow, the Bell, and the Flat Glucke, which, like the former two, when once it has been heard, cannot be misconstrued. I came to the conclusion that in the beginning it had sprung from birds singing a flat-toned Bell Glucke, and that it was possible for other birds of the Glucke strain to learn it if they were kept in the company of a bird that sang it. I should not say that it was "choppy," because of the flat tone of voice it is sung in, but rather a clattering similar to the sound that would be given off by clattering two cracked earthenware plates together. The bird singing the tour will be noticed to close the beak at each sound or beat, but the throat vibrates the same as in singing the Bell Glucke.

A Tour like Bubbling Water.

Coming to the water tours, we have three that may be called companion tours and rolls. The Water Glucke is heard delivered more or less in a watery tone; it has been described as sounding similar to the noise emitted when emptying a bottle of water. It may also be described as a very rapidly repeated Gluck-Gluck-Gluck-Glock, slightly watery in tone, and with one note running so closely into the other as to appear as though a roll is being sung. This is so conspicuous in some singers that it is doubtful whether the bird is bringing out the Water Glucke or Water Roll, but the deciding vote should be for a Water Glucke if a beat be recognised in each of the rapidly-repeated Gluckes, and especially if the beak is also observed to slightly open and close as each note is sung. There is quite a contrast between the Water Glucke and the Glucke tours, as I have already mentioned. The Gluck-Gluck-Gluck of the Glucke tour is slowly and distinctly pronounced, whereas in the Water Glucke it is delivered very rapidly, hardly so deep in tone, and with less pronunciation on the word Gluck.

In the Deep Bubbling Water Tour, we hear a distinct watery, bubbling sound, which is unfortunately sung all too short. It is a catchy tour, sung with a closed beak, and a quick, vibrating movement of the throat, the tone being deeper than in the Water Roll, and may sound very similar to a Bass Roll, but it is not so deep in tone as the latter, and has a distinct "watery" intonation. It is a merry and lively tour when delivered rising, or rising and falling. Some birds on leaving their Bass Roll will go straight on to a Water Roll, showing the latter as being a little higher, and watery; it is also sung with a closed beak and vibrating movement of the throat.

The Sounds Vocalised.

After the fancier has learned to distinguish the different tours and rolls, he will begin to notice the consonants and the vowels which go to make up the difference in tone, and also the naming of the song passages. In the Hollow Roll a medium roll may be described as the consonant r: add the long accented vowel u, and form a rolling ur, and we get a deeper toned roll; change the vowel again, and use the short e, as er, and we get a light toned Hollow Roll. In a light toned Hollow Bell tour, we hear the distinct fricative consonant l, the tip of the bird's tongue meeting the roof of the mouth with each beat of the l. In a deeper tone, or what I should term a classical hollow bell, we get the short accented vowel u, combined with the consonant l. In singing the vowel the middle of the tongue is raised, therefore in a good tour we observe the tongue moving to the roof of the mouth, and hear the combined ululul.

In a light or medium-toned Scheckel tour, we hear the vowel u, as a quickly delivered u-u-u-u-u, and this is the Scheckel which is often confused with the Hollow Bell. Probably it may be termed a flat toned Hollow Bell, but I should prefer to call it a Scheckel, because the sound of the l is absent which goes to make the sound of a Bell Tour; also if the l is not pronounced, but only the u, the tip of the tongue will not rise to the roof of the mouth, therefore there is no bell in the tour, hence my opinion that it is a Schockel. In a good or classical Schockel we get the long accented vowel o, sounding as hoo-hoo, using the silent h.

A New Song Passage.

In the Bell Roll we get the short vowel e, together with the consonant r, forming a rolling er, but pitched in a higher tone of voice than a light toned hollow roll would be. The Bell Tour is the quickly-delivered consonant l; this also would be pitched higher than in the case of the Hollow Bell tour. In the Glucke we hear the short vowel u, changing, in a deeper toned bird, to a slight diphthong as in (if I may coin a word) Glouck. The consonant d and the long vowel o, or u, may be distinguished in the deep Flute notes, changing the vowel to the long e, as dee in a tour of poorer quality.

I have not had the opportunity of studying the Koller tour; it is a new song passage to most of our English fanciers. I have heard it sung twice, but the birds were not classical on this tour, and sang it very short, when it gave me the impression as being a peculiar Hollow Glucke tour. The German fanciers inform us that it is composed of three different tours, the Glucke, Bass, and Hollow Roll. I have now described all the good tours and rolls, and will explain those faults which are the most often heard.

The Aufzug; A Frequent Fault.

One of the faulty song passages frequently heard is the Aufzug, "Ouftsug, a rising voice." It is usually pronounced amongst our English Roller fanciers as Offzug, or again as Ofsug. This rising, voice tearing song passage is a production that cannot literally lay any claim to being either a roll or a tour. In singing it the bird usually commences in rather a low tone, and raises its voice quickly in one straight tone, obstructing the breath either at the back of the mouth with the tongue, or in the throat, which gives a hard, rasping sound—a sound that will jar on the human ear according to the severity of the tone, or the amount of voice power the bird uses to produce it.

Even when delivered in one of its least offensive styles, it is a difficult rendering to define in writing. A sound that always brings to my mind the Hard Aufzug, as it is called when the bird delivers it in a very objectionable way, is the rising drawn out "Chee" or "Zee" of our English Greenfinch. The nature of the sound heard in the Hard Aufzug, or the Aufzug, gives one the impression that the breath is being forcibly drawn, and some of our fanciers say that this is the case. Personally I have not determined whether this is so, or whether towards the middle of the song passage the voice is forcibly emitted.

ANOTHER GEM FROM SCOTLAND.

The "Land o' Cakes" is noted for its Mules and Hybrids, and our illustration depicts the fine Linnet Mule exhibited so successfully by Mr. J. Prattis, of Lauriston, last season, for whom it secured 2nd at the Scottish National show, amongst other honours.

THE PLEASURES OF FOREIGN BIRD KEEPING IN AN AVIARY.

By Mrs. A. Lester (SYDENHAM).

ONLY those who keep their feathered family in a garden aviary can fully realise the endless pleasure to be got from such an arrangement, besides the absence of domestic friction over scattered seed and general mess, not to mention mice. Not that the mice will not follow; they will do their level best to share quarters with the birds, but double ½in. wire netting placed close, with holes not matching, will do the trick, and another layer outside, two inches or so away, will settle the feline question. Then you are safe, and away you go on a real pleasure trip. Without the close double wire, you may find, as did the writer one day, a husk full of baby mice, snug and cosy, with father and mother in charge! Without the extra netting against cats, you may also share the writer's experience, and find a valuable newly-purchased bird lying dead inside the aviary, and one of its legs on the gravel path outside, with pussie's muddy paw marks distinctly showing on the wirework. These sad happenings are hard to bear, and one would be glad to warn beginners.

A Happy Notion.

My present aviary began life as a builder's "pay-box" (secured cheaply). A large window was put in on one side and an entrance porch with half-wire door added at one end, the porch containing shelves for seed jars and appliances. The other end was fitted with a narrow door, and removable partitions, and to it was attached a wired-flight, 7ft. 6in. in height, partly boarded and felted for roof, and about a quarter open to the sky (wired). Here is a wide shelf, or platform, a favourite place for general observation and discussion, and frequently at this season used as a "fighting ring." But the place is too roomy for much harm to result, except an occasional ragged feather, and many a laugh we have at the impudent antics of the birds. One Greenie Mule (bred under that roof) stands there and sings until he trembles from head to tail, and dares another cock of any size to mount that rostrum. He is "Jack the Fighter," and a fairly ragged coat he gets at times, but moulting time leaves him like wax, and on we go again. Then when all the Finches have gone to roost, comes a Pekin Robin or a Blackbird to that shelf under the sky to sing a last sweet song. The house is painted white inside all through, and a bright garden green outside, and the flight is tiled with 6in. red tiles, and drained. To take brush and water and scrub and swill it all down takes only a few minutes, and then how bright and clean it looks. Part of a tree swinging by a thick copper wire, and some branches of a beech tree and a swing or two, complete the flight, and inside the house, plenty of perches, and, in breeding time, husks and nesting receptacles.

Both Interesting and Good Fun.

Such a home for one's birds gives endless pleasure to the owner, and is always of interest to friends. The birds live all through the winter in health and strength, singing lustily during the dreariest days. Ailments are very few, and even birds that have been wheezing indoors may sometimes be cured by being put outside, provided, of course, that the change be made during mild and settled weather. Even the ice may have to be broken for one's birds to drink and bathe, and still they will sing. The constant fresh air and movement in free flight make for lovely birds. Then the fun of watching a mixed lot of birds is good sport. Here is a grave sullen-looking Ribbon Finch, hissing and screwing his neck round, and finally bouncing suddenly out of his husk to catch a rude little Zebra Finch cock who will keep on peeping in at his doorway, and who always manages to just get away in time, however long they keep up the game. Then there is the Java Sparrow cock, bowing slowly three times, and then dancing up and down while he sings to his mate. Maybe the little Zebra sets up house-keeping, and we see him being chased all over the ground by a little group of tiny vigorous babies all intent on cornering him; then comes that curious pumping operation when they are being fed.

All these things one may see with practically little or no trouble—a constant daily delight! In the aviary described, scores of birds have been bred, chiefly foreigners, and some Canaries and Mules. I generally bring indoors the best Canaries and pair them in the usual breeding cages, putting out the youngsters as soon as they can safely look after themselves. Bird-keeping is one of the most charming of hobbies for those who love nature and nature's ways.

A Linnet Which Has Turned Almost White.

Sir,—A friend of mine, Mr. F. Parsons, of Totterdown, Bristol, purchased a Linnet about three years ago, and now it has turned nearly white. Through the medium of your paper, Cage Birds, I should be glad to hear if any fancier could throw any light on the Linnet changing its colour in this manner.

A Last Appeal to Members of the Annfield Plain F. & F.C.B.S.

Sir,—I shall be greatly indebted to members if they will kindly attend our next meeting, May 10, Queen's Hotel, at 7.30, to consider the society's affairs. I have already called three meetings without success; this is my last appeal. A motion was passed at last meeting to run only cage birds and bantams. Members please attend and express your views.

Are "Breeders' Cups" a Success?

Sir,—Owing to divergencies of opinion concerning breeders' cups, I should be glad if secretaries and others will kindly give through the columns of Cage Birds their experiences as to whether the competition for breeders' cups has been found to be successful or otherwise. That is to say, has it worked harmoniously, and with no ill effects to the societies adopting the competition, that only birds bred by the exhibitor can compete for the said cup?

The Breeding of Yellows from Two Buffs.

The Effect of Thunder on Eggs.

Sir,—Much as I appreciate Mr. J. Robson's lecture published last week I was not much struck on his answer given to Mr. T. D. Jackson. The question asked was: "Is it possible to breed yellows from two buffs, and if not, why not?" The answer was: "I have heard of it being done, but think it is supposition, as I do not believe it possible." I know by my own experience, however, that it is quite possible to breed a yellow from two buffs, the same as it is buffs from two yellows. I have done this both from Norwich and Cinnamons. I have experimented a few times in 27 years in this respect. I find it a royal road to success to get that nice salmon undercolour with good frosting, or meal. Therefore I conclude that Mr. Robson's answer is misleading, more especially to young fanciers. My advice is, try it and see; only work upon the right material to do it. As regard thunder affecting young birds in the shell, should the eggs be on the change, I feel confident that thunder does addle and spoil the eggs (just as it affects milk). I would like to say more on these subjects, but time won't allow. I hope Mr. Robson will take this letter in a friendly spirit.

The R.S.P.C.A. and the Hobby of Bird-keeping.

Sir,—The letter of Mr. J. W. Cutmore, which purports to be a reply to my letter, is practically a duplicate of his first letter, and it almost seems that, in his frantic efforts to burke the points I raised, he has blundered into the dank pastures of evasion. As this matter is far more important than it at first sight seems, I feel I must crave your indulgence while I elaborate upon the two (for there are only two now that the "political" aspect is barred) points I touched upon in my last letter, in order to give Mr. Cutmore another chance of replying. I have not denied that cruelty possibly exists in the direction (and possibly also to the extent) that Mr. Cutmore has indicated, what I have said is that it is eminently unwise to attempt to answer the charges of the R.S.P.C.A. by bringing charges against others. On the face of it, it destroys all right to immunity from attack in our own hobby. Such a sentence also as "there is a far greater field for the attention of the R.S.P.C.A. in . . . . . " is obviously by inference an admission that the Fancy presents a "field for attention" also, if only a small one. We must fight our case on its own merits, for to attempt to hide the issue behind extraneous subjects is vain, and inspires the idea in our enemies that we cannot defend our position. In regard to the second point, I am afraid, sir, you are just as culpable as Mr. Cutmore. I want you, please to receive these remarks in the friendly spirit they are intended, and as the honest expression of the opinions of one who has the best interests of the Fancy at heart. Do you think, when you have Mr. Fulljames in one part of your paper doing his utmost to defeat the designs of the R.S.P.C.A., and inspiring and banding together fanciers to form a league for the protection of the Fancy, that it is wise to print in another column of your paper such sentences as that the Fancy is "easy prey," and that "the poor man must not keep a bird in a cage," thereby not only adding to Mr. Fulljames' difficulties, but also discouraging our friends and encouraging our enemies? It is idle to plead that you are not responsible for the opinions of your correspondents, you, as the guardian of the Fancy, should exercise a wise discrimination in the letters you print, and not sully your pages with letters which anticipate defeat (as Mr. Cutmore's distinctly does).

A. R. Coe.

Mr. Coe's attitude, we must frankly say, is incomprehensible to us. We cannot see anything in Mr. Cutmore's letters which implies "anticipated defeat." Further, is it not true that "poor men" have been prosecuted and that they have been "easy prey" when fighting their cases themselves—mainly by reason of the fact that they were unfortunate enough to be poor? In properly defended cases the percentage of successful prosecutions is almost negligible—surely the moral that fanciers should unite for protection and make their voices heard is obvious. We are sorry to differ with Mr. Coe, but we say most emphatically that it is scandalous that certain of the "sports," etc., enumerated by Mr. Cutmore should be tacitly winked at by a society like the R.S.P.C.A., whilst bird-dealers are being unjustly (vide the remarks of more than one magistrate) harried.—Editor.

Hearing the Song of the Nightingale.

Sir,—Seeing that "Irishman" would like to hear the song of the Nightingale, if he comes down to Sheringham (Norfolk) before the end of July he can hear dozens of them in Sheringham Woods by night or day. The woods are grand to walk through. Nightingales were doing their best on Sunday night last.

A Robin's Nest in a Pulpit.

Sir,—The following kindly act of one of our local clergy may interest your readers. At Colinton (a pretty little village about four miles from Edinburgh, whose sheltered woods are a regular haunt of countless birds), a pair of Robins, attracted no doubt by the week-day quietness of the place, have built their nest in the pulpit of the ancient Parish Church. Last Sunday found the hen sitting on her eggs when the church officer arrived to open the church for service. For a few minutes consternation prevailed in the minds of the parent birds, but the clergyman, on being informed of the unusual and interesting fact, at once decided to leave them undisturbed, and conducted the whole service from the lectern instead.

NOTED BREEDER'S FOUR-LEGGED NORWICH PLAINHEAD.

This photograph is of the young bird described by Mr. E. Baker, of Cowes, in the note published on page 390 last week. Affairs of the Bush Hill Park F.S

Sir,—When is the secretary of the Bush Hill Park F.S. going to call a general meeting, and let us know the position of the society for 1912?

A Noted Siskin Mule that is a Household Pet.

Sir,—I can scarcely tell you how delighted my son was at seeing a picture of his favourite Siskin Mule, "Kelly," honoured with a place in Cage Birds last week. The bird has, as you say, won him many honours, taking first prizes at the Crystal Palace, Scottish National, Newcastle, Gateshead, Blaydon, Wallsend, etc., Shows. It has been much sought after, but it is a household pet, and if I dared to sell him I would have the whole family up in arms. In fact, Mrs. J. swears that if I should sell him she will never give my birds another drink of water! So I am afraid it would be dangerous to do so, as she is about as keen on birds as myself, and a big help to me. I wish Cage Birds continued prosperity, and thank Mr. Norman for his splendid picture of the Siskin Mule.

THE STOCK BOOK

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for every-one, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

Two Eggs in One Day.

Sir,—Please allow me to thank Mr. Everard for so kindly replying to my question re two eggs in one day. The imperfect egg, I should have mentioned, I threw away, as the skin had been pricked, but the other two eggs (she laid three) I let her sit for fifteen days, when I took them out, and broke them. One of them (the first egg she laid) dried up in the shell, and the other one (one of the "twin" eggs) was unfertile. Again thanking Mr. Everard for his kindness, and wishing him (and fanciers generally) a successful breeding season.

The Southern Norwich Plainhead Club's Classification.

Are Clears unfairly Handicapped against Invisible Ticked Birds?

Sir,—I am sorry that such an excellent fancier and friend as Mr. Rowe has for years proved himself to be, should have thought it necessary to object to the classification laid down by the S.N.P.C., and adopted by the Western Counties Ornithological Society. Mr. Rowe must remember, and no doubt does, that the classification is the result of much serious discussion by the Fancy some time ago. Many arguments were adduced in its favour in that discussion, the most powerful being the possible inability of judges to always determine accurately whether a bird was ticked or not without catching every bird in the class, and subjecting same to a severe scrutiny. This was felt by the Fancy to be a bad process, and very risky into the bargain, as however careful a judge may be, there was always a strong probability that some birds would get damaged. Moreover, many ticked birds actually got through as "clears," so minute and difficult to find was the tick. And, again, there was the possibility of these minutely ticked birds appearing in a ticked class one day and a clear the next, so easy was the process of transformation, and so difficult of detection. Even when these minutely ticked birds are entered in the ticked class they must of necessity be caught to find the ticks, and for the judge to satisfy himself they are not "clears," and the same risk of damage was present as if the judge was examining for ticks in the clear class. The whole thing was unsatisfactory. Many societies ridiculed it out of existence, and adopted the more sound, easy, safe, and fair classification—"clear or invisible ticked yellow, ditto buff." It has worked well, and I feel sure Mr. Rowe is unnecessarily disturbed when he points to the old "ideal of clear," and concludes that the tremendous difference in colour of an invisible tick is going to give the latter bird such a great superiority in a class for clears or invisible ticks. His extreme nervousness over the fate of the clear bird is, I think, not justified, as I am sure he will see on reflection. A clear bird—a good yellow, say—is as valuable to-day as ever it was. Moreover, he must have forgotten in his zeal for the safety of the clear bird—a zeal which is in some respects commendable—that a Norwich bird to-day is not looked upon solely as a bird of colour. Something else is required on the show bench to-day besides colour. Twenty years ago, in the hot pepper craze, it might have been so, but things have changed, and I am sure Mr. Rowe does not object to progress on sound lines. What is wanted now is shape and quality as well as colour; in fact, I believe judges have become quite unanimous upon this arrangement of things—shape, quality, and colour in order of merit named. The pivot upon which the chances of a Norwich bird turn to-day is type. Without type first, and quality next, it is out of the hunt with five judges out of six. Colour is easy enough to get by the use of tasteless pepper if you have a reasonable amount of colour bred in also. It is type and quality, I repeat, that count the heaviest, so that the clear bird is in no danger that way, and I hope Mr. Rowe will recognise this. I feel sure he will do so, and not be dominated by ideas of twenty years ago. On the strength of the old, "as it was in the beginning," etc., doctrine, we might be without "wireless," the 'phone, and be wearing fig leaves, and using bows and arrows. I am quite sure Mr. Rowe is too good a fancier and too good a sportsman to want to return to the old and unsatisfactory order of things.

A Hen Canary's Adventure.

Sir,—Most bird fanciers can recall remarkable incidents connected with their feathered pets, but it is questionable if any can relate anything like that which Mr. Cleberg, Lockerbie Road, on the outskirts of Dumfries has experienced this week. The other morning one of his hen Canaries, which has three young birds, accidentally escaped from his aviary. The bird disappeared, and Mr. Cleberg considered it was lost for ever. His surprise and delight can well be imagined when in the butcher market in Loreburn Street in the centre of the town, where he has an extensive business, the bird was again seen and captured. On being liberated at the aviary later in the day it immediately flew to its nest to attend to its little ones.

Rearing Young Canaries on Bread and Milk.

Sir,—About five years ago I saw an advertisement offering some Canaries for sale, so, being very fond of all kinds of birds, I thought I would venture and try breeding Canaries, and I bought a pair. I got a large wooden biscuit box, and made a breeding cage, putting up a wooden platform and a rope nest. I put the birds in about the beginning of April, and in due course the hen laid five eggs, and from same I hatched out four youngsters. Not being up in the Fancy, and no one breeding birds at the time in this district, I was very anxious to learn what to feed them upon. A person told me he had heard of birds being reared on bread and milk, and in the following manner I reared my birds. I got a slice of bread half across a loaf, put it in a bowl of boiling water, and let it remain there for twenty minutes or more. I then got a small strainer, and pressed all the water out of it. I put about four large tablespoonfuls of milk in a tin and boiled it, adding one teaspoonful of granulated sugar when boiling, and poured the lot over the bread. I then strained off the milk, leaving the bread nice and "crumbly" moist, and gave this three times daily to my birds. I reared the first nest all right, and in the next nest I had three young, one of which died in seven days. I reared seven birds altogether, feeding on this and two leaves daily of dandelion. I never gave them any egg feeding, as I was just commencing the Fancy, and did not know of egg food. I also supplied cracked hemp three times daily.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mule and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

MAKES SUCKING NOISE (Will Pill).—It is not very unusual for a sitting hen to show symptoms of a slight cold, particularly during such a spell of weather as we have lately experienced. If the hen is usually in good health and vigorous, this trouble will probably pass off by the time incubation is completed. To help her to throw it off stick a small crust of stale bread soaked in boiling milk, with four drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed, in the wires next the seed hopper for her to nibble at when she comes off to feed. Put a fresh piece in every morning for four or five days. There was practically no risk of the cock contracting the complaint had he been allowed to remain with the hen.

GROWTH AT TIP OF TOE (W.W.W.).—It is possible for the ball-like substance to be an accumulation of sand and dirt from floor of cage, which has collected and become hardened. If this is so, it only requires the foot soaking in warm water for a few minutes, then carefully manipulate the ball and remove it, but use no force. Rinse foot clean, dry, and smear slightly with vaseline. If this surmise is wrong, then the substance is doubtless an abortive nail-growth, and amputation is the best remedy. This, however, should always be avoided if possible, and if unavoidable, a veterinary or medical man is the best person to do the job. Before deciding on this try bathing the foot daily for a few minutes in a luke-warm solution of Wych Hazel—a teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of warm water—then dry, and apply a drop of the undiluted extract to the place, holding the bird whilst it dries a little. If after a week of this treatment the foot has improved, and is less painful, continue it for a time, when amputation may not be at all necessary. Only the actual experiment could prove whether it would stop bird singing permanently. If in good health otherwise, I should say it probably would not.

EMBONPOINT (F.E.W.).—You omit to say whether the hen is breeding, but I suspect not, if she is excessively fat. If a diet of plain canary seed has no effect, you can do nothing more than give her plenty of exercise, and limit the quantity as well as the quality of her diet. Put her in an aviary or a large flight, not over-crowded with perches, and allow her only a small teaspoonful of solid food per day. Give plain canary as staple, and twice each week reduce the quantity of this by one-half and add half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts rape, millet, niger, and teazle. Give a liberal supply of green food daily. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand, but do not allow waste seeds to accumulate for the bird to fall back upon. Limit diet strictly to this for a month, or until bird is sufficiently reduced. In the drinking water add ten drops of lemon juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the following week give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of dilute sulphuric acid every second day.

IS IT VIBRATION? (P.D.R.).—At first sight your results do really seem to make out a case against vibration as the cause of young dying in shell, but I am more inclined to think the recent weather, and consequently weak embryos or chilled eggs, or both, is at the root of the mischief, and advise you to at least see the results of the next round, for which we may reasonably hope the weather will be more favourable, before forming a definite conclusion. If the weather should prove tolerably fair and your results are again anything like as unsatisfactory, I would advise you to try the following test of the vibration theory. Get some small vibration pads, made of rubber, such as are used to absorb vibration in the cabinets of gramophones and such-like machines. If your cages stand on racks or shelves, fix one of these pads at each corner underneath each cage, and do not set cages flat against the wall, or if it is advisable to do so for safety, then fix another on the back of each cage at each top corner, so that the pads and not cages will rest against wall. If the cages hang on nails, it will only be necessary to fix a pad at each corner on the back, but this will not absorb the vibration so thoroughly as if the cages stood on the pads and were isolated from the wall by pads on back. Then get a friend who is not troubled with this vibration to exchange a clutch or two of common eggs with you, when the results of this round in both situations would afford some more satisfactory clue to work on. If you consider for a moment the number of wild birds, for instance, bred on a railway embankment, where traffic vibration is certainly not at a minimum, you will see that this theory needs very strong and clear proof to carry conviction.

CLEAR EGGS (Novice, J.S.).—We seem to have a plethora of "Novice" signatures this week, hence I am adding initials to distinguish them. You do not say how many pairs, or hens, you are running, but as you have practically one youngster three weeks old to every two clear eggs, you have not done so very badly considering the recent weather conditions. See reply to "Extra Bad," last week; then don't grumble at your first round. When the hens are going to nest again, give to each pair every second day, in addition to the staple diet, a small teaspoonful of egg-food, with half its bulk of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it. On the alternate days give a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, linseed, and teazle. Give two or three fresh crisp leaves of dandelion daily. When the hens have laid their clutches, drop these extras and give only the staple diet whilst sitting.

TIME TO STOP SOFT FOOD (Nosey Parker).—No hard and fast rule could be laid down as to the exact age to stop giving soft-food to the young, as the time must naturally vary according to the vigour and strength of the youngsters. After they are quite separated from the parents you should give a fair quantity, say, a small teaspoonful to each bird daily, or a heaped teaspoonful to every three, and when the birds are eating canary seed quite freely, gradually reduce the soft-food, say, by adding an extra bird to each teaspoonful allowed every week; thus, at the first reduction allow a teaspoonful to every four birds instead of three; a week later allow a teaspoonful to every five birds; and so on until birds are eight or nine weeks old. At this stage you may safely drop the soft-food altogether for a day at a time, and in the course of a fortnight withdraw it to the extent of allowing only a small teaspoonful per bird twice a week. As your only trouble seems to occur during this weaning process, it is quite likely you stop the soft-food too early, but if you adopt the above system you may be sure of being on the safe side, and any extra strong or forward birds that might really be got on seed earlier will take no harm from the little extra soft-food they will get, but rather benefit thereby.

LOSS OF VOICE (Sally).—It is quite useless attempting to breed with either of these birds at present, and it would be most unwise to breed from No. 1 at all. Therefore, as you seem anxious to get to work, the best advice I can give you is to discard these cocks altogether, and substitute a robust healthy bird in good song. The condition of both birds is practically certain to be due to undue exposure to cold draughts or damp. Keep both in a comfortable place, not necessarily very warm, but as equable as possible, well ventilated, but free from draughts and fumes from burning lights in the evenings, and just away from the chilly cold side. In addition to staple diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, every second day for a month. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw seed. A little green-food may be given daily, and a pinch of mixed seed twice a week. In the drinking water add ten drops each of glycerine and lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, every second day for a week, and afterwards twenty drops of the following mixture every second day for a month if necessary:—Mixture: Two drachms each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one drachm each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, and eight grains of iodide of potassium.

SITTING ON NEST (Novice).—As you say you do not know whether the hen is a Mule or a Canary, you had better in the first place find out the fact. Cannot you get some fancier near you to examine the bird and tell you this? If it is a Mule it is useless trying to breed with her. I am not clear what you mean by Linnet marking on wings and eyes. If she is marked in these places with a brownish colour I suspect she is cinnamon-marked, but this might be the case with either Mule or Canary—though the Mule would be least likely of the two. If the hen is a Canary, take away the nest for a week, and feed the birds as advised to "Novice, J.S.," in this issue. You might, in addition, chop finely two mealworms, if any are available, and mix in the egg-food each time. Every second day for a week dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the water, and in the next week add to it six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day. After a week or so give the hen the nest again, and if she again settles down to sit in it without laying, after a reasonable interval, to see if the eggs are forthcoming, give her a clutch of common eggs to hatch out and rear if she will do so.

DIFFICULT HATCHING AND EGG-BINDING (A. E. Long).—(1) There are such a variety of causes which might explain the shells sticking to the young when hatching that it is not possible to single out one with no data to go upon. It may be due to a weakly chick and imperfect absorption of the yolk, or it may be due to a dry tough membrane which clings to both bird and outer shell. In the latter case immersion in warm water for a few moments two or three times on day of date for hatching will frequently prove successful. Exceptionally weak and fragile shells, clumsiness in the hen, too much or unskilful handling, are also probable causes, so you see it is necessary to know some particulars concerning general treatment before advising on such a matter. (2) You ought to have said whether the second egg with which this hen becomes egg-bound is properly shelled when laid. It is, I suspect, due to a weakly constitution, and the first egg, which does not trouble her, is somewhere near the limit of her strength. Next time she is going to nest get a little old mortar, smash it up, and strew over the sand on floor of cage, in addition to giving cuttlefish. Also add to the water every second day 20 drops of whisky and 10 of glycerine. Stop giving dandelion, and substitute chickweed, or flowering heads of groundsel.

IN NEED OF OILING (A Novice, F.B.).—The bird has doubtless been temporarily exposed to draught. See that these exciting causes are quite eliminated for a time, and treat the bird for a fortnight the same as advised for two cocks to "Sally." In the water give first six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece daily for three days. After this give the chlorodyne mixture mentioned in reply referred to for a fortnight, if necessary.

HEN'S CURIOUS BEHAVIOUR (F.H.).—The way your hen behaved on the occasion referred to is decidedly characteristic of nervousness, or stage fright, which would be quite a passing panic, so to speak, perhaps brought about by sudden and unexpected lifting of the cover over the cage. By the bye, what object have you in keeping the cage covered whilst birds are breeding? It will certainly not increase your chances of success, nor help the hen to overcome her nervousness. I suspect this hen will brook very little interference with her nesting arrangements, so you would do well to keep your curiosity in check as much as possible when the young are hatched. Your Mule query should have been on a separate sheet for Mr. Weston. See his column for reply.

A SMALL WHITE SPOT (Novice, Nest-feather).—Sorry, but I cannot give you a cure for that small white spot on the pupil of the eye. It is cataract, and nothing you can do will be of any avail. Whether it will affect the other eye or not only time can show. As a rule, it does affect both eyes, and it is generally only a matter of time before the bird becomes practically totally blind. Unfortunately, there is no certain way to prevent the other eye becoming affected. You can only aim at keeping the bird in a high condition of health, and in bright and healthful surroundings, and trust to chance to favour you and the bird.

AN INJURED LEG (Jake).—It would have been very helpful had you enclosed a little sketch, no matter how crude, to show how the leg hangs, whether in front, behind, or over the perch, and also said whether it hangs limp or is carried rigid. I can only gather from your description that the leg is probably fractured somewhere, and I suspect just above the joint where the downy feathers cease. If this is the case, the only rational treatment if the leg hung limp when first noticed, was to get a veterinary to either set or amputate, as seemed most advisable, as the fracture does not seem to be located where amateur interference is at all commendable. If the limb was carried rigid, then the proper treatment was to put the bird in a moderate-sized cage, with low perches, and with food and water very easily accessible, and throw a cover over cage to keep it as quiet and restful as possible until it began to move about voluntarily—the object being, of course, to secure as complete rest as possible, and leave Nature to repair the injury. You may do this now, though I fear the injury has been neglected too long, and the bird will either lose part of its leg by sloughing, or its life from septic poisoning from the injury.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

NOT LAYING (Hac.).—The birds were probably not very forward when you put them together, and in any case it is too early to lose hope yet. Leave them together, and in addition to your staple seed dietary, give to each pair a teaspoonful of egg food with half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame mixed in it every second day. On the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and black rape or cole, same as sample sent, with just a sprinkling of mustard seed. Give three or four moderate-sized leaves of dandelion daily. This treatment should quickly have the desired effect. The sample of seed sent is not charlock, though I have known it submitted by one or two dealers as such. It is usually sold as cole, which, I fancy, is correct.

SITTING HEN SNEEZING (S.G.).—It may—probably is—the consequence of a slight chill, which may have passed off by now. But, considering your Goldfinch's condition you would do well to see whether the birds are exposed to cold draughts, extreme fluctuations of heat and cold, or the fumes of heated impure air. If this is so, you must not expect any permanent improvement until the conditions are altered and the birds kept in more healthy surroundings and a pure atmosphere. If the hen is still affected, stick a crust of stale bread, scalded with milk, four drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed, in the wires against the seed hopper, so that she may have a few pecks at it when she comes off to feed. Put a fresh piece in daily, if necessary, until the day before young are due to hatch, when you will start giving egg-food. In the drinking water you may give 20 drops of whisky, six of glycerine, and three of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, for two or three days. This, however, should not be given when young are near hatching. Certainly, allow her to bring up the young if she will do so, but you would also do well to try to be provided with a foster hen in case her help should be needed to save any young that may hatch.

DETERIORATION OF YORKSHIRES (Novice, C.W.C.).—There is certainly a screw loose somewhere in your management, though I cannot put my finger on it with certainty from the particulars you give. What is the bathing attachment you mention, and does it hang on cage for hours together, or does the floor of cage ever get wet? Is your gritty sand quite clean, or does it contain a lot of reddish dust which helps to soil the plumage? When you receive the birds, judging from your description, they have been washed by hand and "toiletted" the same as practically all Canaries are before exhibition. But you must not expect them to retain this spick-and-span appearance permanently. Under the most favourable circumstances possible a certain amount of griminess soon appears about the neck, wings, and tail. But they should not become bedraggled, nor drop their wings. Handwashing should not be resorted to except when absolutely necessary, and spraying, save in exceptional cases, I admire more in the breach than the observance. Try following treatment for a few weeks, and if bird's condition does not improve, write again and give fullest particulars. Give the same staple seed mixture in the hoppers, and in addition feed the same as advised to "Hac" in this issue, but give only two dandelion leaves daily. Keep cage floors well strewn with gritty sand, but see that it is free from fine grimy dust, and clean cages well at least once a week. See that perches are kept clean and the air in the room as free from dust and smoke as possible. By-the-bye, I wonder if you have been using an oil stove or lamp in the room. If so, this may be at the root of the trouble. Give fresh clean water daily, and hang a bath on each cage for 15 or 20 minutes daily, after which remove it, whether birds have bathed or not. Again, do you add any insecticide to bathing water? If so, stop it until you report result of this treatment. You would probably find "Canary Breeding for Beginners" very helpful to you.

GOING BARE ON NECK (Roller Cock).—(1) You cannot give the bird proper treatment for loss of feathers whilst he is breeding and helping to rear young. When you separate him you may treat for a month as advised to "W.M." this week, when the plumage will probably be reproduced again at the moulting season. As you say the same thing occurred at this season last year, if there is no question of his mate's innocence in the matter, you should look well into the possibility of red mites or grey lice—the latter are the most likely being the cause. Give a bath twice a week in which a few drops of quassia essence have been mixed. It is not in the least likely that giving green food is the cause of the trouble. (2) Treat the Border hen the same as advised to "Sally," for two cocks this week, and see that all exciting causes of bronchial troubles are eliminated as far as possible.

BARE HEADS (W.M.).—Unless the feathers are reproduced in a month or so I would advise you not to breed again with these birds, as there is a certain amount of risk of breeding the defect into your stock. You cannot do better than continue the treatment advised to "W.J.A." in issue of April 26th for a month, and if that does not have the desired effect write again and repeat particulars, when I will advise you further. I doubt, however, whether any improvement will take place before next moulting season, unless it occurs within the next month. If you apply the sulphur ointment sparingly, only just moistening the skin, there will be no risk whatever of it causing any loss of feathers. You may continue giving a bath with quassia in twice a week, but you should know that this is no real test for the presence of red mites. You should thoroughly examine the cage at ends of perches, joints of door, and any crack or open joint, when, if present, you will doubtless soon get ocular proof of the fact.

PANTING AND TAIL MOVING (First Shot).—I'm afraid this hen must have contracted a serious cold during the severe spell of weather when she would be just going to nest, and it is doubtful whether she will get through the incubation stage successfully. Therefore, if you have another hen or two with clutches of eggs at about the same stage of incubation, I would advise you to share these eggs amongst them, or even give them all to one hen with a clutch consisting mostly of clear eggs when tested by strong light, if you are so unfortunate as to have one such. Then take away the nest, cage this hen alone, and treat her for a fortnight or three weeks, as may seem necessary, the same as advised to "Sally" in this issue. If you have no other hen to take charge of the eggs, then you can only trust to chance to favour you, and leave the birds together and give a morsel of bread and milk daily for a few days as advised to "S.G.," but add the chlorodyne mixture (mentioned in first-named reply) to the water instead of the eucalyptus mixture. If young are hatched they will not necessarily be affected by reason of this trouble of the hen. The greatest risk will be that the hen may not feed, in which case, again, a foster-hen is the best, if not the only, way out. Of course, leave the Linnet with her if she goes on sitting. If a "gem" he may perhaps save the situation.

SEED SAMPLES (Tin Hat).—No. 1, Canary, an excellent all-round sample, large, very plump, sweet and clean, may be not quite so well ripened as No. 3, but otherwise practically the same quality. No. 2 canary, another excellent alround sample; No. 3 canary, in size, ripeness, cleanness, sweetness, and plumpness, quite A1. No. 4 canary: Of good size and quality, but rather thin. In order of merit I place them 3, 1, 2, 4. Summer rape: No. 1 is clean and mild, and of very good quality. No. 2 seems practically the same as No. 1, save that it is brighter and larger. May be a specially cleaned and graded sample of No. 1. In order of merit I place them No. 1 and No. 2, as there is the possibility of No. 2 being a mixture of so-called bird-rapes. Hemp: No. 1 is rather small in size, but sound, clean, and sweet in kernel, and of very nice quality. No. 2 is larger and better-looking, but is of a decidedly poorer quality. Except No. 2 hemp all the seeds are eminently suitable for feeding Canaries. No. 2 hemp may be still quite safe to use, but it is scarcely wise to use it when you can get No. 1.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

GOULDIAN FINCHES, ETC. (R.P.P.).—Nutshell No. 14 will tell you all about general food and treatment. With newly-purchased Gouldians it is a matter of nursing at first. Give them only boiled water to drink, and put half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water once or twice a week for, say, a month, but the state of the bowels must regulate the frequency of the doses. Get a bottle of Ditchfield's Tonic Drops (it has been advertised in "C.B." F. Ditchfield, Oldham), and give these according to directions on bottle. Supply millet sprays and fresh flowering (seeding) grass liberally; give them plenty of fresh air without draught, and ample space for exercise. Re insurance, you can insure against burglary, fire and flood, I believe, but not, I think, against natural causes; send a query to the Editor on this point. Your remarks re your birds interested me.

[We do not know of any company which will insure against birds dying from natural causes.—ED.]

BUDGERIGARS, ETC. (F. B.).—You ought not to have more than three breeding pairs in your aviary, and the young should either be sold or removed to other quarters as soon as they can fend for themselves. At least six husks should be hung up for them, as far apart as space permits. As the aviary is all wire, even though it is under glass, you must watch that in ventilating there is no draught passing through the aviary. As regards the Finches and Waxbills, cokernut shell nests, square boxes, Hartz travelling cages, and rush nests, are all favoured, and it would be as well to put up a variety, and at least double the number of nest receptacles that you have pairs of birds. Avoid overcrowding; supply only the best seed; keep strictly clean; supply green food, particularly flowering (seeding) grass ad lib., and you should have good luck; but the larger your space the greater this is likely to be.

GOULDIAN FINCHES (Gould).—It may be as you say that insufficient crushed eggshell may have given them the habit, but I have never found this work out so. I am afraid your pair are beyond redemption. There are two courses open to you, viz., to give this, your best breeding cage I take it, to your next best pair, or to give the hen another trial with a different male. Of course, you could try the removing of the cock, but you will have to keep him out during the whole incubation period and only re-introduce him when the young are a few days old; but if there are only about two young, then the hen may rear them without his assistance; it will, at any rate, prove whether she is an egg-eater, too!

BLUE-FRONTED AMAZON (K.).—So long as the voidings are not watery-loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intervening days give 20 drops of the chemical food in the drinking water. Stop moistening the bread or biscuit in tea, but moisten with chemical food and water. A better seed mixture would be one quart each canary and white millet, one pint each oats, hemp, and paddy rice, and half a pint each wheat, dari, small maize, sunflower seeds and shelled nuts. Well mix the whole. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, and green food. Cuttlebone and grit must also be continually in the cage. The Blue-front is a hardy species and must have plenty of light and fresh air without draught.

ST. HELENA WAXBILLS (Broom-flower).—Waxbills, including the Avadavats, are all more or less prone to preening each other's plumage and pulling out the feathers while doing so, to a greater or lesser degree when confined together in cages, the St. Helenas perhaps less so than others, and I do not think a pair with a roomy cage would pluck each other. The St. Helena has rather a nice little song, but when you ask "have they an irritating call note?" you certainly present a poser, for in this respect "what is one man's meat is another's poison." Personally, I do not consider any of the Waxbills so afflicted, but then, again, I may not have a musical ear! Our Nutshell "Waxbills," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, would help you.

YOUNG AFRICAN GREY PARROT (H. Epps).—You should get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager, as it is impossible to give full details in this column. Give boiled maize. This only keeps fresh one day. Boil till soft. Drain off all water, then soak into it about 10 drops of Byno-phosphates. In addition, supply a mixture of 2 parts each canary and white millet, and 1 part each crushed oats, dari, hemp, and sunflower seed. As regards ripe fruit, sweet apple and banana is best; a stale crust or piece of biscuit lightly moistened with tepid water can also be given; also one or two shelled Spanish nuts if it will take them. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Parrots are often entirely deprived of both water and grit during the voyage; and it is dangerous to supply these ad lib on arrival. Do not keep water in the cage, but let it have a few sips of tepid water twice a day for the first week, and then gradually increase the frequency with which you offer it, and in a few weeks it should be safe to keep it in the cage; the same applies to grit, only put in a small pinch daily at first and then gradually increase the quantity. You should well scald out your cage before using it.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (F. Hinton).—If you put in a pair of Zebra Finches you will have sufficient birds for breeding purposes. Black-headed Nuns are very shy breeders in captivity, but the Zebra Finches and Cutthroats should prove certain breeders, and the Spice Finches and Java Sparrows probables. I am of the opinion that they will all agree together, but there is so much individualism with all species of birds that no hard and fast line can be drawn. In some mixed series Java Sparrows give trouble. You must watch them, and if they should bully their weaker neighbours you must remove them. The Linnets and Canaries should cross. To prevent them fighting for a particular nesting site, supply at least double the number of boxes, bushes, and rush nests as nest receptacles, as you have pairs of birds. You must not expect all to breed, but some of them should successfully bring off young. I am, rightly, not allowed to recommend special dealers, you must consult our pages and choose for yourself, but I always advise their being procured from some local man if he has got what you want. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1½., post free, from our Manager, would help you.

WILL THEY BREED IN CAGES? (Antony).—Cutthroats, Spice Finches, and Fire Finches, have all been bred in cages, but I do not know of any instance of Weavers having done so, neither do I consider it at all probable. You cannot put up pairs of foreign species for breeding, and expect results with the same precision as domesticated Canaries, or at least if you expect it, your expectations will not be realised; they take longer to settle down, and you should put your pairs up together, at once, in cages not smaller than a "double-breeder" with the partitions removed, and await results. A nest-box should be placed at each end of the cage, screened by a bunch of twiggy branches, supply hay, long grass, and a little moss as nesting material, and do not interfere with the nests.

BADLY SCARED PARROT (L. Evans).—The Parrot was badly scared by the dog, and time alone can undo the mischief, combined with kindness and gentleness on your part, and the avoidance of anything likely to scare it in its vicinity. The bird has evidently been much upset, and has received a shock from which it will take some time to recover; it is a pity it was not removed to another room at once when you noticed the effect of the dog's presence, and the sight of a small dog at any time may renew the trouble, and should be guarded against. I should put a teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into the drinking water every fourth day, say for a month, providing the voidings are not watery-loose; on the intervening days put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water. Fuss about with it, fondle it, and offer it tit-bits (nothing unwholesome though) from your fingers, talking gently to it the while. The bird should gradually recover from the shock and regain confidence.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

A LINNET FOR MULING (Northlands).—For a reply to your question concerning the Parrot, see our Mr. W. T. Page's column next week; note the rule respecting the "mixing" of queries. The Linnet and hen Canary couple you should treat as follows:—The stock seed mixture (if you are keeping the two birds together) should be Canary and teazle, one and a half pints each; summer rape, half a pint. Then make up three mixtures as follows:—(a) Hemp, two parts; niger, one part; linseed, half a part by measure; (b) maw, thistle, dandelion, charlock, sesame, gold of pleasure, and lettuce equal parts of each, likewise by measure; (c) a good wild seed mixture. A heaping teaspoonful of one of these three mixtures should be given the birds every day (in a separate vessel; not with the stock mixture), taking them in turn. This treatment will bring them into the best possible condition, providing the birds are in good health, and are being kept under proper conditions. Egg bread should not be given until your Linnet is very near breeding condition, which you can tell by his song and the colour of his beak, as it will only bring your hen to nest before the Linnet is fit. Of course, your hen may already have been breeding, for most hens will be in nesting condition by now; your letter is very vague, however. All the early, young, tender dandelion leaves you can find should be gathered, likewise shepherd's purse, chickweed, and groundsel tops, and a good feed be given the birds daily. If they don't breed under this treatment, they will never breed at all. If you are keeping the hen Canary apart from the Linnet, let her have plain canary seed one day, and the above mixture the next. You need not give her the wild seeds, but she should have a little of the other two (a and b).

PROVIDING HEN BULLFINCH WITH A NEST (T. Porter).—You should cut out replies likely to be wanted; or have your copies of "C.B." bound; then you would not want answers repeating. The nest (or nest-box) should be screened in any case, either with dead broom, gorse, fir, etc., or brown paper, fixed over one corner of the cage front. The easiest and best way to provide acceptable nesting material is to go out and collect and store old (but good) Greenfinch, Linnet, etc., nests—in fact, practically any Finch nests—and pull them to pieces when wanted. Thrushes and Blackbirds' nests are all right at a pinch; with the help of a nest-bag, in addition, at all times. Many hen Bullies (and other British hens, too) will build in (sort of re-line) an old Blackbird or Thrush nest when nothing else will tempt them, and lay their eggs therein, too, seldom dropping them on the floor. A suitably sized sod of clover grass (or turf), something like that given to Larks, with a shallow, cup-shaped depression beaten into it, will also invariably induce them to build thereon; or even a heap of dried grasses. To avoid mould (through damp) a piece of half-inch mesh wire netting should be tacked on to two strips of wood and be fastened in the breeding cage, on a level with the first cross-bar (and consequently the perches) from back to front. The piece of netting will, of course, be cut to size according to the depth of the cage. The sod should be placed on this wire netting platform. Some twigs, etc., can be twisted into the meshes so as to form at the front an effective and natural-looking screen. The old Thrush's or Blackbird's nest could be slung up in the same way; in fact, there are many little dodges one can think out. In a flight (small aviary) hen Bullies will sometimes favour a wood nest-box, and sometimes an old nest; while I have known many decline both, and build on shelves, etc.—several actually on the floor. Wicker (Roller Canary) travelling cages, with the front and inside fitments knocked out are also great favourites.

BIRDS FOR CLEAR MULING (F. H.).—There are several kinds of clear Mules, notably Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, and Siskin. Most fanciers pin their faith to what are known as "Sib.-bred" hen Canaries—that is, birds that have been bred in and (relation to relation) for a good term of years—as the most likely producers of clear Mules. With all due respect to them, however, I think myself that the Finch has very much more to do with the production of clear Mules than most fanciers imagine; in fact, I consider that the case which can be made out in support of this view cannot be controverted. Your question as to "average price" of the hens is a puzzler—I see "Sibs." advertised at 2/6, and even less, while some people want pounds for them.

A MULING TROUBLE (Novice L. A.).—Your letter unfortunately contains two serious errors of fact: (1) When an egg is in the state known as addled, you cannot see the germ spot on the yolk; (2) the presence of the germ spot is not a sign that copulation has taken place—neither, I may add, is it a sign that the egg is fertile. These things being so, the bottom, so to speak, falls out of your letter. I expect that your hen laid before the Goldfinch was properly fit; that the eggs were clear is a certainty. Probably better fortune will attend her next clutch of eggs; I hope so, anyway. It is usually well into May before the average Goldfinch can be depended upon to fill eggs.

A SWELLING (A. Russell).—If the swelling is soft and obviously contains matter, then it should be opened, the matter let out, and the place washed with warm water containing a little Condy's fluid, afterwards anointing it with a little healing ointment (mild carbolic ointment, or even boracic ointment). If it is hard, there may be something there which ought to be cut out, but one cannot very well advise without seeing the bird; could you not take it to a veterinary surgeon and get his opinion? The operation, if necessary, is not an easy one for a fancier to perform. Sometimes painting with tincture of iodine daily will reduce a hard swelling. It wants carefully applying, however (keep it off the surrounding parts) and only a little using at a time.

LINNET MULE BREEDING (M. Flowers).—Note the reply given another querist this week concerning the method of feeding the birds. It would not be possible to give in this column full details of all the procedure attaching to Mule breeding; it would take up a column or two of space. Pleased to advise on any particular point you may be in difficulties over. You would, I think, get all the information you want from "The Secrets of Hybrid Breeding," a book which can be obtained from CAGE BIRDS offices, at 1/2 post free. (See back page this week.)

A GOLDFINCH MATTER (S.G.).—I think your own view as to the cause of the trouble is the correct one. Too much sunflower, hemp, and suchlike fatty seeds, is very inadvisable during the warmer months. Let the birds have a little bit of green food every day. You can no doubt easily get dandelion leaves (choose the smaller ones) and the seeding heads, likewise seeding heads of groundsel and ordinary grass (my own Finches are quite fond of the latter). Give one or two mild doses of sulphate of soda, on alternate days—as much as will just lie on a sixpence dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of water.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

F. Litchfield.—You letter has been forwarded.

M. P. Rice.—The paragraph appeared last week on page 390; evidently you overlooked it.

W. Fairless.—Thanks for photograph, which we will certainly utilise in the near future.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

C. Barlow Massicks.—Hen bird died as the result of fits.

R. Brookes.—Advanced fatty degeneration of the liver and kidneys. It was quite an incurable disease. I have never before encountered such an extensively diseased bird, and am surprised that it should have lived so long.

J.A.R.—Acute inflammation of the bowels probably induced as the result of poisons.

Singing Contests.

TYLDESLEY.

On Saturday, May 3, 23 members of the Tyldesley Linnet Club sat down to a splendid dinner provided by Mrs. M. Heathcote. Afterwards we had a most enjoyable evening. The following gave songs which were well rendered: Messrs. Kennedy, Newton, Partington, and Woods. Mr. Harrison accompanied. Mr. Everett also brought his dancing doll.—J. Harrison, Sec.

LANGLEY MOOR.

Linnet sing held at Victoria Inn, on May 3; 26 birds competed, and some very good time was done. 1, Wilson; 2, 3, McVoy. Owing to the death of Mr. Geo. Reed's brother-in-law he was unable to judge. Mr. J. Franks (Sunnybrow) kindly took his place, and did his work in grand style. Timekeeper, H. Ball. Next contest at Half Way House, Witton Gilbert, May 17; £2 cash given. Entrance, 1s.; 3d. back refreshments. First pair up at 2.—Wm. Fairless, Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Weekly Linnet contest held May 3; 48 birds entered for four good prizes. Some very good singing was heard. Sweetry, 71; Morley, 60 and 59; Brindley, 54. Also May 4, 31 birds entered in a three-minutes' sing for three good prizes given by Mr. L. Parker. Piper, 88; Morley, 77; Caddy, 55. We are having an open sing on Whit-Tuesday, four-minutes hang, 5sec. break; first pair in the window at 1 prompt. All are welcome.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

KIPPAX.

Members' sing held at headquarters, Commercial Hotel; 30 birds entered for 3 good prizes: 1, Liversedge, 57; 2, Collison, 53: 3, Wallis, 41. General meeting held after sing. We shall be pleased to see a record entry for our open sing on May 17, when Mr. Gutteridge has kindly offered a copper kettle as 1st prize. Entry fees, 4d. per bird, will be divided into 3 prizes, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th. First pair in window 3 prompt. Members' special sing, May 10, when 5s. will be added to entries; first pair of birds hung at 3.—A. Tomlin, Sec.

PENDLEBURY.

Linnet contest held at Butchers' Arms, Union-street, May 3, for time. Owing to being a very wet day there was a poor entry, but there was some very good singing and time done. 1, 2, Bate, 106sec. and 101 sec.; 3, Green, 96; 4, Woodward, 85. Timekeepers, E. Hickman and J. Alldred; tappers, F. Ellaby and J. Edwards; minutes, J. Caswell. Next contest for time May 17; first pair up at 2.45. Will fanciers kindly note the contest on May 10 at Horse Shoe Inn, Westhoughton, for time; hoping to see a good muster there.—E. Hickman, Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Linnet singing contests were held at the old Market House as follows, April 13, when Mr. Webster gave three good prizes to be sung for. 1, Watson; 2, Caligan; 3, Robinson. April 20: 1, Brown; 2, Robinson; 3, Caligan. April 27: 1, Brown; 2, 3, Robinson. May 4: 1, 2, Robinson; 3, Caligan. There will be a big, open to the world Linnet sing on Whit-Monday for time, when Mr. Webster will give a lady's gold watch to be sung for, also two big money prizes and a good silk handkerchief, when we hope to see a lot of new faces.—Spinker, Sec. (Please forward address for reference purposes.—Ed.)

LEEDS.

Open contest for quality Linnet singing held at the Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon Street, May 3, when 22 birds sang for four good prizes given by Mr. Wm. Tillotson: 1, Butler; 2, Stead; 3, Towers; 4, Hayes. Judges, J. Naylor, D. Madden, W. Naylor. Extra contests same day: (1) 8 birds sang for 2 good prizes: 1, Wigfield; 2. Chadwick; (2) 6 birds sang for 1 prize: Winner, Hayes. Judges, Sissons, Naylor. Also May 4, 39 birds sang for 4 good prizes: 1, Wigfield; 2, Sissons; 3, Grant; 4, Stead. Judges, C. Biss, T. Crane, W. Naylor.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Weekly Linnet singing contests for quality, held at Skinner's Arms, Buslingthorpe Lane, May 3; 18 of the best birds in Leeds sang for 3 good prizes given by Mr. A. Fishwick; some very good singing was heard before a crowded house of spectators from all parts of Lancashire, Cheshire, and Durham, who were highly satisfied with the singing: 1, Ward; 2, Sellers; 3, shared between Sellers and Connor. Judges, Clayton Brothers. Also May 4, 32 birds faced the judges, when some extra good singing was heard: 1, Green; 2, 3, Ward; 4, Sellers. Judges, T. C. Summers, C. Clayton; timekeeper, J. Granger.—T. C. Summers, Hon. Sec.

Weekly contest for quality singing Linnets was held at Prince Albert Hotel, Newtown, May 4; 32 birds sang for four good prizes. 1, Chippendale; 2, Hayes; 3, Binns; 4, Soloman. Judges. Messrs. C. Lorriman and A. Turner; timekeeper, T. Chippendale. Prince Albert annual Linnet contest takes place on Whit-Monday, May 12. Friends are welcome to come and hear these quality Linnets sing. First pair of birds at 1 prompt. There is also a pink Linnet contest open to all England on May 5. —A. Lorriman, Hon. Sec.

And the Scottish National C.B.S.

Sir,—There seems to be a misunderstanding re our society. The idea seems to have got abroad that we are having a joint show with Scottish National. Such is not the case, as we hold our show in Buccleuch Street Hall, on November 22, after which we shall do all in our power for the Scotch Fancy section of the Scottish National.

P.S.—The bird shown by Mr. Munro as a yellow piebald hen has declared itself a first-class yellow piebald cock, which means our cup for best hen has been won by Mr. G. C. T. Hope, Mr. Munro having relinquished that honour.

The Denudation of the Country Side.

Sir,—The "Agricultural Economist" writes about protecting bird life while the very thing is being done to drive away all birds from the country, as well as destroying the very protection that a wild bird wants. I was in the country around Sussex last Sunday, and I noticed they were cutting down the trees by hundreds, there was a whole forest devastated. Now where can a bird nest when it finds all the trees gone? Even round about Brighton they cut the hedges nearly down to the ground, by which means they destroy all the birds' protection; it grieves me more to see an old tree cut down than it ever does to see a wild bird in a cage, petted and cared for. Another thing, I can tell these maudlin sentimentalists and that is that a wild bird will live many times as long in a cage than it ever would in the wild state, providing it is properly cared for. Seeing that I have been keeping Canaries and wild birds for the last thirty years, I think I know something about them. Wishing Cage Birds and Cage Birds League every success.

South Wales and Mon. Federation of F. and F.S.

A Remarkable Year's Progress.

Sir,—The first annual meeting of this Federation, which has made such rapid progress during the last twelve months, will be held at the Bush Hotel, High St., Swansea, on Monday next (Whit Monday) at 2 p.m. The history of this Federation has been remarkable. Starting on Whit Monday last with ten societies, it completes the year with twenty-three societies affiliated, and is still progressing. It will start its second year with thirty-two societies affiliated. Nomination papers for election of officers and executive council and for number of points gained during season for the specials have been sent out. The results will be given out at the meeting on Monday. The year's working shows a balance on the right side of £4 12s. 6d. It is hoped to have a good muster of representatives; the arrangement of dates will also be gone into, so as to avoid clashing. Any information will be gladly given by

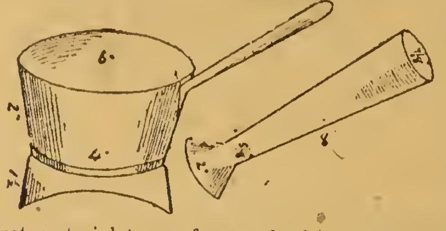
The Crow as a Pet Bird.

Sir,—A great many people keep Jackdaws as pets, and very interesting pets they are if kept properly; but if you ask any one of those people if they have ever kept a tame Crow, they will most probably answer "Oh, no, Crows are stupid birds, and I'm sure very dirty"; or something else to that effect. Here they make a great mistake. Crows are not stupid birds, and the one about which I am going to say a few words certainly was not dirty; at any rate as compared with a tame Jackdaw which I was keeping at the time. I was staying some time ago with a lady friend who kept as a pet a tame Crow, which she found when quite young, fallen out of its nest. If ever a bird was peculiar that bird was. Jackdaws are famed for their cuteness, Magpies are supposed to be unexcelled as thieves, Dogs are devoted, but I think this Crow had all these qualities grafted into him. For I never saw a bird fonder of its mistress, while it would not bear with most people. His secretive habits were well worth watching. He had the queerest hiding places imaginable for lumps of sugar, almonds, needles, pins, brooches, and everything else that came within reach of his rather long and decidedly sharp beak. His chief friend next to his mistress was a large boarhound, with whom he shared a small outhouse at night, and on whose back he used to ride when thus inclined. If teased by one of the cats with whom he often quarrelled, he used to call to his help his canine friend, who immediately rescued and consoled him. Once he was left alone in a bedroom for some time, and when his mistress, who had inadvertently shut him in, discovered her mistake and released him, she found the room in an indescribable state of disorder. Yards of the carpet which was tacked down had been raised, cakes of soap were found in the pockets of a dressing gown, toothbrushes, etc., in the bed, a pearl was missing from a gold ring, and various ornaments, some of which were broken, pulled off the dressing-table. There are many other escapades which I could describe but time and space being limited I must stop here. But I would advise lovers of large birds to take my tip and get a young Rook as soon as they can, and rear it.

A Reader of Cage Birds.

How to Prepare Egg Food for the Breeding Season.

Sir,—I notice in your spring number two hints which I would advise breeders to consider before using. Firstly, the use of lead as clips to hold in nest; this material should be kept out of the cages, as it is a fruitful source of poison. Secondly, perforated "zinc" should not be used with anything moist intended as an article of food. Any housekeeper will tell you how hard it is to keep even silver egg spoons free from tarnish. The best material to use for egg food is perforated "tin," which is really thin sheet steel coated with tin.



I use a taper strainer, with a loose rim about 1½ deep, all made of tin; also a spatula of same material, with a flat end about two inches in diameter. I beg to hand you a sketch showing how this is made, and you will at once see how easily this arrangement is cleaned, a rub of a dry cloth before using takes everything away.

"Sanitary."

The Use of Standard Show Cages in Ireland.

Sir,—In reference to the letter from "J.H.," on above, I am sorry to inform him there is not a single society in Ireland that adopts the standard Yorkshire Union Show cage, and I quite agree with him it would be better for both the novice and champion exhibitor were the cages similar in sizes and make, and the drinkers a uniform colour, as it would do away with much grumbling, and ensure fair competition. However, I think the Norwich section are even worse off in this respect. Why, it would dazzle your eyes at a show to see all the different shades of blue with which these cages are enamelled, in addition to the various sizes, perches, position of drinking holes, etc., and many exhibitors put their names on the back or bottom of their cages. I wonder if the N.P.C.C. of Ireland has made any move in this matter of cages, as it must be apparent to all fanciers that the question of a uniform show cage needs consideration. It is not difficult to understand fanciers passing remarks, for at two of our shows a fancier who had his name on the back of all his cages won 12 specials in the open Norwich classes.

Groats for Young Canaries.

Sir,—Re Mr. Johnson's article on breeding and rearing young commencing in the special spring number of Cage Birds, I could not help admiring same, as he explained in such a plain way that any one could understand. But in reference to groats he did not explain whether he gave them dry or soaked. I should be glad if he would explain in your next issue, as I think it will be a great help to me and all novices. It is my first year in breeding, and I have had four nests of eggs, but only one nest fertile which was forsaken by the hen after she had sat for ten days.

The Border Fancy in the South.

Sir,—The many readers of your interesting paper will no doubt have read the reports of the formation of a specialist society to look after the "Border" in the South of England. That there is room for such a society there can be no doubt, for the Border is being bred in increasingly large numbers in and round London, in the West of England, and of course in Wales. Show committees have catered for the variety by giving three and more classes. What could be better then than a society to cater exclusively for its well-being? The Southern Border Fancy Club can and will do for the "wee gems" what the Southern Norwich C.C. has done for the "tubby" ones; ah! and more. The provisional committee did well (in my opinion) in limiting the membership to the South and Wales; by doing so the crack breeders of the North were kept out, making the club for the benefit of the Southern devotees of the breed. There is a very earnest desire on the part of the committee to work for the advantage of the club members, and with that object in view, a meeting will be held on May 22 at 8 p.m., in the Guildhall, Wandsworth Road, S.W., to discuss the rules drawn up, and to formulate a scheme of competition for prizes at shows where the club's patronage will be given. With fifty members a good start has been made; these are mainly residing in and round London, and the West of England. Strange to say, very few names as yet have been received from Wales, but may-be it has been a case of "Wait and See." Perhaps the energetic secretary of the Swansea Club will take the matter up, and send along the names of any members to the hon. secretary of the S.B.F.C. The Welshmen have everything to gain and nothing to lose in joining. Nothing but good fortune and prosperity can possibly follow such a Society. Will members be sure and turn up on May 22?

Yorkshire and Lancashire British Bird and Mule Club.

Meeting at Manchester to be Convened.

Sir,—I have been asked to conveue the above meeting. Yorkshire has opened its membership to Lancashire, and in order to make it a success, it is necessary that every British Bird, Mule and Hybrid fancier, who wishes to join the club should send his address to me without delay, so that I can make arrangements for the meeting. About six of the Yorkshire fanciers will come down to meet us. I appeal to every British and Mule fancier throughout Lancashire to send his address at once; there must be no delay; success or failure depends upon this. I feel sure it is not necessary for me to point out the great need we have for such a club, it will be for the good of the British Fancy throughout the two counties. British Bird, Mule and Hybrid fanciers throughout Lancashire, wake up, the Canary fanciers have their specialist clubs, let us have ours.

The Plumage Bill.

-A PETITION TO MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT.

Copy of the Partition: Readers of "Cage Birds" are asked to sign the declaration at foot.

Sir,—As representatives of the Birdkeepers' Protection Association, in connection with the National British Bird and Hybrid Club (president, Sir William Ingram, Bart.), and birdkeepers in general (whose numbers are estimated at about 1,000,000), we take the liberty of bringing to your notice certain loose wording which occurs in the Plumage Bill recently introduced into Parliament by Mr. Croft, dated 13th of March, 1913. Although ostensibly a Bill for the prohibition of the sale, hire or exchange of plumages and skins, in Clause 2, you will note that the Privy Council may, at any time by notice published in the "London Gazette," add to the schedule to this Act the name of any other foreign "wild bird," and thereupon the provisions of this Act shall take effect as if such "bird" had been included in the schedule to this Act. Such wording may be taken to apply to not only skins and plumes, but to living birds, and so deprive private aviculturists of obtaining their live specimens through the ordinary trade channels as at present, this importation of living birds being largely for private avicultural and zoological purposes, and not for their skins or plumage.

Bird protection, in so far as it puts a stop to the destruction of rare birds, or the slaughter of sea-birds by trippers, has our hearty support; but when not content with such good work it strives to do away with the private study of birds in cage or aviary, it becomes at once an evil for which posterity will have just cause to curse its advocates. Private aviculture has done more to swell the sum of accurate ornithological knowledge than has the study of stuffed specimens. There are over seven hundred societies in the United Kingdom devoted to this pursuit, whose members hold annual exhibitions at the Crystal Palace, Horticultural Hall, and in nearly every provincial town; at which foreign cage birds form one of the most interesting and educative features. The foreign bird section, together with the other sections of these exhibitions and birdkeeping in general, is a means of giving employment to large numbers of people in the livestock, seed, food, cage, and appliance trades throughout the country, at an estimated total turnover of £5,000,000.

The number of birds that are imported alive for this purpose is comparatively a small one, and this importation in no way detrimentally affects their numbers as wild birds. Tales of disquieting decrease in the avifauna of certain districts are published from time to time, and in most cases they are due more to the development of these areas by man than by actual persecution. Protective laws must be reasonable and well thought out, and the wishes of the public in general should be considered as well as those of sentimentalists. It must be recognised that while practicable measures for the reasonable protection of birds have our hearty support, prohibition is neither possible nor equitable. We, therefore, ask you to kindly give this matter your attention when it comes before you, so that the good work already done by private aviculturists may not be retarded, work that, under present conditions, is quite impossible in the case of public bodies such as Museums and Zoological Societies.

We are, Sir, yours faithfully

Advice on Norwich Plainhead Breeding.

A Lecture given by Mr. W. Ordish before the Leigh and District C.B.S.

There was a good attendance at the meeting on April 30, when Mr. Ordish was asked to give his opinions on breeding Norwich. Mr. Taylor took the chair, and said that he was very glad that we were going to have discussed a topic that so many of the members were interested in, he hoped that they would try and think out some questions to ask the lecturer, so as to forward the discussion.

Mr. Ordish said: Mr. Chairman, and brother fanciers, you have asked me for my experience in breeding Norwich Canaries. Now I understand that it is only by way of opening a discussion, and it is on that account that I am addressing you. I hope the novices may pick up something to their benefit.

The first thing I would advise to anyone who has never kept birds at all is to start with common stock. It is all right saying "what will keep bad ones will keep good ones," but there are many young fanciers who start the hobby and then leave it very soon, through paying a fabulous price for birds that are hardly worth salt. It is mostly through not waiting and getting a little knowledge of what they want before buying. I would advise the novice to go to a reliable fancier, one who he knows is doing some winning, and get hens from him, and then get cocks from another source, as by doing so he has a change of blood to start a strain.

The Importance of Mother.

Get the hens as typical as possible. I am fully convinced that the biggest percentage of young take more after the mother. Your cocks must be as large as you can get them, with a good head, and a good entrance. They must also be a good colour. Never mind about a bit of length or a bit of feather, providing your hens are short and tight, they should take up all the feather and the length that are introduced by the cocks. I don't advocate pairing two medium sized birds together, as they always seem to deteriorate, owing to being inbred to such an extent. You must not introduce small heads, as you'll never get big heads from little ones. The way that I have always found best is to run one cock with two hens, and, when the hens are set, let them do their own, as I have always found in the majority of cases that the cocks are very mischievous, but if any of you have any cocks that will feed, my advice is by all means stick to them, as they are worth keeping.

For green food I use watercress, lettuce, and shepherd's purse. I never use dandelion, as I have had bad results from it, and if any of you have bad results from anything, I should say discard it. I don't believe in cracking seed for young birds, as when you crack their seed, it is something new to them, and they gorge themselves to such an extent that they generally die. Always colour feed, as colour will generally count, and never dispose of any of your stock until after the moult, as you never know how they may turn out. I am a strong believer in cod liver oil food, as I think it is a good food for making bone, and they don't glut as much at it.

During and After the Show Season.

If you happen to breed any fit for show, take great care of them, and don't over show them, as by so doing you take a lot out of them. When the show season is over I always put the hens in the largest flight I have, and let the cocks have a good run. I don't believe in feeding my birds up for breeding, as I think it comes natural to them, but my advice is, use your brains, as it is only by doing so that you get to know the ins and outs of the breeding stock. I will conclude by thanking you for your kind attention, and if any of you have any questions you would like to ask, I will answer you to the best of my ability.

Mr. Taylor then asked if the lecturer would pair two medium sized birds together if they were good ones. Answer: Not if I could help it; as I have said previously, they have a tendency to deteriorate, and I would much rather use a large cock to a small hen. Mr. Wilkinson asked if Mr. Ordish believed in double buffing, and what benefit he derived from it. Answer: Yes, I believe in double buffing, providing you have the right stuff to do it with; the reason for so doing is to increase size and head properties, but you must be sure to have birds as tight as possible in feather. Several other questions were asked, to which Mr. Ordish suitably answered. We concluded a very pleasant evening by moving a vote of thanks to Mr. Ordish for the able manner in which he had delivered his lecture.—R. Charleson, Hon. Sec.

AMUSING CASE AGAINST WELL-KNOWN GLASGOW DEALER.

A case with many amusing points was heard at the Central Police Court, Glasgow, on April 25 and May 2. Mr. William Wilson, naturalist, was charged with contravening the statute by having on April 12 opened or set up or been concerned in premises at 247, Argyle Street, a public show or entertainment consisting of cage birds, a rat, two monkeys, a pony, two cats, a Hawk, an Owl, a snake, a lamb, without license or permission from the Magistrates. He pleaded not guilty. Mr. J. J. Macintyre prosecuted, and Mr. Wilson was represented by Mr. David Cook.

What the Policemen Saw.

Constables Inglis and Gordon spoke to having visited the premises. There was a front shop, in which were cage birds, and a turnstile led to a back saloon in which various freak animals were on view. Each person entering this part of the premises put a penny in the slot and was handed a postcard in return. The basement was similar to the saloon, with admission by turnstile. A postcard was also received here. Among the animals on view were a giant rat, a miniature pony, a lamb with four horns, and a cat with six legs. So far as they knew, Mr. Wilson had no permission from the Magistrates to set up such an exhibition. Constable Gordon admitted in cross-examination that there were placards on the premises stating that everything was for sale.

Inspector Butler corroborated the evidence of the previous witnesses. In his opinion Mr. Wilson's premises were not suitable for a show. Mr. Wilson had been refused a license from the Magistrates. Since then there had been a charge for admission. Formerly the public paid a penny, now they paid a penny and received a postcard.

Mr. Alexander Dickson, registrar, said he was aware there had been no license to Mr. Wilson's premises for five years past. He had not at any time indicated to Mr. Wilson that a license was not necessary. Asked by the Magistrate if he remembered the type of show that formerly existed in Glasgow, witness instanced wild beasts, peep shows, merry-go-rounds, boxing booths——. The Magistrate: And the fat boy and fat girl?—Mr. Cook: But not for sale, Mr. Dickson.—The Magistrate: No. It was the public, I suppose, that were sold.

A Check to the Curious.

Mr. Wilson, giving evidence on his own behalf, said he had been a naturalist practically all his life. He spurned the suggestion that he was a showman. His shop was open all day for the sale of birds, beasts, or reptiles. He supplied the Universities of Glasgow and Edinburgh with such animals as rats, dogs, mice, rabbits, and cavies. Last week he sent out to New Zealand fully 2,000 birds. His dealing with showmen was a distinct department of his business. He found that a great many people came to his shop and made no deal. In addition to the actual live stock, he kept everything that pertained to these animals. He first charged a penny eight years ago in order to regulate the traffic in curious people who visited his shop. Persons coming into the shop must become purchasers; that was why he sold the postcards.

It was contended that Mr. Wilson's business was a perfectly legitimate one, though of a nature which attracted curious persons, and was not in any sense a show.—The Stipendiary said that from the evidence he was quite satisfied that part of the premises on the street floor and in the basement were being conducted by accused not as an ordinary shop but as a public show. He imposed a fine of one guinea.—Mr. Cook, agent for the defence, asked for a stated case for appeal.—"Evening Times."

Club Reports.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

At the usual monthly meeting there was a fair turnout of members. Secretary read letters intimating that we had again secured the patronage of the N.L.C. Club, also one from the secretary of the N.C.C. re their club's patronage, the same being left over for next meeting's consideration. We have booked the new Church Hall for annual show; this is the finest hall in the district for the purposes of a bird show. Members in this district are complaining very much about the cold breeding season, some fanciers not having got a young bird yet.—Geo. Havver,, Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

Meeting held April 26, at Mr. Lumley's, Mr. S. Foster in the chair, with a good turnout of members. The meetings we are having at this society are extra well attended, and I hope that we will eclipse last year's record; it looks as if we will, the way the members are interested in this society. We made two new members—Messrs. Forsdick and Curry, and we have more to propose at next meeting. It was decided to have a table show next meeting night with five classes—Linnet, Goldfinch, Greenfinch, Redpoll, Siskin or Twite, and A.O.V. British. Mr. W. H. Butler, of Stanley, has kindly consented to judge, and I hope our members will give us a large entry, which I think will be a good advert. locally for our next feather show next month.—R. Peart, Sec.

YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB.

Annual General Meeting.

Annual general meeting held May 3, at the Market Tavern, Bradford, Mr. H. H. Towers in the chair. There was a good attendance. The balance-sheet was submitted, and, after Mr. Garnett had given the auditor's report as to the satisfactory condition in which they found the books, it was unanimously approved. The chairman then gave the result of the ballot for officers for 1913-14 as follows:—President, Mr. H. H. Towers; vice-pres., Mr. R. Halliday; committee residing in Yorkshire, Messrs. H. Hill 54, F. Allen 46, F. Hammond 43, W. A. Cowgill 39, J. Bailey 37, H. W. Battye 36, A. Brown 31, W. H. Shackleton 31, A. Cooper, H. J. Chittenden, and F. Armstrong 29 votes each; outside Yorkshire, Messrs. A. Hirst 68, J. W. Ramsden 68, T. C. Crawhall 60, W. Broughton 46, and W. G. Cuthbertson 44 votes each. Eighty-one voting papers returned, one paper rejected. Sec. and treas., John Greaves; assist.-sec., W. Crabtree. Committee elected by the meeting, Messrs. T. Ogden, W. Cruise, E. Clegg, L. Dykes, H. Simonett, C. Morrison, P. Drake, F. Townsend, and R. Garnett; scrutineers, Messrs. T. Ogden and H. Simonett; auditors, Messrs. R. W. Alderson and R. Garnett. Votes of thanks were given to the retiring officers and donors of special prizes, etc.; Mr. J. W. Ramsden's offer of special prizes was accepted with thanks. New condition: No competitor to win more than one of Ramsden's Yorkshire Specialist Club's special prizes in one season. A letter was read from Mr. T. C. Crawhall asking the Y.C.C. to approach the Yorkshire Union to allow outside members of the club to exhibit birds wearing closed rings at Union shows which have the Y.C.C. patronage. The feeling of the meeting was that as the Union at their last meeting definitely decided that no birds wearing rings be allowed to compete at Union shows, it was not advisable to ask them to reconsider the question. It was then decided that the club's patronage be not given to two shows on one date, and where the two competitions are granted to one show, the committee to consider the advisablity of making it compulsory for members to exhibit separate birds for the separate competitions. Decided that in place of the open novice competition the club provide an amateur competition open to members not having won more than three first prizes in open competition, and that the junior novice competition be continued. Also decided that all birds ticked on thigh or underflue be eligible to compete in clear classes, and that a ticked bird shall show a clearly discernible body mark or tick; classification to read ck, invisible or thigh tkd. yell. Yorks., ditto buff, tkd. or varieg. yell. Yorks., ditto buff. Messrs. Ogden Bros. offered a trophy value 10 guineas for competition by the members, to be won three times before becoming the property of a member, and the club to give medal value one guinea to the winner each year, including the year when won outright. On the proposition of Mr. Cowgill, seconded by Mr. Crabtree, this generous offer was accepted with thanks. Mr. H. H. Towers, Mr. R. Halliday, and the sec. were appointed to meet three representatives of the Cinnamon Marked and National Green Marked Y.C.C. to discuss the advisability of amalgamation. Decided that the arrangements of the different competitions be left in the hands of the committee. Applications for the club's patronage close by May 24th, on which date the committee meet and allocate same. Will secretaries who have not already applied that are desirous of having Y.C.C. patronage, please apply at once to the secretary.—John Greaves, 279, Hollings-road, Bradford.

CHESTER-LE-STREET C.B.S.

Meeting held April 26 with a good turn-out of members, when part of schedule re open show was drawn up. It was decided to apply for various Specialist Club's patronage. Also decided to hold table show of British next meeting night, May 24. Classes: Greenfinch and A.V. Bunting. Also question night.—R. Ward, Sec.

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Committee meeting held April 30, at the Guildhall, Wandsworth-road, S.W., Mr. H. Norman presiding, the following members being present: Messrs. Newley, Gollop, Onslow, Saunders, Burton, Freeman, Lathbury, Harrison, McCuffie, and Moore. Mr. Madagan (Cheltenham) was elected on the provincial committee. A set of rules was drawn up, and will be submitted to the members at the next general meeting on May 22. I shall be pleased to hear from any fancier wishing to join, and will gladly furnish all particulars.—F. Moore, Hon. Sec.

PAISLEY, TANNAHILL O.S.

Monthly meeting held in Mr. White's, 2, St. James-street, May 3, there being a poor attendance, Mr. Thomas Hamilton, vice-president, in chair. The chairman solicited specials for our next show. Three members added their names to list. Breeding records were taken from seven members present, which showed 20 eggs and 11 young to date. Secretary read by-laws. Next monthly meeting will be held Sat., June 14.—John Stewart.

DARVEL C.B.C.

Committee meeting, April 25, for making arrangements for ramble. Present, Messrs. N. Hopkins, Wm. McNair, Jas. Morton, Hugh Allan, Jas. Bennet, and the Sec. Decided that ramble be held on May 10, weather favourable, to Low Overmoor Farm, thence following the course of the Glen Water homewards. Meet Public School, 2. It is hoped the members will turn out in full force, as this is one of the most interesting routes in the district. They are also invited to bring along any friends interested in nature study.—J. Robertson, junr.

BURSLEM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at the Barnfields Inn, Pleasant-street, May 1, Mr. Broad in the chair. The business of the meeting being to arrange the classification, etc., of nest feather show, June 28. Decided to have three open classes 10 mile radius, Norwich nest feather, Yorkshire ditto, Linnet. Fee, 1s. Prizes, 6s., 4s., 2s., if over eight entries. Members' classes to be similar to last year; 7d. entry. Later in the evening we had a discussion on the advisability of buying two trophies for the club, one for the Roller section, the other for the Norwich, Yorkshire, and British fanciers. It was carried unanimously that we buy two, several of the members present generously contributing towards the cost of same. We made another member in the Roller section Mr. Beaton, Tunstall.—L. James, Sec.

CITY OF BRADFORD O.S.

Meeting held at the Flying Dutchman Hotel, Leeds-road, Bradford, May 3, a moderate number of members being present, Mr. J. Roe (deputy-chairman) opening the meeting. Now that we have only about five weeks left before our first feather show, it was proposed and carried, for the benefit of our new recruits and novices, to ask some leading fancier to come and open a debate on the "Breeding and Feeding of Canaries," the date being fixed for May 17 (time, 8 p.m. prompt). It was suggested to write the well-known judge and fancier, Mr. Chittenden, to ascertain if he would kindly promise to come and open the debate. Should Mr. Chittenden, however, be otherwise engaged, our hon. treas., Mr. Ludbrook, has kindly promised to act in his stead. Novice members could not have a better opportunity than to be present, and so show their appreciation of the information which some of our older members have so kindly volunteered to give. Hoping the older fanciers will turn up in good numbers and give this valuable information to the struggling novices.—P. N. Jenkinson, Assist.-sec.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting, May 1. Present, Chairman, Mr. James Jones; vice-chair, Mr. George Jones; Messrs. J. W. Jones, J. Pritchard, H. Williams, E. Jones, R. T. Edwards, Hon. Treas., and R. E. Griffith, Sec. The above attendance is the best, so far, but we should be pleased to see still more members present. Decided that the Sec. should write for show cards, and other samples for the show; also that the specials and advertisements should be on agenda for next meeting. I should be pleased to hear from any fancier or member who wishes to support the funds of the Society, or would like to give a special for the members' show. Subs. are now due, and I should be pleased to hear from any new member who wishes to join; 25 members have paid their membership fees, and over £6 have been subscribed by Presidents, etc. A list of subscribers will be published in the forthcoming schedule. The sub. is only 1s. per year, two shows a year, challenge cups, money prizes and valuable specials, at both shows. Entry fee at open show 1s. members, 1s. 3d. non-members, and non-members are debarred from competing for specials. Twenty classes on July 5, members' show, and a special Welsh judge; four specials of 2s. 6d. in cash, 20 specials and money prizes. Let us all work like one to make the year a record one. Next meeting May 9th, at 8, at the Assembly Rooms. Will old members kindly send in their subs. for 1913 and 1914. The challenge cup is to be won by a paid member only, and for most points gained by Canaries bred 1913. Sec. will give special for second most points, and a fancier's special for third. Mr. J. Jones gave 2s. 6d. cash special, Mr. John Pritchard 2s. 6d. Mr. G. Jones special, Mr. H. Williams special, Mr. R. T. Edwards, Treas., 2s. 6d. special, and many other valuable specials. I hope that members are having a lucky breeding season, and have reared a cup winner for 1913.—R. E. Griffith, Hon. Sec.

PORTSMOUTH AND SOUTHERN COUNTIES C.B.S.

An exceptionally well-attended meeting was held at the societies' headquarters, Long's Memorial Hall, St. Paul's Square, Southsea, April 30, Mr. R. O. Tont in the chair. The chairman asked for correspondence; this included an agreeable surprise. Twenty applications for membership were in response to the decision of Southern Counties "Radius"; these were each submitted to the meeting and unanimously elected members of the P. and S.C. C.B.S. Letters from several applicants were read expressing their pleasure at our opening radius, and expressing their good wishes for the continued progress of the society. Our best thanks are extended to those who expressed their desire to provide specials, also to guarantee classes at our next annual show, which amply proves their whole-hearted intention to become "brother fanciers" in reality. Such encouraging correspondence increases our enthusiasm, and we shall do our very best towards all; our ambition is to make our society one of the best in existence. Date for members' F.F. show was decided for July 2. Judges were next nominated, and the decision was in favour of Mr. H. Young, who very kindly promised to do his best providing he could do so gratis. Although pressed, he would not accept a fee, explaining that he had no railway fare to meet, and it would give him pleasure to assist the society a little financially. Needless to add, all were greatly indebted to Mr. Young. Next were submitted samples and correspondence from the following vendors: Messrs. Livesine, Ltd., Phosio Co., Trowers, Rudd and Co., Ramston, Sandiford, and Craven C.F. The tasting and criticism of same very seriously curtailed our time for questions and answers, which were most interesting and instructive, and brought a most enjoyable monthly meeting to a close. The secs. were instructed to apply for patronage as last year to specialist clubs.—King and Joiner.

WALLASEY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held May 1, Mr. Geoff. Benson presiding over a good attendance. Mr. T. Edwards tendered his resignation as sec. and treasurer, and Messrs. W. Mallinson and W. Hodgkins were elected joint secretaries. Dates July 5 and Nov. 8 were fixed to hold nest feather and old show respectively. The well-known Liverpool fancier, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, gave a cup to be competed for during the season, a hearty vote of thanks being accorded him for his kindness, a most enjoyable evening being brought to a close at 10 p.m.—W. Hodgkins and W. Mallinson, Joint Secretaries.

THE LIVERPOOL FANCIERS' CYCLE CLUB.

The club is gaining new members every week; last Sunday's run was the top-sawyer of the lot, the boys getting a-wheel early, crossed the river for a good spin on the Welsh road passing through Chester, Kinnerton, Mold, and finally alighting in the pretty Vale of Clwyd. After tea we rambled through valley and glen, watching the wild birds. The homeward journey was made at top speed, by way of Rossett, Pulford, Eaton Park, and Chester. Then on again, passing through Sutton, Hooton, Eastham, and Port Sunlight, arriving at the Ferry in good time. All members meet at headquarters May 11, at 2.—R. Malone, Hon. Sec.

LARKHALL C.B.A.

Meeting held in Y.M. halls May 3. Mr. Rindell in the chair. The chairman expressed the pleasure it afforded him to preside over such a good meeting of members. The committee was fixed as follows: Messrs. R. McLure, A. McLean, N. Alexander, T. Haston, R. Cummings, J. Leckie, J. Pollock, Alex. Thomson; auditors, Messrs. D. Marley, J. Pollock. We decided not to hold an open show this season, and fixed the date of our annual club show for Oct. 25. A selection of judges was made, and report from them will be read next meeting. To help our membership a valuable special was given for member who proposes most new members for season. Young bird show and other important business at next meeting, May 17.—Allan Thomson, Sec.

DUNFERMLINE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in the Co-operative Hall, April 26, Mr. J. Rankine presiding. One new member was elected. The delegates to the West Fife "C.B." League gave us a lengthy report, and we appointed as judges for the first feather show, to be held in Cowdenbeath under the League, on the 5th July, Mr. Henry Kemp, for Crests and Crest-breds and Mr. George Roe for Plainheads. The classification for our own annual show, to be held on 1st Nov., was agreed upon, and includes a class for wild seeds, while two names were nominated as judges, and these have since accepted, namely, Canaries, Mr. Wm. McAdam (Lasswade), British Mules, etc.; Mr. Peter Pettigrew (Glasgow). Mr. P. McLaren, along with the president and secretary, were appointed a special committee to make full arrangements for the annual ramble, first Saturday in June as in former years, should we obtain permission. Owing to the ramble no meeting will be held this month, but will hold an open-air meeting at the ramble to consider the reports from the West Fife "C.B." League.—Robert T. Campbell, Sec.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Meeting held May 1, Mr. T. C. Crawhall in the chair. Question of Specialist Club's patronage postponed until next meeting. It was decided not to have a social this year. Mr. E. Coltman tendered his resignation as hon. assistant secretary, which was accepted with regret; Mr. J. Craig was elected in his place. Classification for nest feather show was arranged, being practically the same as last year. A letter was read from Mr. J. Knott granting permission to visit his grounds on Whit-Monday. Will those who intend going please note that they will have to take their own eatables. There will be plenty of cups and saucers in the pavilion for tea. Those who intend going by train will be able to get one somewhere about 1.25 p.m. for West Wylam, but they can go either to West Wylam or North Wylam and make their way to Close House. Those who intend to cycle will meet at Lord Armstrong Monument, Barras Bridge, at 1 p.m., or at the Two Ball Tavern, about 1.30 p.m. Let us hope for a good turn-up and fine weather. All fanciers and friends welcome. Committee meeting on Thursday, May 15.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held May 1, at the Wentworth Cafe, Mr. F. Jones in the chair, supported by Messrs. J. Thorpe, W. Oxley, and the two secretaries. Our President welcomed our worthy Treasurer, Mr. W. Oxley, and said how pleased we were to see him in our midst again, after his very long absence. Several items of correspondence were dealt with, including a note re closed rings; after a short discussion it was decided to leave the purchase of rings to the members. Mr. J. Woolhouse promised two specials, value 10s. each, to be competed for at members' show, Dec. 6, one for best champion and one for best novice rung birds. Mr. P. Mason finds that owing to a previous engagement he cannot judge our December show, so Mr. M. Broadley has been elected to fill his place. The time for birds to be staged at our nest feather show has been altered to 2 o'clock, and not one o'clock, as printed in syllabus. The rest of the evening was taken up by five of our members viz., Messrs. W. Bingham, G. Drabble, C. Tomlinson, J. Thorpe and F. Jones; each of them had a different subject, and dealt with it in a very able manner. A hearty vote of thanks was given the speakers for their very valuable information and entertaining speeches. This was proposed by Mr. A. Hobson and seconded by Mr. J. Woolhouse. Mr. F. Jones replied on behalf of the rest, and said it was a pleasure to be able to do anything for the society and the members. Messrs. A. Bagshaw and W. Moore were elected new members.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

MIDDLESEX O.S.

Meeting held May 1, Mr. W. Taylor in the chair, owing to absence of Mr. J. R. Higgins. Decided to grant patronage to three open shows this season, points to count at these shows, together with club shows, for three cups; one each for Norwich, Yorkshire, and British. Agreed to hold first feather show July 10. One new member nominated. Mr. J. E. Shepherd gave a most interesting and instructive address on "British Birds and their Mules," dealing with the Greenfinch, Linnet, Goldfinch, Bullfinch, and Siskin. Meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Shepherd.—Jeffery Jefferis, Hon. Sec.

NEW CROSS AND DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held at headquarters May 1, Mr. Hill presiding over a very good gathering of members and friends. A great deal of business was speedily got through, including the drawing up of the schedule for the June Y.S. show. The annual ramble was discussed, and it was left to the committee to make all the arrangements. The proposed date is Sunday, May 18. Will members and their friends who propose to make up the party kindly let us have their names at once so as we shall know how many to cater for. The tit-bit of the evening was Mr. Norman's lecture on "British Birds," which was listened very attentively to by all present. The lecturer described the various birds which are most popular with exhibitors, and told us how to feed them, to keep them in health and condition, also the best way to moult the prospective champions. Mr. Norman brought with him a sketch of a house which he advised using for moulting British birds, and which was handed round and examined by the members. When exhibiting, Mr. Norman impressed upon us the necessity of putting our birds and cages down in tip-top condition, as many a good bird had lost simply by being badly staged. Mr. Norman then invited questions, and the invitation was eagerly taken advantage of by all. A hearty vote of thanks was then accorded the lecturer, and Mr. Norman suitably responded. We regret our members, in common with most other fanciers, are having up and down luck this season, but we hope the second and third rounds come out better. Members, don't forget the Y.S. show in June. Will you help to make it a record show?—Burton Bros., Hon. Secs.

BARGOED C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at new headquarters, Parker's Temperance Hotel, April 29, Mr. H. Bye in the chair, proved a great success, a dozen new members adding their names to the list. We are sure of meeting several more at a special meeting called for May 18 to decide classes and select judge of table show on June 10. Among specials promised are two from members, a silver cup for best Yorkshire, to be won three times, from Mr. W. Sims, and two British show cages for two best Britishers, from Mr. A. Haddrell. We have a lot of important business to be got through.—E. J. Chisholm, Sec.

An Ever-set Mouse Trap.

Sent by C. Lovell, 13, Drysdale Road, Lewisham, S.E.

The sketches show how to make a cheap and easy mouse trap which is always set. First take a piece of wood wide enough to cover tank, I use a sweet tin, which can be bought at a confectioner's for one penny. Next cut from centre of wood a piece measuring 4¾ins. x 2ins., and then find centre and put two panel pins in at C.C., also two at B. as diagram, and put a small screw under wood at B. to make the counterbalance. Next make a box so as to cover the trap half way; this should be fastened on four pins so that it may be removed to put fresh bait, which should be fastened on a pin just the other side of the trap-door which drops down; a piece of wood from floor to staging of trap and all is ready. The piece of wood across the front of the box stops the trap from getting unset, as the pins at B. come in contact with it. Half fill tank with water.

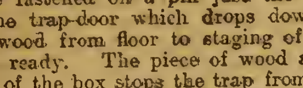
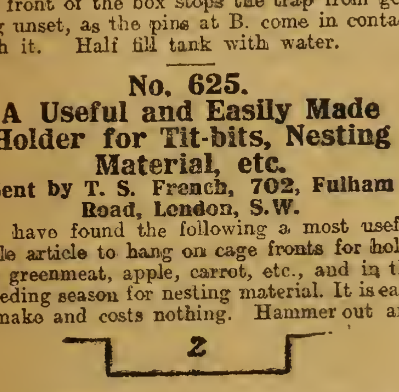
A Useful and Easily Made Holder for Tit-bits, Nesting Material, etc.

Sent by T. S. French, 702, Fulham Road, London, S.W.

I have found the following a most useful little article to hang on cage fronts for holding greenmeat, apple, carrot, etc., and in the breeding season for nesting material. It is easy to make and costs nothing. Hammer out any disused tins, and then with an old pair of scissors cut out some pieces as per diagram, measurements can be varied to suit cage fronts.





Take your piece of tin and lay on table with a dotted line A. (Fig. 1) on the edge, hammer it down square both sides, then do the same with the other line A. Then turn the edges B.B. outwards, till the contrivance appears in section as in Fig. 2. Turn in the bottom ¼in., trim off sharp corners, and you have a most useful article that will fit any front.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C

Annual general meeting held May 3, at Market Tavern, Godwin-street, Bradford. The following were elected members: Messrs. O. E. Naylor, J. Chambers, J. E. Hudson, S. Senior, A. Holden, and D. Sutcliffe. Sec. reported that 26 new members had been made during the past year. Balance-sheet was heartily adopted. It showed a balance in hand of £4 1s. 7d., against £1 8s. 11d. the previous year (a profit of £2 12s. 8d. on the year's working). The following officers were elected:—Pres., Mr. W. A. Cowgill; vice-pres., Mr. W. H. Shackleton and Mr. H. H. Towers; committee, Messrs. H. Hill, F. Allen, F. Hammond, R. Halliday, J. Bailey, L. Dykes, F. Armstrong, J. Greaves, F. Townsend, R. Sutcliffe, T. Ogden, H. W. Walsh, A. Hirst, J. W. Ramsden, T. C. Crawhall, J. Currie, and C. R. Bullen. Mr. B. Clegg was again elected hon. sec., but owing to pressure of business was reluctantly compelled to withdraw, and Mr. J. Chambers was elected in his place. All communications must be sent to Mr. Chambers at the address below. Auditors, Mr. R. Halliday and Mr. H. C. Crossley; scrutineers, Mr. F. Allen and Mr. S. B. Grayshon. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the retiring officers, auditors and scrutineers, also to the donors of special prizes. Mr. W. H. Shackleton suitably responded. Competitions and allocation of patronage was left over to next committee meeting. Societies who are desirous of having the N.G.M.Y.C.C. at their forthcoming show should apply at once to the sec., J. Chambers, 22, St. Ann's, Mount, Burley Hill, Leeds.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

More "Bird Torture" Exposed!

About the most extraordinary mixture of mendacity and gush that has ever come under my notice (and this is saying a great deal) comes to me this week in the shape of an article cut from the "Manchester Evening News" of April 30. This precious effusion is headed in large capitals, "The Songster and the Torture Shop." It would be waste of space to reprint the article, but its main points will be gathered from the reply which I have sent to the Editor of the paper in question. This is as follows:—

Lies Nailed to the Counter.

The Editor, "Manchester Evening News."

Sir,—My attention has just been drawn to an extraordinary article which appeared in your issue of 30th ult., headed "The Songster and the Torture Shop." Cage Birds League is an organisation which has among its objects not only the inculcation of the principles by which birds suited to captivity may be kept under humane and proper conditions, but also the protection of those who take a pleasure in the humane and proper keeping of birds as pets against the slanderous and ignorant accusations of those who are never so happy as when indulging in hysterical denunciations against the keeping of any kind of bird in any kind of cage. As secretary of Cage Birds League, it is my duty and privilege to traverse the misstatements which you have allowed to appear over the initials S.A.W., and I trust you will afford me a little space to that purpose.

Although no bird is specifically mentioned by your correspondent, the "brown bubble of melody hanging against the blue ceiling of the sky" would be a Skylark, if anything.

Now, Skylarks are not caught in the manner outlined, namely, by a brace bird and band-net, nor, if they were, would the brace bird be tied by the leg at the end of a few yards of string. No brace birds are ever used in this way excepting, perhaps, by an occasional ignorant schoolboy or hobbledehoy, certainly never by an experienced bird-catcher. Such a man sets great store upon his brace bird or birds, and treats the same with very especial care. As for "a stronger tug of the string breaking one of its slender legs," this is on a par with the other absurdities already mentioned.

Under the cross-heading, "A Sudden Hell,'" S.A.W. says "there were three dozen of his kind, some alive and some dead." Did S.A.W. stop to think how long it would take to catch three dozen birds separately by the method suggested?

Then he says, "he found himself fluttering in a cage with a hundred of his kind . . . In the shop were a hundred such cages." This would make 10,000 birds (Skylarks) in one man's stock at one time. True, your correspondent divides this number by ten when he says in the same paragraph, "there were a thousand songsters who but that morning had hung up in the sky pouring forth song." Were these thousand birds caught singly by means of a hand net and a broken-legged brace-bird on the end of a few yards of string? If your correspondent ever saw a hundred cages of a hundred Skylarks each, or one cage containing a hundred Skylarks, "gulping filthy water," what was he doing not to have the owner prosecuted? Either of two powerful societies, the Royal Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and the Royal Society for the protection of birds, would only have been too glad to proceed in such a case, or it was open for your correspondent to call in the nearest policeman as a witness and prosecute the man himself, in which proceeding he would have the sympathy and praise of every bird-keeper in the country.

The outrageous accusation as to the blinding of birds to improve their song is a further testimony not only of the ignorance of your correspondent, but of shameless recklessness in making unfounded charges. On behalf of Cage Birds League I challenge your correspondent to substantiate this charge. If S.A.W. can let me have the name of a single bird-dealer who resorts to the practice of blinding birds, I will see that steps are taken to cause that dealer to remember his cruelty to the end of his days. About a year ago one solitary miscreant was found guilty of the abominable torture, and every bird-keeper in the country rejoiced at the punishment he received, and wished it could have been increased ten-fold or a hundred-fold. It is nothing less than a wicked slander, which, fortunately, can only be believed by those who know nothing whatever of the subject, to insinuate that the horrible cruelty is a matter of usual occurrence. On the contrary, it does not exist at all. One isolated case of cruelty inflicted by an ignorant ruffian does not make a practice, and the suggestion of S.A.W. is as unfounded as it is wicked.

The paragraph referring to mice further displays the careless ignorance of S.A.W. If a mouse "came and nibbled at his feet," how is it that "he was able to draw them within his cage"? Does a bird sleep with his feet outside of the bars of his cage?

LOCHGELLY C.B.S.

Meeting held Drill Hall, May 2, Mr. Thos. Wildridge in the chair. Classification and show schedule occupied the most of the time, and we added a few classes, chief being a "Bunting" class, which should encourage the exhibiting of those at our show.—R. Muir.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

The classification in champion section of greens, re style of patronage, should read as follows, and not as printed in last week's report:—Four Yorkshire Greens, four Norwich Greens, four Border Greens; 12 classes in all, all sections preferred.—F. Handley, Hon. Sec.

"CAGE BIRDS" WATCH COUPON May 10th, 1913.

Manager, "CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

If so, why were "a dozen of his brethren unable to draw their feet from the white teeth of the mice"? What nonsense all this is!

Finally, knowledgeable people who buy Skylarks (and this mythical bird was evidently a Skylark) do not put them in gilded cages. Skylarks are kept in wooden cages open only in front and closed at top and ends, in which they live in health, song, and contentment for many years. (Records of twenty years are not wanting).

The initials of your correspondent, "S.A.W.," curiously enough, comprise another misstatement. No one ever SAW the horrors so graphically set forth in the extraordinary jumble of nonsense which you, sir, have permitted to appear in your pages. The whole of the contribution is, most obviously, a rehash of the worst of the misstatements contained in a pamphlet published by the Humanitarian League entitled "The other side of the bars," and in answer to which I wrote at the time the refutation of which the enclosed is a reprint. Further, your correspondent, in his, or her, total ignorance of the subject, has gone even to more ridiculous lengths than the author of the pamphlet from which he has taken his inspiration.

I beg that you will be kind enough to give this letter a prominence equal to that granted to the article to which it is a reply.

Where the Truth May be Seen.

In sending the cutting from the "Manchester Evening News," to which the above is an answer, Mr. Pollitt writes:—

> "I am sure persons who object to birds being caged improperly, and not looked after, will have the support of all bird-lovers in putting down this evil where it exists, but it is going too far to attack the Fancy at large for the evils of a very few. If some of these critics would visit some of the large shops in Manchester, I think the birds there would open their (the critics') eyes, as they are kept under practically perfect conditions."

Seize This Opportunity.

On page 414 will be found a copy of a circular which has been sent to the secretary of every bird society throughout the country. I hope every member and every associate of Cage Birds League will cut this out, sign it, and send it to his own Member of Parliament, addressing it to the House of Commons, Westminster. Any reader desiring copies of the petition may obtain the same by applying to Messrs. Trower and Co., 442, Caledonian Road, King's Cross, N. Cage bird keepers have in this an opportunity of making themselves heard, and the opportunity should not be allowed to pass.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of Cage Birds have written to say that they would like to join Cage Birds' League, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the League, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of Cage Birds League, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the League. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

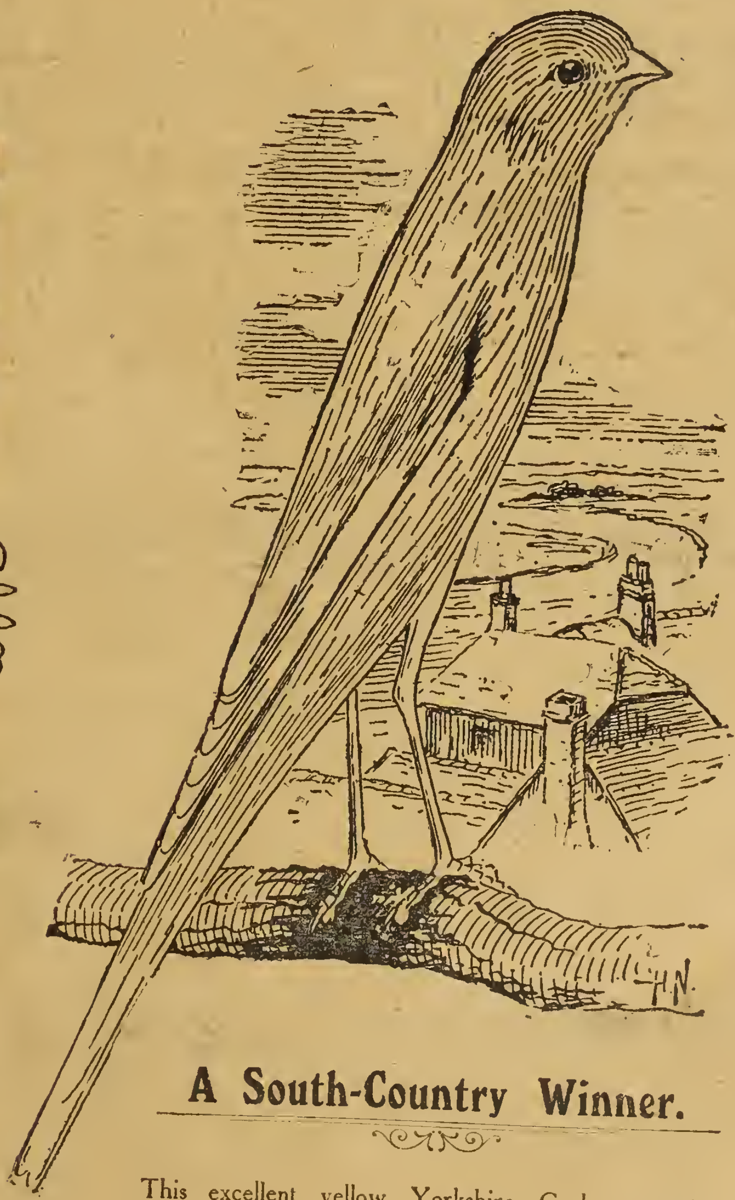
Baby and his Playmate.

The little son of Mr. E. H. Court, of Tenby, is shown with his pet Yorkshire Canary. This bird was hand-reared, its mother dying when it was but 10 days old; at the time the photograph was taken the bird had reached the age of 5 weeks, and, with its two nestmates, was doing well.



A South-Country Winner.

This excellent yellow Yorkshire Cock amongst other honours secured a first prize at Windsor Show for Mr. A. Turner, of Windsor.

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which me must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

"THE RED FEED"

Going like wildfire amongst leading exhibitors. A wonderful blending of everything you require to moult your birds a blaze of colour; can be used by the novice with a certainty of success. It is peerless; no other pepper can give you the colour; don't be bounced; don't entirely give up other peppers you may have used with success. Try it on a few of your birds. I know that next year you will simply rush for it. I breed and sell many leading champions on the show bench which have never tasted any other feed than "The Red Feed." This may be a new food to you, but not to me. Sold in tins 2/6 and 4/9 post free; special quotations for 5lb. upwards; agents wanted: Judge Silk, Norwich Specialist, Whitstable. (696)

"PHOSTO"

The recognised greatest food on the market. It has caused a sensation amongst experts. Hens, after use, will feed, and this is not all; the youngsters thrive and grow to a wonderful degree. It will not make a small bird a big one, but I will guarantee it will make them considerably larger. Testimonials coming in daily from all parts. Sent immediately on receipt of P.O. Give it a trial. It will save you pounds. "Phosto" is not a medicine to be given when ill; it is a food for all times, but most beneficial now. Never been known to fail. "Penny Street, Lancaster, April 21st, 1913.—Dear Sir,—Please find 2/6 for another tin of 'Phosto.' I am sorry to say the Goldfinch died the same day 'Phosto' arrived. but my Norwich cock is wonderful He has filled a nest of eggs due to hatch Wednesday, 23rd. Linnet Singing Challenge

Another excuse from Allen, of Sheffield. He sees that I have him well cornered, and he is trying to bring East Africa in and the King's Head Brigade to get him out of it. Now, reader, I am going to bring him out right to the top to see what he is made of. Now I am depositing another £10 and I will still sing him both matches in his own town. Now if you do not cover this you are the biggest duffer in England. You accepted my challenge and I accepted yours, and I put £10 down. and you have not put a penny down up to now. I mean business; you mean telling the tale. I have won more prizes at the King's Head than you have had birds. You say your bird is ready, but you are a long time putting your money down. I think readers of "C.B." will see in last week's paper what a bluffer he is; but this week will try him. Business in Leeds; swank at Sheffield: Harry Allen. The Original Linnet King and British Bird Champion, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett Street, Leeds. (698)

THE LINNET CHALLENGE

If Allen, of Leeds, has not put his money down in this week's issue, in reply to my last week's advert., I will treat his challenge with contempt, as it deserves. It is only a waste of time. It may be his way of making a name, but it is not mine. I note in last week's issue of "C.B." that my title, British Bird Champion, is copied; but my birds cannot be copied. Now, gentlemen, if you want a quality singing Linnet send to me. I don't believe in a lot of swank. I have some gems will sing anywhere, 2/-, 2/6, 3/-, 4/-, 5/- each. All taught under my champion of England; satisfaction guaranteed. Allow me to thank all who have sent letters re challenge: Fred Allen, British Bird Champion, 548, Queen's-rd., Sheffield. (698)

Softbills.

WANTED young Jay or Magpie for rearing: Firth, 5, Elizabeth-st., Winton, Patricroft. (695)

THOSE requiring a genuine singing cock Skylark on approval, cheap, please send me your address; I will send to you by return: Mrs. Dutton, Dunstable. (488)

ON receipt of 2/- I will send, securely packed, on approval, the finest singing cock Skylark ever seen or heard, suitable for contest singing or shop's attraction, including free my valuable feeding secret which keeps Larks in full song ten months out of twelve. I have supplied more contest winners than anyone in England; heaps of unsolicited testimonials to prove this; same address 25 years: Woods, Crown-st., Dunstable. (488)

SKYLARKS, Skylarks, healthy specimens, in song, for shows and contest singing. Learn how to obtain them and keep them. "Nutshell No. 3" tells you. 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from agents (list frequently published).

SOFTBILLS: the smaller species; full information upon their proper feeding and management in captivity, is given by H. J. Fulljames in "Nutshell No. 25," which also deals with hand-rearing, and describes the collection of ants' eggs, 2½d. post free, from: "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. (2d. from agents; see list on another page).

SPLENDID shop attraction, grand upstanding cock Skylark, finger tame, feeds from hand, 2/-; approval: Mrs. Bartholomew, Dunstable. (692)

THE loudest singing hand-reared cock Thrush ever heard and beautiful show cage, which cost 15/-; sell cheap: Proprietress, Lamb Hotel, Dunstable. (689)

THE Song Thrush and Blackbird.—Full directions how to keep these favourite songsters in the best possible condition; together with directions for hand-rearing the young and the selection of show birds, will be found in "Nutshell No. 4," 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from agents (list published frequently).

OVERSTOCKED. Acclimatised "Waders," been outdoors over twelve months; pairs Oyster Catchers, very fine, 16/-; Knots 5/6; two Ruffs, perfect breeding plumage, 8/- each; cock Redshank, 2/6; Blue Water Rail, temporarily damaged foot, 15/-; pair excellent White-faced Tree Ducks, 40/-: Massicks, The Mount, Rotherham. (695)

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of Insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

PARROTS for pleasure and profit, 7d., by C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, and cures for their various ills: "Cage Birds," 154, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutshell No. 14," from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2½d. From agents (see list frequently published), 2d.

WAXBILLS! (Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased at from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell No. 20," 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

FOREIGN birds for beginners, 1/1½, by W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign birds. Replete with useful hints: "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

BUDGERIGARS and Cockatiels are among the most popular foreign birds, and C. P. Arthur has had a lifetime's experience with them. His book, "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," will show you how to keep them, feed them for health, how to breed them, and how to teach them to talk. The price of this valuable handbook is only 6½d., post free, from: "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once. 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

COKERNUT husk nests for Budgerigars, etc.; after 22 years' practical breeding experience, my "Improved Secure" husks remain unequalled for successfully rearing Budgerigars; they are still favourite; I supply parks, zoos, and largest breeders. Cheap, clumsily made substitutes, which fail to pieces when in use, are very dear at any price, causing disappointments, losses, and failure, 4/6 dozen; smaller quantities, 5d. each; the trade supplied: Harper, Husk Importer, Norton, Stourbridge. R. BEST, ANTWERP birds, reptiles, and animals; dealers ask price list, free: R. Best, Courte rue de la Boutique, Antwerp, Belgium. (695)
LARGEST IMPORTER OF FOREIGN

THE REASON WHY

Our prices are lowest, yet quality the best, is we pay cash for all our consignments and purchases on delivery, and in most cases before boat arrives. We could get credit to any amount, but we don't want it. The system is rotten, and the seller is handicapped in buying, i.e., he pays dearer, and gets no first consideration; that's where the cash man comes in. Of course, some people's position compels them. Our terms are cash, but we return money in full if entire satisfaction is not given and birds returned as received. Watch our prices (see big advert. with full particulars). Largest private breeder's business in England; patronised by nearly every leading exhibitor and fancier of note; hundreds of unsolicited testimonials. Send for free catalogue of birds; also sundries: Collingbourne. (See below). (697)

THE USE OF SPRING TRAPS.

Two Gamekeepers Fined.

James Malsbury, Biggin Hill, Cudham, was summoned, at the last Bromley Petty Sessions, at the instance of William Riley, local inspector of the R.S.P.C.A., for unlawfully affixing to a tree a spring trap which was calculated to cause bodily injury to any wild bird coming in contact therewith, at Cudham, on April 15th; and George Law, New Year's Cottage, Cudham, was summoned for causing such steel trap to be affixed.—Mr. S. G. Polhill appeared to prosecute on behalf of the R.S.P.C.A., and Mr. Malcolm Hilbery represented defendants, who pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Polhill said Malsbury was an under gamekeeper, and Law was a head gamekeeper in the employ of Mr. Maconochie, of Cudham. On April 15th Inspr. Riley visited a wood in the parish of Cudham, and there he saw the steel trap, produced, which was affixed to the trunk of a tree. It was set on a platform which was about 5ft. 4in. off the ground, and under the Act the defendants had rendered themselves liable for an offence of this kind to a fine of 40s. and costs in the case of a first offence.

Ignorance of the Law pleaded.

William Riley said that he found the steel trap produced, fixed on a platform attached to a tree. It was partly covered with straw. After calling the attention of a police officer to what he had discovered, witness saw the defendant Malsbury. Witness told him who he was and what he had found, and Malsbury said, "Yes; I am a gamekeeper. I set the trap and received my instructions to do so from the head keeper; but I did not know we were committing any unlawful offence." The defendant Law admitted that he had given instructions for the trap to be set.

Mr. Hilbery: How did you come to go through the wood?—Witness: I received some information.

Mr. Hilbery: From whom?—Mr. Polhill: I must object to that question.—Mr. Hilbery: I am entitled to know.—The Chairman (to witness): Are you wiling to answer the question?—Witness: Yes.—Mr. Polhill: I must object for very good reasons. The society is often given information by people on the understanding that in no circumstances must we mention their names, and we are bound to keep faith with them. I don't know who gave the information in this case.—Witness: I don't know who the informant was either, for I received the message over the telephone. (Laughter.) The name was withheld, although I asked for it.

Mr. Hilbery: Did the keeper tell you that the trap was set for Jays?—Witness: I was told that it was set for vermin.

For the Benefit of Jays.

George Law, the head gamekeeper, stated that the wood in question belonged to Mr. Maconochie, the owner of the Cudham estate. On that estate they reared a large number of pheasants. The wood in which the trap was set was a private wood, and witness had the trap set for Jays because they destroyed the Pheasants' eggs and also young Pheasants. The trap was set very hard, so that it would not catch small birds. Maize was used for bait, and witness had never seen a small bird caught in the trap, which was an ordinary rabbit and vermin trap.—James Malsbury, the other defendant, said he set the trap to catch Jays at the request of the last witness. There was one public footpath through the wood, but that was 146 yards from the spot where the trap was set.

Mr. Hilbery said it was perfectly obvious that the Act was never intended to apply to a case of this kind. The wood was a private one, and the trap was set solely for the purpose of catching Jays, which preyed upon the Pheasants' eggs and also the young Pheasants. The trap was set for the purpose of protecting Mr. Mâconochie's own property, and such a trumpery and ridiculous charge ought not to have been brought before the Bench.

The Chairman said the Bench were of opinion that there must be a conviction in this case. Against the head keeper there would be a fine of 5s. and 11s. costs, and the under keeper would have to pay the costs, 11s.—"Bromley Telegraph."

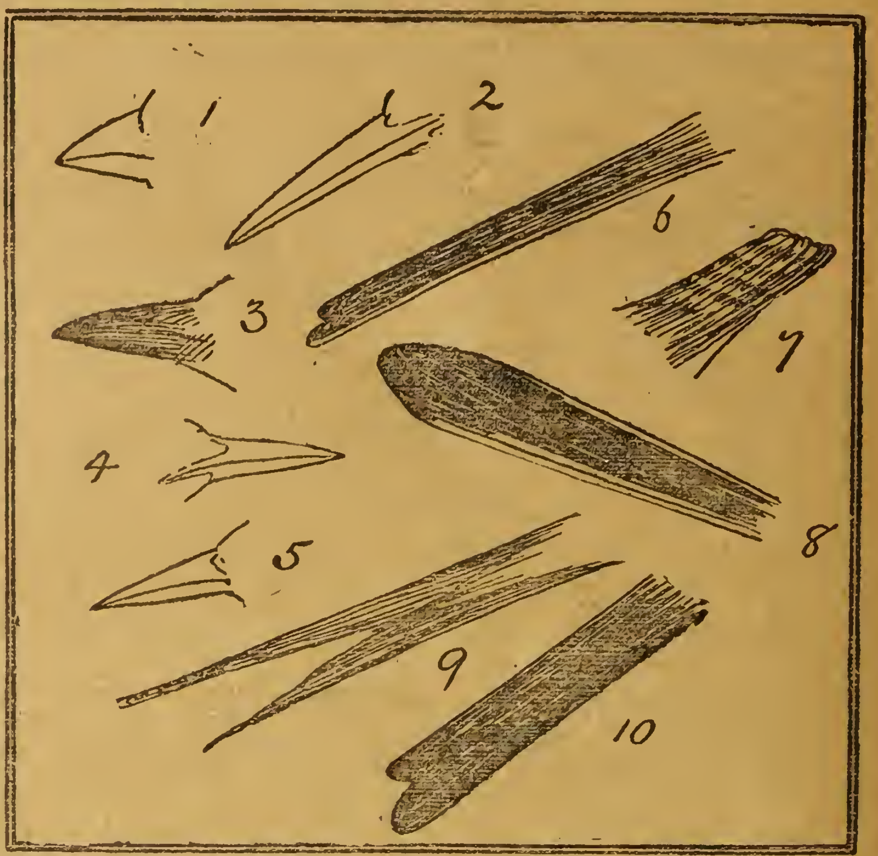
"Beaks & Tails." Can you Identify Them?



Five Shillings Cash for the Best Solution.

The above sketches represent either the beak or the tail of ten well-known species of British birds. We will forward 5/- cash (or our bird books to value, as may be preferred) to the reader who correctly identifies the birds to which they belong. In the event of no one getting the whole number correct, the prize will go to the sender of the greatest number of correct answers; in the event of a tie, the winner will be drawn for by an independent person.

RULES: Write the birds' names on the back of a postcard and write your name and address clearly underneath. Number each name 1 to 10, in the order in which the beaks and tails appear on the drawing. Address your postcard to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., and post it to reach us not later than first post Thursday, May 22nd. Only one effort is allowed each competitor.

HOW YOUNG BIRDS SHOULD BE REARED.

A Contribution that will help you to succeed in the Hobby.

By T. JOHNSON.

Canary Hybrids have been bred from the Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, Siskin, Redpoll, Twite, and Bullfinch; also, I believe, from the Chaffinch, Siskin, and Yellowhammer; although in the last two cases no authentic records have been forthcoming that they have reached maturity. The Chaffie-Canary is worth trying for, and I believe it would be a handsome bird indeed; anyone succeeding in exhibiting a good Hybrid of this cross will reap a reward—both monetary and honourable—that will have paid him for all his trouble, and I don't think it will be got without trouble either. I know something of the courtship of Chaffinches.

You Must Have Good Hens.

Good Hybrids cannot be bred unless you have suitable hens. While Finches only differ one from another in a small degree, there is a vast difference in hen Canaries, and I am confident that they play the most important part in the breeding of good Hybrids. Many mule breeders seem to think that any sort of hen is good enough for mule breeding. Of course, if singers only are wanted, then the Borders or the Rollers are just what are wanted, being free breeders; but if you are out for exhibition specimens, nothing but the biggest and the best Norwich hen will do, and for preference, a Yellow Green, or Yellow Cinnamon. Crestbred hens are sometimes recommended. I don't favour them, because colour plays such an important part in present day competition, and colour is not so latent in the Crest as in the Norwich. There is another drawback, you might breed birds with harsh and slovenly feathers at the thighs and on the shoulders; and you don't get birds with the same symmetry. You may gain a little in size, but at the expense of colour, quality, and shape. The same remarks apply to the Lancashire.

Where reliable Finches are limited, the system of running one cock to two hens should be practised, and the three compartment cage is an ideal one for the purpose; but if you have enough Finches to go round, I prefer the one cock one hen method. Some cocks prove very affectionate, and make good fathers, and when the young are being fed they are a material help to the hen. None but the most robust hens are of any use if you want fertile eggs. They must be bubbling over with condition, so that they will give the Finch more opportunities to fertilise the eggs.

I prefer a room set apart for muling. All things considered, the hens are better away from the cock Canaries; and I think I am right in saying that the best results have been obtained that way. Still, it is not absolutely necessary. Many Canary breeders have just a pair or two up for muling in the same room as their Canaries.

To get the best results, the Finches should be run with the hen Canaries from Christmas onwards in the flights, and if any hen shows a predilection for any Finch, or vice versa, they should be paired together. Don't be in too big a hurry to pair up. Finches as a rule are not early breeders, and if breeding from Sibs., it is usual to run the hen with a cock Canary for the first round, so as to perpetuate the strain of Sibs. After pairing up, you may follow the lines laid down as for Canaries, except that when the young are hatched you may add more seedy heads of green food.

A very Necessary Precaution.

The night before the hen is expected to lay, put the wire slide in, and keep the Finch shut off until you have got the egg. The precaution isn't necessary if you know your cock bird to be safe with eggs, but many have the reputation of being too inquisitive as to the nature of the inside of an egg. After the hen is put to sit, the cock may be shut off, and, if required, may be run with a second hen after a few days rest. At 21 days the young are usually able to do for themselves, when they can be treated in much the same way as young Canaries, but give a more varied diet when on hard seed.

It is said that a "thing of beauty is a joy for ever." If that is so, then a real good Hybrid bred from one of our cock Finches and a Bullfinch hen must be a joy for ever, because we know that it is a thing of beauty. Whenever I think about Hybrids, my mind always reverts to those two fine birds so successfully exhibited a few years back, the Goldie-Bullie that belonged to Mr. J. Williams, and the Linnet-Bullie of Mr. C. J. Ward. Those two birds were ideal specimens of their respective crosses, and I am certain there are none to-day that can surpass them in quality, even if they are approached. The Greenfinch-Chaffinch belonging to Messrs. Martin and Archer is a beautiful bird no doubt, and is a glorious triumph of the breeder's art, but it lacks the exquisite colouring that appeals to one in a real good Hybrid.

The Hen of all Hens!

Anyone making a hobby of the breeding of Hybrids between two British birds would be well advised to confine themselves to the Bullie hen. There are some pretty Hybrids bred from the Goldie, and other of our British, the Goldie-Redpoll and Goldie-Siskin being notable instances, but in a good class, those in the money, usually have the Bullie on the hen side. If you can get the Siberian Bullie, then so much the better; but a good big British hen is not to be despised, if it is only because they go to nest much readier, and that they are much more reliable breeders than the Siberians.

In selecting your birds, get the best that can be got. It is no use expecting the best from inferior specimens. Always get a big one, and if the big one is a good jonque, so much the better for you. The Twite is one that would make a good Hybrid from the Bullie, and I hope to see one before very long. When are we to see our first Hawfinch Hybrid? There is good money waiting for the first that is bred. Of course our British birds can be crossed in almost any way; but I am suggesting the Bullie cross as the best cross if you want to win.

My Hybrid breeding has been done in a large open-air aviary, and those enthusiasts who have the room cannot do better. I know that there are many who haven't the convenience to erect a large open-air aviary, and they have to take Hobson's choice, and use cages. But let your cages be as large as possible, or even larger than that, as the Irishman said. Let the birds be run together all the winter.

Fixing up the Nesting Sites.

For nesting sites, get the small Redpoll cages (cost about 3d.) and cover them with small shoots of fir or conifer (Cupressus) so as to make them as private as possible. Hang them outside the cage, and make a sliding door in the cage front for the birds to enter. If this style of nesting site is adopted, you will find the hen will lay her eggs in the nest instead of dropping them from the perches; and much of that vexatious attribute of eating eggs will banish at the same time. Nothing is more annoying than to be expecting eggs in a morning, only to find them either eaten or laid from the perch. One never knows but that the egg may have contained a youngster worth pounds.

You must have a stock of Canaries for rearing purposes if you are fortunat eenough to get any young hybrids hatched. Give the hens that are feeding them plenty of seedy heads of green food, and if you can get them to eat green fly—which they do in an aviary—so much the better for the young Hybrid. I am situated in the happy position of being able to study the habits of many of our British birds when feeding young, at the same time as I am following my employment, and have found that many of the seedeaters feed their young chiefly on the large greenfly which infest trees like the elm, maple, sycamore, and rose. The small green caterpillar also seems to come in for their attention, and that is why I like the Greenfinch hen for feeding young Hybrids, but I don't suppose she would be reliable in a cage.

A Word for the Hen Greenfinch.

Greenfinch hens in an aviary feed the young Hybrids on food that is more natural to them if they can get it. However, a good hen Canary is a good substitute, and if you get a young Hybrid hatched, if it happens to be a solitary one, don't let the hen rear it alone, but put with it a couple of young Canaries of the same age. The Hybrid overgrows the young Canaries, and gets the lion's share of the food, and makes a better young one in consequence. I don't like only one young one in a nest, neither does a hen Canary. She would much rather have a nest full.

When the Hybrid is reared, treat the same as for Canary Hybrids, and get it used to the show cage as soon as possible. By the way, I didn't mention that the best mate for the Canary-Bullie cross is a good Yellow Green Norwich or Yellow Cinnamon cock.

I hope that these few remarks on my experience and observations will be of benefit to those taking up the hobby of Hybrid breeding. There is nothing certain about it except its disappointments. It is a hobby purely for the optimistic fancier, one whose outlook on life is always on the bright side. The element of luck plays an important part in Hybrid breeding, and let us hope that some of us have the luck to breed a Palace winner this season, for "it is better to be born lucky than rich."

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Where the Pet Keeper Scores.

Our member, Mr. Geo. Crabb, the president of the London and P.O.S., kindly sends me Sir Ray Langester's article on "Longevity," published in the "Daily Telegraph" of May 12. Those who have the idea that it is an iniquity to keep birds and other wild creatures in captivity would receive considerable enlightenment if they would read this latest instalment of the educative articles contributed to the "Daily Telegraph" by Sir Ray Lankester, under the title "Science from an Easy Chair."

The following sentences bear distinctly upon the length of life of animals and birds in captivity as contrasted with the period of their existence in a state of nature.

> "Dogs are 'old' at twelve years; they show 'senile decay' (loss of teeth, etc.) at that age. In wild nature they die at that age, killed by carnivorous animals or by other younger animals of their own species, or unable to capture food. Under man's care they may live to twice that age. Horses in the natural wild state die (by the wearing away of the teeth) at twenty years, but have been kept alive till thirty and even forty years. The lion and tiger probably live some fifteen years in wild conditions, and may be kept to twice that age by human care. The cat has in the wild state a life of eight or nine years; it has been kept by man to eighteen years of age. Birds certainly live longer than do mammals of similar bulk. Geese, swans, ravens, and some birds of prey have been known to reach the age of fifty years; even Canaries (in cages) may live to twenty years of age. Many well-certified cases of Parrots and Cockatoos reaching the age of eighty years and more are known." —

I have many times pointed out that a process which multiplies the length of life of anything is obviously not a cruel process, and as long as we can prove that a bird in captivity will outlive eight or ten generations of its congeners which are left to Nature, so long shall we able to maintain that the caging of birds under proper conditions is not "an acted blasphemy."

Fiction from a Fiction Journal.

The following letter from a reader has been handed me by the Editor :—

I enclose a page extracted from "Dainty Novels," a most excellent (?) paper which I came across on Saturday. It is an old copy which I was casually reading over when I noticed in the "Dainty Novels League" columns some remarks by the Editress, who replies to correspondents. She writes: "Many have their eyes put out with redhot needles, so that they may have a better chance of winning singing competitions? That is not a wild statement, it is absolute fact." And again she writes: "Think of all the caged birds you have known, and what has been their ultimate fate. Some have been probably frightened to death by cats, others have died from sunstroke, the cage being put shelterless against a hot wall; but I venture to say that quite three-fourths of all cage birds die of thirst or starvation, because someone has forgotten to feed them, or else from the torture of the red mites which infect all cages after a time, and simply eat up the wretched prisoners alive!" Needless to say this woman shows, besides a most complete ignorance, a blind, absurd prejudice against the caging of birds, and she works up her readers into a kind of madness of humane enthusiasm. However, on reading the page you will form your own opinion about it. F. FOLKARD.

If Mr. Folkard will let me know the date of the "Dainty Novel" from which he sends the page, that is, if the precious publication bears a date, or the address from which it is issued, I will write to the Editress, although I fear that she will follow the example of the authors of similarly scandalous statements which I have already refuted from time to time, and will suppress my letter without acknowledgment. Such people will not permit anything to be said in their publications which would expose the fallacies to which they give utterance. These fallacies are not always the outcome of ignorance of the subject. They are more frequently a pandering to the tastes of the subscribers who help to keep the publications going, or who find the wherewithal to uphold the societies of which such publications are the organs.

The R.S.P.C.A. and Its Methods.

It would appear that it is not only in the matter of prosecutions against bird dealers that the R.S.P.C.A. takes proceedings which it is not able to justify to the satisfaction of magistrates hearing the cases. In a recent prosecution concerned with the thinning out of the wild red-deer in Somerset, the case was dismissed without the defence being called upon. I should not have referred to the case in these columns, but for the remarks of two of the speakers representing the association concerned.

Lord Fortescue, who dealt with the subject at great length, expressed regret that a society whose objects commanded so much sympathy should have taken up a case which was based, in fact, on such poor foundations, and said it would be a very good thing if in these matters people would clear their minds of cant; and Mr. S. Kidner said maudlin sentimentality was extending too far in public life. It was time for Englishmen to put their foot down and say they would have no more of it.

When will the subscribers to the funds of these professional humanitarian societies take heed of the manner in which their money is being spent?

HENRY J. FULLJAMES,
Secretary CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE,
154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same

We hear that the judges at the show of the Dysart C.B.S., Oct. 18, will be: Scotch Fancy, Mr. A. Kerr, Dysart; Borders, Mr. A. Walker, Lesmahagow; Norwich and Crests, Mr. J. Holmes, Edinburgh; British and Foreign, Mr. J. H. Adams.

The new meeting rooms of the Anfield, Everton and Dis. C.B.S., write Messrs. Redpath and Walker, joint hon. secs., are at the Prince Hotel, Moss Street. Meetings first Thursday in month. Members please attend in full force next meeting night. Important business.

The rule card of the Sowerby Bridge C.B.S. gives, besides the rules of the Society, a comprehensive syllabus of events to March, 1914, together with a detailed classification for the first feather, annual, and pairs shows. The sec. is Mr. A. Sutcliffe, 46, Eldon Place, Hopwood Lane, Halifax.

The hon. sec. of Brighton and Hove C.B.A., Mr. W. H. Gibb, 19, Bond Street, Brighton, sends us the year-book of the society. It contains a list of officers and committee, rules, balance-sheet for 1912, particulars of the monthly show competitions, and the names and addresses of members.

I should be extremely obliged if you would announce in Cage Birds, writes Mr. F. Moore, hon. sec., that the Metropolitan C.B.A. have engaged Kelvedon Hall, Kelvedon Road, Walham Green, for their headquarters. We shall now have a very comfortable room for our meetings and a hall capable of staging 500 to 600 birds.

The Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. issues a neat booklet of rules, etc., for the year. Among the contents are the names of officers and committee, winners of cups and other specials, since 1904, fixtures for 1913, and a list of members' names and addresses. The hon. sec. is Mr. W. Hodson, 28, Barry Road, East Dulwich.

The annual ramble of the Watford C.B.S., writes Mr. W. Rackley, hon. sec., will take place on Sunday, June 1, to Ivanhoe, via Berkhampstead, L.N.W.Ry. Train 9.30 a.m. from Watford Station. Return via Tring, L.N.W.Ry. London fanciers wishing to join us will be cordially welcomed and can obtain full particulars from me at 9, Holywell Road. Watford.

I am sorry to have to report, writes Mr. F. Moore, hon. sec., the bad illness of our esteemed member, Mr. Lathbury, who took a chill at our committee meeting on April 30, and has been confined to his bed since. He has a nice lot of young birds, which Mr. Plank has very kindly undertaken to attend to. I feel sure all fanciers will join me in wishing this enthusiastic fancier a speedy recovery.

To Society Secretaries, Advertisers and Correspondents generally.

Will all correspondents, and secretaries and officials of societies in particular, please note that CAGE BIRDS now goes to press on Wednesday afternoon so that all matter for publication in our issue of the same week MUST reach us on TUESDAY TO BE CERTAIN OF INCLUSION, or first post Wednesday at latest.

It would much facilitate our work if Secretaries and others would kindly write out their club reports, notices, etc., in the style in which they see them printed. Write on ONE SIDE ONLY of each sheet of paper used.

We have, writes Mr. T. Smith, hon. sec., Ilkeston O.S., engaged Mr. C. A. House, Bradford, to judge Canaries, and Mr. R. J. Howe, Wellingborough, Mules, British and Foreign, at our open show, Oct. 24.

The following, writes Mr. J. Langlands, sec., have been selected and kindly consented to judge at the annual show of the Broughty Ferry C.B.S., in Good Templar Hall, Broughton Ferry, Oct. 18:—Scotch Fancy, T. Merrillies (Broughty Ferry) and J. Thomson (Kirkcaldy); Crests, Jas. McGregor (Lochgelly); Plainheads, W. Hampton (Brechin); Borders, D. Henderson (Buckhaven); Mules, British, and Foreign, J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh).

The inconvenience to the busy man caused by boiling an egg and preparing it with other ingredients is great; this has been overcome by Liverine, Limited, who are now supplying almost every fancier's store with their desiccated yolk of egg. It is, says this firm, the genuine thing, and fanciers can assure their tender youngsters getting real egg without the trouble before mentioned. The sales of desiccated yolk of egg are, we are informed, astounding. Liverine, Limited, have other outputs for the white of the egg, so are able to offer the yolk at a reasonable figure. There is sufficient in a 6d. tin to rear a nest of young until they are cracking seed.

OBITUARY.

Mr. John Morton (Darvel).

In the person of Mr. John Morton, writes Mr. J. Robertson, jun., sec. Darvel C.B.C., our Club has sustained its first severe loss by the hand of death. For the last few years Mr. Morton has been engaged in the breding and rearing of poultry for general utility purposes, and it was while engaged in the fulfilling of duties connected with same that he met with the accident which caused his death. Having been refilling lamps connected with his chicken rearers, he had spilled a little paraffin oil about his clothes, and on going to look at the heat in one of his incubators. he had, in the darkness of the room, struck a light to see the thermometer. His clothes immediately took fire, and in the few minutes that elapsed between the accident and his being found by his parents. he was severely burned about the hands and face. The effect of the shock and the burns proved too much for him, and eight days after the accident he passed quietly away. John was for a long time an enthusiastic breeder of the Border Fancy, and he had also a warm side to our British birds, and had a few encouraging attempts at Hybrid breeding before he gave up the birds to start the poultry. He became a member of our C.B.C. at its formation, and took an active part in trying to make it a success in this district. He was of a bright and genial nature, and one was always sure of a cheery word of welcome from our departed friend. He will be much missed in our midst, and we are sure the warmest sympathy of all fanciers will be extended to the family in the severe loss they have sustained.

Many thanks for depicting my buff hen on the front page of your valuable paper of May 3, writes Mr. D. Jenkins, Swansea, also I wish to thank your artist for the life-like portrait of her. She was 1st Mumbles, 1st Cheltenham, 2nd Swansea, beaten by her stable companion, 1st Newport, 1st L.C.B.A., 2nd Frome, beaten by yellow hen stable companion. She is now rearing four very promising youngsters just about to leave the nest. Wishing Cage Birds the success it deserves.

A Good "Go-er."

I received the Cage Birds watch safely, and return many thanks for same. It is going well and keeps very good time. I wish every success to Cage Birds.—A. Lloyd (Horsham).

Country Rambles.

The following rambles have been arranged: National British Bird and M.C., May 24, to Epping Forest, from Liverpool Street; morning party 9.36 train to Chingford; afternoon 1,35 train to Loughton; City and Suburban A.C.B. to Epping Forest with N.B.B. and M.C.; London and Provincial O.S. to Epping Forest with NB.B. and M.C.; Sowerby Bridge C.B.S., May 17, to Harden Beck, train leaves Halifax St. Paul's, 1.45; Glasgow and Western Counties C.B.S., May 17, to Lesmahagow, from Central Station, 2.25; Leyton C.B.A., May 17, to Epping Forest, meet at Loughton Station 2.58; Preston O.S., May 25, to Brock, train to Longridge from Preston 9.40, Deep dale 9.44, Ribbleton 9.49; Watford C.B.S., June 1, to Ivanhoe, train to Berkhampstead, 9.30 from Watford; Doncaster C.B.S., May 31, through Edlington Woods, meet at Balby tram terminus, 2.30; Smallbridge C.B.S., May 18, meet 7.30 a.m., Albert Royds St.; Clapham C.B.A., May 18, to Effingham, from Waterloo 10.2; Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., May 25, to Box Hill, Dorking and Holmwood Common, train leaves Peckham Rye 9.20.

A White Skylark.

I saw a pure white Skylark on Thursday, May 1st, near Birchington, Kent, and thought it might be of interest to your readers to tell you.—W. E. Hunt (Faversham).

An Unpleasant Experience.

You will be sorry to hear that Judge Vardy is confined to his house suffering with rheumatism, writes Mr. B. Gabbitass (Mansfield). I am sure all fanciers will wish him a speedy recovery.

Dominoes Are Now Off.

Robins have selected a strange nesting-place at the Cheshire County Asylum, Macclesfield. They have built their nest in a domino-box in the sitting-room of No. 2 ward. The dominoes are still at the bottom of the box, the latter standing on a bookshelf, which is in daily use. A few days ago the Robins were busy building their nest, and eggs have now been laid.

An Aged Gull.

Some years ago, says a writer in a Northern contemporary, I had a communication from Mr. Anthony Scott, of Southwick House, Sunderland, telling of a Gull which lived thirty-four years in his garden. He was a Herring Gull, which Mr. Scott's grandfather bought from a man who had winged the bird and caught it. This bird passed its life in confinement without taking shelter from the severest storms, even in winter. His food was fish, worms, and scraps of meat; and many a cat he defeated in open fight.

In Scots Fancy Circles.

The following have become members of the Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A. for the ensuing year:—Messrs. R. Lile, J. McLennan (Edinburgh), W. Beattie (Dundee), J. A. Stewart (Cathcart), N. R. H. Leiper (Ibrox), W. Wilson (Glasgow), J. Y. Millar (Cardonald), D. Holden (Muirkirk) S. Cook (Cowdenbeath), and W. Muirhead (Bonnybridge). Our esteemed vice-president, Mr. Jas. D. Brown, is giving a prize of 2s. 6d. in money to the 5th, 6th, and 7th birds in each class at our annual show (eight classes).—A. M. Baird, Sec.

A Change—and a New Feature.

With this week's issue, Mr. G. E. Weston brings to a close the lengthy period of nearly ten years during which he has answered the questions of readers concerning Mules, Hybrids and British birds. He is contributing a new feature to Cage Birds, which he hopes to make interesting and popular; the opening instalment appears this week. Mr. Weston's old department will be in very capable hands; Mr. H. Norman will answer all questions relating to Mules and Hybrids, and Mr. H. J. Fulljames all those which concern the keeping of British birds.

Dual Judging of Borders.

I have the judges fixed for our show on Nov. 15th, writes Mr. J. Brown, secretary Galashiels O.S., and would like to direct attention to the fact that we have adopted the "double" judging system on our Scotch Fancy and Border Fancy sections, which we hope will secure the support deserved. The following are the judges:—Scotch Fancy (double) Alex. Paterson (Edinburgh) and Jas. Carson (Dalkeith); Border Fancy (double), Jno. Tait (Gala) and Jas. Alexander (Lilliesleaf); Norwich, R. G. Cameron (Kelso); British and Foreign, Jas. Mason (Peebles).

20,000 Eggs for London's Sick Poor.

The Poultry World's Hospital Egg Week commenced on Tuesday last, May 13, and closes on Tuesday next, May 20. New-laid eggs are urgently required for the pale-faced inmates of our great Metropolitan Hospitals, and it is hoped that readers of Cage Birds who keep poultry will send as many eggs as they can possibly spare. Last year poultry-keepers in Great Britain contributed a grand total of 24,317 eggs, and our sister paper is again striving to reach the 20,000 egg line. Wherever donations in cash are sent, new-laid eggs will be purchased. Eggs should be sent at once, carefully packed, to The Editor, The Poultry World, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

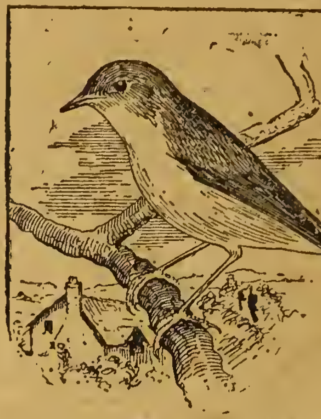
Wild-Bird Life.

The Finest Singer of Them All.

There are many who claim that the Nightingale should be awarded the palm in the bird world as "The finest singer of them all," and who give as a reason for their verdict the statement that he indulges in song when all the other inmates of the groves and woods are silent. Such person, I fear, can only be superficially acquainted with the melody of the "King of Songsters." Let anyone who cares ever so little for the singing of our feathered friends, stand at the edge of a wood on a fine bright day at the present time, when the sun shines, and all around is gay. The air is full of the hum of insects, and cheery music of birds. The deliberate utterances of the Blackbird, the song of the Thrush, Robin, Finches and Buntings, make the woods ring with lively strains. Suddenly a single new voice is added to the chorus; only a phrase, just a few notes, but so clear, rich, and melodious, so unlike the others, that it is impossible for the listener to pass it by without notice, and so much will the rich song impress itself upon him that he will find himself eagerly listening for the next utterance. When it comes, it will be so totally different from the last that he will hardly recognise it as coming from the same bird; it will be something perhaps even fuller and richer than the first; it may possibly be a waterbubble, rendered in so liquid and melodious a manner that one wonders how the tiny throat of a bird can make it so perfect. This may be followed by a low whistle, so clear and sweet that the commencement may be entirely missed, and only noticed when broken up by a few rapid notes. We are now in the month of May, when this glorious minstrel is at his best, and readers need not wait until the "shades of night" before seeking his haunts. Before he has nested he sings almost as much by day as after sundown, but although the song of the 'Gale is the first and best at any time, one undoubtedly gets the full enjoyment of it during the "bewitching hours of night"; he seems then to fill the wood with his glorious voice, and as one writer observes, "He pierces the ear right to the heart of the listener." Unfortunately the Nightingale is quite a local performer, his range is mostly Southern, even the grand country of the West cannot claim him as a frequenter of the woods. Efforts have been made to extend his range by the placing of eggs in Robin's nests, but although the young have been reared, they have left the district in the autumn, never to return. We of the South are fortunate, and fully appreciate our good fortune, especially in the month of May.



THE NIGHTINGALE.

We hear from Mr. W. Hodson, hon. sec., that the annual country ramble of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. will take place on May 25th, to Box Hill, Dorking, and Holmwood Common. Train leaves Peckham Rye 9.20. Each to take his own return ticket to Dorking, fare 2s. 3d. It has been decided not to go into Dorking for Lunch, but meat tea will be provided at the Temperance Hotel, West Street, at 5.30. The hon. sec. will be pleased to hear by May 21, from anyone intending to join, particulars from Mr. W. Hodson, 28, Barry Road, East Dulwich, S.E.

A Popular Cup Winner.

The bowl of the Northern Lizard Club has found a popular resting place for the next twelve months, Mr. J. Hyslop, Wallsend, being the holder. Rumour has it, writes Mr. G. C. Davidson, sec., that he intends it to remain there.

Waiting on the Weather

Owing to the inclement weather, writes Mr. W. Hodgkins, Assist. Sec., the ramble of the Wallasey and Dis. C.B.S. was postponed to Sunday, May 18. If wet, the following Sunday. Meet at headquarters 10.30 a.m. (Fairhaven Institute, Sea View Road, Liscard). All fanciers cordially invited.

SOMETHING ABOUT MY NIGHTINGALES.

By W. E. TESCHEMAKER, B.A. (Teignmouth).

England's "Philomel" and the Continental Sprosser are both dealt with by our author, who also chats interestingly of some Nightingale lovers of long ago

A Bird with a Fine Constitution.

Many people consider the Nightingale delicate. The incident which I am now going to relate seems to negative that suggestion. When I brought home the two birds above mentioned, I took them at once to the bird-room and unpacked and caged the Nightingale, after first shutting the window. I closed the door of the travelling cage, after taking out the Nightingale, but did not latch it. As bad luck would have it, the Sprosser bumped up against the door, knocked it open, and found himself at liberty. With one joyous note he made straight for the window at forty miles an hour. There was a horrid scrunch, and a limp little body fell motionless on the floor. I may have said something short, but I went on with my work, for I felt quite sure that the only further service that could possibly be rendered to the poor Sprosser was to decently inter his remains. Having finished my task, I picked up the supposed corpse by the tail, and thought I noticed a quivering in one eyelid. I sponged the head with cold water and left the "corpse" on the window-sill. After tea the "corpse" was found to be alive but extremely groggy; it could not stand. It was hand-fed with a few mealworms, and placed for the night in a cage.

An Experiment which Did Not Succeed.

About 6.30 a.m. the following morning I was awakened by loud songs proceeding from the bird-room. Antony's voice could be easily recognised, but there were other notes which seemed strange and unfamiliar. I slipped on a dressing-gown, opened the door of the bird-room very gently, and peeped in. Words fail me to describe that scene. The "noble Roman" and the "corpse" were engaged in a Homeric contest (of song) and the "corpse" was getting the best of it. When I looked in a couple of hours later the Sprosser alone was singing: Antony had given him best.

This combination did not answer at all well, because Antony would not sing much when the Sprosser was in the room, and the Sprosser would not sing much in any other room, so I turned him into an aviary the following spring, and succeeded in breeding from him as mentioned above. Some of our readers may recollect the suggestion I once made that the cause of the Nightingale's singing at night was not that he fears the competition of other birds, but that he is liveliest at that time. I had an opportunity of testing my theory that summer, and was interested in noting that this Sprosser, which had always sung in the morning in the bird-room, and never after mid-day, as soon as he found himself out of doors and in comparative freedom, at once reverted to the time honoured customs of his race, and commenced to sing of an evening. At 10 p.m. the whole garden rang with his glorious notes, and people used to stand in the road outside and listen to him.

A Couple of Night Birds.

Like Philomel, the writer keeps rather late hours; in fact by the time he returns home Salton is generally fast asleep, and only the cats are sitting up to welcome him. Night after night I used to have a peep at the Sprossers' aviary, and always found them awake, and "churring" away vigorously. One of my correspondents asked me if I ever saw the young fed at night. The hen bird always seemed to be brooding the young closely at night, and I saw no feeding, but the test was not conclusive, because all birds seem to be much scared at night by the approach even of their owner, so I never liked to stay long enough to get them reconciled to my presence. I have seen the male feeding himself, however, and it is quite probable that he also fed the young, because some Sprossers nest far north, and we may be nearly sure that their close relatives, at all events the Arctic Bluethroat, and the Rubythroat—feed their young by the light of the "midnight sun," for it is a well established fact that during the nesting season in the Arctic Circle feeding goes on by night as well as by day; it seems to be only a question of sufficient light for the purpose.

I thought it would be an interesting experiment to train up one of the young male Sprossers under Antony, both in order to see what sort of a performer a young bird bred in an aviary would make, and to ascertain if he would adhere to the song of his race or adopt that of the Nightingale of Southern Europe. I therefore parted with his parents and all his brothers and sisters, and kept the young male in the bird-room for the whole winter. The result was not at all satisfactory, for the young bird was never allowed to sing; whenever he commenced to record, Antony used to shout him down, so I parted with him.

What is the Explanation?

Here we knock up against an interesting question, namely, why young Nightingales which have never made that wonderful journey to the "Dark Continent" are almost invariably failures as vocalists. In order to answer this we should have to know what the Nightingale is singing about, and I fear even the wisest of us is not wise enough to interpret that beautiful song. Perhaps he is telling us of his experiences—of the burning desert and the cool oasis, of the mighty river of history and mystery which flows northward from the heart of Africa, of the great Moon Mountains with their glittering crowns of eternal snow, of that daring flight across the moonlit Mediterranean, and of the "mistral" which comes roaring and ravening down from the wild ravines. If all the hand-reared birds were total failures, perhaps we might accept this as sufficient explanation, but there is always the brilliant exception. A young male Whinchat, bred in the aviary last summer, has sung to me through the entire winter, and right through the spring moult, and to-day he is not only in the full beauty of the breeding plumage of his race, but he is a far better singer than any wild Whinchat I ever heard, for he has acquired many of the tours of the Shama and other vocalists of renown.

Our Hobby Week by Week.

A pleasant task has been assigned me. I am to write concerning topics which are at the moment of interest to bird-keepers, and on which I hold "views," or on which I may have formed opinions consequent upon my own experiences as a keeper and lover of birds. My earnest hope is that my discursive notes may succeed in holding the attention of my readers, and even occasionally profiting them. As is the way with most people who sometimes stop to think out things for themselves, I am apt to find myself holding and expressing very decided views on some aspects of our hobby. But my readers will, I know, generously acquit me of intentional intolerance towards the opinions of others; and I hereby promise to try and steer clear of too arrogant a brand of dogmatism!

Freaks and Freakishness.

The present would seem to be qualifying in some respects to be considered a season of freakishness—to say nothing of freaks. The weather conditions have been abominably freakish; at least, I can answer for my own particular portion of the Globe. And the hens of many fanciers with whom I have spoken seem to have been in a responsive mood. I heard in April of a young Yorkshire Canary without the semblance of a trace of wings; it was doing well when I had my last news of it. Readers will no doubt recollect that a similar case occurred last year; and this particular wingless Canary still survives and thrives. The other week came friend Baker's young Norwich Plainhead with four legs. And the other day a fancier telephoned me in a great state of perturbation—he had a nest of Norwich Plainheads without eyes! These youngsters were well over 14 days old; had never opened their eyes, and appeared unlikely ever so to do, as there was in each case but an indication of the presence of the eye, and the skin over the latter was "grown together" (my informant's way of putting it). Apart from this, the birds were large for their age, strong, and well nourished. A couple of my own hens each presented me with two eggs on the one morning, a thing I have personally never before experienced. In the first case one egg lay broken on the cage floor, and the other was in the nest uninjured. In the second case (this happened only last Tuesday) both eggs were safe in the nest; one has a small, rough (chalky) looking patch on it. Query: Can it have been delayed (or "stuck") on its passage to the outer world, and so caught up by egg number two?

What Ever Were They?

Many years ago—more than I like to call to mind—I was, I remember, very irritated and annoyed at the printed gibes of a well-known learned aviculturist concerning Hybrids and those who tried to breed them. I was hot-headed in those days. "Freaks and variations" he contemptuously stigmatised them; hence the previous paragraph has naturally recalled the matter. And my thoughts run on to wonder whether we shall, during the present season, find our list of authentic Hybrids augmented. It is a curious fact that away back in the past several "freaks and variations" were exhibited which the majority of present-day fanciers consider have never been bred. In the Crystal Palace catalogues of thirty to forty years ago figure Yellowhammer-Canary, Chaffinch-Canary, Bullfinch-Canary and Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrids, and some of these got into the prize-list. Whatever were they in reality? The Siskin-Bullfinch, I believe, was afterwards identified as one of the foreign (? Serin) Finches. With regard to three different specimens said to be the progeny of a cock Bullfinch and hen Canary, that sterling fancier and judge, the late Mr. G. J. Barnesby, tells us in his book "Canaries and Mules" that one (shown in 1870) was clear in colour, and was considered to be "only a Canary with a mal-formed beak." Of one of the other couple, he remarks that although it appeared "a more likely one of the kind, it was considered by those fully competent to form an opinion to be a cross between the Bullfinch and the Chaffinch." Sensation! We seem to-day to be just forty-three years behind the times with one cross, anyway! And why cannot we produce the Bullfinch-Canary, seeing that the redoubtable Dr. Jassay, of Frankfort-on-Main, recorded many long years ago that he had accomplished the feat? Can he, I wonder, have been mistaken?

Offered Without Apology.

As anything bearing on the feeding of young birds (old ones, too, for that matter) is of particular importance now, I make no apology for airing my views on the subject of green food. I have often puzzled over the staunch adherence of bird-keepers, and especially the "old brigade" amongst Canary breeders, to such "green-meats" as watercress, lettuce and dandelion. In the bulk, however, we fanciers are a conservative lot, and shy in the making of changes in our methods of procedure. And the above-mentioned trio of greenfoods can claim to be "old-established and well-recommended." I cannot deny them a measure of usefulness, and, further, watercress and lettuce have the great merit of being readily obtainable in towns. But to my way of thinking, it is an easy matter to take away their characters. Watercress is liable to come from a polluted source. All three soon subside into a flabby, stale condition when left in one's cages during hot weather, to the certain detriment of young birds that chance to eat of them, and to the probable detriment of old birds. Further, I think their dank and fleshy nature makes them unsuitable and liable to bring about bowel trouble. Do our Finches in their wild state eat watercress and lettuce and feed their young on them? Commend me to the wild seeding greenfoods for both old and young birds—shepherds purse and chickweed, and (don't look surprised) grass.

Was the Red Light Justifiable?

Let us be fair to the lettuce, however. I noticed recently that a lecturer condemned it on the ground that it contained something that made birds drowsy and sleepy—made the old birds disinclined to attend their duties, and left the young ones listless in the nest. I have heard the same argument advanced before. It is true that lettuce contains a minute trace of a sleep-producing substance called lactucarin, but (according to Professor Church) it is found only in the stem, and more particularly when the plant is flowering. Now birds get very little stem, and a young and tender (not flowering) lettuce is generally chosen. Further, an incredible quantity would surely need to be consumed before the lactucarin could appreciably affect the birds. Many extremely useful and popular items of food, including fruits, nuts (even the humble potato) have been proved to contain some principle or other which, if only it were present in sufficient quantity, would "spell trouble" to all who ate of them. I am reminded of the night I heard a noted authority on Canaries warn his listeners against an incautious use of mawseed. He stated that he had seen birds fed liberally upon it "reel about the cage floor like drunken men," the opium contained in the seed being the cause of their unseemly antics. Maw (or poppy) seed, however, contains not the faintest trace of opium, nor any other principle that could affect birds in this way. Opium is obtained from one particular species of poppy (P. somniferum) and is the dried milky juice which exudes from cuts made in the capsules before they are ripe.

Neglected Though Ever With Us.

To return to the grass-seed. This I consider one of the very best, though undoubtedly the most neglected, of the seeding greenfoods which are fast becoming so deservedly popular. Keepers of foreign birds have long recognised its value; poultry-keepers know that grass contains all the elements of the ideal greenfood; but how many Canary breeders even so much as look at it? Yet I find that our British seed-eating species, and every variety of Hybrid, delight in seeding grass; and my Canaries appreciate it beyond them all. It can be grown practically anywhere and gathered practically everywhere. To get together a large bunch of the "spikes" of seed takes but a minute or so; the one precaution you should observe is not to gather it off ground smothered in road-dust. The long stems of seeding shepherds purse and the spikes of seeding grass can be left with safety in cages: they will not turn stale and putrid; they will not upset the bowels of your birds. Best of all, I never find a hen which will not feed them freely to her young. Seeding chickweed I like very much, though one needs to keep it fresh, while groundsel tops have their uses, and dandelion heads and young leaves are invaluable in the spring. But there is no "close time" in my bird-room for seeding grass and shepherds purse—except that imposed by Dame Nature.

White Crests & Crestbreds.

It may not be generally known that a new variety of White Canary was bred last season. Anyway, it was news to me when the fact was casually mentioned in the course of conversation by a bird-lover who paid me a visit exactly three weeks ago. Strangest of all, I found that this had been bred by a fancier living little more than a mile away from me, and that the one surviving white bird was advertised in CAGE BIRDS last winter, but not sold (!). Yet I had never heard of the happening, and had never met anyone else who had, apparently, heard of it! The breeder, however, although he knew of the other White Canaries—perhaps because of this—and resides little more than a stone's throw from Mr. Kiesel, the producer of the first and several subsequent Whites, did not seem to think much of the performance of his own birds. I will tell you more about it next week. Suffice it to say here that a buff heavily marked dark Crested hen, paired to a buff lightly-marked Crestbred cock, in their second nest had four young—a pure white Crestbred, a half-white and half-black Crestbred, a Crest with white body plumage, black crest and even-marked (black) wings, and a normal-coloured clear body dark Crest. What a lovely creature that white Crest must have been; unfortunately it died after the moult, as also did the half-white Crestbred. The pure white Crestbred, a hen, is now in my own bird-room. She is much the largest and chubbiest White Canary I have seen—good Norwich type and, like all her kind, wonderfully tight and silky in plumage.

Note.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

MOPING ROLLER (Mrs. Marr).—First see that all exciting causes of bronchial trouble are removed as far as possible, such as extreme fluctuations between day and night temperature, cold draughts, and exposure to heated impure air. Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of scalded rape, which, by way of change, may be varied occasionally by a similar quantity of rape soaked overnight in cold water. Twice a week, on the alternating days, give a morsel of bread and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Every day give a little green food. Limit the diet to this for a month. Add a pinch of Epsom Salts to the water for two days, and afterwards give 20 drops of the following mixture every second day for the remainder of the month. Two drachms each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one drachm each of ipecacuanha wine and chlorodyne, and eight grains of iodide of potassium.

UNABLE TO GRIP PERCH (Perplexed).—Keep the bird in a moderate sized cage; put in one thin and nearly round perch, about the thickness of an ordinary lead pencil, and another of a tapered shape, varying from a little thicker at one end to slightly thinner than a lead pencil at the other end. Watch the bird when it settles down to roost or when nesting on these perches, to see if it gradually works the hind claws over the back of the perch. If it does, no other treatment will be necessary than to leave only these perches in the cage for a few weeks until the toes have acquired some strength and ease of grip. If there is no sign of the bird ever getting the hind claws over the back of the perch after a few days' trial of these perches, remove them, and replace with ordinary size perches of a flattened oval shape, and put a rubber band on each hind toe and leg for two or three weeks; then, when you remove the bands put in the thin perches again for a few weeks. You can make these bands by cutting rather less than an eighth of an inch from the end of feeding bottle tubing for each band. To put them on, hold the three front toes close together, place band over them, push it on upwards, holding the hind toe back against leg until the band is round leg and hind toe, and nearly as far as the end of the toe. Leave it there and release bird, when the toe will be held in a backward position by the rubber band.

HENS NOT FEEDING. (Wild Wales).—I'm afraid I cannot tell you, without more definite particulars of your management, why the hens simply sit on the young after hatching until they are dead. If you mean you have had three nests already this season from the same hens, you certainly mated them a great deal too early. What size is your aviary. Is there only one pair, or more, in it? If more than one pair, do they all fly together; how old are the birds; and are the cocks left with the hens whilst sitting, and after? When the next young are hatched, if the cock has been left with the hen, and the latter shows no sign of beginning to feed, remove him to a cage by himself so that the hen will be compelled to come off nest for food and water, creating thereby a little chance each time of her popping a morsel into the gaping beaks when she returns. Then try the following method, and if you fail again write and give replies to above questions and the fullest particulars you can. On the morning of day young are due to hatch give a small teaspoonful of egg food and add to the drinking water as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and leave this on cage until she seems to have started feeding. Towards evening remove stale egg food, well clean vessel, and give a small supply of fresh. Next morning, if young have not been fed, give a fresh supply of egg food dusted over with maw; also in a separate vessel a little rape soaked until near sprouting, and a small spray of flower heads of groundsel. Offer a bath in which a little common salt has been dissolved. Renew the food supply in the afternoon, and again next morning, and if she is not feeding by that time, add also a small teaspoonful of cracked hemp. Continue this feeding at least twice a day. Keep the egg food rather on the side of dryness. Add no moisture at all other than what the egg contains. If young are not fed on the morning of day after hatching, give them a little egg food moistened on your tongue, and give each a cropful at night if still unfed. If you continue this assistance morning and evening for a few days the hen may take up her duties at any time and finish rearing the young quite satisfactorily.

FICKLE DAMES (Crest).—Only time and patience are of any use with these two hens. They will doubtless settle down very soon now the weather is likely to be more settled and warmer. At this season there is little or no need for forcing diet, so you did right to discontinue it. Give a little egg food twice a week, and mixed seed on two other days. Give a little fresh crisp dandelion daily. You may add to the drinking water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea for three days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day for a week. Do not change the cocks about. Let the most suitable one you have for each hen remain with that hen permanently until, at least, they have gone to nest. The only exception is that if the one that has had four mates shows a decided preference for one of them you had better let her have him. If people pass close to the cages you should fix a square of brown paper on the wire just in front of the nest-pans to ensure a little privacy. If the centres of your Crests have really been filled in well it is quite probable the feathers lost from centres will be reproduced at the moult, if not before. A temporary loss of feathers of this kind will not affect the young at all. Glad to hear previous advice proved so successful.

BROKEN TAIL (No Tail, H.G.).—I should suspect something wrong with the cage or perches was the cause of the continually broken and frayed tail. See that it has a proper cage of moderate size—say 12in. by 8in. and 14in. high—and that the perches are conveniently placed and of proper size. Also see that the cage is not infested with red mites. Keep floor strewn with clean, gritty sand, and allow bird to bathe freely in mild weather. In addition to staple seed diet of plain canary and rape give a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with soft sugar, every third day for a month, and twice a week on the intervening days half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and broken groats. Give a little green food in variety daily. Carefully extract the broken feathers, removing three from different places at each operation, and allow three or four days to elapse between each operation. Add 20 drops of chemical food to the water every second day for a month.

TO GET INTO CONDITION (A Reader of "C.B.").—Nothing will get the hen into breeding condition until this moult is stopped and the plumage grown again, so it is quite useless to attempt mating her yet. You will be very lucky to get her in condition in time for just one brood this year. Keep her in a bright, cosy, well-aired place, but see it is free from cold draughts, rapid fluctuations, or heated impure air. A fairly equable place with a normal temperature should suffice. In addition to the staple seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed stale sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, every second day, and on the alternating days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats. Give the rhubarb and soda aperient as advised to "Crest" for two days. Then dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the water two days in every three until feathers cease dropping. When the hen is quite over the moulting hang the cage containing the cock alongside the breeder for a few days, or place him in a nursery cage and hang on front of the breeder for a day or so, to enable them to strike up an acquaintance. Then turn cock into the breeder with the hen. As you seem to be quite a novice, I would advise you to get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager would send you for 7d. post free. It will prevent you making many errors.

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ROLLER AND CAGE (B.C.T.).—I am sorry I cannot tell you where to buy either bird or cage, as such discriminations are inadmissible in these columns. Look up our advert. columns for a few weeks, and select a dealer, or consult Cage Birds Annual, and pick out some known Roller breeder, and then get the bird on approval on the deposit system, and hear it sing. It is a wise resolve to deal only on deposit system. If you find a known breeder of Rollers near you it would be a good idea to get an appointment, if possible, to hear and select a suitable bird at owner's rooms. Your own estimation of a high-class singer is naturally the criterion in buying a bird, and it is quite possible that this may differ somewhat from a Roller judge's taste. Just now, too, is a bad time for buying such a bird as you want, as the birds, being in high breeding condition, are not in their best exhibition song, and, moreover, breeders may be chary of giving appointments to test birds at this season. If you cannot make any such appointment, then describe the bird you want as a Roller for high-class contest singing, and leave the choice to him. Such extraneous terms as St. Andreasburg, etc., are not applicable to this class of bird. If properly treated they certainly do not lose their song in a year or so, save, perhaps, in some very exceptional case, and that generally traceable to wrong treatment. The diet is much the same as for other Canaries, except the staple, which, for these birds, should be sweet, nutty German rape. For full details get the Nutshell booklet, No. 10, 2½d. post free, from this office. I cannot fix a price on the bird you want; that naturally depends upon the vendor. It may be anything from 25s. upwards; don't expect it for less than sum named. As regards cage, do not make "prettiness" a cardinal point. Look for utility and comfort for the bird, points which are often overlooked in a "pretty cage." See advert. columns under "Appliances," for cage-makers' addresses. A plain box-cage is the best all-round one.

BACKWARD YOUNG HENS (Old Subscriber).—I am inclined to think the cause of these three hens not yet coming into breeding condition is that they were rather late hatched, and, consequently, are still somewhat immature. They will doubtless settle down to business very soon now, or may even have made a start before this reply appears, and I have no doubt you will have no cause at the end of the season to regret their present backward condition. In all probability their results will then equal, if not exceed, those of the old hens who have already had a full round of nests with only two fertile eggs. The "tailing" in autumn would not affect the young hens now in any way, but you really adopted a Spartan and unfeeling method of getting through with the job. As regards further treatment, if they have not started nesting yet, hang them where they can see as well as hear the cocks. Add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the water for three days, and for the next three or four days give six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel. Give half-a-teaspoonful of egg food with half the bulk of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure seed mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days half-a-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and black rape, with a slight sprinkling of mustard seed. Give two leaves of dandelion daily.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

In future, queries relating to Mule and Hybrid breeding must be written on a separate sheet of paper, and be addressed to the "Hybrid Department"; they will be answered by Mr. H. Norman. British bird queries will be answered by Mr. H. J. Fulljames. See also notice on page 426.

BLACKBIRDS IN AN AVIARY (E. Smith).—I must candidly say that I think your aviary very much on the small side. It most certainly would not do for more than one cock and one hen Blackbird. Evidently you are not aware that Blackbirds are pugnacious during the breeding season; in fact, they can be dangerous to smaller birds of other species, for a male of a pair in the aviary (a really large one) of a friend of mine, was caught red-handed murdering a Linnet. Several other mysterious deaths which occurred at about the same time were no doubt also its handiwork. Yet this cock and its mate had been peaceably disposed to their companions all the winter—until, in fact, the hen showed a desire to go to nest. Two cocks in the vicinity of my garden had a series of desperate battles this spring (the favourite fighting ground being the roof of my bird-house), although with practically the whole countryside at their disposal, and each possessed of a dainty wife. I can imagine those two cocks in an aviary; one or other of the twain would soon be fit only to provide feather linings for nests!

Owing to the intervention of the Whitsuntide Holidays a number of Queries were not received until Tuesday last, and we cannot, of course, get these answered in this issue. They will be dealt with, however, next week.—Editor.

HEN GREENFINCH PAIRED UP (E.R.F.).—It is true that hen Finches are very undependable sitters and mothers when in a cage, yet the Greenfinch is the best of them all, and the most likely to succeed in bringing up young. Your hand-reared hen may quite possibly give no trouble. If she rears the young for a week or so, and then deserts them, you will have to try hand-feeding them (this happened with me in one case). However, my bird was paired with a Goldfinch; as your own is mated to a cock Canary, the latter might possibly look after the young. The important thing is to provide seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, and grass, in plenty. One and all are freely and easily obtainable now. Let her have the usual kinds of seeds; and don't forget some cracked safflower or sunflower (or both). My bird, too, ate egg-food freely, and I had previously schooled her into a liking for mealworms.

MANAGING A STARLING (Mrs. Catesby).—To keep a Starling in good condition give a good quality insectile mixture designed for the coarse-feeding Softbills, and let it contain finely minced lettuce (or other green-meat) or vegetable ingredient in liberal quantity. The Starling is fond of hard-boiled egg, fruit, finely chopped green stuff, ripe berries (especially elderberries), worms, snails, beetles, wasp grub, gentles, and, in fact, most forms of suitable live food. Also you could scrape a little raw lean mutton amongst its food now and again, or give a little grated dried liver. A great point is to offer ripe fruit liberally and regularly. Keep in a very large box pattern cage, and clean out frequently. It is quite true that Starlings can be taught to repeat short sentences, various whistles, etc. Some become very accomplished. It is necessary to choose a short sentence, which comes trippingly off the tongue, as it were (such as "Pretty boy,") and repeat it to the bird very, very frequently. When it has learnt this, then another can be tried.

ALL TOGETHER (R.G.R.).—Your description of the aviary reads well, except that the one 2ft. square window in the closed part seems insufficient provision for light therein. (1) It would hold 40 to 50 (or even more; but on no account crowd it) small birds quite comfortably. (2) You could keep, in addition to the species named, any of the British Finches (included in this are the Buntings) you see advertised from time to time. I would recommend, however, that you include a few hardy foreign birds, which would lend colour and variety; our Mr. W. T. Page will give you a list of suitable inexpensive species if you write his department. (3) Give all the chief seeds in separate hoppers (or vessels); say, canary, teazle, sunflower, hemp, summer rape, and millet (the latter for foreigners), also wild seed mixture. The other seeds give occasionally, by way of variety. Don't forget the green-foods (note those named in the reply given "E.R.F."), while many birds relish ripe fruit and berries, and no doubt some, the Buntings in particular, will relish now and again a little of some high-grade insectile food, together

Practical Handbooks for Bird Lovers.

Brief particulars of some of "Cage Birds" SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS for keepers of birds, with post free prices.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 250 2/-, 500 2/6, carriage paid.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Published in 8 Monthly Parts at 6d. each, post free 7d. Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid. The practical and comprehensive work for which all Hybrid breeders have been waiting.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

with a few mealworms, also live ants' eggs, whenever procurable. (4) Mule and hybrid breeding is best practised in cages or small flights. If you put any true pairs into the aviary (i.e., cock and hen of the same species) you could hardly hope to breed hybrids, of course. (5) You should buy a book dealing with fitting up and management of an aviary (Mr. Norman's, for instance, published by Cage Birds). To answer all your questions really helpfully would occupy a column of space. (6) It is now the close season, and bird catching is illegal. I may say that I have at all times found it far from a good plan to put birds when newly-caught straightway into an outdoor aviary. It is better to get them used to eating seed, and a little used to captive life, before turning them out. This helps to avoid some losses, but is not, of course, always practicable. When buying birds, of course, most of those one receives have had some experience of captive existence.

MULES GETTING ON TO SEED (T. R. Royce).—As the young Mules get well on to seed, they should be fed more plainly than when they are just leaving "mother." At the same time they want to have a good proportion of seeds rich in frame-building elements. It is not absolutely necessary to give soft food if colour-feeding is not being indulged in; a little once or twice a week does no harm, however, and personally I prefer to give frequently a little hit of a home-made cake containing milk powder. A few sunflower seeds daily (cracked only if necessary) are real good for growing Mules; likewise a few groats. They can be thrown on the sand-tray, or, better still, be placed on one of the feeding boards illustrated a week or two ago. The stock seed mixture should be: Canary and teazle two parts each, summer rape one part by measure. A little of the other seeds occasionally as "tit-bits" (especially maw), Seeding green foods (not coarse leaves), such as shepherd's purse, chickweed, thistle, and groundsel tops, are excellent. I use them freely. Add a half-part of linseed to the stock seed mixture when the birds are moulting.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

BARE-EYED & SLENDER-BILL COCKATOOS (G. Skeggs).—The difference in the length of the beak alone should suffice to distinguish between the two. The beak of the former is normal Parrot size, that of the latter is larger and has the upper mandible some three-quarters of an inch beyond the lower mandible: sketchy descriptions of the two species are as follows:—Bare-eyed: White, suffused with red on the forehead and lores, and most of the feathers of the head, nape and abdomen are suffused with rosy-red at the base; the quills and inner webs of tail-feathers pale yellow; underside of tail lightly tinted with yellow; bare skin round the eye, and a patch below same, blue; legs and feet bluish; length, 15 inches, of which the tail measures 5. Slender-billed: The general hue of the plumage is white, with the forehead, face and a patch on the throat reddish; the vent is also slightly tinted with red, and the underside of the tail is yellowish; bare skin round the eye blue; beak white, with the upper mandible much prolonged. The seed mixture should consist of canary, hemp, white millet, oats, maize, barley, paddy rice, and a little sunflower. Raw or cooked carrot or potato, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, or stale crusts of household bread, green food, grit, cuttlebone, and water. Both are hardy species and only need protection from draught. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever, and once acclimatised they should thrive and reach a "good old age."

PARROT STRAYING (Northlands).—Of course, cutting the flights, that is, cutting off the inner webs of all the flight feathers of one wing, will check the power and ease of the bird's movements, but with a Parrot, if it cannot fly it can climb, and unless you can keep it from the vicinity of tall trees it will get astray on these. If it does not wander far I should almost think it would be better to leave it as it is. It will always come to the cage for food, etc., as if it attempted with a cut wing to fly to you from a good height it might easily injure itself by falling heavily. Very probably as it gets used to its freedom it will merely take wing exercise and come down to you from tree-tops, etc., when called. I take it that it returns to its cage each night; if so, unless it is given to straying quite long distances I should leave it as it is, but if it gets too far away then you must cut its wings as above.

WHAT BIRD? (J. A. W.).—It is the ordinary Red-faced or Red-head (it is known by both names) Lovebird. They used to be very commonly imported, but usually had a very short life in this country, owing to the conditions of importation, and even now, when for some time past they have only been coming to hand in quite small numbers, yet they seem to arrive in a state of greater or lesser prostration, and are not by any means easy to establish; however, having been brought over privately, yours will probably do well. Diet: Canary, white millet, millet sprays, green food and a little ripe fruit if they will take it; of course, they must also have access to grit, water, and cuttlebone.

SILVERBILLS (E. J. Smith).—(1) An ordinary double-breeder would answer well if you take out all partitions. From this you will gather that I consider a box-type cage the best. They usually rear their young readily on seed and green food, but, it is better to give a little soft food when they are feeding young, consisting of ants' eggs, dried flies, and crumbled sponge-cake, in equal parts and made crumbly moist with hot water. (2) In a cage a nest-box or husk had better be provided—hay and grass will suffice for nesting material, and they are rather fond of a Hartz travelling cage with the perches and other fittings taken out. (3) Eleven to thirteen days. (4) Both sexes incubate and build. (5) Where only the hen incubates, she is usually fed on the nest by her mate, and she also leaves the nest for brief periods. (6) The clutch in my aviary has varied from three to five. (7) On the diet given above, from which they will take what they require.

SILVERBILL (H. H. B. D.).—It almost appears as if the crop were ruptured, and if such be the case but little can be done for it. As, however, it is also in poor plumage there may be other causes. Once a week put half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water, and for the other six days of the week put ten drops of Byno-phosphates to each ounce of the drinking water. Keep a spray of millet continually in the cage, as well as the usual seeds, also a piece of clean cuttlebone, and supply greenfood liberally. Keep the cage tray covered with gritty sand. The trouble is not confined to any one species, but all species are liable to such mishaps. Report progress a month hence.

RING-NECKED PARRAKEETS (J. D. S.).—Both Ring-necked and Moustache Parrakeets require the same treatment. I take it your birds are all newly imported, and it will take some time for the plumage to be properly renewed. It must have enough to eat; at the same time I should mix canary and millet, also crushed oats with the hemp seed, and in the end it will take to the full mixture. Give also a little boiled maize if they will eat it; it only keeps fresh one day. Boil till soft, yet the grains should be whole; they will not eat a pulpy wet mass. Give these birds (all three) every fourth day for a month one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in their drinking water, and on the intermediate days put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water. As regards the Moustache Parrakeet, bathe its eyes with a rose-water and zinc eye solution, and also bathe its nostrils with glyco-thymoline. In addition to the above diet, they will be the better for ripe fruit and a little moistened sponge cake, stale crust, or piece of biscuit. They must have regular access to grit and cuttlebone.

WAXBILLS, &c. (Plato).—The freely imported Waxbills, such as Grey, Orange-cheek, St. Helena, Golden-breasted, Green and Crimson Avadavats, etc., average from 2/6 to 5/- per pair; when scarce some of them cost 7/6 pair. Newly-caught Great Tits can be purchased very cheaply, but queries re British birds must be sent to our Mr. G. E. Weston. If your desire is to attempt to breed the above in cages, the box type is best, and have nothing smaller than an ordinary double-breeder. The suggested aviary would accommodate about six pairs at most for you to have any chance of breeding luck, but if you keep to Waxbills and the small Finches, e.g., Zebra Finches, then you could have as many again, but do not overcrowd. You must remember that what appears to the uninitiated a huge cage, at once assumes very modest dimensions when one tries to hang up sufficient nest receptacles for a mixed community of birds.

MOUSTACHE PARRAKEETS (J. R. B.).—(1) Moustache Parrakeets I have kept with Budgerigars, Cockatiels, etc., and they have agreed well enough together, yet, of course, the initial act of putting them in causes a few hours' confusion, especially as they are largish birds, but if you desire them, I should say take the risk; even if a pair of Budgerigars should be disturbed off their eggs, another clutch will soon be deposited, and the birds be incubating again. (2) They are birds fully one-third as large again as Cockatiels, mostly green with patches of red on the sides of face and breast, black moustachial streaks and a red beak. (3) Yes. In general, I presume you are contemplating the purchase of newly-imported specimens; in such case it is doubtful if they will be able to fly and would cause very much disturbance, as it will be some time before they get their plumage sufficiently to fly strongly; yet they will take no hurt, as it is easy to arrange a stout branch or two to enable them to climb about for food, etc.

GOULDIAN FINCHES AILING (H.V.S.).—Your two birds are young ones, and not yet in full colour, but their change into mature plumage should now soon take place. Till they recover tone, put half-a-teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water once a week, drinking-water to be boiled before being supplied to the birds. Get a bottle of Ditchfield's Tonic Drops (they have been advertised in this paper) and give according to directions. Try your milk-sop prepared so: Take, say, two pieces of sponge cake, about as large as walnuts, and put these in a small food dish or tin; take three or four tablespoonfuls of boiling water, dissolve in it a salt-spoonful of Mellin's Food and two tablespoonfuls of condensed milk; when thoroughly mixed pour it over the sponge cake and leave till cool, when supply to the birds. The sponge cake should not be broken up—simply left to absorb the milk. Give them plenty of light and air, but protect them from draught. Supply the seed diet you are now giving and as much seeding grass as they will eat. Keep them quiet and away from other birds, and I opine they will soon pick up. Shall be pleased to hear how they progress.

WAXBILLS (B. K. G.).—I do not think you need worry about the moult or the birds going back a little. The coming into and going out of colour is very irregular, and you have the whole summer before you. These ornamental Finches do not breed at regular periods as Canaries. With the advent of settled weather they will soon come into condition again. Give them millet sprays ad lib. and unlimited green food, such as flowering (seeding) grass, etc. Broods of such species are often brought off in August and September, and others earlier in the year. I should say the sudden and extreme weather changes we have been experiencing have been largely responsible for the trouble. Give them blighty sprays of foliage if you can obtain them. Our Nutshell "Waxbills," 2½d. post free from our Manager would help you.

ZEBRA FINCHES NOT INCUBATING (Hilda Hulbert).—Providing the nest box and nest is not infested with mites, or mice gain access thereto, it is merely the idiosyncrasies of your individual pair. Leave them together for a while longer, and give them all the light and air you can without draught. Supply green food, such as flowering (seeding) grass, etc., ad lib., also millet sprays, and they will probably settle down seriously to the duties of incubation and rearing a family. You might try screening the portion of cage front where the nest box is with a piece of thin muslin, as some pairs will not nest unless they can secure privacy. If they do not improve you must dispose of them and get another pair. A pair that behaves so in a cage would probably nest without trouble in an outdoor aviary.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

E. B. Williamson.—We have utilised earlier in the series several very similar ideas.

John McCallum.—If there is any question of the bird's system having been run down, then the two nests of clear eggs point to the weakness being present before you paired him up. On the other hand, the bird might have broken some small blood vessel, or sustained some other obscure yet fatal injury immediately prior to its death. The latter is the more likely, seeing that its death was so sudden, and that it was singing well right up to its demise.

A. R. Coe.—We must, we are afraid, agree to differ. Anyway, we see no purpose in continuing to publish matters which amounts to practically nothing more than reiteration on the one side and denial on the other. Mr. Cutmore writes us that he has "yet to learn that it is anticipating defeat to protest against the enemy firing upon the unarmed population instead of meeting the armed battalion."

H. Simmonds.—We have illustrated this on one or two previous occasions.

Correspondence.

Wellington (Salop) Show.

Sir,—Could anyone be kind enough to give me, through CAGE BIRDS, the names of the committee of the last Wellington Cage Bird Show. I cannot get any answer from the secretary as to payment of my prize-money and gold medal, although I hear that others have been paid. If any reader would kindly forward a copy of the schedule of the show for 1910 I should be obliged, and would return same.

G. EDWARDS.

Groats for Young Canaries.

Sir,—In answer to "J. F. W.'s" question, whether I used the groats dry or soaked, I might say that I have always used the groats in a dry state. They are of a soft nature and don't require soaking, although I don't see any reason why they shouldn't answer the purpose as well soaked as dry, or even better. I should advise him to try them both ways; in fact, he shouldn't be afraid of experimenting. We fanciers havn't learned what we know by standing still, and it is by these experiments that we get to know the methods which answer, and those which don't. Re the hen deserting her nest of fertile eggs, I would like to know fuller particulars; whether the hen was sitting by herself with the cock in a position to see her, or whether the cock had been transferred to another hen?

T. JOHNSON.

Discovering the Fertility and Sex of Eggs.

Sir,—An interesting and infallible method of discovering the fertility and sex of eggs, and also birds, is as follows:—Thread an ordinary sewing needle, or darning needle, with either white cotton or silk, and suspend by a single strand, held between forefinger and thumb, over the egg or bird being tested. The strand suspending the perpendicular needle should be from 10 to 12 inches from eye of needle to fingers, and the point of needle should be about half an inch from object being tested. If male, the needle after a few seconds will commence to make a circular motion, the size of the circles increasing the longer the needle is suspended. If female, a pendulum movement will be observed. If unfertile, the needle will remain stationary. This interesting experiment will also afford great amusement amongst your friends of either sex.

J. H. BEALE.

[This notion is a very old one, and is constantly being resurrected by one periodical or another; further, an apparatus based on it is sold at many shops and stores (such as Gamages). It may be, and no doubt is, amusing enough; but it certainly does not solve the sex problem, nor disclose fertility—to speak of it as "infallible" is absurd.—Editor.]

A Roller Society for North Staffordshire.

Sir,—A meeting was held May 10, at Evans's Cafe, High Street, Newcastle-under-Lyme, to form a specialist Roller Canary Club for North Staffordshire. A prior engagement prevented Mr. Johns, Hanley, Editor of the fanciers' column of the "Staffordshire Sentinel" from being present. Mr. D. Scott, in a very chatty manner, pointed out that it was to the mutual benefit of lovers of this fashionable and fascinating variety of Canary who resided in the district to band themselves together and form a Specialist Roller Society. He considered they were very fortunate in having the advice of Mr. Tomlinson, who was an old Roller fancier, and one who had laboured hard, and spent a great deal of his time in studying the Roller's song. Mr. Tomlinson thanked Mr. Scott for his kind remarks. While not professing to know everything he was always willing to assist the novice, and would do his best for them; he advised them to study a series of articles on the Roller Canary, now appearing in CAGE BIRDS. Previous to the idea of forming this society he had approached an official of one of the local Roller section clubs, and had advocated a specialist club with headquarters in Hanley, and had guaranteed to introduce an equal number of members to that of their section, but the suggestion had not been favourably received. The meeting tonight was the outcome of a suggestion afterwards made by Mr. Haddrell. Mr. Hemmings proposed, Mr. Shaw seconded, that the club be named the North Staffordshire Roller Canary Club, carried. Mr. Simpson proposed that the subscription be for a commencement 2s. per year, payable 1s. each half year. Mr. Leese seconded, carried. Mr. Tomlinson was elected hon. secretary and treasurer, and Mr. Hickman chairman. A special meeting will be held May 17th at 7 at Evans's Cafe. A few birds will be at the meeting including a flat Glucke singer, he tours will be explained; anyone interested will be welcomed. A request was made that the secretary apply for a supply of the B.R.C.O. rings. Fourteen members were enrolled, and all paid their subscriptions.

EXPERTO CREDE.

The Breeding of Yellows from Two Buffs.

Sir,—I have had one or two pairs of Norwich up for double buffing every year for the last ten years and, like Mr. Robson, I have heard of yellows being bred from two buffs, but have never met them. One may be forgiven for appearing certain that it is impossible, after so many years breeding from double buff with always the same results, viz., no yellows. I have had good coloured buffs that would pass as yellows in first feather shows, but when colour-fed, then is the time to tell a yellow from a buff. Many alleged yellows turn out buffs when colour-fed. I hardly gather what Mr. Garner means by "working on the right material." I suppose he will, like other sensible breeders, be using good coloured and close feathered buffs. I think the evidence of yellows being bred from buffs is not substantial enough to convince the majority of fanciers; and it is my humble opinion that the yellows so bred have either been good coloured buffs, or have been mixed up in the nests during the process of rearing.

T. JOHNSON.

Do Invisible Ticked Birds Handicap the Clears?

The Southern Norwich Plainhead Club's Classifications.

Sir,—I did not intend to continue this subject myself. My object was to get fanciers to express their opinion. But there are one or two points in my friend, Mr. Spillman's letter, which I will try to answer. With regard to the Western Counties O.S., adopting the S.N.P.C. classification, I firmly believe that had all the members voted, my amendment would have been carried. The argument put forward was sound, and I still stick to it. Mr. Spillman speaks of the risk of birds being damaged by handling. Well, I have seen many handled by judges, but have still to see one returned worse than it was before being taken out of the show cage. No, Mr. Spillman, this argument is too weak and flimsy, because I think it would do some birds good to be handled a bit more—it might steady them down a bit. Mr. Spillman only speaks of the very slightly ticked ones, which as a rule do not come a better colour than the clears. What, however, about those heavy ticks (although invisible) which come "red hot," as we term it, as hot as some of the variegated ones. These, I still contend, will be doing a great injustice to the clears. If not, Mr. Spillman, why not have two classes, one for clear, ticked, marked, etc., yellow, ditto buff, and finish with the same? I cannot accept all friend Spillman says about colour not counting now as it used to. In my opinion it plays just as great a part as ever. How often do we see in reports "second beaten in colour." Mr. Spillman, you know that a Plainhead without colour finishes amongst the "also rans." Wireless telegraphy and the telephone are advancing right enough, but this question is "advancing backwards."

Sesame Seed as a Sweetmeat.

SIR,—A small item I know of about sesame seed may interest your readers. In Turkey they make a delicious sweet from this seed, which they call Halva. It is made by pressing the seeds and then mixing with sugar. There is no wonder that Linnets and other birds like it. It is very nutritious. This sweet (Halva) can be bought of J. Efthimiou, 7, Mitre Street, E.C.

An Appeal to Lancashire Lovers of Hybrids and British Birds.

SIR,—At the last meeting it was unanimously decided that the Y.B.B. and M. Club's name be changed to the Yorkshire and Lancashire British Bird and Mule Club, and that Mr. W. Fairhurst be elected on to the Committee, and that he be asked to convene a meeting at Manchester of Lancashire British Bird and Mule fanciers. Seeing his splendid appeal in your last issue, I hope the Lancashire fanciers will respond right royally. I should like a good number to gather together and see if we cannot make a club worthy of the name. Will all fanciers that have not already sent on their names and addresses to Mr. W. Fairhurst, 17, Linwood Grove, Longsight, Manchester, please do so at once. It is necessary to get to work, as applications for the Club's patronage are coming in, and I should like Lancashire to have a fair share. Several members promised to attend the meeting, and I think we may look forward to a good increase in membership.

Amazing Choice of a Nesting Site by a Robin in Ireland.

SIR,—During the Easter Holidays two Robins began building a nest in a National School here (Cookstown, Co. Tyrone, Ireland) behind the blackboard! When they had carried in enough material to build three nests, they left this place and began again behind the time-table. They built their nest in the mornings before the children came, and laid five eggs. The fifth egg was laid on a Friday morning. No children come to school on Saturdays, and so the hen had peace on Saturday and Sunday. On the Monday morning she sat on the nest till eleven o'clock, and then her mate called loudly to her, and she flew away, and did not return that day till after school. On the Tuesday and following mornings till the eggs were hatched she flew off at eleven, but returned in a few minutes. She even sat through three evenings when a dancing class was held in the school, and was not frightened by people looking quite close at her. The young birds came out on the Friday, and the hen fed the young all through school hours, the cock bird bringing the worms to the window, and the hen taking them from him there. About Tuesday last the cock Robin began carrying the worms all the way to the nest, handing them to the hen there, and he is now quite as tame as she is. The young birds have grown very fast, and now fill the nest, and one has to be very careful when lifting down the time-table to let the school children see the nest, not to allow the young ones to fall out.

J. W. FLEMING.

A Colour Problem in Green Canaries.

SIR,—I paired a yellow Yorkshire cock to a buff Green hen, and have got a nest of four young, one clear buff and three green buffs. What I want to understand is, what description these latter birds are entitled to. Are they what they term green buffs (or buff greens) or are they heavily variegated? A reply in CAGE BIRDS will greatly oblige. Most fanciers I have asked about it, give answers that make me think they have been dreaming instead of having been bird breeders for five to twelve years.

ARCHTYPE CRITERION.

[When Green Canaries have no light feathers anywhere they are termed self greens (i.e., self-coloured); when they have light feathers they are termed foul greens (i.e., foul-marked). The term buff, or yellow, is added according to the particular bird being indicated (for instance, buff self green, or yellow self green, as the case may be). Of course, a bird which is a little broken in colour is equally correctly described if termed a heavily variegated green, but the word "foul" is the one generally adopted by fanciers of the Green Canary.—EDITOR.]

A Well-known Leeds Fancier Amuses Isleham Folk.

SIR,—Mr. Harry Allen (Leeds), and Mr. J. Fenn (Isleham) met at a smoking concert at Isleham, where Mr. Allen, who had journeyed from Leeds and given his services free, sang to a very large audience. He was very successful. His first song, entitled "Coming in and going out," was a screamer, and was so applauded that he earned an encore. His next song, "Don't touch me there," also fairly brought down the house with laughter. Altogether Mr. Allen sang seven very amusing songs, and will long be remembered at Isleham. On Tuesday morning we rose at 5 a.m. and went for a ramble. At Chippenham we heard two splendid Nightingales. We then went on to Fordham and walked from that place to Newmarket, where we had the pleasure of hearing seven Nightingales in a plantation about five hundred yards long, singing at their very best. I was pleased at Mr. Allen pointing out the quality notes as each 'Gale sang. We stayed in Newmarket a few hours, where we had tea, and then returned to Isleham. It was a very enjoyable day's outing, and I hope to have the pleasure of meeting Mr. Allen again at some future time.

J. FENN.

Progress of the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League.

Sir,—Several meetings of this society have been held since the publication of its foundation and arrangements have been made with the London Cage Bird Association, by which one of the most extensive classifications were given will stand at their next annual show at the Horticultural Hall. The League has undertaken to fully guarantee this section of the exhibition against loss, and it is to be hoped that exhibitors of foreign birds will not lose sight of this, and will endeavour to the best of their ability to support the project by entering as many birds as they can. Only 402 entries are required to make a success of the venture, and with a classification under which everyone can compete fairly and six months' notice in which to procure and condition birds, it should by no means be impossible to obtain the necessary number. Previous to this, very few societies have attempted to provide classes at their own risk in order to popularise and extend the classification of a section of cage birds for the benefit of exhibitors in general, and in consequence keepers of foreign birds are asked to help in every way that they can to prove that this section of an exhibition is worthy of greater attention than it at present gets. Should this attempt meet with the response that it deserves, the League will then be in a position to offer its help to other societies, and in other directions. Members of the League will shortly receive their rule books, etc., and I shall be glad to hear from ladies or gentlemen wishing to become members, or otherwise help in any way.

ALLEN SILVER, Hon. Sec.
303, Streatham High Road, S.W.

Classification of twenty-eight classes, which will be given at the next Horticultural Hall Show:—

(1).—All species of Cockatoos and Macaws.
(2).—Grey Parrots and Amazons (i.e., all species Chrysotis).
(3).—All species Lovebirds, Passerine, Lineolated, All Green, Canary-winged, White-winged, Orange-fronted, Tovi, Golden-fronted, and Tui Parrakeets.
(4).—All other species Parrots, including Eclecti.
(5).—Green Budgerigars.
(6).—All species Ringnecks, including Alexandrine, Ring-necked, Blossom-headed, Rose-headed, Slate-headed, Malabar, Derbyan, Moustache, Javan, Nicobar, St. Lucien Parrakeets, etc.; common Red Rosellas, Redrumps, Quakers, and Cockatiels.
(7).—Lories, Lorikeets, and Hanging Parrots (Loriculae).
(8).—All other species Parrakeets.
(9).—Yellow Budgerigars, White Java Sparrows, Bengalees, and White Java Doves.
(10).—Common Mannikins, including Black-headed, White-headed, Tricolored, Magpie, Bronze, Spice, Striated, Sharp-tailed, Bibfinches, Grey Java, Sparrows, and Common Combaseous.
(11).—All species Weavers, Whydahs, and Long-tailed Combassous.
(12).—Common Ribbon Finches, Zebra and Saffron Finches, and Silverbills.
(13).—Gouldians, Fire-tailed, Painted, Crimson, Rufous Grassfinches, Parrot Finches, Pintailed Nonparields, Common Nonpareil, and Rainbow Buntings.
(14).—All other species Grassfinches, including Masked, Long-tailed, White-eared, Ringed, Bicheno, Diamond, Parson, Cherry, Quail and Red-headed Finches; Rhodesian Cutthroats, Pectoral, Yellow-rumped, Chestnut-breasted and Rufous-backed Mannikins.
(15).—Common African Fire Finches, Cordon Bleus, Zebra Waxbills, and Lavender Finches.
(16).—Common and Green Avadavats, St. Helena, Grey and Orange-cheeked Waxbills.
(17).—All other species Waxbills.
(18).—All species Cardinals.
(19).—All species Serins, Wild Canaries, and Siskin, including Alario, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Sulphur and St. Helena Seedeaters, etc.
(20).—All other species True Finches, Sparrows, Buntings, Grosbeaks, etc., not otherwise mentioned.
(21).—All species Doves, Quails, Partridges, and Rails.
(22).—All species Sugar and Sunbirds, Flower-peckers, Quits, Honeyeaters, Zosterops, and Fruit-suckers.
(23).—Scarlet, Blue, Black, Maroon, Silver-blue, Violet, Olive, Palm, Superb, Archbishop, and Tri-colored Tanagers.
(24).—All other species Tanagers.
(25).—All species of True Bulbuls (Pycnonotida), Pekin and Blue Robins, Dayal Birds, and Shamahs.
(26).—All species Crows, Mynahs, Starlings, Hang-nests, Troupials, Cow Birds, Cassiques, and Marsh Birds.
(27).—Pied, Albino, Lutino, Melanistic, or other abnormally coloured birds. Blue Budgerigars and Foreign Bird Hybrids.
(28).—All other species not previously mentioned, including Birds of Paradise, Mannucodes, Touracos, Toucans, Trogons, Tyrants, Shrikes, Flycatchers, Woodpeckers, Kingfishers, Barbets, Pittas and Thrush-like Birds, etc.

Two Perfect Eggs in One Day.

Sir,—I have a Norwich Plainhead hen, purchased this season from Mr. J. Thomas, which laid six eggs in five days. Commenced to lay April 10th one egg, 11th one egg, 12th laid two perfect eggs, 13th one egg, and 14th one egg. All of the eggs were fertile, four chicks hatching out on April 26th, one chick on 27th, and one on 28th. Five are still alive; the sixth, a very small one, got smothered by the stronger chicks and died on May 3rd.

The Nightingale in Ireland.

Sir,—Would you kindly let me know, through the medium of your valuable Cage Birds, where the Nightingale builds her nest, whether on bank, in thorn-hedge, or a shrubbery. A friend of mine took me to hear one singing yesterday evening (Sunday, May 11). If you could give me a short description of the bird's haunts and appearance, etc., your Irish correspondent, "Irishman," may not, after all, have to leave Ireland to hear the Nightingale sing.

Ulster.

No Chance for Red Mite.

Sir,—I am sending sketch of a method of fixing perches in cages (breeding) which I have found the best and simplest, and also a sure preventive of harbouring red mite, I have always found that if you have got any nooks or crevices in any cage, you are sure to get red mite. With this perch there is no chance for them to harbour themselves at the ends, and with a cage properly put together, with no cracks, the chance for them to accumulate is a very poor one. At the end of perch I fasten a small screw (c) and at the back of cage a small screw eye (b). Now the small screw, being on the underneath of perch, drops in the screw eye, holding the end about an eighth of inch off back of cage, and the other end (a) rests on the bar of wire front. Readers will find it a very simple device, rendering it very easy to remove perches to clean.

A Mynah that Wants Its Own Way—and Gets It.

Sir,—Knowing the interest that you take in the doings of your novice readers, I should be glad if you would give a little advice on the following:—I have had a Lesser Hill Mynah for eleven years, and cannot get him to do anything except that which he chooses to do. I have tried insectile foods but cannot get him to touch them; in fact, he gets in a rage as soon as he sees me mix it, and throws food and pot anywhere so long as it is out of his way! His present diet consists of anything he asks for, and that is: Meat, potato, greens, fried eggs and bacon, bread and butter, or jam, fried fish and potatoes, suet or Yorkshire pudding, boiled eggs and fish, bread and cheese, fruit (all sorts)—in short anything and everything that he didn't ought to have, so to speak. Although it seems a freak diet to me, he has lived and thrived for 11 years (I had him straight from the boat) and seems as strong and well as ever. I wonder if this would be of interest to other keepers of Mynahs among your readers.

Mynah.

[We have referred the case of this naughty bird to our Mr. W. T. Page.—Editor.]

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

Arrival of Another Wonderful Consignment of Indian Birds.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

Only recently a unique consignment of Indian birds (principally softbills) was successfully landed by Major G. A. Perreau, F.Z.S., and duly reported in our pages. An even larger consignment was safely housed at Chiswick on May 4th by Mr. W. Frost, who has been collecting in India for Major B.A. Horsbrugh. In addition to including most of the rarities brought over by Major Perreau, there are others which are quite new to English aviculture; thus, per the two consignments, over a score of species hitherto unknown in this country as living birds, and others of which only the male had previously reached us alive, are now disporting themselves in the aviaries and birdrooms of English aviculturists.

I will first enumerate those species which I believe are new to English aviculture, viz.:—Velvet-fronted Nuthatch (Sitta frontalis), Large Indian Minivet (Pericrocotus speciosus), Rosy Minivet (P. roseus), White-fronted Blue Flycatcher (Cyornis superciliaris), Golden Bush Robin (Tarsiger chrysaeus), Yellow-headed Red Sunbird (Æthopyga seheriae), Yellow-backed Black-breasted Sunbird (Æ. saturata), Green-breasted Pitta (Pitta cucullata), Yellow-fronted Pied, and Pigmy Pied Woodpeckers, Fire Caps (Cephalopyrus flammiceps), Brown Bullfinch (Pyrrhula nepalensis), Black-chinned Yuhina (Yuhina nigrimentum), Red-headed Tailor-bird (Orthotomus ruficeps). A group which any collector may well be proud of having introduced for the first time as living birds—all of them, with perhaps two exceptions, are brilliantly coloured and beautiful birds, and the exceptions are very interesting in demeanour.

As regards these and other species, these notes will probably be more generally useful if I drop systematic arrangement and group them according to dietary requirements.

Birds that Live on Sop.

Those requiring liquid sop (made from condensed milk, Mellin's Food, honey, boiling-water, and a little finely-crumbled sponge-cage) and ripe fruit, with live insects for such as care for them:—Yellow-headed Red Sunbirds (Æthopyga seheriae), Yellow-headed Black-breasted Sunbird (Æ. saturata), Purple Sunbird (Arachnechthra asiatica), Amethyst-rumped Sunbird (A. zeylonica).

Those requiring sop, similar to that already given, but much stiffer, and with the sponge-cake not crumbled but left in pieces, say the size of from a Spanish nut to a walnut. insectile mixture (strong in dried flies and ants' cocoons), ripe fruit, and live insects:—Golden-eyed Babbler (Pyctorlus sinensis), Black-throated Babbler (Stachyris nigriceps), Red-billed Babbler (Stachyrhidopsis pyrrhops), Yellow-breasted Babbler (Mixornis rubricapillus), Jungle Babbler, Black-chinned Yuhina (Yuhina nigrimentum), Yellow-naped Ixulus (Ixulus flavicollis), Indian White-eye (Zosterops palpebrosa), Hardwick's Green-Fruitsucker (Chloropsis hardwickii), Gold-fronted Green-Fruitsucker (C. aurifrons), Silver-eared Mesias (Mesia argentauris), Blue-winged Siva (Siva cyanuroptera), Large Indian Minivet (Pericrocotus speciosus), Short-billed Minivet (P. brevirostris), Rosy-Minivet (P. roseus), Small Minivet (P. peregrinus), Coppersmith Barbet, Maroon Oriole (Oriolus traillii), Tickell's Flower-Pecker (Dicaeum erythrorynchus), Black-winged Lory and Forsten's Lorikeet (those two are not Indian species).

Those requiring an insectile mixture, a good proportion of which is dried flies and ants' cocoons, live insects, and ripe fruit. (For the smaller species mealworms should be cut up into small pieces):—Red-headed Tit (Ægithaliscus erythrocephalus), Crested Black Tit (Lophophanes melanolophus), Yellow-cheeked Tit (Machlolophus xanthogenys), Green-backed Tit (Parus Monticola), Indian Grey Tit (P. atriceps), Brown-eared Bulbuls (Heximus flavala), Rufous-bellied Bulbuls (H. macclellandi), Velvet-fronted Nuthatch (Sitta frontalis), Cinnamon-bellied Nuthatch (S. cinnamomei ventris), Orange-gorgeted Flycatcher (Siphia strophiata), White-browed Blue Flycatcher (Cyornis superciliaris), Verditer Flycatcher (Stoparola melanops), Rufous-bellied Niltava (Niltava sundara), White-capped Redstart (Chimarrhornis leucocephalus), Blue-fronted Redstart (Ruticilla frontalis), Indian Redstart (R. rufiventris), Plumbeous Redstart (Rhyacornis fuliginosus), Golden Bush Robin (Tarsiger chrysacus), Brown-backed Robin (Thamnobia cambaiensis), Large Pied, Masked, and Blue-headed Wagtails, Indian Tree-Pipit (Anthus maculatus), Green-breasted Pitta (Pitta cucullata), Pigmy, and Pigmy Pied Woodpeckers, Yellow-fronted, Pied, and Golden-backed Woodpeckers, Fire Cap (Cephalopyrus flammiceps), Persian Nightingale (Daulias golzi), Ruby-throat (Calliope kamtschatkensis), Red-headed Tailor-Bird (Orthotomius ruficeps).

Some Rare and Lovely Thrushes, etc.

Those requiring a coarse insectile mixture, ripe fruit and live insects:—Rufous-necked Laughing-Thrush (Dryonastes ruficollis), Red-throated Laughing Thrush, Rusty-cheeked Scimitar Babbler (Pomatorhinus erythrogenys), Shamahs and Dhayals, Pied Mynah (Sturnopastor contra), Chestnut-bellied Rock-Thrush (Petrophila erythrogastra), Blue-headed Rock-Thrush (P. cinclorhyncha), Eastern Blue Rock-Thrush (P. solitaria), White's Thrush, and Orange-headed Ground-Thrush, Grey-winged, and Tickell's Ouzels, White-bellied Drongo (Dicurus caerulescens), Glossy Calornis (Calornis chalybeus).

Hardbills requiring seeds, green-food, and insects:—Beautiful Rosefinches (Propasser pulcherrmus), Brown Bullfinch (Pyrrhula nepalensis).

The above groupings give approximately the suitable diet for the respective species, but I may note in passing, that for all softbills that will take it milk-sop is beneficial, more especially so during the period of acclimatising.

In conclusion, I would congratulate Mr. Frost on having collected and landed in good condition so magnificent a series, and also Major Horsbrugh on having brought the enterprise to so successful an end; an achievement of which they may well be proud. Aviculturists, also, are to be congratulated upon being afforded so unique an opportunity of securing rare or uncommon and beautiful species.

Proposed Presentation to Sec. of Scottish Crested C.C.

Sir,—I feel grateful to the members of the Scottish Crested Canary Club for their ready and hearty response to my appeal for subscriptions for a presentation to our worthy secretary, Mr. John Young, who has done much for the Fancy. Many have apologised, when sending subscriptions, for having mislaid my appeal until then. As there are just a very few members who have not subscribed, and I believe they only require to be reminded, I would like to give them the opportunity before closing the fund, hence this letter.

The Use of Standard Show Cages in Ireland.

Sir,—Some time ago I resolved not to answer any letters written over a nom-de-plume, but seeing "Advocate of Uniformity" has seen fit to vent his feelings on the Norwich section, I cannot allow such gross misstatements to go unchecked. The Young Bird Club of Belfast, of which I am a member, has a rule re cages, and a binding one, too, that cages must be 11½ inches long and 11 inches high, not less, and painted or enamelled blue inside and black outside. Further than this, this club does not go. But the N.P.C.C., of Ireland, of which I am secretary, goes one better. Since the formation of this club, the rule re cages reads as follows:—The Norwich show cages as adopted to be strictly compulsory. All members competing, wherever the club's patronage is given, must use the club's cage and water-tin. The inside of the cages to be painted with enamel (Aspinal's) Hedge-Sparrow's egg-tint colour, water-tins to be white inside and black outside. Now, sir, I come to the part I take most exception to, respecting the many exhibitors who put their names on backs or bottoms of cages. To put it as mildly as is in my power, I say without fear or contradiction, that there is not one particle of truth in this statement. I have been exhibiting Norwich this last 11 or 12 years, and have visited most of our Northern shows; I have also been Steward to the judges at the two last fixtures of the Ulster O.A. (Belfast); and a name on a cage I have never seen. Does "Advocate of Uniformity" mean to say the gentlemen who come over here from England to judge our shows have come to look for distinguishing marks on the cages? I say no; their reputations are more to them than any bribe they would be likely to get in Ireland.

James Stewart.

—Special Notice—
TO Seaside & Country Readers.

Like everybody else, bird-lovers will soon be thinking of holidays, turning over the merits of various resorts in their minds and seeking for lodgings.

HAVE YOU ANY HOLIDAY ACCOMMODATION?

If you have, why not let it to fellow hobbyists. It would mean a pleasant time for both of you.

ADVERTISE IT IN "CAGE-BIRDS."

As last year, we propose to include a section for "Holiday Apartments," in our advertisements, and this should afford our enterprising readers with a means to make a comfortable addition to their incomes.

COMMENCE AT ONCE!

Rates (Prepaid).—18 words 6d., ½d. per word thereafter; 13 insertions for the price of 11.

Seekers after Accommodation should make known their requirements in the "Apartments Wanted" Section. Rates as above.

TIMELY HINTS.

Two prizes of 2s. 6d. each (cash or our books to value, at option of winners) given weekly to the senders of the two best Hints. All hints must be WRITTEN ON POSTCARDS, with sender's name and address at foot.

A Cheap Egg-cake.

[Winner of Half-crown Prize.]

Take 1d. packet self-raising flour, 2 best eggs, 2ozs. best butter, 4ozs. sugar, halfpennyworth of milk, 1 saltspoonful of baking powder. To be made like sponge-cake and put through sieve. Will keep weeks if kept in dry place, but not in air-tight tins, for if kept air-tight will sweat and turn sour.—J. Scott, 20, Hewitt St., Great Lever, Bolton.

When Lining Nest-pans.

Get your nest-pan and bore a small hole in the centre of the bottom. Put the lining in, then sew a boot-button underneath the nest-pan through hole and lining, and the latter will be quite firm.—Fred Lee (Holmfirth).

A Use for Boot Polish Tins.

Fanciers who have a number of breeding cages, but no rack for same, and so have to put them one on top of the other, should save the tins which boot polish is put up in. They make ideal cage rests. One put at each corner of a cage keeps the cage above apart, thereby leaving no harbour for red mites, and at the same time costing nothing.—F. Williams (Bristol).

Cleanliness in the Bird Room.

It is very important that all drinking vessels should be kept clean during the breeding season, and a capital and easy way to clean bottles, etc., is to put sand and water into same, and give a sharp shake; it will almost instantly remove any green slime from all corners, etc., of bottles.—W. Southgate (Parkstone).

Keeping the Egg-food Sweet.

One of the worst things in Canary breeding is to let the egg-food get stale. Obtain two jampots, one small and one large, and a plate half full of cold water. Put the egg-food in the small jar on the plate, then put the large one right over the top of it. The egg-food will keep well for two days then.—R. D. Jones (Aberdare).

To Circumvent Sweating Hens.

[Winner of Half-crown Prize.]

A sweating hen, as a rule, makes a very deep nest, and I have proved this method of treatment very good to prevent her sweating the young. Take the young ones out of the nest and put moss under them. Leave just enough room for the young to rest nicely, then the hen can't get on them too tightly. This has proved very successful in my room, as I had sweating hens last year and I saved ten young ones this way.—F. Higgins, 45, Alexander Street, Tyldesley.

ROLLER CANARIES RAISED ON EGGS AND BACON!

Interesting Experiences of an American Fancier.

By DAVID O'BRIEN (San Francisco).

Having selected the best pair of Rollers I could find, I started with a breeding cage supplied with all the requirements for a pair of birds to work with, also cuttlebone, sand, fat bacon, celery and sweet apple. When the birds got well enough acquainted and had made up their minds that they were satisfied to try what they could do at reproducing their kind, I removed the slide in the cage, and with one accord they commenced to furnish the cradle that was to rock the joy of their lives into existence. The nest was completed after a few days, and eggs No. 1, 2, and 3 came along daily at 7 a.m. Being a young female, that was the extent of the hen's first nest. Trouble commenced when she would leave the nest to stretch her wings and legs, as the cock would then go and pull at the nest as his "method of madness" to get her to return, so that he could feed her on the nest.

Condemned to Solitary Confinement.

I kept repairing the damage done to the nest for two or three days, but one evening when I got home the nest was all out, and she was sitting on the eggs in an empty wire nest. Without any delay I built a new nest, according to instructions by Mr. Claude St. John, in "Our Canaries," warmed the new nest against one of the electric lamps, placed the three eggs in, and she returned to it as soon as I put it in place. I removed her lord and master to another cage and hung him up close to her nest, so he could talk to her through the wires of his prison cell, where he had to serve the next ten days for misdemeanour.

The hen sat faithfully for the balance of the time, but by the fifteenth day I saw there was no unusual disturbance, so I broke the eggs and found three young birds, just formed, dead in the shell. I removed the nest and gave the hen a bath and left her alone for a day or two. When the couple commenced to exchange "kisses" with each other through the wires, I opened his prison door and introduced him to the joy of his life once again. This ended my first misfortune.

Trial Number Two.

After a day or so she commenced to build again, and egg No. 1 arrived in due time, which I removed and put in another nest. I repeated this daily, and when I had three, that evening I returned them to the nest, removed the male, placed him in "prison" again. There he still remains, and he has not sang a note since he was moved. She sat on her four eggs faithfully, and on the morning of the thirteenth day there was an increase of one in birdland. The next morning, while she was off the nest, I took a peep; but still only one.

When I came home in the evening and looked I saw a broken egg in the bottom of the cage, with a full grown bird in it. I looked in the nest expecting to find more disappointment, but I saw three young birds all holding their heads up, when they thought they heard someone coming with something to feed upon. From this on, it meant hard work for Mamma. The first three days she fed on the yolk of egg alone, the next three both yolk and white, with seed thrown in, and after that she fed on egg, cracker biscuit, bacon, seed, apple, celery and bird manna. My own special "brew" of manna is composed of the best summer rape, boiled in just enough honey and water to hold the seed together, and when filled into a little tin cup half an inch deep, I press maw seed on the top.

The reader of this article will remember that I am experimenting—trying anything and everything to get the best results. Every evening when I got home at eleven p.m., I turned on the light, and Mamma got very busy feeding from eleven to twelve, with the satisfactory result that on the fifteenth day the young ones were able to stand on the edge of the nest and flop their wings, and then settle back into the nest again. I changed the nest on the eighth day, and gave them a new one made of charpie. At three weeks they looked as big as mother, and would get in and out of the nest at pleasure, explore the cage, and then go back again. They are now twenty-eight days old, and look like six-week-old birds. They have been on rape and canary for four days. The mother has built and laid again, and will have her fourth egg to-morrow morning.

Further Experiments Promised.

I am going to experiment more with the next nest, and I will be pleased to relate the result for the benefit of the readers of Cage Birds; the only way we can accomplish the most good is by using each others ideas. I do not mean do as others do, but when I read how the other fellow does, it makes me set to work and think how I can do a little better. I consider this an ideal nest; two males, one female, of fine colour as well as breed, one deep yellow, one yellow with a green ring around its neck, the female mealy with a dark cap.

Next time I write I hope to have something startling to say. I hope some of the new beginners in the hobby will find something interesting in this bacon and egg food, for anyone who feeds plenty of fat bacon will never have any trouble with their birds being egg-bound; at least, in my thirty years of bird raising for pleasure I have never had an egg-bound bird, either in aviary or cage. This morning I put a pound of bacon in my aviary. I am glad to announce that we are going to have a fine year in birds out here in California, as they are not dying in the nests at 10 or 12 days old as they did last year.

EGG FOOD AND ITS MAKING.

The Methods of Members of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S.

On May 6th, an egg food making competition took place, and a large number of members met at headquarters in anticipation of the event. Mr. Frank Cole occupied the chair. The secretary read a letter from the British Bird and Mule Club, inviting us to join them on their country ramble, May 24. The meeting then proceeded with the event of the evening. The first thing done was to arrange rules under which the competition should take place, and the following were proposed and adopted:—(1) Time to count, (2) explanation of competitors as to their particular method not to count, (3) prizes to be awarded by non-competitors, (4) competitor's food when finished to be placed on plate, with number attached. Seven members handed in their names as willing to compete. Mr. F. S. Matthes kindly acted as time-keeper.

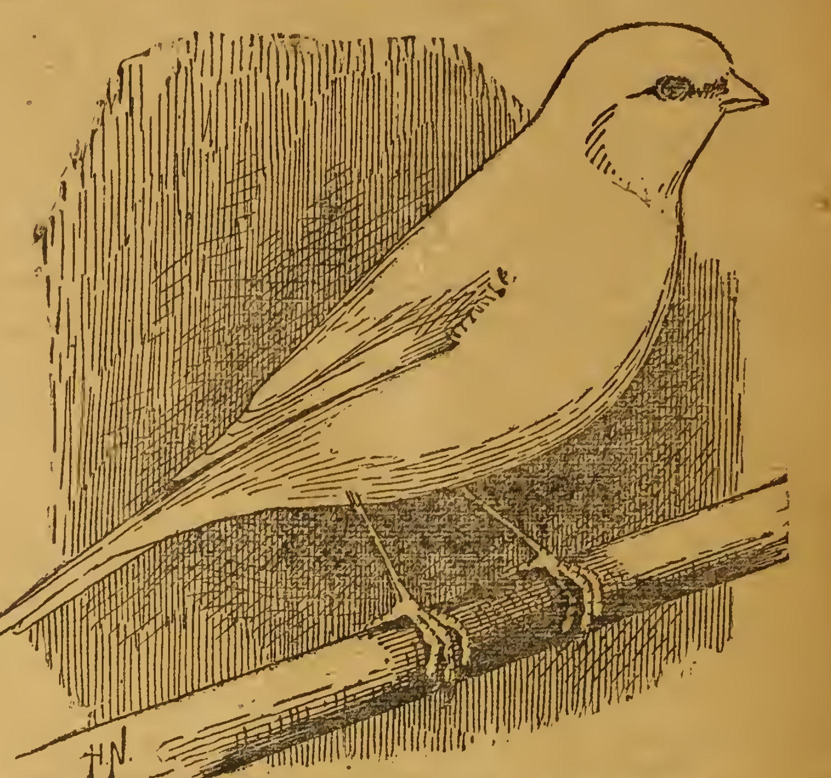
Mr. Cant was first to take his place at the table, and proceeded to make his food, using cream cracker biscuits, powdered, and putting his egg through an egg-squeezer, mixing egg and biscuit together with a fork; time, two minutes. Mr. Cole was the next. He used Spratt's canary food; putting his egg through a squeezer, and mixing both with a fork; time two minutes five seconds. Mr. Reeks followed, using a prepared sponge-cake and egg, which he mixed with a fork; time one minute eight seconds.

Mr. Pratt whose method was somewhat different, had a small square sieve through which he put both his biscuits and egg, using a small piece of flat wood to squeeze them through with; time 2mins. 45secs. Osborne biscuits were used in this case. Mr. Clarke adopted the same method and ingredients as Mr. Pratt; time 2mins. 10secs. Mr. L. J. Richardson used tea biscuits powdered and put his egg through a squeezer; time 1min. 12secs. Mr. H. W. Tomsett, whose time was 1min. 12secs., before putting his egg with the biscuit added a few teaspoonfuls of water to his biscuit.

Each competitor's food was turned out on to a plate, and non-competitors were asked to leave the room for a few minutes while the plates were numbered. When all was ready an eager crowd soon got round the table, anxious to examine the foods and give their awards. The general excellence of the foods made it no easy task to place the winners. Upon the slips being handed in, it was found that two of the competitors had received an equal number of votes for first prize.

Mr. Matthes very kindly decided which of the two foods should get the first prize, this, a handsome briar pipe in case (given by Mr. Franklin) going to Mr. M. Pratt; second prize, two dozen new laid eggs (given by Mr. Clarke) going to Mr. Cant; and third prize (2s. 6d., given by Mr. Grendell) going to Mr. Cole.

It will be noticed that the winners took longer to make their food than the rest of the competitors, but undoubtedly, turned out the best food. Great enthusiasm was displayed during the whole of the proceedings and the competitors were not let off quite free, being closely questioned as to the why and wherefore they did this or that. Everyone present expressed themselves delighted with the evening, and we have washing and cage-making competitions in store for members. A vote of thanks was accorded the kind donors of the prizes, the competitors, and lastly the chairman, whose equal in that office it would be hard to find.—W. Hodson, hon. sec.



A BELLE OF THE PAST SEASON.

This exceptionally nice young Norwich Plainhead Hen won a number of prizes at various exhibitions for Mr. W. Grewar, of Forfar, and finished the season with a first at the Scottish National Show.

Club Reports.

HENLEY F.S.

At a well-attended meeting, May 5th, Chairman Mr. Dearlove gave an interesting and instructive lecture on "Canaries." Next meeting, June 2nd, at 8, when it is hoped that all interested in fur and feather pets will attend.—A. V. Grey, Hon. Sec.

RUNCORN B.B.A.

Meeting held at headquarters May 2, Mr. Joseph Guy in the chair, before a large attendance. A very interesting discussion on feeding between Mr. Walker and Mr. Boots brought up many questions, which were answered by the same. Decided to have nest feather show July 5. Next meeting June 6, to arrange classes. Please all attend.—E. Rone, Sec.

COLINTON AND CURRIE PARISHES C.S.

Monthly meeting held Drill Hall, Juniper Green, Mr. Begbie (Pres.) chair. Decided to add at annual show one class each for Crests and Crestbreds. Also that we leave the Drill Hall on July 12th for our ramble. At the close of the meeting the members booked their hens.—Jas. Napier, Sec.

CHESTER C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Boot Inn, Eastgate Row North, April 29, Mr. F. C. Parker chair. Schedule for nest feather show drawn up. Correspondence read from Mr. Metcalfe (Liverpool) notifying his willingness to judge N.F. show. Decided to offer a cup for most points with four nominated birds; also to include novice classes in the schedule (buff and yellow). Special for most entries throughout the show.—R. L. G. Simpson, Hon. Sec.

SITTINGBOURNE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held May 5, a good number present. A washing exhibition of cage birds was kindly given by Mrs. Lockett, of Dover, and this proved to be most interesting, both to young and old fanciers. Three birds were washed, during which time Mrs. Lockett explained every method. While the birds were drying, Mrs. Lockett asked the members for any questions, and a few of them took advantage. Mrs. Lockett replied to all, and a very hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mrs. Lockett. Decided to open the young bird show in July free to the public, which may form an advert for our annual show. Decided to apply to the K.C.C.B.A. for patronage at the annual show, November 12 and 13. Mr. G. Gardner, whose awards gave every satisfaction last year, has again been elected to judge. Mr. T. Monday was elected a member.— W. Broadbridge, Sec.

CITY & COUNTY OF PERTH O.A.

Monthly meeting held May 5, in Laidlaw's Rooms, Leonard Street, Mr. A. G. Forest (Pres.) in the chair. Sec. read letter from Mr. J. H. Adams (Glasgow) agreeing to judge our club show, Nov. 15th, in the Good Templars' Hall, King Street. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chair. —J. L. Smith.

WEST OF SCOTLAND O.S.

Monthly meeting held May 3rd, Mr. Jno. Montgomery presiding over a good attendance in Nelson's Temperance Hotel. Mr. Barron was called upon for his promised lecture on the Canary. Mr. Barron in his lecture touched upon his method of feeding, rearing, moulting, and preparing for the show bench. The lecture was followed throughout with keenest interest, and at the close Mr. Barron was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. Next meeting, July 5th, first feather show. Classification: Crests, 4 classes; Plainheads, 4; Borders, 3; Yorks., 4; Mr. E. Barron judge. A vote of thanks to the Chairman terminated the meeting.—Wm. Hutchison, Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Meeting held May 6th, Alex. Anderson (Vice-Pres.) in the chair. The League Secretary gave a report of last League meeting, which was considered very satisfactory. G. Malcom was appointed one of the doorkeepers for League show, July 5th. Secretary was instructed what patronages to apply for. Agreed that Secretary write Mr. Clarke, Rothesay, for his case of seeds and berries for next meeting, which is to be held on a Saturday; members to be postcarded. Questions were drawn from the hat, and some very useful information was gained by those present. Joseph Sneddon (Crossgates) was accepted as a member. Donations for month, 14s.—Adam Dickson, Sec.

DONCASTER C.B.S.

Meeting held Black Bull, May 10th, Mr. Prestley chair. Decided to hold first feather show on June 14th, with the following clases: Yell. Yorks, ditto buff, yell. Norwich, ditto buff, A.O.V. Can., Mule or Hyb., British cage-moulted, ditto field-moulted. Birds etaged 4 o'clock; fee, 1s. Hope all members will bring as many as possible. Members please try and get to the ramble through Edlington Woods, for which Earl Fitzwilliam has granted permission, May 31st; meeting at Balby Tram Terminus at 2.30. New members enrolled: Messrs. Robinson, Hainshaw, Adams, Barrett and Beasley. Members who have not paid subs. kindly let me have same as early as possible.—G. Hunt, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL B.B. AND M.C.

Committee meeting, held at headquarters, the Feathers Hotel, Gt. Chapel Street, Westminster, April 24. Present, Messrs. J. Robson (chairman), C. T. Maxwell, O. Puck, E. Stephens, E. Shearmur, J. Dewhurst, A. Silver, T. R. Trower, W. A. Shepherd, G. Oliver, R. A. Newley, A. C. Askew, G. Crabb, and J. P. Carr. The hon. treas. was empowered to have books of certificates of the Birdkeepers' Protection Association, and a circular letter printed, and sent to all cage bird societies in the United Kingdom. The Plumage Bill, which is now before the House of Commons, was placed before the committee, and a clause therein which was considered detrimental to our hobby, caused a long discussion. Decided, that a letter pointing out the dangers of this clause to birdkeepers be sent to each Member of Parliament from this club, also a copy of same to be published in the Fancy Press, by permission of the Editors, so that every reader and member of a society could copy and send to his respective Member of Parliament. The following were elected to form a sub-committee to carry out the necessary arrangements: Messrs. Silver, Robson, Crabb and Trower. The following final arrangements were made for the annual ramble: The morning party to leave Liverpool Street Station by 9.37 train for Chingford, afternoon party by 1.33 train for Loughton, and meet the morning party at the Robin Hood. Hot lunch at the Owl for 1 o'clock, and meat tea at the Robin Hood, at 6 o'clock. The committee extend a hearty welcome to members and friends of all London societies. All those wishing to participate must send their names to the secretary by the 19th inst. Mr. E. Shearmur, Old Street, E.C., was elected a member.—J. P. Carr, Hon. Sec., 45 Overdale Road, S. Ealing.

THE STOCK BOOK

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

Order "The Stock Book" at once: Now is the Season it will Help you.

Price 6d., from your Newsagent, or 7d. (postal order), post free, from "CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ARBROATH C.B.S.

Meeting held May 7, Mr. W. Muir, presided over a large attendance. It was gratifying to see the way the membership is increasing; still want to see more yet. Decided to co-operate with other Forfarshire societies with a view to having a medal competition for most points over all four shows. Classes for F.F. show also decided. Minor matters were considered. The meeting was brought to a close with a vote of thanks to the chairman. J. Gray, Sec.

AYR C.B.S.

Meeting held in the Academy Hall, Fort Street, April 29th; Mr C. C. Irvine chair. Sec. was instructed to write several judges for terms, and report at next meeting. Mr. A. Girvan, Ayr, has been appointed to judge Yorkshires, and we hope that exhibitors will give him a good send off. It was agreed to provide a novice class for Yorkshires, Norwich, Border Fancy, and British, rule to be inserted in schedule that a novice be one that has not won a first prize in open competition. Decided that all exhibitors at next show with six or more entries, get free admission. Mr. C. C. Irvine read a paper ou British birds, which was very much appreciated by those present.—R. Aitken, Secretary.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.C.

Meeting held in Village Schoolroom, Alexandra, May 6th. President (A. W. Donaldson) chair. The Chairman introduced Mr. R. B. Gibb, of Glasgow, secretary of the Scottish Yorkshire Club, who gave a very instructive and entertaining lecture on the Yorkshire Canary. He described the points desired in exhibition specimens, and how birds should be matched to attain the desired standard. Colour, pedigree, and training were fully gone into. Numerous questions were asked and answered, and a very hearty vote of thanks tendered to the lecturer, several members being so much taken up with the Yorkshire that they handed Mr. Gibbs their names to be enrolled in Scottish Yorkshire Club.—A. H. McLean, Sec.

SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD (Eastfield Side) C.B.S.

Table show of British birds held May 3rd. A choice selection of birds was staged, and Mr. Wright and Mr. Hall had no easy task in placing the cards. This society has opened out a new feature in judging table shows. They have decided to give novice judges a chance to show their skill. Messrs. Wright and Hall gave every satisfaction in this, their first attempt. After the judging a meeting was held and it was decided to have a members' nest feather show next meeting night. 9 classes. Judge, J. Richards. BULF. OR GOLDF.: 1, Nuttall Bros.; 2, Ward; 3, Gabbitass. LINNET, &c.: 1, Ward; 2, Nuttall Bros. A.O.V. BRIT.: 1, he, Mallantratt; 2, Gabbitass; 3, Nuttall Bros.; hc, c, Oscroft. SOFTBILL: 1, Ward.—B. Gabbitass, Press Corres.

GRANGEMOUTH C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held at headquarters, Rechabite Hall, May 7, Mr. M. Pagan presiding over a fair turn-out of members. Decided to hold our annual First Feather Show in July (date later). Following were engaged to judge the annual show, Nov. 8th: Mr. Holmes, Edinburgh, Crests and Plainheads; Mr. McWatt, Bonnybridge, Borders, and Mr. Goodfellow, Edinburgh, Mules, British and foreign classes. The British and Mule classes have been re-arranged this year, and two extra classes have been put on the Norwich for non-feds. Owing to the poor turn-out of the Scots Fancies, we have decided to cancel the section. At the meeting, June 3rd, the principal business will be the allocation of the cups for the annual show; there is another cup coming our way, which will have to be decided at same meeting, also the election of judges (from the members of the club) for the First Feather Show. I would be very pleased to hear from old and intending members now I have taken up the secretarial duties again.—Jno. Woodhouse, Sec., 63, Marshall Street, Grangemouth.

SOWERBY BRIDGE C.B.S.

On May 8, an interesting and instructive lecture on local British birds, was given before a good attendance of members by Mr. F. Greenwood, of Hebden Bridge, a district which abounds in bird life. The lecturer dealt with the Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, Greenfinch, Hawfinch, Siskin, Linnet, Twite, Buntings, Whinchat, Redstart, Wagtails, Cuckoo, and a few others; he gave us a good outline of each variety, its haunts, habits, and the caging and feeding of each in as brief a manner as possible, owing to the shortness of the evening. When he had concluded many questions were asked, and were replied to by the lecturer. Afterwards a hearty vote of thanks was proposed to Mr. Greenwood, who said, in replying, that at some future date he would come and continue his lecture where he had left off, and that at any time he would only be too pleased to take the members on a ramble in any part of their district. Mr. Greenwood can rest assured that his offer will be accepted at a date as early as possible. At the close of the meeting every member was quite satisfied at having heard one of the best of lectures.—A. Sutcliffe, Sec.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting held May 9. Present: Chairman, Mr. J. Jones; vice., Mr. G. Jones; hon. treas., Mr. R. T. Edwards, Messrs. E. Jones, R. Green, H. Williams, and R. E. Griffith, hon. sec. Letters read from G. F. Jackson, Esq., agreeing to act as vice-president, and enclosing cheque 10s. 6d., and Mr. W. T. Lloyd James, Monmouth, enclosing 1s. to become a member. Decided to return same, as the society is open only for North Wales. Copy of schedule was read and passed, and a list of subscribers, as follows:—Mr. F. R. Brown, £2; Lady Turner, and Messrs. E. R. Roberts and W. S. McDowell, £1 1s. each; Messrs. T. Morgan Lloyd, C. A. Jones, G. F. Jackson, 10s. 6d. each, making £6 14s. 6d. Mr. Brymer promised 10s., and Mr. Gwyneddon Davies, 10s. 6d. Specials given by committee: Chairman Mr. J. Jones, 2s. 6d.; Mr. J. Pritchard, 2s. 6d.; Mr. R. T. Edwards, hon. treas., 2s. 6d.; Mr. R. Green, 2s. 6d.; vice-chairman Mr. G. Jones, pair of electro-plated photo frames; Mr. H. Williams, special; Mr. R. E. Griffith, two specials; a fancier, challenge cup, value 18s. 6d., for most points; and many others. Fanciers from North Wales should join at once; members seem very slow coming. The committee have done their utmost, and I hope to see this show on July 5 one of the best in North Wales. We have engaged the well-known British bird judge, Mr. J. Kershaw, late Llanrwst. Membership, 1s. The society is open only for North Wales.—R. E. Griffith, Hon. Sec.

"PHOSTO"

The Phosphatic Food Adjunct.

Invaluable for Bad Feeding Hens. Acts like Magic as testified below.

Spon Street, Coventry.
April 30th, 1913.

Dear Sirs,—I am more than pleased with the 1/- tin I received on Monday, 28th. I gave my hens some as soon as I received it, and they are now feeding fine. I think I had better keep a supply by me, as I am in great favour of it. Please forward a 2/6 tin.

Yours truly,
W. ROWLEY.

In tins, post free, 1/-, 2/6, 4/6, sample 3d, or from our Specialist Agents.

SHETTLESTON C.B.S.

Meeting held in Johnston's Rooms, May 10th, Mr. W. Lunn presiding over a good turn-out of members. Agreed to hold a first feather show June 7th. Seven classes for young birds and a large number of handsome specials. Mr. Craig, Tollcross, judge. Decided to have a hat night at next meeting; four new members were enrolled: Messrs. Fulton, Davidson, Picken, and Carrack.—A. Berry, Sec.

DERBY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held April 26th. Resolved to hold two first feather shows, one in June and one in July, for the purpose of clearing of the debt existing since last open show. Last meeting, judging competition results: 1, divided between A. Tongue and W. Roberts. Judge, J. H. Drakeley. Competition realised 3s. 9d. Members please note: Next meeting night nomination of young birds.—Wharam and Bamsey.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

Meeting held May 8, at Workman's Hall, when specials and cards won at evening show April 24 were given out. This show proved a great success, and a nice little balance is left for the society's funds. The society is going with a rare swing of late. The following new members were elected: Messrs. McLurie and Turner, Canning Town; G. Cooper and G. F. Gaylor, Plaistow; M. Thomas, Mile End; H. Hinton, Manor Park. Specials were booked for all sections at next evening show, May 22, when all are cordially welcome; Workman's Hall, 7.30. Entries close four days before show to W. Maxey, show sec.—A. E. Baker, Hon. Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting held May 5. Further arrangements were made for young bird show, and the best thanks of the meeting were given to Mr. F. W. Alcock for the gift of a gold medal to be competed for at this and annual members' show. Mr. E. Ousman (Fenton) and Mr. E. Hodgkinson (Stoke) were elected members. The essay papers written by members were read by sec. These proved very interesting and instructive, and were thoroughly enjoyed by all, a hearty vote of thanks being given to the writers. There was an excellent attendance. At next meeting final arrangements will be made for the young bird show, and fanciers will be eligible to compete for the two gold medals if elected members at the next meeting.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

LEYTON C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 5, at Grange Park Hall. About forty members and friends were present to hear a most interesting discussion, which was opened by our chairman, the subject being "Troubles in the breeding room." Judging from what one heard during the evening there seemed to be no lack of them, the chief one apparently being how to get young birds. Among the many points discussed were—bad feeders, sweating hens, young birds going light, and red mite. Many theories were advanced as to the cause and cure of these common troubles, and no doubt a number of those present got some useful hints which they will profit by. Before the meeting closed a good number of names were handed in for the ramble on May 17, leaving Loughton Station at 3.—A. W. Farmer, Hon. Asst. Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 3, at headquarters, Mr. J. Chambers chair. Mr. J. E. Pyrah (Morley) was elected a member. Mr. H. J. Chittenden (Bradford) gave a lecture on "British Birds," which included notes on the Siskin, Bramblefinch, Yellowhammer, Chaffinch, Redstart, Lesser Whitethroat, Bearded Tit, Waxwing, and Sandpiper. One pleasing fact was a good attendance of members and friends, who were unanimous in their praise of Mr. Chittenden, and many expressed the opinion that we had listened to one of the best lectures ever delivered before this society. Mr. H. J. Mennard, in proposing a vote of thanks, voiced the sentiments of all present in a happy little speech. Mr. T. Baldwinson seconded, and vote was carried with acclamation. Mr. Chittenden suitably responded. At next month's F.F. show, at headquarters, a double breeding cage will be given for best bird in show, also double breeder and 2s. 6d. cash for first and second most points respectively, no member to take two specials, but winner for best bird to have preference.—W. A. Wilson, Hon. Sec.

MANCHESTER AND N.C.O.S.

General meeting, held headquarters, Deansgate Temperance Hotel, May 5, Mr. Raynes chair. After the appointment of judges for the October Show had been gone through, our Chairman called on Mr. J. Beswick, the noted judge and fancier from Stockport, to give us a lecture on British Birds and Mule Breeding. Mr. Beswick gave us a very interesting and instructive lecture. He told us how to choose and feed British birds, how to pair and feed for muling, and how some of the noted clear mules had been bred. A good discussion took place after the lecture, most of the members and friends taking part. Some of the British bird fanciers and mule breeders could not see quite eye to eye with Mr. Beswick; but after he had elaborated his points, it was generally accepted that the honours were with him. In proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Beswick, Mr. Fairhurst mentioned the fact that information such as we had obtained at that meeting had not always been as freely given as it is at present. He thought we ought to be grateful to such men as Mr. Beswick; men who had done things, and who were willing to tell how they had done them. Mr. Smith seconded the proposition. Mr. Beswick briefly replied, thanking the members and friends for their appreciation of his efforts to interest them. He did not mind an informal chat with a few fanciers on birdy topics, in fact, he enjoyed a gossip on this subject as much as anyone; but he did not get a deal of enjoyment out of giving a lecture. Our time for closing had now arrived, and the meeting was closed, some of the British bird fanciers looking as if they could have stayed all night. We could not appoint judges for all varieties, as some of those written to had not replied. Full list will be sent along as soon as completed.—E. H. Fulcher, Assist. Sec. and Treas.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

Monthly meeting held in Oddfellows' Hall, April 26, James Muir presiding. A table show of British birds was held; Mr. John Penman judged: 1, Goldfinch, Hunter; 2, Linnet, Clarkson; 3, Goldfinch, Marshall; 4, Greenfinch, Muir. Next meeting May 31.—W. Clarkson, Sec.

READING C.B.S.

Meeting held May 7th, before a good attendance; Mr. E. J. Smith, chair. Messrs. J. Colburn, Newbury, and S. H. George and R. Meadowcraft, Reading, were elected members. An egg-food demonstration had been arranged, which turned out to be very interesting. Several members had made egg-food according to their usual directions, and brought it with them, explaining its merits at the same time. Mr. Yates then mixed some, and we were all on watch for tips. He made 1 lb with cod liver oil food, putting sugar and maw seed. After putting an egg through a sieve he mixed it all together. Several asked him why he pressed it with the back of a spoon. His answer was that it prevented waste, as birds could not pick out the egg. It was then passed round. A good discussion ensued, each member giving his own preferences. Samples from Liverine were passed round. We decided to have all classes for young bird show as last year, with the addition of two extra classes for amateurs, and two for novices, making 23 in all. We decided to try the experiment of a half-day show, birds to be here at 2.30, open at 4; admission 3d. Several specials were promised, and I should like a few more before next meeting. I should also like to see a few Border Fancy men join. We have two or three, and we shall be glad to add a class for them if we have sufficient before next meeting. Members report very fair luck, but plenty of clear eggs and hens giving up feeding and going to nest again.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

Singing Contests.

SHEFFIELD.

Contest held at Newmarket Hotel, Sheaf Street, May 12, when some good singing was heard. 1, Calligan, 131 sec.; 2, Robinson, 89 sec.; 3, Watson, 71 sec.; 4, Rodgers, 52 sec. Three Sheffield birds shall sing any three birds in Yorkshire, 5 minutes' singing, 2½ minutes each road, faced and bluffed, from £1 up to £5; deposit "Cage Birds" early.—S. D. Webster.

KIPPAX.

Members' sing held at headquarters, Commercial Hotel, May 10th. 29 birds sang for three substantial prizes. 1, Liversedge, 51; 2, 3, Wallis, 50, 41. Open sing on May 17th, when we hope to see some fresh faces and hear some fresh birds. Entry, 4d. each bird, to be shared in 3 prizes, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th, the 1st prize, a copper kettle, being given by the landlord, Mr. Gutteridge. First pair in window at 3.—A. Tomlin, Sec.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.

Contest held May 10, at the Shakespeare Hotel. 23 birds sang for two good prizes. McDermott and Medley shared 1 and 2. A members' big singing took place on May 12, when 66 birds sang for 4 good prizes. 1, 2, Appleton; 3, Holcroft; 4, M. Devine. Members spent a pleasant evening, songs being sung by our Chairman, and Messrs. Gray, Devine, Watson, White, Davies, and some of our colliery friends.—M. Devine, Sec.

MURTON.

Match sung May 4, between George Coulson and R. Elliott, the "Linnet King," when R. Elliott won. Judge, John Coulson; timekeeper, Mr. Penman. A match followed between Ben Johnson and George Coulson, with three of the best Cumberland birds ever known. Coulson was the winner. For £2 a side George Coulson will sing anything in the world, either time or proud singing. He will meet H. Allen, of Leeds, half-way, for £5 a side.—R. Elliott.

BLACKBURN.

Open contest for quality was held at club headquarters, Empire Hotel, Bolton Road. 24 birds entered for six good prizes. Some very good singing was heard: 1, Topping; 2, J. Dobson; 3, Green; 4, C. Dobson; 5, Barnes; 6, Statham. After the contest we had a very enjoyable evening. Contest for members only will be held at the Club headquarters, Empire Hotel, Blackburn, May 24, when there will be seven good prizes given. This is what we call our cup contest. Four of our members have won it twice each, and if either of them win it this time it becomes their own property.—T. Hayhurst, Sec.

WESTHOUGHTON.

Open Linnet contest held Horse Shoe Inn, Wingates, May 10th, for time. 21 birds faced the judges for three prizes, and the best singing we have had this season was heard by a large company. 1, Poole, 145; 2, Woodward, 131; 3, Lowe, 116. Timers, J. Poole and G. Bate. Minuteman, J. Brown. After the contest there was a match between T. Knowles and J. Poole, Mr. Knowles winning easily. We hope at our next open contest to have a better entry, so that we shall be able to give more and better prizes, as it encourages fanciers more when they know that they have something worth singing for.—J. Woodward

PONTEFRACT.

Contest held May 10 at Woodman Inn. 24 birds entered for 3 good prizes. Mr. W. Proctor 1st, 2nd, 3rd. Also usual open contest May 11, when 31 birds entered for 4 prizes. 1, 2, Proctor; Piper and Nelson shared 4th prize. Yearly contest held May 12th. 29 birds sang for 16 valuable prizes. We had a very nice afternoon, assisted by some of the Castleford members, when everything went off all right. The first six were: 1, 3, 5, Nelson; 2 6, Proctor; 4, Jones. Mr. B. Nelson gave a prize for best score to novice, which was won by one of our new members, Mr. E. Clayton. Next open contest, May 18.—W. Beard, Sec.

LEEDS.

Open contest for quality Linnet singing, held at the Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon Street, May 10, 32 birds sung for four good prizes, given by Mr. Wm. Tillotson: 1 Sissons, 2 Stead, 3 Hardcastle, 4 Wigfield; judges, Lacy, Robinson, Naylor. Also May 11, when 37 birds sung for four good prizes before a crowded house: 1 Sissons, 2 Hardcastle, 3 Wigfield, 4 Johnson; judges, Lacy, Crane, Naylor. The 24th annual great all England contest for quality Linnet singing took place on May 12, at the above, when 39 of the best picked birds in England sung for 18 good prizes, before a house packed to its utmost: 1 Robinson, 2 Lonsdale, 3 Wigfield, 4 Bland, 5 Sissons, 6 Hardcastle, 7 Varley, 8, Sowden, 9 Butler, 10 Richardson, 11 Wigfield, 12 Stead, 13, Farrar, 14 Appleyard, 15 Hollingworth, 16 Butler, 17 Nicholson, 18 Stead; judges. A. Jennings, J. Smith, W. Naylor.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

∴ ONE OF NATURE'S FEATHERED CARPENTERS. ∴

In the process of preparing a hole in a tree trunk, etc., for nesting purposes, the Woodpecker often chips away with its powerful beak an amazing quantity of the wood, it being quite a usual thing to find a large heap at the foot of the tree. The bird depicted is the fine hen Greater Spotted Woodpecker, exhibited by Mr. J. Yealland (Havenstreet, I. of W.) and awarded 3rd prize at the Crystal Palace Show.

THE LAST OF A GREAT BOOK

The winners at the C.P. Show won because they knew how to prepare and treat their birds. They would tell you they won "because they stuck to the advice given in 'Canaries, Hybrids and British Cage Birds.'"

Without exception, this is the finest and most practical work of its kind ever issued. There is not a single point in the breeding or rearing or exhibiting of Canaries or Cage Birds that is not thoroughly handled with painstaking care and unfailing accuracy.

When you follow the advice contained in this work, you pull off top prizes. A fancier can do so even in his first year with the aid of

ONCE you purchase this authoritative book, you will never need another bird book as long as you live.

CANARIES HYBRIDS AND BRITISH BIRDS

By JOHN ROBSON.

FREE brochure, with 15 Splendid Illustrations Posted Gratis to all Immediate Applicants.

The work itself has 41 comprehensive Chapters, 26 lifelike Coloured Plates, and all the leading experts have contributed.

The reason that prizes come as a matter of course is that only experts have been allowed to contribute. Consequently the work is packed full of practicality, and no fancier is wise who fails to purchase.

Everything about Bird-keeping can be learned from this entirely expert, explicitly written volume. The latest developments all incorporated.

WHEN THE 700 COPIES ARE GONE, WE SHALL NOT BE ABLE TO SUPPLY ANOTHER AT ANY PRICE.

A special price is offered, and there are concessions which make it remarkably easy for every lover of the fancy to secure a copy of this invaluable work.

Please bear in mind, however, we cannot supply another copy after the 700 have gone. Get the free brochure; it will convince you how splendidly and completely the work can meet every requirement.

But we do not desire that you should make your purchase before fully considering, so we invite you to send for our very interesting brochure, with 15 exceedingly artistic illustrations. Therein you will find fuller details of this momentous volume. All you have to do is to send us the form below and our artistic booklet will come to you gratis and post free.

"PHOSTO"

The recognised greatest food on the market. It has caused a sensation amongst experts. Hens, after use, will feed, and this is not all; the youngsters thrive and grow to a wonderful degree. It will not make a small bird a big one, but I will guarantee it will make them considerably larger. Testimonials coming in daily from all parts. Sent immediately on receipt of P.O. Give it a trial. It will save you pounds. "Phosto" is not a medicine to be given when ill; it is a food for all times, but most beneficial now. Never been known to fail. "Penny Street, Lancaster, April 21st, 1913.—Dear Sir,—Please find 2/6 for another tin of 'Phosto.' I am sorry to say the Goldfinch died the same day 'Phosto' arrived, but my Norwich cock is wonderful. He has filled a nest of eggs due to hatch Wednesday, 23rd. It has also worked a miracle amongst my other birds, and the hens are feeding grandly.—Yours truly, H. Durston." Sold in tins, 1/-, 2/6, and 4/6: Judge Silk, the Bird Specialist, Whitstable. (688)

NOT SINGING.

Wanted a trial. We are confident our Medicines will give you satisfaction. Special offer to all bird fanciers. If you have a cock bird that you are relying upon for the breeding season, that is not in full song, or has gone into the soft moult, or a hen that is dull and moping, and will not shape for breeding, we guarantee you a perfect cure. We have the grandest medicine ever introduced for bringing birds into breeding condition. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for loss of voice, soft moult, egg-binding, going light, feather-plucking, diarrhœa, and for dull and moping birds. In 7d. and 1/1 (treble size) bottles. Special size, 2/-. This medicine is undoubtedly the finest pick-me-up ever offered for birds that are run down or gone off song. Fanciers note: If our medicines fail to do as advertised, we guarantee to return full money. For bronchitis, wheesing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic. Also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. The safest and most reliable medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. As an advertisement we will send a 7d. bottle of each of the above medicines for 1/-, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9. All post paid, per return, at our risk. Two valuable seed recipes: How to Feed Linnets and Rollers for Contest Singing, given free to all purchasers of our medicines.—Frank Ditchfield, Bird Specialist, Oldham.

SOUTH WALES AND MON. FEDERATION OF F. AND F.S.

First annual meeting held May 12, at the Bush Hotel, Swansea, when about thirty were present, including the president, Mr. S. W. Thomas (Swansea), and Mr. Norris Sair and Mr. W. G. Camden, vice-presidents. Mr. D. A. S. Longden (Swansea) chair. The President gave some valuable advice as to the working of the Federation, drew attention to the difficulty of arranging dates so as to avoid clashing, and hoped that all societies who had previously fixed upon dates to loyally abide by the decision that would be come to on that day. There were something like sixteen cases of clashing, and in nearly all instances the difficulties were got over with very little friction. As pointed out by the president, it was a suicidal policy for two or more societies to hold their shows on the same date, and if societies were not prepared to re-arrange their dates, the aims of the Federation were practically useless. Secretary brought forward the objection laid by Pentrebach Society to Pontypridd altering the date of their show from the first Wednesday of Dec. to last Wednesday in Nov., a day previous to the Pentrebach date. The secretary (who is also the secretary of Pontypridd) gave his reason for altering date, and stated that it was the means of having Pembroke affiliated to the Federation, the first Wednesday in Dec. being the only date that seemed to suit them. He did not consider this a case of clashing, and thought it would really be an advantage to Pentrebach, as exhibits could be sent from Pontypridd show to Pentrebach before being returned home. After a little discussion, though Pentrebach was not represented at this meeting, it was resolved "that this meeting does not consider this a case of clashing, and is of opinion that it will be an advantage to Pentrebach." Three other societies had fixed their date the same as Pentrebach, Nov. 27th. Ultimately Pentrebach was allotted that date, and the others asked to change. Sec. gave the result of the points special as far as the returns were received, and stated that now the four cups had been disposed of it was their duty to look forward to obtain a better class of cups for the coming season. The value of these specials for most points can be at once seen when it is considered that the winner of the cage birds cup had scored 254 points. The president, with his usual generosity, and seeing the value that good specials would have in the number of entries given to the affiliated societies' shows, started the subscription by offering £1 1s. towards a £5 5s. cup. Mr. Norris Sair (Neath) offered 10/6; Mr. W. G. Camden, 10/6; Mr. D. A. S. Longden, 10/6; Mr. Guppy (Cardiff), 5/-; Mr. Capper (Treorchy) 2/6; Mr. Dendle (Swansea), 2/6; Mr. Pike (Kenfig Hill), 2/6; Mr. S. H. George (Swansea C.B.S.), 2/6; and Mr. Eley (Mumbles), 2/6; total, £3 10s. £1 15s. more is required to make up the amount for this £5 5s. cup. It is hoped that anyone desirous of contributing towards this will communicate with secretary as soon as possible. Mr. W. G. Camden, a gentleman whom the Swansea fanciers have to be greatly indebted to for his continuous financial help in specials and other matters, offered a £3 3s. cup for the runner-up. He also subscribed 2/6 towards cost of cups for last season. The benefit in entries that Societies will reap by these cups will be much greater than last season, and the executive should have no difficulty in having the balance required subscribed at an early date. The mode of putting these cups up for competition will be decided at a future meeting. Sec. gave result of the voting for officers and executive Council:—Pres., S. W. Thomas, re-elected; chair, Mr. D. A. S. Longden, re-elected; vice-chair, Mr. W. J. Davies re-elected; sec. and treas., A. A. Gordon McLucas, 48, Rocser Street, Maesycoed, Pontypridd, re-elected. Auditors, Messrs. Guppy (Cardiff) and Churchill (Abertillery) went through the accounts, which showed a balance on hand of £4 12s. 6d. The Federation starts its second year with 30 societies affiliated. That the Federation has been the means of doing a large amount of good in the past, and will effect a much larger amount of good in the future is indisputable. A full list of societies, with their dates, will be sent to each affiliated society after the dates which have to be arranged are sent in. In future, societies must send a marked catalogue to the Federation sec. as a check for the points specials. Considering the importance of this meeting, we were sorry to see that some societies were not represented, especially as they were notified that their dates were clashing with others. Probably one cause was that a show was held by the Twynyrodyn Society at Merthyr that day. Hearty votes of thanks were returned to the president, vice-presidents, and others who had so kindly subscribed towards the new cups, and a most successful meeting was brought to a close.—A. G. McLucas

"Transparent Imaginations."

Readers of the LEAGUE columns will remember that I had occasion to write to the Editor of the "Manchester Evening News" in respect of an especially reckless onslaught against bird dealers and birdkeepers which had recently appeared in that paper over the initials "S. A. W." My letter to the Editor was printed in our issue of May 10.

From a cutting from the "Manchester Evening News" of May 12, which has now reached me, it would appear that the Editor of that paper sent my letter to the author of the article in question, who replied that he had never seen the pamphlet published by the "Humanitarian League" from which I concluded he had derived his inspiration. The pamphlet has been used over and over again by people equally ignorant with "S. A. W." of the subject, and whether that writer used the pamphlet itself or was merely copying other people's extracts from it is a matter of no importance.

What is of importance, however, is that the Editor of the "Manchester Evening News" now says that the article "was transparently an imaginative one." Of course it was, and that is exactly what I said.

But the fact that the article was "imaginative" does not absolve the writer of it from the wickedness of making charges evolved out of his own imagination, and putting them forward as statements of fact. We know that all such charges are "imaginative," but the readers of such balderdash, and, presumably, the Editors who accept it for publication, are not in the same position. The most ridiculous rubbish will be believed by some people, and if it be repeated often enough, it will be accepted by a great many.

The accusations made were directed against a legitimate trade carried on in quite legitimate fashion by at least 99 per cent. of those who depend upon it for their living. That the horrible things outlined exist only in the imagination of those irresponsible people who make the accusations the Editor of the "Manchester Evening News" could have satisfied himself in a few minutes by taking a walk through Tib Street, in his own city. Here he would find bird shops, the conduct of which refutes in every possible way the nightmares of "S. A. W." and people of his kidney.

A Feminine Reply.

In the correspondence columns this week there appears a letter from the Editress of "Dainty Novels," in answer to my note of last week. After asking for the information as to the alleged blinding of Chaffinches, I answered the other portion of the letter as follows:—

> In reply to the latter portion of your letter, I have had personal experience of cage-bird keeping such as falls to a very few people indeed, and this extends over a period of some thirty years. After that experience I may say most emphatically that neither three-fourths nor one-hundredth part of the birds that are kept in cages die of starvation or thirst from neglect, or from the other causes you mention. As to the allegation that some caged birds meet a violent death through the attacks of the domestic cat, there can, of course, be no doubt that accidents of this sort do occasionally happen, and these are entirely unavoidable so long as people keep cats and birds in the same room. I think, however, that the birds that are so killed are very small in number in proportion to the hundreds of thousands which are kept in cages, and they certainly do not bear any comparison with the number of wild birds which suffer in nature a similar fate at the teeth and claws of the same animal.

Two Well-Behaved Cats.

I might have added that among the thousands of birds which I have kept at one time or another I have never had a death caused by a cat of my own. But I always kept the cat separately from the birds, excepting with one cat, which was so perfectly trained that we were able to shut it into the bird room at night to keep down the mice, with the full certainty that it would never touch a bird. That cat would wait at the bird-room door every night to be let in for the real business of its life. I had another which would keep watch over my garden aviary, and chase away any of its kind which ventured into the garden. These felines deserve to be immortalised for their virtues.

To my letter the Editress has replied as under. We can only wait for the information promised:—

> Dear Sir,—I am obliged for your letter of to-day's date, and am making enquiries with a view to getting the exact dates of the prosecutions I mentioned in my previous article. When I have done so, I will write again, and can assure you I will leave no stone unturned to prove that I had absolute authority for what I stated.

"Bird Specialist" or What?

A letter to the London "Daily Mail" of Saturday, May 17, throws a light upon the origin of the outrageous slanders upon birdkeeping to which evidence is so readily given by extra sentimental people, who are ready to believe anything which tallies with their one idea that cruelty is a necessary corollary of bird-keeping. A reader of the "Daily Mail" sends to that paper an account of a pet Starling, which had as a young bird been rescued from the jaws of a cat. The letter concludes with the statement: "We were told by a bird specialist that if his tongue were slit the bird would talk, but we refused to have such a cruel thing done, and he certainly talks very well without it."

I shall be quite prepared to see it put forward by and by as a plain statement of fact that the slitting of Starling's tongues is advised by bird specialists as a means of improving their talking powers. Of course, no bird specialist would advance any such method, but it will be sufficient at some future time that someone said that a "bird specialist" did advise it, and it will be taken as gospel truth that the practice is quite a common one among bird-keepers. Many of the atrocities laid at the door of bird-keepers have had a similar foundation for their building up. I have written to the writer of the letter in question asking to be favoured with the name of the so-called "bird specialist."

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same

Lorriman.—A. Lorriman, Hon. Sec.

HUNSLET.

A grand Skylark singing contest took place at Red House, Hunslet, May 10th, there being a very good muster of birds; the singing was splendid. Mr. Cawood's bird, "Skylark," sang the allotted time, 10 minutes; this bird is a splendid songster, gaining first prize. Then came Mr. Wilson's "Capt. Scott," singing 8 minutes in round and 9¾ in time, a most consistent singer this season. Mr. Cadman's "Dan" (Castleford) was next with 4½ in round and 9¼ time; he has gained a few firsts this year; also "Bell Isle" gained a prize for Mr. Parks, an old vet., 76 years old, and very interested in Skylark singing yet. On Whit Monday we held our jubilee at Wellington Hotel, Hunslet. This being our big sing of the season, we had a splendid entrance, in which we had birds from Lancashire, and we had a large crowd to hear them. Mr. Toothill, of Red House, won, doing 7½ round, 9½ time; this good bird can be heard any time, at home, always singing to a good company; 2nd, Mr. Cadman's "Dan," 5¾ in round, 9 in time; 3, Mr. Cawood, 6 in round 8¾ in time; 4, Mr. Stead's "Stump," 5 in round, 8½ in time, a most promising youngster and a very good talent singer; 5, "Darky," also a young bird, 5¾ in round, 8 in time, very good for his first time out. "Cigar" and "Capt." were next, doing over 8 minutes in time. After the contest we had a very jovial evening. Mr. Cawood entertained us with his English concertina; Mr. Earnshaw accompanied him on piano. On May 10 a contest took place at Belmont Hotel. Skylark singing was extraordinary, Mr. Wilson's "Capt. Scott" singing the full ten minutes; also Mr. Park's "Bell Isle" sang the ten minutes; then came Mr. Toothill's "Come on a bit," 7½ round and 9¾ time; Mr. Cadman's "Dan," 7 round, 9½ time. Our old friend, Mr. Atkinson, the old pigeon racer, was most delighted, promising to give a gold medal to best bird on a later date. Hosts, Mr. Wallbank and Mr. Toothill, were highly delighted with our contests.—E. Dodsworth, Sec.

[Kindly oblige by condensing reports as much as possible, and please write on one side only of each sheet of paper used.—Ed.]

I thank you for the reproduction of my pet Yorkshire cock on front page of your last issue. It certainly does your clever artist, Mr. Norman, great credit. I may say the bird has been in the money each time shown, but never looked better than at the last Windsor Show.—A. Turner, Windsor.

Societies wishing for the patronage of the Northern Border and S.F.C.C. should apply at once to Mr. M. C. Potts, 52, Falmouth Rd., Newcastle-on-Tyne. The classification required is as follows:—Clear or ticked yellow cock, ditto buff, marked cock or hen, clear or ticked hen, Green or Cinnamon Yellow cock, ditto Buff, Green, or Cinnamon hen, novice cock, novice hen.

The coloured plate in the May issue of "The Avicultural Magazine," the organ of the Avicultural Society, is from a painting by Mr. Goodchild, portraying a pair of Blue Niltavas, the cock bird being drawn from the unique specimen lately belonging to Mr. H. D. Astley, who contributes an article on the species. Mr. Astley writes also of the Pied Chat or Wheatear, and contributes a chapter "Hints about Aviaries." Other articles are on birds in Chile by Mr. F. E. Blaauw, "The Endurance of Wild Ducks" Miss I. Dorrien Smith, "For Love of Birds" Mrs. K. Currey, "Notes on the Mild Winter and the Birds" Mr. P. F. M. Galloway, and "Bird Notes from the Zoo" Mr. D. Seth Smith. A very interesting number.

Mr. F. L. Gibbs, secretary, writes that the Ilfracombe F.A. will hold an open show on November 13th.

We hear that Borth (Cardigan) Show will be held on August 5. Mr. J. O. Williams will judge cage birds.

Mr. H. W. Battye will judge our open show on Nov. 15, writes Mr. H. Mathers, sec., Selby and Dist. C.B.S.

"Estimates": A diverting competition for advertisers. See announcement this week under "Exchange Miscellaneous" advertisements.

Mr. T. H. Inmar hon. sec, 43, Derby Rd., Bradford, would like all societies wishing for patronage of the Yorks. and Lancs. British Bird and Mule Club to apply at once.

Mr. J. N. Jeffrey, hon. sec., Torbay O.S., writes that the Torbay O.S. ramble will be to Dittisham on the Dart, June 4, and that the first Feather Show will be held June 24.

We hear from Mr. A. Thomson, sec. Larkhall C.B.A., that the judges for the Annual Club Show, Oct. 25, will be Mr. Wm. Haddow, Hamilton, Canaries; Mr. R. V. Raine, Cathcart, British.

We are in receipt of a very nice sample of marking rings from the British Aluminoid Co., of Hanworth (see advt.). These are of the open kind, extremely light and excellently made, while, of course, being very easy to apply.

Our Young Bird show takes place June 14, writes Mr. E. Jaycott, hon. sec., Crewe, O.S., and there promises to be very keen competition for the valuable cup P. V. Williams, Esq., Hinstock Hall, has given to our society. Cage Birds Annual for 1913 is par excellence.

We have decided to hold our next annual show on November 19, writes Mr. F. Thomas, sec. Ramsgate C.B.S. Mr. Geo. Gardner will judge. We hope our brother fanciers will support us as many did last year. It will be an open show, so we shall be looking forward to a bumping entry.

I should be pleased, writes Mr. W. H. Blythe, Bacup, if you would announce that I am retiring from the Fancy, owing to having made arrangements to work in Manchester during the summer. This would prevent some of my friends being disappointed when visiting.

Will members and friends of the Bradford East O.S., writes Mr. Horatio Hill, sec., who desire to join the deputation arranged by J. T. Windle, Esq., president of the Horton Green Men's meeting, to Esholt and the Bradford Sewage Works, kindly meet in Foster Square at 2.30 prompt, May 24, by the terminus for the Idle Car? The party will be conducted by Alderman Richard Johnson. Mr. H. Hill extends this invitation on Mr. Windle's behalf.

We have on many previous occasions referred to the remarkably extensive business built up by Mr. W. Rudd, the great bird specialist, of Norwich, and received bulky bundles of testimonials from him conveying the thanks of delighted clients with his birds, his goods, and his business methods. This week, however, Mr. Rudd has surpassed all records by forwarding a huge batch of 475 testimonials received by him, the postmarks showing that they cover a period of not quite three months past: further, they do not include the numerous testimonials published in his advertisements, nor those received on picture postcards (which he gives to a collector) nor those received from abroad. Such a marvellous collection of unsolicited testimony reflects the greatest credit on Mr. Rudd and his methods.

To Society Secretaries, Advertisers and Correspondents generally.

Will all correspondents, and secretaries and officials of societies in particular, please note that CAGE BIRDS now goes to press on Wednesday afternoon so that all matter for publication in our issue of the same week MUST reach us on TUESDAY TO BE CERTAIN OF INCLUSION, or first post Wednesday at latest.

It would much facilitate our work if Secretaries and others would kindly write out their club reports, notices, etc., in the style in which they see them printed. Write on ONE SIDE ONLY of each sheet of paper used.

Mr. F. Handley, hon. sec., 23, Coventry Rd., Wavertree, Liverpool, asks that secretaries desiring patronage in champion section of Green Canary Association apply as soon as possible. Those secretaries who have not received particulars, etc., of novice classes within about a twenty mile radius of Liverpool, please notify.

Unfertile Eggs at Bournemouth.

Our members complain very much of many unfertile eggs in the first round, writes Mr. J. A. Crawshaw, hon. sec. Bournemouth C.B.A., and are wondering how it can be accounted for. I wish still greater success to your splendid paper Cage Birds.

Robin's Nest in School.

A Robin is interesting the scholars of Brabourne School, in Kent. It has built its nest upon some books in a school cupboard, which is used every day. One boy's seat is just below, and his head is not more than 4ft. from the nest during school hours. The eggs have hatched, and the Robins are bringing the young worms, caterpillars, and bumble bees, among other animal food.

A Labour of Love.

Hard indeed must a pair of wild birds work to keep their every hungry nestlings supplied with food. From dawn to dark it is one continuous labour. When the glow of the setting sun has faded from the west and soft blue shadows gather in the land-scape, the little workers snatch a few brief hours of sleep before the first glimmer in the east shall rouse once more their hungry brood.

Fatal Search for Birds' Eggs.

Mr. G. R. Wade, an engineer, was recently killed by falling over the cliffs on Ramsey Island. He was a native of Newport, Mon., and rowed with some friends from Portstinian lifeboat station to the island in the afternoon. With a friend named Deane he started to search for birds' eggs along the cliffs, and, despite advice, Mr. Wade ventured down the dangerous cliff to secure a Shag's nest. Mr. Wade slipped, and fell on to a ledge of rock below, where he was probably instantly killed. The body bounded on to another rock, and thence into the water. Later it was cast up on the beach.

A Young Hen's Great Record.

I got quite a surprise, on opening my Cage Birds this week, to see my ticked buff hen depicted therein, writes Mr. W. Grewar. She was bred in 1912, and won the following prizes last season: 1st Lochgelly, cup best young Norwich, members' cup and gold medal for best young bird in show, S.P.C. medal and spl. for best Norwich, 3rd City of Glasgow, 2nd Brechin, 1st and medal Forfar, 1st Cowdenbeath, 3rd Glasgow and dist., 2nd Musselburgh, 1st and S.P.C. gold medal Aberdeen, and 1st Scottish National. I notice that there is a mistake in the name of town, as I have now been in Lochgelly close on eighteen months. I thank you for your delightful portrayal.

A New Carrying Case.

There should be a big future for the vulcanised fibre carrying case, for show, etc., cages, made by Messrs. Baron, of Bacup. We recently inspected a sample case for two Roller cages, and our opinion is that so far as weight, durability and neatness are concerned, Messrs. Baron's production is just the thing. This sample is of remarkable lightness and exceeding neatness. Weighing only 2¾lbs., yet the material of which it is made is very tough, and calculated to stand any amount of rough usage, without even cracking. Brass bound, and fitted with strong straps and handle, and with a natty arrangement for fixing the address card. The case seemed to us in appearance and utility all that the exhibitor could wish for. There is no time unsuitable for consideration of a good thing, so we would advise all exhibitors to turn to Messrs. Baron's announcement under "Appliances," and to write for a quotation. Their vulcanised fibre cases have come to stay.

The Patronage of Specialist Clubs.

Societies desiring the patronage of the specialist clubs at their 1913 shows should apply as follows, stating classification given, and judges appointed: National Green Marked Y.C.S., Mr. J. Chambers, 22, St. Anne's Mount, Burley Hill, Leeds; National British Bird and Mule Club, Mr. J. P. Carr, 45, Overdale Road, S. Ealing, W.; Southern Norwich P.C., Mr. F. S. Matthes, 34, Rotherhithe New Rd., S.E.; Northern Yorks C.C., Mr. R. Tindale, 141, Stanton St., Newcastle-on-Tyne; Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C., Mr. R. Garnett, 8, Leeds Rd., Windhill, Shipley; Green C.A., F. Handley, 23, Coventry Rd., Wavertree, Liverpool; Yorks and Lancs. Brit. B. and M.C., T. H. Inman, 43, Derby Rd., Thornbury, Bradford; Yorkshire C.C., J. Greaves, 279, Hollings Rd., Bradford (closing date May 24); Northern Counties Plainhead Club, Mr. W. Curry, 60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle; Cinnamon C.C., Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, 63, Brunswick Rd., Liverpool. Northern Border and S.F.C.C., Mr. M. C. Potts 52, Falmouth Rd., Newcastle-on-Tyne.

The Common Bunting.

The Common or Corn Bunting is the largest of the family. The second name is easily understood, for this bird loves the edges of cornfields, but why did it get its name of the Common Bunting? It is not nearly so common as the yellow bird, and the writer has never yet found a place where the bird is really common, although such a spot may exist.

A Beginner's Success.

I began Canary breeding last year, writes Mr. H. St. John Rumsey (Uckfield), when I had two pairs and bred fourteen birds. This year I have eight hens and six cocks, and I have 28 young birds already doing well, out of 37 eggs laid. I may mention that two others were hatched and died. As a constant reader of your valuable paper, I venture to write this, as it may encourage other beginners.

Too Much of a Good Thing!

There are many places in England, says a "Times" Paris writer, where Nightingales are numerous enough, but none where for miles together the air so continuously shrills to their music as on the banks of the Seine.

Talk not to me about the Seine
  Where Nightingales do congregate
Till river bank and leafy lane
  Are in a quite congested state,
And each sweet songster small and brown
Attempts to sing his fellows down.

Give me my rural home where I
  May hear a solo rare and sweet
Ascending to the midnight sky,
  Just as Caruso's strains might greet
My ears and set my heart aglow,
But thousands of Carusos!
No!

Wild-Bird Life.

About Linnets.

It has been stated by several writers that the Greenfinch is the commonest of our British Finches, but one is inclined to think that the popular Linnet runs it closely for this position. Although the Greenbird frequents and builds in the same fields and hedgerows as the little brown bird, it is what one might call more a bird of semi-domestication, often nesting in our gardens, hedges, and bushes, near buildings, and therefore more frequently coming under observation. Linnets love the open fields and the breezy common, nesting among the furze and heather, and the quickset hedges adjoining. So plentiful are they in some districts that almost every bush contains a home of these little songsters, and although all wild birds' nests are good to look upon, and to admire for their architecture, the home of the Linnet has a delicate beauty quite unlike that of any other bird. Here is as near as words can give it a description of one seen upon the downs, snugly ensconsed in a furze bush. Externally a few sprigs of tough heather, a little moss, and some grass stems, also a trace of sheep's wool; the cup beautifully rounded, and neatly finished with hair, vegetable down, and a few feathers. In this snug home were deposited four pale bluish-green eggs, spotted and freckled with reddish-brown, the whole making a most delightful picture of chaste colour and beauty.

THE LINNET.

Upon carefully watching the Linnets all around, one could see here and there birds much more backward than others, both in actions and depth of colouring; one pair came within two or three yards of the writer, and proceeded to feed each other in the usual Finch fashion. These two birds were both very dull in colour, the cock showing scarcely a trace of crimson, so unlike another seen later, whose breast colour was almost so gorgeous, as to be hardly recognisable to the uninitiated as the singing Brown Linnet of the winter. In building their home, both cock and hen work at the structure, collecting and placing the materials, although the hen appears to finish the interior.

ACCIDENTS IN THE BIRD ROOM.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

How to Prevent them; and How to Deal with them if they arise; with a few words on Parasites and their extermination.

THAT accidents may happen anywhere or everywhere when least expected, is a trite truism. In a well-ordered bird room or aviary, however, they should be few and far between and present but little variety. Probably the most serious likely to arise are broken legs and wings. With careful attention to the beaks and claws to prevent them becoming overgrown, and the latter impeding movement, and seeing that all perches are of a convenient size for the bird using them, fixed securely and well-placed, and that all other cage fittings are likewise well-fitting and properly placed, the more serious accidents should be avoided altogether. Loose jagged ends of binding wires, bent and projecting ends of the loop wires for water-vessels, etc., and unstable, wobbly perches, in combination with long, hook-like, overgrown claws, are fertile causes of more or less serious accidents. Many a fractured limb or sprained joint (though in such a small creature as a cage-bird it would doubtless be more correct to term it a wrench) may be clearly traced to these causes. To take in alphabetical order the chief troubles we will deal with.

Distressing, but Fortunately Uncommon.

Anal Prolapse.—This is more in the nature of an accident than a disease. It occurs chiefly amongst weakly hens, and is often brought about by violent efforts to expel a shell-less or abnormally large egg, but may also be induced by any condition of the bowels causing excessive straining. The one unmistakable symptom is the protrusion of a portion of the intestine from the vent. Remedial measures are rarely of any permanent benefit, as the condition frequently recurs, time after time, in an aggravated form, and ultimately proves fatal.

If the bird appears fairly bright and lively, catch it and bathe the protruding part in a cold astringent solution; then gently "coax" it back into place (a blunt bone pen-holder, or the blunt end of a bone knitting-needle, is a useful implement; smear it with carbolised vaseline) and insert a tiny pellet of gall ointment. Repeat the operation if a relapse occurs. Cage the bird alone, and regulate diet and green food supply, so that the bowels are kept in a free condition—free from any strain in evacuating. One of the very best solutions for the bathing is made by mixing a teaspoonful of extract of wych hazel in a teacupful of water. If this is not handy, a solution of common alum, or even strong cold tea, will answer the purpose tolerably well.

Beak.—The mandibles sometimes get more or less broken from various causes. Whether nature will repair the damage depends upon its position and extent, and somewhat upon the health and vigour of the bird. If the cause of the damage exists in the cage it should be discovered and removed. Painting on the damaged portion a little of the strong extract of wych hazel is excellent, and ensures it being in the best condition for natural repair, if such is likely to take place. Failing this it may be painted once with Friar's Balsam. If the use of the beak is impaired for feeding, the bird should be caged alone and given sufficient soft food to prevent starvation until the beak is again strong enough to perform its proper functions.

When the beak gets overgrown at the tip, the excessive growth should be nipped off with a pair of sharp nail scissors. It is a very simple operation, and one can scarcely go wrong with any hard-billed bird having mandibles of practically equal length. With such birds as Parrots, however, it is necessary to be careful not to shorten them beyond a normal length, and to avoid cutting right back to the "quick." It will be judicious to swathe the latter bird in a towel before operating. Giving the Parrot tribe a good supply of wood to cut up, and other species a piece of cuttle fish, or piece of old mortar, or a cube of sugar, in the wire will help to prevent the beaks getting an abnormal length.

Some Cases of Breakage.

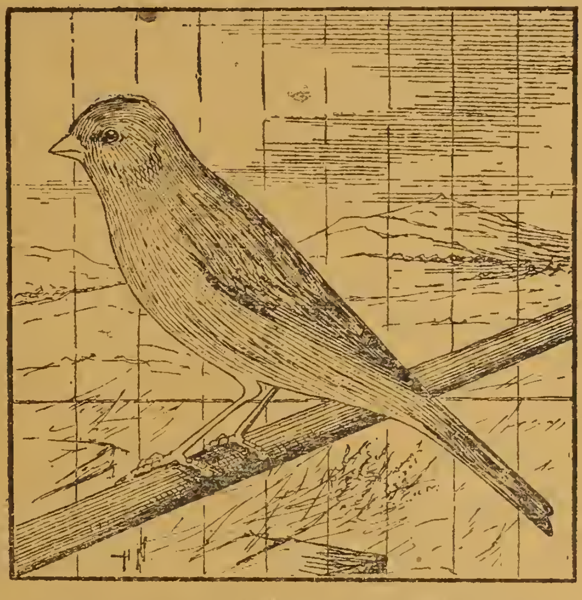
Broken Feathers.—Broken tail and flight feathers are always a disfigurement, more or less, and, with birds flying loose in aviaries or large flights, seriously hamper them. If near the moulting season, the damaged feathers may be left for nature to replace in the ordinary course. In other cases it is best to allow time for the stumps to dry a little, and then carefully extract them one by one, when new feathers will quickly replace them.

Broken Leg.—Fractured legs are not uncommon. In the great majority of cases the negative treatment of leaving them severely alone is by far the best. If the break is high up, in the fleshy part (the so-called thigh) this method should be invariably adopted. When it occurs in the lower part, or shin, it affords opportunity for a display of amateur surgery, but as this is frequently a failure, it may be better when the fracture is extensive, to either chloroform the bird or get a veterinary surgeon to amputate or otherwise deal with the limb.

In attempting to "set" a leg, a suitable sized quill makes an excellent splint. It should be cut to a proper length, slit open, and trimmed to make it fold nicely round the shin. Place the edges of the bones neatly together, pad the leg with a little cotton wool, put on the quill, and bind it firmly but not too tightly with fine thread. Leave splint undisturbed for three or four weeks, so that a firm union be made before attempting to remove it. In all cases keep the bird in a moderate-sized cage, in a quiet place; place perches low down, and keep food and water within quite easy reach of the bird. In all cases it is imperative to act promptly.

Broken Wing.—In no case whatever do I advise amateur attempts to "set" a fractured wing. It is sometimes believed possible to assist matters by binding an injured wing in a natural position against the body, but this does not by any means insure the fractured ends of bone being brought together in the proper position, and the risk of the bird pulling the bandage out of position is very great.

The only rational treatment for a broken wing is to leave it severely alone, and place the bird in a moderate-sized cage, with low perches arranged in a most convenient position, and place food and water where the bird can get at them with the least possible effort. Then keep the bird in a very quiet place, and throw a light cover over the front of the cage for the first fortnight. The object is to keep the bird as quiet and still as possible until nature has repaired the damage in her own way. Keep bird so until it begins to move, and preen its wing. Watch the droppings during this method of treatment, and if they show that the bird is getting constipated, give a little extra green-food.



A NOTED CINNAMON BORDER FANCY.

This bird is one of the well-known winning team of Cinnamon and Green Border Fancy Canaries, owned by Mr. W. S. Wilson, of Hamilton, N.B., and secured a 1st prize at the Crystal Palace Show.

Bruises.—Any serious bruises, or bleeding wounds, that occur from fighting, or wild fluttering about, should be painted once or twice with Friar's Balsam. If serious abrasions occur, bathe them once or twice on consecutive days with a diluted solution of wych hazel extract and anoint afterwards with lanocyllin or boracic ointment.

Claws.—Properly speaking, these are the toe-nails, and not the toes themselves, as they are often misunderstood to be. When the claws become overgrown and very long, they should be trimmed back to a normal length with a small pair of nail, or embroidery scissors. Wash the feet clean, and hold the claws up to a strong light, when (more particularly in the case of Canaries) it can be seen how far the vein extends down the centre of the claw. Cut a little outside the end of this vein. Should a claw be cut too short, and bleeding occurs, touch it with Friar's Balsam; if this does not stop the bleeding, touch the point of the claw with a red hot knitting needle to slightly sear the claw. With ordinary care, however, neither bleeding nor the slightest pain or inconvenience will be caused.

A Breeding Season Trouble.

Dislocation.—A dislocation is a forcible displacement of a joint. Such is probably very rare in birds, but more likely to occur in the feet or legs than elsewhere. The displaced joint would almost, or quite, invariably be self-apparent and unmistakable. The only remedy is to replace the joint in proper position by manipulation, and as this is a job requiring some skill and knowledge of the anatomy of the part it should be placed in the hands of a veterinary.

Egg-Binding.—This distressing trouble can scarcely be termed a "disease," and as it is not infrequently due to some accident of weather it may well be included here. The usual remedy of relaxing the parts by steaming is very useful, and frequently all that is required. Get a jug with a narrow top half-filled with hot water, a little olive oil which has been just warmed, and a tiny camel-hair pencil brush, or a flight (wing) or tail feather. Some prefer these latter to the camel-hair brush, as being less liable to cause accident by breaking the egg. Hold the bird for about three minutes with the vent over the neck of the jug, then dip the brush into the oil, insert it gently into the vent, turning it carefully round so as to well lubricate same. The moist steam and the oil usually bring about the desired result a few minutes after the hen is returned to her cage; indeed, sometimes the egg will be dropped into the jug, unless one has taken the precaution to tie a piece of gauze or fine muslin loosely over it. Handle the hen very carefully. The remedy of giving a drop of castor oil in the beak is harmful. What is required internally is a stimulant and not a purgative. Inwardly a few drops of equal parts of gin and water will be the best treatment.

An "Old Hand's" Remedy.

An old fancier, writing in Cage Birds concerning egg-binding, said: "It is a thing that I have not experienced for seven years. I have not had a single hen go egg-bound by giving them this simple treatment. In the first place, about two or three weeks before I put my birds together, I give them egg food, mixing with one egg and the usual biscuit one teaspoonful of tasteless cod-liver oil. I give Parrish's chemical food twice a week, also a little niger seed. When the hen begins to build her nest I put about six drops to eight drops of gin and glycerine in the drinking water every morning until the hen lays, which should be after three or four days. Mix the gin and glycerine in equal parts." This, of course, need only be followed out with the first nests, or in case of unfavourable weather during the early part of the season.

Fractures.—See under "Broken Leg" and "Broken Wing."

Lice.—When birds get in a low condition of health and suffer from great weakness, they are often troubled with these pests, which worry them considerably and increase their ill-health. These are not the well known red mites, but grey-coloured lice, which live constantly on the bird, and cause great irritation by gnawing the skin on which they subsist. The best method to exterminate them is to wash the bird as though preparing it for exhibition, adding some creolin—a teaspoonful to each pint of water—to the first two basins; or, better still, sulphuretted potash to the last rinsing water—about a teaspoonful to a pint. Repeat the process once or twice at intervals of four or five days. Of course, if one is not a very skilful washer, he should procure the aid of a fancier friend. The cage should also be well washed at the same time with insecticide.

SOME ADVICE FOR FOREIGN BIRD KEEPERS.

By A. W. TIMMS (Henley).

EXPERIENCES with foreign birds start the moment you leave the bird dealer's shop with your box or boxes of tricks, for that foreign birds are tricky, there is no doubt. It is in acclimatising these beautiful birds that annoyance and disappointment are brought to many would-be foreign bird fanciers, and if my humble attempt should be the means of saving some good fancier from loss and disappointment with these beautiful little creatures I shall be well satisfied with my efforts.

I will tell you some of the things experience has taught me, and will start from the time of entering a foreign bird shop, to make a purchase. First, do not be in a hurry, but have a good look round for the particular kind you want, then pick out those which have keen sharp eyes, and make sure they are not showing any signs of disease.

Having gone so far, pick out the fattest, even if they are not in quite as good plumage as the rest, for I have found that they nearly all go back a little during the first week, and if they are in spare condition at the start there is always more risk of losing them. It frequently happens that some of the birds you want have been bathing, and are wet through, and if you take a bird out of the shop in that condition it will most probably get a chill and die.

Again, never get into a smoking compartment should you happen to have to travel by train home, and never turn them straight into the aviary, but keep them in a warm box cage for at least 24 hours. Mid day, I think, is the best time for putting them into the aviary, as this gives them time to find the food and drinking vessels, and settle in their new home.

Taught by Experience.

It is always advisable to bring back a little of the food they have been having to tide them over the critical time and whilst getting them on to your own particular diet. Once over the first week, a good bit of the danger is past, though, of course, care must be taken even after that. Many beginners are undecided which of many species to take up, which is not surprising, for they are all so beautiful and interesting. To such I advise the seeking of a little advice in the foreign bird query column of Cage Birds.

Experience has taught me to pay strict attention to the following items:—To avoid draughts, to keep them free from insects, to constantly change soiled drinking water, to be careful that their food is sweet and wholesome, with plenty of grit always before them, green food, and fruit, should of course always be supplied. I have found that for seedeaters, a good brand of foreign Finch mixture, besides the usual diet of canary and millet, is very helpful, whilst for insectivorous birds I have found nothing better than a mixture of the following:—Equal parts dried flies, ants' eggs, meat meal, scraped carrot, and ground sweet biscuit, with a few mealworms occasionally. By paying attention to their ways and habits, foreign bird keeping can be made a delightful hobby.

Summer Food Supply.

During the winter month's food for birds is always somewhat scarce, but then the seekers have grown into adults and have strength and power to find what they require. During the summer when young birds are leaving the homes of the parents, although lacking strength, they have no difficulty whatever in finding food. For the young Finches, wild seeds are scattered over the ground in millions. Insect life is sometimes quite too abundant, both in the air and upon the bare ground or among the growing herbage. Nor are the Hawks and Butcher birds without their provider; the young Kestrel can loaf around the corn fields or hedgerows with a certainty of finding a breakfast or supper of mice, and the Shrike's menu is so varied that he is able to change his diet daily.

"Aviaries, Bird Rooms & Cages."

Solves all problems of housing your birds. Our Hobby Week by Week.

Breeding Yellows from Two Buffs.

I SEE that Mr. T. Johnson, whose contributions I always peruse with interest—as I do those of other practical fanciers—doubts the possibility of producing a yellow Canary from the mating of two buffs, a possibility also questioned by Mr. J. Robson. I can assure Mr. Johnson, however, that Mr. Garner's contention that it is to be done is absolutely and unquestionably correct. Like Mr. Garner, I have also bred yellows from two buffs; and had I permission to introduce their names, I could mention two other breeders who to my own knowledge have done likewise. The secret (if it be reasonable to term it a "secret") lies in the mating of two buffs, which themselves have been bred from the mating of two yellows. Probably it is also a sine qua non that the strain (i.e., ancestors for several generations back) shall be full of yellow blood. The story of how I came to breed yellows from two buffs may not be without interest. In the process, too, I bred jonque Mules from buff Canary hens; a thing I had been told was impossible, and which I believed to be so, though puzzled to understand the why and the wherefore. I will look up my records and give the details in my next week's contribution.

Are we Really The First?

Last week I had something to say about a fresh variety of white Canary—to wit, the Crest. Reflecting upon the whole circumstances surrounding the introduction of this new breed—if I may so term it—the white Canary, I am irresistibly led to wonder whether we really are the first bird-keepers privileged to gaze upon this truly lovely and fascinating creature. In other words, is it not probable that in years gone by other keepers of Canaries found all whites amongst the birds they bred? Maybe they would think but little of them, or even consider them "unhealthy freaks," and in any case would let them "waste their sweetness on the desert air," and die and be forgotten. Just consider what has happened in the past five years—no fewer than four separate and distinct instances of the breeding of white Canaries have been put on record; one in Glasgow, two in London, and one in New Zealand. Surely it is very odd, to say the least of it, that we should have four separate pairs of Canaries in the short space of five years throw white plumaged young, yet not a single couple in the whole previous recorded history of the hobby which condescend to do so!

Easy when the Birds are Willing.

It is so easy, too, to breed white Canaries. The only (!) thing one needs do (I wish I could do it) is to find two birds of opposite sex filled with a determination that their young shall be garbed as others of their kind have never been before. What I wish to convey is that the introduction of the present-day white Canaries has come about in the most haphazard way imaginable. They are, of course, freaks; but the variation is such a marked one that it is possible to "fix" it—make of the white colour a heritable quality, i.e., one that may be transmitted from generation to generation. The white Crest and white Crestbreds to which I referred in my last contribution were bred from birds which were strangers to their owner. He had invested in three Crestbred cocks from a fancier in North London, and finding himself short of a Crested hen, he bought one from a fancier in the East of London. This hen and one of the trio of Crestbred cocks were the parents of the white young!

Whites Were the Limit!

I shall never forget the story this fancier told me; how I laughed! He has been a bird breeder for a long period—well into the teens of years—and keeps Norwich Plainheads as well as Crests; and keeps them very well, too, be it said. His "veracious history" ran something like this: "I've never had much luck with Crests (never bred anything worth looking at), and when the youngsters were feathering, I said to myself, 'what kind of perishers are these?—they're the limit, no blooming colour at all.' But after a bit I could see they were white, and I said to my old lady, 'I believe I've bred some white Canaries'—you see I'd read about them in CAGE BIRDS. She wouldn't credit it, so I fetched her in, and got out the nest, and my word, they did look pretty, lying in it like balls of snow!" Yet this fancier thought so little of them in reality that when the white bird with the black crest and even-marked (black) wings died—probably the only one of its kind ever produced—it's body was allowed to find its way into the dustbin. What an odd thing that two green-marked birds (one rather heavily-marked) should throw white young in this way!

A Problem of the Egg.

There are many interesting problems connected with eggs, and certain of these I hope to touch upon from time to time. A particularly interesting one at this season is: How long a period may elapse between the fertilising of an egg and its being laid? This question, be it noted, may have an important bearing upon some of the many cases of "Mules which are not Mules"—those aggravating creatures which the judges say are merely clear (or marked) Canaries, but which the owners vow cannot be anything else except Mules. I well remember Mr. H. Norman (CAGE BIRDS popular artist) telling me some two years ago of an experience he had had in his birdroom which he dared not relate to others, as he feared he should never be believed. A Border Fancy hen of his was rearing young. Before they were ready to fend for themselves she started to go to nest again. Her mate, however, was putting another hen to nest, and Mr. Norman did not return him, hoping that this would keep the hen with the young back a bit. But she commenced to lay in the old nest, then started to sit, all the time feeding her first brood. After about a week Mr. N. went to remove her eggs, and to his great astonishment discovered one of them to be fertile. This hen, mark you, had not had a cock bird with her for a period of about five weeks prior to the laying of these eggs—the act of copulation had taken place before or during the laying of her previous clutch of eggs. Now towards the end of last season a fancier Plymouth way had a letter in our correspondence columns relating a precisely similar experience. So it is quite clear—is it not?—that a hen mated for one round with a cock Canary might in the next round when mated with, say, a Goldfinch, lay an egg which had been previously fertilised by the Canary—hence a clear "Mule."

Little But Good.

At this season of the year, when the countryside and its feathered inhabitants appeal with special force to all who love birds, and the days of "country rambles" are upon us, a mention of a tiny book I lately met with may be welcome. It is not far removed from being the ideal little volume to pop into one's pocket when setting out to visit the birds at their own homes. As will be surmised, it is entitled "British Birds"; it will not be so readily guessed, however, that it costs but one solitary sixpence! Yet this is the case, for it is No. 110 of the fine series of "The People's Books," now being published at that price by Messrs. Jack, and obtainable at most bookshops and stalls. It is astonishing how much information the author has skilfully managed to compress into the 96 pages of this little guide; and although it is necessarily "potted information," it is yet not inadequate, while it is in every particular absolutely up-to-date, even to the ugly trinomial system of scientific nomenclature. Details are given of plumage, haunts, nests and eggs; and ofttimes other useful items. Lovers of our British birds in a state of nature should certainly get this handy little volume. The illustrations are its one drawback; some are excellent, but others are surprisingly crude and might well have been omitted. G. E. WESTON.

The Wall Creeper is a charming Continental relative of our own Tree Creeper, but very difficult to keep for any length of time in captivity. Specimens have on several occasions been on view at shows in London, exhibited by Mons. R. Pauwels and Mr. C. T. Maxwell.

The Cultivation of Wild Plants for Cage Birds.

By R. MORSE. (Hitchin).

THERE must certainly be many bird-keepers who have at least a small plot of ground which they would willingly devote to the cultivation of plants which are of proven worth in the bird-room and aviary. True, plants and seeds may be bought, or gathered wild, but to both of these ways of procuring the foods there are distinct disadvantages. Those bought in the shops are frequently unsatisfactory in many ways, which every breeder knows, whilst in large towns the gathering of wild plants and seeds is oft-times rendered almost impossible. The man who has a plot of wild plants at hand, from which may be gathered in a few moments fresh, clean specimens for consumption, has a distinct advantage over his neighbour who has to wait until the opportunity offers before he can take his walk abroad in search of food-stuffs. It was considerations such as these which led to the writing of the present article, the purpose of which is to describe suitable methods of rearing certain wild plants, some parts of which are in almost constant demand in the aviary.

Almost any spare piece of ground is suitable for the growth of at least a selection of useful wild plants, but before definitely deciding on the plot certain considerations are advisable. If the plant is to be reared solely for its seed, then in most cases a densely shaded spot—such as under fruit trees—would be quite unsuitable, for the plants would in all probably become weak and straggling, and under such circumstances few flowers would be produced and few seeds would ripen. If, therefore, nothing but a very shady spot is available, only such plants as are used in the green state (e.g., dandelion and chickweed) should in most cases be grown thereon. Those, however, who have at their disposal a plot of ground which receives a moderate amount of sunshine can easily grow practically all that will be required, though, generally speaking, the more open the spot the better the crops will be.

Intending cultivators of wild plants should be on their guard against richly manuring the soil in the hope of securing larger crops. In nine cases out of ten manure would most probably exercise a distinctly prejudicial effect, for many weeds when grown in a very rich soil produce large, coarse foliage, and comparatively few flowers and seeds; whilst in some cases the plants grow very rapidly, and then wither and die before attaining maturity. For general purposes nothing but common, every-day garden soil is necessary, and is indeed the best that can be had. The bed should be forked over, levelled, and then trodden down so as to be moderately firm. None but the very largest stones should be removed, for they are of great use in keeping the soil open, and ensuring proper drainage.

As regards the sowing of seeds, there are two methods in general use, each of which has its own advantages and disadvantages. Some growers prefer to make shallow drills with a hoe, and thus grow their plants in rows, whilst others merely scatter the seed broadcast over the plot, and then lightly rake the surface in order more or less to cover the seeds. In writing these notes it will be assumed that the former is the method chosen. Plants grown in rows are not so likely to be overcrowded; they are far more easily gathered, for any mature specimen can readily be reached without injuring the others by treading them under foot; and the seeds, being covered with soil, are not nearly so likely to be devoured by Sparrows and other pests of the garden.

Questions and Answers.

(For Rules see last week's "Cage Birds.")

Canaries.—Claude St. John. Mules and Hybrids—H. Norman. British Birds—H. J. Fulljames. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

A CRAMPED LEG (R.A.M.C.).—It is not very uncommon for a hen to be affected in the way you describe whilst sitting, and during the early stage of rearing the young, when they are, of course, sitting in the nest for a large proportion of the time. It is undoubtedly due to the cramped position of continuous close sitting which affects some hens much more than others. The trouble will pass off, and no treatment is necessary. When these hens begin to sit their next clutches, see that they have well-shaped and comfortable nests of proper size.

BEAK BITTEN OFF (Constant Reader).—It is a great mistake to return a cock that has been removed during incubation stage to a hen with chicks five days old, unless you are absolutely certain of his character and temperament, and that he is trustworthy with young chicks. Only time will prove whether the mandibles will grow again; but considering the extreme youth of the bird I should say they will do so, though the chick's ability to feed itself properly will undoubtedly be deferred a few weeks. If this is so, when it leaves the nest keep a supply of soft food and also seeds in cage in small rather deep vessels, into which the bird can thrust what beak it possesses far enough to get a grip on the food. This is, of course, assuming the mandibles are bitten off rather than "torn out" as you describe it. In the latter events I doubt the hen's ability to feed the chick, as you say she continues doing. The possibility of beak growing again naturally depends solely upon the extent of the injury.

INJURED LEG (Referee).—The bird's leg is broken and the only treatment of any use at all was to have placed a miniature splint, made out of a match stick, or the quill of a feather, upon it, after bringing the fractured bone into juxtaposition and padding carefully for the bird's comfort. This requires some deftness of fingers and skill to do properly. When this is done the bird should be kept in a moderate sized cage, with perches placed low, and seed and water as easily get-at-able as possible, and the bird kept perfectly quiet and undisturbed for a month, by which time a good union of the fracture should be made, and the splint may be removed. In your case the delay in treatment will probably have resulted in a "false joint," or even loss of foot by sloughing, by this time. If this has not occurred, you may still try above treatment, or, better still, get a vet. to attend to it. You should have given the eggs to another hen to hatch and rear. It was quite useless expecting this hen to complete the business in this condition.

NOT MATING (F.W.B.).—The fact that the hen only recently ceased dropping feathers is sufficient to account for hen not mating. You have really been losing much valuable time by trying to force the hen into breeding condition by high feeding instead of treating her to cure the moulting. Now the moulting has ceased naturally she will probably come into breeding condition in a short time, and only patience is really necessary now. Still, after so much high feeding it would be as well to treat as follows for a week: Give a staple diet of plain canary seed only. Every second day give a small teaspoonful of soaked or scalded rape, and each day two small dandelion leaves and a spray of chickweed or groundsel. Dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a small pea, in the water every second day. At the end of the week resume your usual feeding and add six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel to the water for a day or two.

JAUNDICED BORDER HEN (R.S., Hull).—See that the position occupied by hen is well ventilated and of comfortable, but not heated, temperature, and avoid cold draughts, extreme fluctuations, and fumes from burning lights in the evenings. Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of scalded summer rape. On the alternate days give a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained and sprinkled with maw seed. On the first occasion, only, slightly dust the bread and milk with flowers of sulphur before adding the maw seed. Give a fairly liberal supply of green food daily—either chickweed, flower heads of groundsel, or dandelion. Limit the diet solely to these items for a month. Do not give bath except in quite warm weather. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and afterwards give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. It is doubtful if hen will be fit to breed with this season.

A TRIO (Amateur).—(1) Yes, it is certainly time now that any healthy robust bird should be in good breeding condition, yet notwithstanding this general assertion, it is useless putting birds together unless they show some signs of desiring to nest. If the cock sings fairly well, even if his performances are limited to the early morning, and appears to feed and hob-nob with the hen during the day through the wires at bottom of partition, you may, if the hen is also active and responds promptly to his "calls," try mating them. You may also treat for a fortnight or so as advised to "Old Subscriber" last week. (2) Individualism may be, probably is, the sole cause of the cock singing only in the early morning. All male birds do not sing with the same freedom, but practically all do sing more in the morning than at any other time. Possibly you have the cage in such a position that it is brightened by the rays of the rising sun, which would go far to incite the bird to sing at that time. I suppose these birds are not "antiques?" (3) With a double-breeding cage your best method of running two hens with one cock is to keep a hen in each compartment of the breeder, with the wooden slide in position. Cage cock separately in small cage. When the first hen is ready to go to nest place the cock with her and let him remain until she has laid her third egg. Then remove him and run him with the other hen. When this hen has laid her eggs remove cock again, and cage him alone until hens are ready for the second rounds, when you repeat the same tactics. Both hens are left to hatch and rear their broods alone. Should both hens appear equally forward, run cock with each hen for one half of each day, changing him from one to the other at mid-day each day, and remove him whilst hens are sitting as before.

WHAT TO DO (J.M.).—Really, you can do nothing with the hen to make her sit—such creatures are not amenable to reason. It is more to the point to know what to do with the eggs. Your only plan is to place them under a hen or hens just commencing to incubate, or keep them a few days—not more than a week if it can be avoided—in a small box of bran, giving the box a half-turn morning and evening until you have a hen ready to start incubation, and add this hen's eggs to her own clutch. You might treat the hen for a fortnight, the same as advised to "Old Subscriber" last week to tone her up, but give chickweed instead of dandelion for green-food. When she is again going to nest add 20 drops of chemical food to the drinking water every second day, and also smash up a little old mortar, and strew on sand on cage floor. I take it you keep a piece of cuttlefish in cage. If not you must do so as long as hen is breeding. Keep a dummy egg in nest next time during period of laying.

EGG-EATING HEN (M. M. O.).—If a common hen of no particular value I should get rid of her—a strong whiff of chloroform is quite a humane method. If she is a valuable hen from which it is particularly desirable to breed, a specially constructed nest in which the eggs pass out of reach as soon as laid is the best method of saving the eggs, which should then be given to a more reliable hen to hatch and rear. Such a nest is illustrated in Part VII. of "Our Canaries," and the text relating to it is in Part VIII. Or you might try the effect of keeping two or three dummy eggs in the nest for a time and place one or two on the sand tray for the hen to peck at until she becomes disgusted with her failure to break them. It is said to cure some hens, but I cannot speak from experience.

MAIDEN FOSTERS (H .G. Mooney).—It is not at all unusual for a hen which has made a nest and taken to sitting in it constantly without laying any eggs to hatch a clutch of eggs of another hen and rear the chicks. Indeed, the practice of giving such a hen a clutch of common eggs to hatch and rear is a good one, and often tends to bring about a normal cycle of reproduction in the hen in future. Many hens which have never laid or made a nest have also been known to adopt a clutch of eggs or a brood of chicks and complete the upbringing of them. The usual course, however, in dealing with foster pairs is to mate up the hen and endeavour to get them going to nest in a normal manner on their own account at the same time as the hens whose young they are expected to assist in rearing. Their own eggs are sacrificed for the sake of those that are more valuable, or they may be given to the better-class hens to take their chance.

YOUNG BECOMING MOPY (Squatting).—You omit details as to how you are feeding the youngsters since their entire separation from parents, and I fancy the cause of the trouble lies there. Try the following dietary, and if there is not a great improvement in a week or so write again, and repeat particulars. Give an unlimited supply of canary in the seed hopper, and place a small teaspoonful of dry summer rape on top of it each morning. Give a teaspoonful of egg-food—two parts bread crumbs to one part egg—sprinkled with maw daily, and towards evening throw out any remnants of this and give a small teaspoonful of freshly cracked hemp. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand, and give a seedy spray of chickweed, dandelion, seed head, or small truss of flowerhead of groundsel every second day to find them occupation. Keep supplied with fresh pure water daily, and offer a bath in the morning on fine days. You may give a teaspoonful of soaked or scalded rape instead of the hemp, as a change, twice a week, and vary the egg-food by giving an equivalent quantity of bread and milk occasionally. If birds improve under this regime sufficiently, continue it for three weeks, then miss the egg-food for a day now and again; the hemp ditto; and gradually bring them on to same diet as the old birds.

ABNORMAL MOULTING (A.W.H.).—Surely the moulting, if such it can be termed, of young birds just turned a fortnight old, before they have even left the nest, must be accounted among the freaks of this freakish season. In all probability the phenomenon was due to a severe chill which the birds received about the same time as you noticed the cessation of feather growth, which seems to coincide with the recent spell of piercing east and north-east winds. Therefore it appears not unlikely that the young were exposed to more or less prolonged chills at that time which checked the growth of feathers by temporarily cutting off the blood supply from the quills—to use an understandable term—and when the equilibrium was restored a new crop of feathers was formed at the base of the old quills, so that the very immature first crop of quills could only be ejected when the second crop came to the surface; hence this very uncommon "moult." I should certainly describe the birds as "unflighted" this season, as the second feathers now growing will be to all intents and purposes nestling plumage, and will not attain adult proportions or quality.

YOUNG DYING (A. H.).—In not saying whether the hens cease feeding the young, or are desirous to begin nesting again at once, you omit the most important particulars. From the facts given I can only conclude that you probably start giving hemp too early, or give too much of it, with the result that the hens are brought into nesting condition again too soon. Try the following method, when I think you will find an improvement. Give only the staple seed diet whilst hens are sitting. When young are hatched give egg food as usual, but when they reach a week old begin to increase the biscuit food gradually, until it is twice the amount of the egg. Give a morsel of green food on the third day—chickweed, lettuce, flower heads of groundsel, or watercress, but not dandelion—and continue afterwards to give a fresh supply twice daily, morning and afternoon, in gradually increasing quantity. Begin giving hemp, cracked fresh daily, when young are six days old, not earlier, and give only a heaped teaspoonful daily for a brood of four to begin, gradually increasing to two or three times this quantity by the time young are ready to leave nest. When eight or nine days old give also a teaspoonful of soaked summer rape daily, but see that this does not become sour.

CANNIBALISM (Yorkie).—Yes, I have heard of quite a lot of hens nibbling and wounding their young, but, thank goodness, I have not yet been personally acquainted with such unnatural mothers. It is impossible to name the cause, which probably varies according to the temperament of the individual. It may be due to nervous excitement sometimes, and, doubtless, some cases are due to unwelcome interference on the part of the owner. Unless parasitic infestation is excessively bad, it is not likely to be a cause. In the case of your hen, which had also pecked her own breast and toes, I should think it just possible that a short stub of hay or thorny bit of moss protruded into the nest and slightly pricked the hen as she sat, and irritated her until this unnatural behaviour resulted. I have heard of hens being cured of the habit by giving a tiny piece of raw meat to peck at. A scrap of rind of boiled bacon fastened on end of perch would answer same purpose. It may be worth trying with this hen when next brood arrives.

THUNDER, OR WHAT? (A.M.J.)—Your experience is yet another example of purely circumstantial evidence in support of the harmful effect of thunder or vibration upon embryos. From your description I should say the embryos in your eggs were at the sixth day of incubation, which, curiously enough, coincides very closely with the thunderstorm. It would, however, require close examination by an expert in embryology to fix the exact stage with any degree of certainty. But assuming that death occurred at or about the time of thunderstorm, it would be necessary to know that the hen sat well through the disturbances before the vibration theory could be established. You say the hen was covered up, therefore, unless you looked particularly, you would not really know whether, in her alarm, the hen left the nest and passed an hour or two, or even the whole night, on the perch or floor, and consequently brought about the death of the embryo by chilling. I remember years ago a lady giving accounts of her success in breeding in close proximity to constant heavy artillery firing practice. We have lots of records of young broods being reared on railway coaches, and similar places, where the vibration is certainly far greater than any thunder clap. Still, it will be interesting to see what other readers have to say on the subject.

MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

MULE BREEDING (4-Compartment).—I gather from your letter that you have two hen Canaries feeding young ones by a cock Canary in the end compartment of your breeding cage. While they are doing so I think it would be advisable to let the cock Goldie have the two middle compartments to himself with just a wire division between him and the hens. The reason for doing so is that the hens should get thoroughly used to the Finch, but if they have all been flying together during the winter, as they should have done, this is hardly necessary. He could be placed in the compartment adjoining the hen whose young ones are the more forward of the two, and who will want to go to nest first. If you allow him to have access to both compartments, and he shows a decided preference for one hen, you will have to use a little judgment in your management, or he may refuse to mate with his other partner. It would be as well not to encourage your hens to go to nest by giving them building materials until the young are well out of hand. In the meantime, look after the Goldie; feed him well, giving plenty of wild food, so that he is in ripe condition when wanted. When the hens are fit (flapping their wings and calling) run the Goldie in. If both hens are ready at the same time, change him each evening from one to the other.

LINNET-GREENFINCH HYBRIDS (E. L. Wick, Newcastle).—Upon your postcard you have omitted one very important item, namely, your address (see rules), and I am not sure that I have read your signature aright. Perhaps you will kindly let us have these. The cross you intend to try for, Linnet-Greenfinch, is not particularly difficult, as the two birds selected appear to be as near akin as any of the Finches. They have been bred before. You have, I presume, both birds flying together, and they will do very well upon the following seed to get them up in condition: Equal parts canary, rape, and teazle, half a part good linseed, occasionally a little maw, niger, hemp, and sunflower, and if you can get a good wild seed mixture by way of a change, it will be good for them. Let them have green food, flowering groundsel, chickweed, ripe dandelion heads, and shepherds purse, which are easily obtainable just now. The three feet breeding cage you mention would do admirably. Try them with an ordinary wooden nest box at one end, and a wickerwork German Canary cage, with the interior knocked out, at the other. Be liberal with your supply of building materials; old Greenfinch nests would do capitally if you could obtain them. You should have no difficulty in telling the sex of a Greenfinch at this time of the year. Cocks are rich and bright in colour, showing brilliant yellow wing bars, and on the butts, and in the tail; the hen is quite dowdy compared with the cock. A cock should be in full song now. I presume you have hen Canaries to put the eggs under, as although a Greenfinch hen will occasionally incubate, there is no certainty about her doing so.

Answered by H. J. FULLJAMES.

IDENTITY OF BIRD'S NEST (D.P.).—I think there is little doubt that the nest built in the furze bush is that of a Linnet. A Linnet's nest is built of moss, grass and fibres, and is lined with hair, wool, etc. The eggs are small, and greenish-white in colour, marked with reddish streaks or red-brown spots. The nest and the eggs, therefore, coincide closely with your description. Further, a furze bush is a favourite spot with the Linnet for nesting. The eggs of the Greenfinch are very similar in markings and coloration to those of the Linnet, but the nest is a more untidy affair, and is built generally in a high hedge. Moreover, the Linnet approaches nearly to the description you give after what little you have seen of the birds. You would scarcely say that the birds looked something like a Chiff Chaff if they were Greenfinches. They cannot be Chiff Chaffs. Chiff Chaffs do not build in gorse bushes about four feet from the ground, which you say is the position of the nest about which you enquire, nor are their nests built of "roots outside, lined with coarse, light-brown hair." The nest of the Chiff Chaff is built fairly close to the ground, and leaves are generally used in its construction. It is lined with feathers, not with hair. (2) The Linnet is quite a desirable cage bird, in fact, there are many hundreds of fanciers who keep nothing else. The hand-rearing is not a difficult matter, and you will find full particulars of hand-rearing all kinds of British birds in our issues of April 26 and May 10. As a singer, however, a wild caught bird is more likely to prove a success than a hand-reared specimen, and you will be able to buy cocks cheaply enough in the autumn.

THRUSH IN BAD PLUMAGE (Storekeeper).—It is your feeding which is at fault. A Thrush cannot be expected to thrive upon "pea-meal mixed with honey and a little lard." Get some good dog biscuit or poultry meal (without grit). Scald a sufficiency for one day's food and mix with it some good ants' cocoons, dried flies, and meatmeal. When made the food should be "crumbly" moist. Supply also mealworms, small earth worms, gentles, snails, and any live insects you can find. Get our Nutshell No. 26 (The Larger Insectivorous Birds) 2½d. post free from our manager.

A MIXTURE (Avie).—The Shama is the only one of the list you name which would be positively murderous with the small insectivorous British. The Pekin Nightingale would be somewhat too boisterous, and, besides, would do too well upon the high-class food necessary for the others. More than one cock Wagtail kept together would most likely cause trouble. One Wagtail might do all right, but would need watching. Moreover, it would be necessary to have two or three receptacles for food, for a Wagtail will often take possession of a food vessel and starve the remaining occupants of the aviary. All the others mentioned could be kept together with safety. A piece of virgin cork or an old tree stump would be appreciated by the Nuthatch, and the Tits should be provided with a snug sleeping place, the smaller the better so long as there is room for them to get inside. If your sleeping quarters are well lighted, so as to form a shelter for the birds in bad weather, and if they are free from damp and draughts the birds would do well outside all the year round. Otherwise, it would be necessary to take them inside for the winter.

ABOUT A HAWFINCH (E. Baker Morgan). Give a stock food at present consisting of sunflower two parts, hemp seed one part, rape half a part, and canary half a part. Later in the season add some linseed to this. Linseed will help considerably to put a gloss on his new plumage when moulting time comes. Offer the bird any kind of fruit and berries as they come into season, garden peas, insects of any kind, smooth caterpillars, and small mealworms. In the autumn beech mast will be available, and nothing is better at that period of the year. See that his cage is a roomy one and kept scrupulously clean. Afford the bird a bath of a size to suit his bulk—a Blackbird's bath will not be too large. Remember that a Hawfinch will not do well without insect food of some kind, and if you cannot provide live insects for your bird, you must give him mealworms or gentles.

should consult Norman's British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

IDENTITY OF BIRD (Burton Stather).—You give very little data to go upon, but from the little you say I am inclined to think that the birds are Grasshopper Warblers. The Grasshopper Warbler runs about among long grass like a mouse, and its "song" is a continual "clicking," which might meet the description "like the freewheel of a bike," as you call it. It is a greyish brown bird with darker markings, and its tail feathers are unlike those of any other of the Warblers, the centre ones being considerably longer than those toward the outsides. If you can get to see this in the birds you mention, you may be sure of them being Grasshopper Warblers.

QUARRELSOME FINCHES (W. F. D.).—In a mixed collection of Finches there are certain to be occasional "ructions," especially during the breeding season. To introduce hens would only make matters worse. If you were to do as you say, and turn in two hen Chaffinches for the two cocks, it is more than probable that the cocks would both take a fancy for the same lady, and serious trouble would ensue. Besides this, some of the other Finches and Buntings might feel themselves slighted, and would take a hand in the game, and a general melee might result. Hens are better kept out of a mixed collection of birds unless the aviary is a very large one (or the number of birds very small) and unless there are enough hens to go round. You give no particulars as to the size of your aviary and the number of birds in your collection of Finches and Buntings; you are not likely to be successful in breeding when a number of different species are kept together. Even if you were to get as far as nests and eggs, these would be most likely interfered with by those birds which had none of their own. Java Sparrows generally cause trouble sooner or later if kept in a mixed collection although most British Finches could take their own part. If you have a fancy for breeding you should pair up your Java Sparrows in a roomy cage, and they would most probably rear young. White millet, canary and paddy rice should form their staple food. They do not require the seeds which are necessary for British Finches. The matter to which you refer is in abeyance, and may probably be held over altogether.

YOUNG GOLDFINCHES (A. Price).—At ten days old is the best time to take the young. They are then easy to hand rear as follows: Pass some hard-boiled egg (white and yolk together) through a sieve, or beat it up with a fork, add twice as much powdered sweet biscuit and make "sloppy" moist with hot boiled milk. At first give this every two hours, widening the interval as the birds get older; any small insects, house-flies, etc., should also be given; failing these, very small mealworms or well-scoured gentles. After about a week make the food less moist, and add to it some chopped greenstuff, lettuce, chickweed, or flowering heads of groundsel, etc., giving at this time a drop or two of water between each meal. A blunted toothpick makes a good instrument with which to administer the food. As soon as they are able to feed themselves, supply them with cracked seed—hemp, canary, etc., with dandelion heads, shepherd's purse, thistle, and any wild seed you can gather, and at this time offer them some best quality ants' eggs which have been steamed. You will find full instructions as to the proper keeping and feeding of Goldfinches in our Nutshell No. 1 (post free 2½d. from our office). You would not be likely to succeed if you caught the old birds, for it is not to be expected that fresh-caught birds would feed young. Hen Canaries are not to be depended upon as fostermothers for Goldfinches, as they would not give them the insect food so necessary for their up-bringing.

WAGTAIL'S EGGS AND A CANARY (W.B.).—Is it possible that you do not know that the Wagtail is strictly an insectivorous bird? The Canary would probably hatch out the Wagtail eggs in due course, but she certainly would not feed the youngsters properly if any resulted. As for pairing up Wagtails with Canaries, this is a query which should have been sent to our Mr. Norman, but I may save him the trouble of a reply by telling you at once that results from such a union would be absolutely hopeless. As well try to mix oil and water. The stock food for a Wagtail in captivity should consist of a mixture in equal parts of ants' cocoons, dried flies, and yolk of egg, made up to double as much by adding an equal quantity of powdered sweet biscuit. A portion sufficient for one day should be slightly moistened by the addition of grated carrot or boiled potato, and a little chopped green stuff added. Or get a good brand of "insectile" mixture such as advertised in CAGE BIRDS, and add some extra ants' cocoons and dried flies. Besides the stock food, you must supply living insects and grubs of any kind you can procure—house flies, spiders, small smooth caterpillars, mealworms, and well-scoured gentles.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

CORRECTION: GOULDIAN FINCHES AILING (H.V.S.).—In this reply in our last issue, I am made to say "two tablespoonfuls of condensed milk," it should be two teaspoonfuls.

THE END OF THE CHAPTER (Gould).—I am sorry to hear of such a termination, but the bird has probably exhausted itself with egg production. I shall watch the P.M. col. to see cause. It would appear that something was seriously wrong internally—possibly a ruptured egg in the oviduct.

BUDGERIGARS (H. G. Mooney).—Three to five weeks, and are usually able to tend for themselves within a week of leaving the nest, but they generally importune the old birds for food as long as they will supply it; the period during which the old birds are willing to do this depends upon the stage the next brood are in. Give old and young as much flowering (seeding) grass as they will eat till frost comes again.

DOVE AS PET (L.G.).—I do not see why a single bird should not do well in any cage roomy enough to give it space for exercise, and it also could be allowed a fly round the room when convenient, once it was thoroughly tame and steady. A White Java hen would, I think, best meet your case. The Canary-winged, Tovi, and Tui Parrakeets are all pretty birds, and no more trouble to attend to than a Dove, and if you got a youngish bird its becoming finger-tame is only a matter of time. Value from 10s. 6d. to 21s. each. Cockatiels do not become tame as readily as other Parrakeets, but if you get quite a young bird and attend to it only yourself, and see that nothing occurs in its vicinity calculated to scare it badly, it should ultimately steady down and meet your requirements. Nevertheless, if you can run to the cost, either a Canary-winged, Tovi, or Tui Parrakeet is what I advise. All are beautiful, engaging, and but little larger than a Lovebird.

A BADLY BEHAVED MYNAH (Mynah).—The Mynah is practically omnivorous, and in a state of nature its dietary would consist mostly of fruit, berries, insects, small reptiles, etc., and though, of course, it is really very bad form of Mynah to refuse so orthodox a preparation as insectile mixture; nevertheless, there is nothing very terrible about what it is getting. After all there is very little "didn't ought to have" about it, the proper diet being insectile mixture, fruit, a little meat (cooked for preference), and live insects. The egg portion and the bacon is the only part of its present dietary I should try to curtail, but as it gets so varied a menu "of its own choosing," little harm is likely to come of it, especially, as I take it, so self-willed and naughty a bird gets ample exercise—pity it is not a reasonable being, or after all else had failed it might be spanked into submission! The bird has done well for eleven years; let well alone.

AMAZON PARROT (W. Shearn).—Cover the cage grating with half-inch mesh wire-netting, and keep a watch and see that the grating is kept quite clean; while the grating is so covered you must supply grit in a tin. I should put this bird on a course of Dinneford's Magnesia and byno-phosphate for a couple of months—one teaspoonful of the former in the drinking water sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving quite freely, yet without any appearance of diarrhœa, and half a teaspoonful of the latter in the water when not giving the former, supplying clear water one day a week. You give me no idea of how you are dieting the bird. Are you giving a sufficiently varied diet? This should consist of dry seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, and a little boiled maize twice a week—the boiled maize only keeps fresh one day. Grit and cuttlebone must be regularly supplied. Keep the netting on the grating for some little time after all signs of the habit has been given up—observation alone can tell you this.

GREY PARROT PULLING ITS FEATHERS (Mary).—The bird ought not to be fed on sunflower seed and fruit alone; the latter it cannot well have too much of, but the former as its sole seed diet is too heating and feeding. You should get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d., post free, from our Manager; it would give you full details of feeding and general treatment. At present for this bird keep a tin of canary and white millet in equal parts in its cage, and another of oats, hemp, wheat, paddy rice, and sunflower, also in equal parts; also supply ripe fruit (as much as it will eat), pieces of plain biscuit and nuts—when in season green peas may be given. Give every fourth day for a month, one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water, and on the days you are not giving the magnesia put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the water. Spray the bird twice weekly with a dilute quassia solution. If the bird will permit you to handle it, rub a little clean vaseline over the bare areas once a week till the plumage is renewed, but it must not be made as it were wet with grease, only a little must be used. Report progress a month hence.

RIBBON FINCHES (C.G.B.).—There is not the least reason why the Canary should not hatch out and rear the young Ribbon Finches. Give the Canaries a mixture of canary and white millet seeds, chickweed and seeding grass as green-food, and add a few ants' eggs to your soft food. Incubation period, twelve to fourteen days. As soon as the young birds leave the nest keep a small tin of steamed ants' eggs in the cage. When the young permanently leave the nest, take it down, burn all the old nest material, and scald out the nest, so as to keep down insect pests.

CATBIRDS (Mew).—You would need to make up a mixture of ants' eggs, sponge cake, and sweet biscuit in equal parts, and a little grated raw carrot, moisten with boiling milk, and feed every hour from sunrise to sunset. Also you must give as many small insects, smooth larvæ of any kind, live ants' cocoons, flies, spiders, etc., as you can get; give these by the aid of tweezers, and pinch the heads of the insects before supplying to the chicks. Well scoured maggots can also be given, but they must be white right through before you supply them to the birds, and their heads should be pinched with the tweezers before dropping them into the gaping throats of the young birds. A single drop of chilled water should also be given each chick about three times a day. Pleased to note you find this column helpful, and shall be glad to hear you get on with the Catbirds.

LOVEBIRDS (D. Craig).—The treatment for Lovebirds is identical with that of Budgerigars, with the exception that with one or two species, leaves, strips of thin bark, and coarse grass stems must be supplied for them to line their nest with. Your birds are Madagascar (Grey-headed) Lovebirds, and are one of the species which line their nests with leaves and other rubbish. A roomy barrel, say, 9 by 12 inches, is a good nest receptacle for them, and gives them ample scope to exercise their architectural skill therein. As you have the book I need not give dietary: in all respects (apart from nesting accommodation) feed and treat them as described for Budgerigars. If they hatch out any young, you might supply a few pieces of plain sweet biscuit and a stale crust or two of household bread, slightly moistened. Grit and cuttlebone and green food should be continuously supplied.

WILL CANARIES REAR ZEBRA FINCHES, ETC.? (Experiment).—I think Canaries would easily rear Silverbills and Zebra Finches, but the latter when out of the nest have a habit of backing away from their parents, finally twisting the head over the back and turning up the opened beak sideways for food; this performance, with the fledglings' wild yelling for food, may prove too much for the Canaries' composure. But really both these species are such excellent parents as a rule that the experiment is of no moment, and is not worth trying, unless you happen to get hold of an unnatural pair that will not incubate, or unexpectedly lose one of the birds. I should only use Canaries as foster parents for neglected or deserted eggs.

BIB FINCHES (Dwarf-finch).—Silverbills and Bib Finches would agree well enough in a cage, but would not be very likely to breed in a smaller cage than, say, 3½ by 1½ by 2ft. high. However, either species would be very probable breeders in a cage, not smaller than a double-breeder, with all partitions removed, such cages only to contain one pair of birds. They have no song worthy the name. Their requirements are very small, viz.: Canary and white millet seeds, millet sprays, greenfood, with a little soft food when they are feeding young. They like a small box for a nesting place, with a round hole in one side for entrance, but they have also used small husks and Hartz travelling cage as a domicile for their brood. Seeding (flowering) grass is the best greenfood, while it is obtainable.

RED-CRESTED CARDINAL (Cardinal).—If you can give them a cage not less than 3½ft. long, 1½ deep, and 2ft. high, there is a probability that they may nest and rear a brood, but if any young are hatched out, you must supplement the ordinary dietary (seeds, greenfood, fruit, and live insects) with soft food and live insects ad lib. I should not give all mealworms, but supply variety—e.g., mealworms, properly scoured gentles, live ants' cocoons, beetles, spiders, small cockroaches, and smooth caterpillars. As a nest receptacle, give a rather deep box or basket, say six inches square or round, by three inches deep; supply hay and long grass as nesting material. The fledgelings are fed for the first week almost entirely on live insects, and you must supply such every two hours, as well as keeping soft food and usual foods in the cage. From the demeanour of your birds it would appear that you have a true pair and likely breeders.

PARROT LOSING PLUMAGE (R.M.G.).—It is something more than a moult which has caused so complete a shedding of the plumage, but from its apparently otherwise healthy condition there may not be very much wrong. As you have had the bird for so long a period it will be quite tame, and will allow you to handle it; take a piece of soft linen, saturate this with paraffin, and wipe the bare areas over with it, but do not grease what plumage it has got. Do this twice a week for a month, and in between (also twice a week) spray it with quassia solution. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water, and on the days you are not giving the magnesia put half a teaspoonful of byno-phosphates in the water. If the bird will eat it, a piece of stale crust, slightly moistened with tepid water, and dusted with flowers of sulphur, will be a help. Diet: Seed mixture as follows: One quart each canary and white millet seeds, and oats; one pint each hemp and paddy rice; half a pint each sunflower, dari, shelled nuts, and wheat; well mix the whole and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, greenfood, grit and cuttlebone. A little raw carrot or dry boiled potato may be given, also madeira, sultana, or sponge cake for variety, but do not give any tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Give the bird rotten wood, cotton reels, etc., to cut up and play with, and keep it as interested and occupied as your convenience permits. Wandering about out of its cage will certainly be a help, and it will go to the cage for food as required. Report progress in three or four weeks, unless unfavourable symptoms develop, in which case write again at once.

BOURKE'S PARRAKEETS (J.C.).—I congratulate you on your success, and hope the young birds will be fully reared. At this time supply unlimited greenfood, a saucer containing some dry pieces of sweet plain biscuit, in addition to the usual seeds; fruit, of course, if they will eat it. Sop is not necessary, and even in aviary these birds are better without it. Groundsel may be offered with other non-poisonous weeds, but supply flowering (seeding) grass ad lib. As regards seed, supply one mixture of canary and white millet in equal parts, and another mixture in a separate receptacle of two parts each paddy rice and crushed oats, one part hemp and a few sunflower seeds. Supply the greenfood fresh at least twice daily.

DOUBLE-FRONTED AMAZON (F.H.). — Give Dinneford's twice a week, and in between continue the "squills mixture" for a time; also spray the bird's nostrils daily with dilute glyco-thymoline; it will not do any harm if the bird swallows a little. You make no mention of fruit; it will certainly be the better for some if you can induce it to take it—orange, banana, sweet apple, or grapes, are all good for it. If you have a good supply of oats, the absence of wheat will not matter. In lieu of supplying canary and millet with the mixture, keep a small tin of it in the cage, and the bird can then take it or leave it alone—this will prevent waste. You can leave the dari out. While the bird should be kept in some light and airy position, it must not for some time be subjected to either draught or cold winds. The byno-phosphates can be used as a tonic after the present symptoms have yielded to treatment.

OUTDOOR AVIARY (A. R. Coe).—If you have not a shelter attached to your flight, you must make a wood and glass shutter for the front for nights and very cold days. The following are all cheap and pretty foreigners and probable breeders: Zebra, Bib, and Grey Singing Finches, Silverbills, Cutthroats, Avadavats, Bengalese; others less likely to breed, but would agree with the others in your aviary are: Gold-breasted and Orange-cheeked Waxbills, Red-billed and Madagascar Weavers. You could keep one pair each of the above in your aviary. Weavers are very shy breeders in captivity, even in large and roomy natural aviaries, though they weave many nests. Still, it is not impossible, though, judging from precedent, improbable. They are worth a place whether they breed or not, not only because of their beautiful summer plumage, but also for the many quaint and interesting nests they weave.

AMAZON ILL (J.T.D.).—It is a pity you did not write earlier, as a four months' illness is quite a long one, and the trouble has either become very pronounced, or has partially passed and left the bird very weakened, and with probably some developing throat affection. Do not give more sop than is necessary to provide the bird with sufficient to eat, and it should be prepared so: Stale pieces of household bread, sprinkle with sugar, soak in half a teaspoonful of byno-phosphates, then pour over as much boiling water as the bread will absorb, and when cool supply to the bird. Also supply boiled maize, ordinary seed mixture, ripe fruit, shelled walnuts, and pieces of any kind of plain cake and biscuit. Cuttlebone and grit must be regularly supplied. Get a box of honey and borax and give the bird a little twice or thrice a day. Most Parrots can be induced to take this from the end of a wooden skewer. Put a little on the end of the skewer, and when the bird is wakeful and inclined to notice things, if the skewer is pushed against the beak, the bird will attempt to bite and play with it, and thus secure what honey and borax was on the end. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on intervening days put half a teaspoonful of this mixture—Ipecacuanha wine, oxymel of squills, and glycerine in equal parts, in the drinking water—i.e., on such days as you are not giving the magnesia. Keep the bird in some light, airy and sunny, yet warm room, quite free from draught. It will be advisable to remove the voidings as promptly as convenience permits. Treat as above for fourteen days, and then report progress, continuing the treatment till you get a later reply.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Mrs. C. S. Gibbons.—You might try "The Gouldian Finch," one of the Nutshell series, price 2½d. per post, or "Foreign Birds for Beginners," by Mr. Wesley T. Page, price 1s. 1½d. by post, both obtainable from the offices of "Cage Birds," which will give you all the information you desire. Pneumonia was the cause of death. They can be, and are, successfully bred here; probably your birds were not well acclimatised.

E. G. Davies.—Pneumonia. Artificial heat is advisable during the early summer months. These birds easily feel fluctuations in temperature, and are readily susceptible to pneumonia.

Banishing the Red Mite.

Sir, In regard to getting rid of the red mite, the only thing I do is to get a pound of flowers of sulphur at any chemist, at the cost of 2d., and sprinkle it slightly over the sand tray. The red mite will never come again. I have used this successfully for the last eight years, and have never known it fail. I wish your paper every success.

The Secret of Success.

Sir, Mr. Johnson's letter prompts me to explain what undoubtedly Mr. Garner has up his sleeve, and that is, the "right material." I thought at the time of reading Mr. G.'s remarks on Mr. Robson's lecture that he might just as well have given his fellow fanciers the knowledge that he certainly has, i.e., that to get yellows from double buffs, these buffs must have been bred from double yellows.

Young Bred from a Hen Linnet Mule.

Sir,—Respecting your Mr. St. John's answer to "Novice," in which he tells him not to try and breed with a Mule hen, I wish to tell you that I have in my possession a Mule hen (Linnet-Canary) which in 1911 I paired with a Yorkshire cock. Her first nest she laid four eggs; she hatched one youngster, and fed it for two or three days, but I think her claws were a bit long as she pulled the young one on to the cage bottom, and it died. The other three eggs were addled. Her second nest was of four eggs. Two were addled, but the other two hatched to time. I have the youngsters in my possession at present. One is a cock, with Linnet markings, the other is a clear hen. I have this hen paired with a Yorkshire, and she has laid an egg this morning. The Mule hen (the mother) had nested, but had only two eggs, one of which has hatched, and I am expecting the other to-morrow. The one hatched is a bonny little thing. I have been told by a lot of fanciers in the neighbourhood that it is a rare occurrence, and that is the reason I am writing you. I am in great hopes of obtaining a lot more from her yet. I may tell you that I have only had my birds two years, so I am only a novice.

A. Shaw.

Bootle.

[Several instances of Mules having bred have been from time to time put on record in our columns. One case, at Sunderland, was well authenticated, the Mule concerned being a cock Linnet-Canary. Such occurrences, however, are extremely rare. We hope that Mr. Shaw is absolutely certain that his bird is really a Mule, and not a Green Canary. Has any experienced fancier seen it?—Editor.]

The Southern Norwich Plainhead Club's Classification.

Sir,—Mr. Rowe's efforts to whip up an agitation on this subject appears, by his own confession, to have fallen very flat. He did not intend to continue the subject himself, he says, but his object apparently was to have a tilt at me, throw the whole thing into the melting pot, and stand idly by and watch what would follow. This may have been "smart," but it is neither clever nor courageous. It is a kind of "there's a bone, you bounders, fight over it." Well, fanciers are not so soft as Mr. Rowe takes them to be, and they are simply smiling at the antediluvian garments in which he has wrapped himself. He is not even a member of the S.N.P.C., whose classification he criticises. The argument put forward was sound, and I still stick to it, says Mr. Rowe. This reminds me that there is in Mr. Rowe a little of the fire of the old lady who "wore the breeches" at home. "I'll have the last word if I die for it," she said to her hubby when that worthy ventured to question her arguments. Mr. Rowe sticks to it, notwithstanding the fact that the Fancy does not think it worth while to help him in his mission. Yet fanciers generally must be amused at Mr. Rowe's ludicrously ingenious description of the invisible tick—those "heavy ticks, although invisible, that come red hot." All this was trotted out and demolished years ago. But the best joke of all is the suggestion that handling show birds to sort amongst their feathers for ticks would be a good thing, as it steadies them! It is like brushing your hair the wrong way to make it look smooth! Mr. Rowe must really be bluffing when he invites me to go for two classes only, and for him to suggest such a thing rather points to insincerity on his part. Who would be so foolish (pardon me) as to suggest two classes only as a satisfactory classification for a good show? Mr. Rowe tells us also that he really thinks that if all the members had voted at our (Plymouth) meeting he should have carried his motion. How innocent he is! If everybody had supported him he would have won. He forgets they might, if they had voted, have gone against him. He ought to have tried the plan of the boy in the raffle, and kept on raffling until he did win. With regard to Mr. Rowe's reassertion that colour decides the issue, I would point to the S.N.P.C. standard. He will there find that "shape," which is given as head, neck, back, chest, and body, is awarded 50 points, wings, tail, legs, and feet (all part of the shape of the bird, as a Norwich breeder views the thing) count another 20 points; quality comes in with 15 points, making 85 out of a possible 100, and leaving for Mr. Rowe's hot-colour crusade 15 points only. No wonder his appeal to fanciers was not responded to. I tell him again, that colour does not play the part it used to do in the decisions of 90 per cent. of our judges. The "also rans" are the birds which lack shape and quality, not those which lack colour. Will Mr. Rowe kindly tell us why, if colour carries all before it, we hear the judges pulled up so quickly, if they only seem to deviate from type? He will find they are watched closely on that point. We are not advancing backwards, friend Rowe; we are going forward, and we ought not to let any temporary disappointment experienced in not securing a majority at our club meeting lead us astray. We will not adopt the policy of old Methusalah, even though it enables us to beat Spillman. No, the wireless and the 'phone are here, and the fig leaves have gone; and if men love breeding from two buffs, it is quite certain they are not breeding for colour alone, even though they preach its virtues. I thought friend Rowe loved double buffing. Does he do that to get colour? If he does not, why not, if colour is the chief point?

The Birds that Migrate.

Sir,—I should be glad if some reader could tell me if birds that migrate to this country breed in another after they have left our shores, making two breeding seasons in one year, and what time of the year they moult? I never remember reading anything respecting these questions.

Robin Nests Indoors.

Sir,—I thought the following extract from the "Western Mail" would interest the readers of Cage Birds:—A Redbreast which has been in the habit of making itself at home in the kitchen at 11, Penylan Place, Roath Park (occupied by Mr. John Phillips), has now built its nest in the conservatory of the same house and laid four eggs in it. The nest is an ideal one, constructed between two flower-pots, and the little visitor gains access to its abode through the ventilator. After partaking of a meal, which is placed for it on the window-sill, the Robin goes on the nest, from which it can see all the movements of the occupants of the kitchen. It is a remarkable case of tameness, and the Robin often takes a walk round the kitchen and picks up crumbs thrown to it. The family think a lot of their non-paying guest, which allows them to go right up to the nest and inspect it, and makes no attempt to fly away.

Five Birds from Four Eggs.

A New Experience After Being 38 Years a Breeder.

Sir,—On the 24th of April I sat a Yorkshire hen on four eggs, and on the 5th of May I put in a clean nest-pot and nest, and taking the four eggs one by one, placed them in the new nest. On the 7th of May I saw the hen off, and I took out the nest, and to my surprise I saw five young birds! Not bad, is it? I may say that they are doing well, but one is a small one in comparison with the others.

Rearing the Young of Cordon Bleus.

Sir,—May I be permitted to crave the assistance of such of your numerous readers as are breeders of foreign birds. I had the sickening experience of breeding ten young Cordon Bleus during 1912, and then having them deserted at from four to ten days old. So this year I have left the pair in an aviary in a spare room, instead of turning them outdoors as I did last year. Apparently the cock "gets tired" and wants to nest again, so I thought that if I could take away all material when the nest is built, and keep a nice varied diet under their noses, they might rear the young to pass the time away! I have heard of giving malt extract to the birds; is this done? The aviary is a punched-bar structure 4ft. 6in. by 2ft. and 2ft. high. Despite the fact that they have only had it to themselves since Saturday last, and have been moved upstairs, they have already lined the nest box with grasses. They are being fed on egg food and millet (red and white). Any hints would be most gratefully noted (and acted upon). Has the experiment ever been tried of hatching out the eggs of the Cordon Bleus under Canaries?

Does Thunder Kill Young in the Shell?

Sir,—I should like to thank you for advice I have received at various times, and also to say I think your book, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," is excellent. I knew absolutely nothing about birds or breeding when I took over the pair of birds belonging to a nephew. Since then I have improved the stock, and some experienced breeders have complimented me on their condition. I have had four young die in the shell, and should be very glad if you would tell me at what stage of incubation they died. The fore part, viz., head, beak and wings, can be seen plainly in three of them, but no legs, and the back part of the body was not developed. The hen started sitting on a Wednesday night, and the following Tuesday night we had a bad thunderstorm. The birds were covered up and asleep when the storm occurred, and the hen is a very close sitter. The male bird feeds her on the nest, and she only comes off for a drink of water night and morning. Would the storm kill them, or must I look elsewhere for the cause of death? How many days would it take to develop so far? This hen hatched every one of her eggs last year, ten in all, first clutch two, second three, third, five.

Special Prizes at Elgin New Year Show.

Sir,—I had forward six birds at the Elgin P.P.C.B. and R. Association Show, held at Elgin on New Year's day (Messrs' Garden and Sinclair secretaries), winning four 1st and three special prizes, two 2nds, and cup for best cage bird in show. The cup and prize-money duly arrived, along with a note from one of the secretaries, asking for numbers of special prize-cards sent me. I sent them these on (I only received two cards) and pointed out that I had at least one other special to come, as per marked catalogue sent me. As I received no further word from them I again wrote reminding them that I had got no specials yet. One of the secretaries again wrote me, putting the blame on to some of the committee, in not getting the specials collected. Receiving no further word, however, I again wrote politely asking them to send on the specials I had won. This letter they ignored. I once more wrote on April 26, and enclosed a stamped addressed envelope for a reply. Still no answer. How very different their treatment from that of any other shows I have exhibited at? Their show being nearly five months past, they surely cannot say they have not had time to collect and forward the specials. What is the use of promising specials if they do not intend to let exhibitors have them who have honestly won them in open competition? Have other exhibitors at this show received their specials yet? If so, I wonder why I am singled out for this treatment—treatment which is the reverse of encouraging to exhibitors to again support any show where such treatment is meted out to them. When running a show it is easy to make a mistake, I admit, but what have these secretaries done to rectify their mistake? I consider they have gone rather beyond the limit, or I would never have thought of lodging this complaint in your valuable paper, Cage Birds.

A Mule Left an Orphan at Ten Years Old.

Sir, —An old Patriarch (a Goldfinch) of 11 years passed away last week, leaving a son ten years of age (a Canary Mule) to mourn his loss. Up to the time of his death he was in the best of health. He was the property of Mr. W. T. Dunlop, of Milltown Lodge, Londonderry, whose good wife cared for him most assiduously. The above may be of interest to your readers of whom I am one.

An Appeal to Yorkshire Union Shows.

Sir,—I should like to see classes given at all the Yorkshire Union shows for British birds and Mules and Hybrids. I know they have been a failure in the past at most of the Union shows, still they might apply for patronage again. Seeing we have a trophy in view now we have got Lancashires in, we should have some good shows. We have made about a dozen new members lately, which will mean at least twenty to thirty more birds exhibited at each show. I do earnestly hope it is not too late for the Union shows to give us a trial. I think our sections are the finest attraction to any show. Look what we had at our Bradford National show! Some of the best British Mules and Hybrids of the day. I was very glad to see the letters of Mr. Towers, Mr. Chittenden and Mr. Fairhurst. I trust this will meet the eye of the Yorkshire Union men. Cage Birds has given good prizes to our club for many a year now, which I think is very good.

The Use of Standard Show Cages in Ireland.

Sir,—Mr Stewart's letter clearly proves that my criticism of the Norwich show cages was founded on fact. He admits the Belfast Norwich Crest and Y.C.C. rules read that the cages must not be less than 11½ inches long and 11 inches high (but may be more) blue inside and black outside, it being immaterial what shade of blue is used or what make of perches or drinkers. He informs us the rules of this club, re cages are binding. I fail to see it on his own statement. Re the N.P.C. of Ireland, it is so many years since it held a show that I have no doubt the Norwich exhibitors have completely forgotten the description of their adopted show cage. I have heard they are to hold a show this season, hence my reference to the cages. I am surprised at Mr. Stewart denying that many exhibitors put their names on the backs of their cages, and it will take a lot of salt to make me swallow that Mr. Stewart has not seen these names, as at the Northern shows before the award catalogues were on sale, those interested were taking down the cages to see who owned the birds by the names on the backs of the cages. Several fanciers could support me, but perhaps they will "grin and bear" what at present seems to me a great injustice to the honest exhibitor. I do not see, Mr. Stewart, that the judges that come from England are above suspicion, and anyway I think there are as competent judges in Ireland who could be had at a third the cost if they were only given the chance, and perhaps have a greater reputation at stake. Belfast has always led the way, and I am glad to see this season they have engaged an Irish judge.

More Bird Freaks!

Sir,—On Sunday, May 11th, I had two young Canaries (Yorkshires) hatch from one egg. Each young bird was minus the right wing, and the left leg, but the birds were quite separate one from the other. They both lived after hatching only for a short while. The egg was, of course, a deal larger than ordinary.

A Hen Goldfinch that Always Comes Home.

Sir,—A neighbour of mine living in Caithness Road, Brook Green, owns a hen Goldfinch, which about six weeks ago escaped from her cage, and flew out of the window. She was seen some time after in some tall trees in the garden, then went out of sight, and was given up as lost. But to her owner's surprise at evening she returned and re-entered her cage. After this the bird was allowed to go and come as it pleased. On a few occasions it failed to return at dusk, but returned early in the morning. At other times the window sash at top was left open two inches, and though the blind was drawn, it managed to get in over the blind roller. The hen now has entire liberty, and has been seen in company with another Goldfinch several houses away, but regularly returns home. I commend this to the notice of the R.S.P.C.A.

To Prevent the Nest-pan Lining Being Torn Out.

Sir,—Procure a couple of old tie-clips (Fig. 2), and bend the tongues as in Fig. 1, until they appear as in Fig. 3, then press them firmly down in to the nest-pan rim as in Fig. 4. It is very annoying to be continually having the linings pulled out, but I have found that this completely prevents it.

Whitsuntide Amongst the Wild Birds.

Sir,—At Whitsuntide I had what may be described as a series of rambles in a very favourable district for bird life, especially small birds, such as Warblers, etc. Nightingales were singing strongly, one in a tree still nearly leafless at the side of a public road. Cuckoos were calling continuously, one might say, and one pair was seen, also in a Hedge Accentor's nest a Cuckoo's egg was found. A Garden Warbler was seen and heard singing strong; Blackcaps were also seen and heard. A Gold Crest's nest was found; this beautiful little nest was suspended in the usual position on a fir tree, and at no great distance from my bedroom window. The Long-Tailed Tits' nest, probably the most beautiful of all, was also found, after a hint from a friend as to where it was. A Green Woodpecker's nest was also located, with about half a bushel of wood chips at the foot of the tree. Nests of Thrushes, Blackbirds, Starlings, Linnets, Chaffinches, Water Hen, and others were also found. Stone Chat, Yellow Hammer, Tree Pipit, Snipe, Coot and Goldfinches were located, and Chiff-Chaffs and Willow Wrens were not infrequent. I saw Swifts, Spotted Flycatchers, and Turtle Doves for the first time this season. I had in all 49 species on my list.

New Views Upon How Birds Die!

Sir,—My attention has just been called to recent paragraphs in Cage Birds League columns, referring to some remarks of mine on the subject of cage birds, and the writer pointedly states that everything I wrote is false, or, perhaps it will be more courteous to say, is the outcome of a morbid sentimentality. In reply, allow me to state that within the last twelve months there have been at least two cases tried in London Police Courts, and convictions secured against men who blinded singing birds with red-hot needles. The last of these two cases occurred at Deptford the very week I wrote my article. I am sorry that after this lapse of time I cannot give more definite date, but at any rate it was reported in the leading London papers. The remainder of your charge is really not worth replying to. If you, in your large experience of cage birds, have not found that at least three-fourths die of starvation or thirst through neglect, or pneumonia through being left in draughts, or red mites or kindred pests, or meet a violent death at the hands of the domestic cat from whom their cage prevents their escaping, all I can say is that your circle of acquaintances are not to be judged on the same level as the average bird owner. Your remarks assure me that you will allow me space in your journal for this reply, and for that courtesy I am obliged.

Isabel Thorne
(Editress "Dainty Novels.")

[Mr. Fulljames, the secretary of Cage Birds League, has replied by post to the above letter, asking the writer to be kind enough to give the date of the article in question, in order that enquiries may be made as to the allegation that one of the two cases occurred in that particular week. That any conviction has been secured during the past twelve months against anyone accused of the barbarous practice mentioned is news to us. We thought, and are still of opinion, that the idea that the song of a bird could be improved by blinding it was as extinct as the superstition that the talking powers of a Starling or Magpie could be improved by slitting its tongue. See also the League column this week.—Ed.]

Grass Seed as a Green Food.

Sir,—Please accept my congratulations on your new series of articles by Mr. Weston. These promise to be mines of useful information, as I am sure there is much that can be discussed weekly, helpful alike to us (who are but novices as far as the interesting hobby of bird keeping is concerned), and to the old hands. I was particularly interested in that portion of this week's article mentioning grass seed. I may say that even in my own limited experience I have found this to be absolutely the safest and cleanest green food it is possible to use, and it is what I rely on in that direction. It is also a strange fact that grass is practically never used by most fanciers (except those interested in foreign birds), and when to one or two I have recommended a trial, the idea has been somewhat ridiculed. I am sure now that Mr. Weston has pushed its merits forcibly home many fanciers will have good cause to thank him. It is very gratifying indeed to find one of your own pet theories backed up by the experience of an expert of no mean standing.

An Expert's Views on Mule Breeding.

By J. MADDISON (Newcastle-on-Tyne).

A well-known North Country judge and exhibitor tells how he breeds light and dark Mules. A lecture given before the West Stanley C.B.S.

At the West Stanley C.B.S. meeting on May 17th, there was a good turn out of members to hear Mr. J. Maddison, of Newcastle, give a lecture on Mule Breeding. Mr. W. H. Butler, the chairman, in introducing Mr. Maddison to the meeting, said he was sure that whatever the lecturer said to them would be based on his experience as a mule breeder, and not merely copied from books.

Mr. Maddison, on rising, said: "Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I don't know how many of you may have tried your hands at Mule breeding. If there are any who have not, let me advise them to hesitate no longer, there is still time to make a start this season. Dark Mules are comparatively easy to breed, and good exhibition birds are very valuable just now. I will point out to you what I consider the best way to breed a good exhibition bird. The principal factor is a suitable hen Canary, and of all the Canary tribe the Norwich type is undoubtedly the best. A big yellow hen, bred from big Norwich birds, is what is wanted. I know good big yellow hens are difficult to get, but it is not necessary to have an exhibition bird. Get the biggest that you can; never mind so much about show points, so long as you know that it is bred from good and big parents.

The Procedure which Brings Success.

I will give you my method of Mule breeding. When I am in want of hens for breeding dark Mules, I procure them as soon as possible after they are moulted; there is more choice then than when it gets near the breeding season. I use the three-compartment breeding cage, and during the winter I let two or three hens have the run of two compartments, and put one or two Finches in the other compartment. By Finches I mean Goldfinches, Greenfinches, Linnets, Twites, Siskins, and Redpolls, and about once a week I draw the slide and allow Finches and Canaries to run together for an hour or two. This allows them to get accustomed to the sight of each other, and is better than keeping them always together, as some Finches will not thrive on the Canaries' diet, nor would it be advisable to allow the Canaries to have the Finches' diet all the winter.

But there is another reason why I don't approve of keeping them always together; some Finches, when kept too long with one hen, are very vicious when put in beside another hen. I have also had hen Canaries which, after being kept too long with a Finch absolutely refused to pair with a cock Canary afterwards. This can be avoided by keeping them together no longer than is really necessary. By adopting this plan I have many a time run one Finch to five or six different hens in one season. I do not pair them till the hens are ready to nest, and I never under any circumstances leave a Finch with a hen while she is sitting. I keep him away till the young can feed themselves, which they are well able to do when three weeks old.

If the hen, however, should start resting again and looks as though she would lay before the young are fit to remove, I put in the Finch, and if I see them pair (which they often do as soon as put together), I then remove the Finch and repeat the process in a day or two. This ensures the eggs being fertile, and avoids the risk of getting the youngsters damaged by the Finch, which sometimes happens if they get in his way.

The Food for Rearing the Mules.

The food for rearing young Mules need not be different from that used for rearing Canaries. For the first few days I give yolk of egg with just a sprinkling of finely-crushed arrowroot biscuit. Afterwards I give both yolk and white, two parts egg to one of biscuit, and a little sugar. In a separate dish I give crushed hemp or soaked rape, whichever the hen prefers. For green food I prefer well seeded chickweed.

When the young are taken from the hen I reduce the proportion of egg and give equal parts of egg and biscuit, with a little crushed hemp added, and in a separate dish soaked rape. I also give a small quantity of chickweed, shepherd's purse, plantain, etc. This treatment I continue till they are well on hard seed.

My stock food for Mules is three parts canary seed and one part each of teazle, rape, and linseed, and any of the other seeds I give occasionally as a change.

About the Finches: Size being such an important point in a dark Mule, the Siberian Goldfinch is better than the Britisher, although it neither breeds so freely nor lasts so long. The other Finches, Greenfinches, Linnets, etc., should all be selected for size and colour, but I would prefer a medium-sized bird which is a reliable breeder, rather than a larger bird which is a doubtful breeder, as there are some Finches which will have nothing to do with a hen Canary. Finches which have been caught when young usually make the best breeders.

Getting the Finches into Fit Condition.

As to the feeding of the Finches, my experience has been that Goldfinches which are content to live without hemp seed, live longer and "die happier" than those which resort to the "hunger strike," when the hemp is withheld. There being such a variety of seeds on the market, there is plenty to select from without resorting to hemp. My stock food for Goldfinches is two parts each of Canary and teazle, and one part linseed. I also give niger, maw, and cracked sunflower, as an occasional change. Siskins, same as Goldfinch, with one part German rape added. Greenfinch, the same, with about a teaspoonful of hemp and sunflower seeds on alternate days. For the Linnet, Twite, and Redpoll, equal parts of English rape, German rape, teazle, canary and linseed. I also give a half teaspoonful of a mixture of niger, maw, and hemp occasionally as a change.

During the winter all the Finches are given a piece of sweet apple once a week, and in the spring and early summer the tender leaves and seeded white tops of the dandelion are given freely. I don't know of anything better than dandelion (and warm weather) for bringing all the Finches into breeding condition.

I carefully examine all my Finches in February, and if any appear to be very backward in condition, I give them a mixture of hemp and niger seed one day and a mixture of dandelion seed, lettuce seed, and maw seed the next day, a half-teaspoonful to each bird. This I continue till the fresh dandelion is ready, which generally soon puts them all right for breeding.

Interesting Answers to Questions.

The Chairman, after making a few remarks, invited the members to ask questions in connection with the lecture, which were soon forthcoming, as follows:—

Question: Does Mr. Maddison take a nest of Canaries from the dark muling hens before pairing them with the Finch?—Answer: No; I pair them to any of the Finches which are most forward in condition. By this means I get the Finch tested, and should the eggs be clear, the hen may come in useful as a feeder for the young of some of the other hens.

Do you prefer Cinnamon hens for breeding dark Mules?—I have never tried Cinnamon hens, but I think a good big stout-made yellow Cinnamon should breed a good Mule.

Has the Finch or the hen Canary most influence in the production of light Mules?—If anyone relies solely upon the Finch, I'm afraid their light Mules will be few and far between. My experience has led me to rely upon the Canary. For the last ten years in succession I have bred a good number of light Mules (including six Clears, bred from four different hens and five different Finches), and I never select my Finches for any particular peculiarity; the only things I look for in a muling Finch are that it is of good size and a reliable breeder. I leave the rest to the hen Canary. As a test, I paired one hen Canary to a Goldfinch, a Greenfinch, and a Linnet. To the Goldfinch she bred a clear Mule, and to the Greenfinch and the Linnet she bred very lightly marked, in fact, only grizzled Mules.

I bred a variegated Mule from a heavily-variegated hen, full of green blood; how do you account for that?—I had a similar experience myself last year. I bred a variegated Mule from a nearly green hen, and the latter hen was bred from a green hen. I paired the same Finch to two clear hens, and they bred nothing but dark Mules.

It now being time for Mr. Maddison to leave for his train, he was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks for his practical and instructive lecture.

Club Reports.

BURTON-ON-TRENT C.B.S.

Meeting held May 6 at the Staffordshire Knot. Mr. Hathaway presided over a good muster. Decided to hold the summer show July 19. The principal item for the evening was Mr. Hathaway's paper on moulting and colour feeding, which proved instructive and very interesting, the number of questions asked by the novice members proving the interest taken in it.—A. Wood, Sec.

STIRLING C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 3, in McDonald's Temperance Hotel, Mr. W. Bishop in the chair. Letters from the judges read, and met with satisfaction. They are Mr. C. Campbell, Glasgow, Nor.; Mr. J. Hamilton, Hamilton, Bord.; Mr. C. Sykes, Musselburgh, Brit. and For. Two Norwich classes were added. Subs. were raised to 3s. 6d. Prize cards will be settled at next meeting, held June 7, in McDonald's Temperance Hotel, at 8.—Wm. Clubb.

GAINSBOROUGH C.B.S.

On May 17, Mr. C. A. House gave a most interesting lecture on in-breeding, which was greatly enjoyed by the members present. The way in which the lecturer dealt with the various animals and birds to prove his arguments was a treat, and then he dealt with Canaries, and with diagrams showed the members how to form a stud. There was not a dull moment from beginning to end. At the conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. House, to which Mr. House suitably replied. —J. E. Conway, Hon. Sec.

RICHMOND (Surrey) C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at the Imperial, Richmond, May 30, Mr. W. Phipps chair. An extremely interesting and instructive lecture was kindly given by Mr. J. Shepherd on Norwich and Yorkshires, which was greatly appreciated by an unusually large number of members and friends. Mr. Shepherd afterwards invited questions, and his answers were very helpful to young members. All members are particularly requested to attend the next meeting, May 28th, at 8 sharp, in view of very important business to be transacted. Any fancier wishing to join the above society can obtain full particulars from Hon. Sec., W. Nicuols, 34, Beaconsfield Road, St. Margarets, Twickenham.

CLYDEBANK C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 15, at 81, Kilbowie Road, Mr. McGown presiding over a good attendance. Decided to drop Rule 12. Agreed to get new rule books printed, and Sec. was instructed to see this carried out. Sec. read a letter from Mr. Chalmers, regretting we could not have the use of West U.F. Church Hall for annual show. Agreed to appoint a small committee to look after a suitable hall and fix it up, and also to make arrangements about judges. Messrs. Robb, Kane and Chambers were appointed. Also agreed to have two judges, Canaries and British. The names of several gentlemen were proposed and seconded, and the secretary was instructed to write to them and report to committee appointed. Agreed to hold ramble on May 31. Meet at Erskine Ferry, South Side, at 3 p.m.—Wm. Kane, Sec.

FIFE AND KINROSS N.P.C.

Meeting held May 17, T. Wildridge (pres.) in the chair. In a general discussion on how to popularise the club, it was agreed that some of the rules could be altered with some advantage. Also something could be done for novices. Mr. T. Wildridge at once promised a trophy to be held yearly by the novice who scores most points at the patronage shows with three nominated birds; Mr. W. Spence gives a medal to winner of above trophy; Mr. P. Langan, 2/6 to runner-up; and Mr. A. Strachan, 2/6 for 3rd most points. A novice to be one who has not got more than one 1st prize with cage birds at an open show. Following were elected members:—A. Watt, Dunfermline; J. Gold and G. Cooper, Methil; J. Watson, Kinross; A. Strachan, W. Duff, A. McDonald and Mr. Kirk, Lochgelly; and J. W. Holmes, Cowdenbeath. Now novices, here's a chance for you. Do something for those who do something for you. 2/6 is the membership; particulars from me. —A. Dickson, 37, Adam's Terrace, Kelty.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held May 7, at headquarters, J. Ridal presiding over a well-attended meeting; five new members were made. Principal business was arrangements nest feather show. Judge is Mr. G. Brownlie, Rotherham. Show opens 4, closes 8. Birds to be staged by 2. Prize money 3s., 2s., 1s. Four classes in members' Yorks., members' Norwich, and novices: four British, two Foreign, A.O.V. Canary 1, selling 1. Several specials were promised. This should draw a record entry. After transaction of business, questions by ballot occupied the board, and a good half-hour was spent. Many questions were gone thoroughly into. What was considered by the officials to be the most interesting part of this was the way some of the novices came out of the ordeal and distinguished themselves. This is very encouraging to us. Let us hope for more of these nights, as they are instructive and beneficial; often a novice can put you some question and another give an answer to it that some older fanciers might have missed. Novices, don't forget next meeting, June 12. Table show, 11 classes, for point specials and novices' cup. Bring your birds and make a good show.—C. Thomlinson, Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Meeting held at Maskell's Hotel, Mr. Whetton presided over a small meeting. Mr. E. J. Davies reported he had interviewed Mr. Maskell in regard to the hall for the open show. We have paid a deposit on the Queen's Hall, which is one of the finest halls in the county for a Cage Bird Show, being a modern hall, and also in the town centre. A discussion took place re Mr. E. J. Banks' offer to give a £5 5s. cup for open competition providing that we get two more, and secretary was instructed to write several local gentlemen; also to get books for those who would care to help the cup fund. I shall be pleased to forward a book to any member. Resolved that we fix date, also elect judge for the annual young bird show, and arrange classification at our next meeting, June 19. Mr. W. Jones, Richmond Road, was enrolled as a member. I appeal to members who do not attend our meetings to do so in the future, as it is very disheartening to the officers to find they are not supported as they ought to be. At the next meeting I am willing to place my resignation in the hands of the chairman, and will still continue my membership, and do all I can to help any member who cares to take my place. Please take this in the spirit that it is written, as I want to see our society make progress, and this cannot be done unless members take a more active interest in the society's work. E. Thomas, Sec.

BLANTYRE O.S.

Meeting held May 3, Mr. Gavin Taylor chair. First feather show to be held July 5, in Mr. Blackley's Hall, at 4, and smoker at 6, tickets 1s. each. Annual show was fixed for Nov. 1, in Mr. Struther's hall; judges, Mr. A. Allardice Overtown, and Mr. R. Davidson, Mossend. Next meeting, May 31. Electing judges for first feather show. This being the closing meeting for the year, I shall be pleased to hear from fanciers in the district wishing to become a member.—D. Berry, Sec., 129, Main St., High Blantyre.

LONGTON C.B.S.

Meeting held at the Roe Buck Hotel, May 6. We gathered a nice lot of specials at this meeting. We are putting one special of 5s. each to the best young Yorkshire bred by a member, best young Norwich, best British; we have a silver medal promised for the most points by a member who has never won a first prize in any of our three shows. Carried that all the other specials be allotted to most points in every class. We made two new members. Those who join now have a good chance of either winning the cup or the beautiful medallion; besides, there are 20 specials to be competed for.—Philip Ed. Barker, Hon. Sec.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at White Lion Hotel, May 10, a fair number present. Mr. A. Leech, chair. The schedule for our N.F. show, July 12, was adopted, Mr. W. Reid, Sunderland, judge. Decided to run annual show as last year on November 29; nominations for judges will be on at next meeting, June 7, when I hope to see all members present. There seems to be a fair number of young bred first round in the district and as our friends from Hetton and Dubmire are invited to show at the young bird show, I have no doubt of putting up a good show. We have a good schedule of 24 classes—5 Norwich, 2 Cinnamons, 2 Borders, 2 Crest, 4 Yorks, 1 A.O.V., 1 Mule, 5 Brit., 2 For.—so I hope members will stick in and invite fanciers to join. Fee, 2s. 6d. per year. Further information from R. H. Dixon, Sec., 26 Gilpin Street.

BOURNEMOUTH AND DIS. C.B.A.

That eminent Norwich Canary specialist and judge, Mr. J. H. Payne, of Gloucester, read two papers before the members and friends at the last meeting, held at the Quadrant Restaurant. One, on the Norwich Canary, its type, quality, and general usefulness to the new beginner, both for show purposes and profit, gave very instructive advice as to procedure in feeding, mating, etc. The second paper mentioned a variety of Canaries, their different characteristics and value, especially mentioning the Yorkshires and the Scotch Border as utility and paying birds to anyone taking up this hobby. For close on two hours Mr. Payne kept his audience in rapt attention, and replied to a lot of questions asked by fanciers present. A vote of thanks was given to the lecturer, who, in response, said it was a pleasure to come, and, having taken a drive with Mr. Jones (the Chairman) before the meeting, expressed his delight at the beautiful surroundings of Bournemouth.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting held May 16, Vice-chairman, Mr. George Jones, chair, in absence of chairman, Present, Hon. Treas., Mr. R. T. Edwards, Messrs. J. W. Jones, J. Pritchard, E. Jones, R. Green, and R. E. Griffith, Hon. Sec. Decided to accept Spratts' estimate for printing stationery for show, and Mr. H. W. Jones's tender for printing schedule. Letters read from Mr. J. Kershaw, the judge of members' show, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, Mr. A. Wyne Williams, Bodwyn, agreeing to act as one of the Vice-presidents; Mr. Owen Jones, Messrs. Fattorini and Sons, Ltd., re badges for Presidents and committee. Decided to order badges from above firm. Sec. handed over 17s. 6d. cash to Treasurer as membership fees. Schedule will be ready shortly, and only paid members will receive schedule of members' show. We have 20 classes, with 3 money prizes in each, also twenty specials, and a challenge cup for most points for 1913 Canaries. Membership is only 1s. for the year. The judge is a specialist in British Birds and Mules. Next committee meeting May 23rd, at 7.45, at above rooms.—R. E. Griffith.

METROPOLITAN C.B.A.

Meeting held at new headquarters, Kelvedon Hall, Walham Green, May 17. Mr. Plank presided over a good attendance. All were highly pleased with the new headquarters. Decided to change the meeting night to the third Thursday in each month. Show dates were fixed—nest feather show June 28, young bird, July 19; and annual, Nov. 15, Mr. Norman to be asked to judge the nest feather, and Mr. Robson young bird and annual. Two extra classes to be added to the Border section, and a foreign class was put on; it is hoped that a few more foreign bird lovers will join us. Messrs. Edwards, Ward, Mower, Ground, Jeffries, French, Peg, Freeman, Clark, and Mrs. Mullie were elected members. Mr. Frank Easterling very kindly offered two silver medals—one champion and one novice—for most points gained by birds fed solely on his colour food. Decided that the schedules and catalogues be printed, and that admission to first and second young bird shows be sixpence, including catalogue; and at annual show sixpence, catalogue threepence. Intending members should join at once to be in time for first show. —F. Moore, 49, Kelmscott Road, Clapham Junction.

WEST STANLEY AND DIS. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 17, Mr. Butler chair, with a very large turn-out of members. Chairman introduced Mr. J. Maddison, of Newcastle, who came to give the first of his lectures on Mule breeding, and was given a very hearty welcome He spoke for a long time on dark muling, and touched upon all the most suitable Finches to pair up, also the different seeds for each species. At the finish of his lecture a good many questions were put, which Mr. Maddison kindly answered. He was given a hearty vote of thanks, which was well responded to.—W. Elliott.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting held May 14, Mr. E. T. Willmott chair, before a splendid muster. Mr. Turner, Sparkbrook, was nominated as a member, total 71. Special rules for silver cups competition were passed, also an additional silver cup for British, Mule and Hybrid section was agreed upon, to be purchased. Rules relating to the young bird shows in June and July were passed. The allotting of the specials takes place at the June meeting a week or so before first date, judges Messrs. G. H. Russell and J. Roe. The season promises to beat all records, all members agreeing that with such a splendid attraction for competition everyone will be keen on showing.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

LEITH O.S.

Monthly meeting held in Liberal Club, Hope St., May 10. President, Mr. J. Lumsden, chair. Sec. read replies from judges for annual show, Nov. 8, viz., Scotch Fancies, Mr. Allardyce, Wishaw, and Mr. J. Hendry, Govan; Norwich, Mr. J. Winter, Edinburgh; Borders, Mr. T. Arnott, Hawick, and Mr. J. P. Baxter, Broxburn; British and Mules, Mr. L. J. Arrighi, Edinburgh. Mr. D. Sayers handed over to the society a beautiful silver cup which had been presented to the society by an anonymous donor for the best Softbill, the cup to be won three times before becoming the winner's own property. It was agreed to have a ramble to Raith Estate, Kirkcaldy, on June 14, leaving Edinburgh by train at 2.15. Mr. Wm. Lister, of Kirkcaldy, has very kindly placed his services at the disposal of the members, so it is hoped that as many members as possible will turn out to make this outing a success. No meeting will be held during June, July and August. Meetings will be resumed on the second Saturday of September.—George W. Brown, Secretary.

NORTHERN BORDER AND S.F.C.C

Monthly meeting, held May 5, Mr. W. Smith chair, with a good turn-up of members. A hearty welcome was accorded to our vice-pres., Mr. A. Parkin. The following were elected members: Messrs. W. Browell, Blaydon; Armstrong, Perry Main; Stobbs, Wallsend; W. Tallantyre, J. Nixon, J. Wray, J. Heslop, W. Howe, and G. W. Wray, all of Haltwhistle. Decided that first feather table shows be held in July and Aug. Balance sheet shows a balance of 9s. 3d., which was considered not bad after paying nearly £6 for prizes. Winners in the year's competitions: Marble clock and bronzes for most points over the selected shows, Mr. J. Johnston; gold medal for most points in novice section, Mr. W. Affleck; silver medal for most points gained by three highest birds at each patronage show, Newcastle, champion section, Mr. J. Nicholson; novice, Mr. J. G. Greason; Blaydon, champion, W. Espie, novice, W. Affleck; Haltwhistle, champion, J. Johnson, novice, W. Pape; Gateshead, champion, T. Chapman, novice, J. Brown; Sunderland, champion, A. Montgomery, novice, W. Stephenson. For the table shows, Mr. J. Johnston won the horns for most points in champion section, and Mr. T. Smith silver medal for most points in novice. At next meeting Mr. W. Harvey has promised to give us a lecture on "Lessons we learn from our Birds."—M. C. Potts.

GATESHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting held May 14, vice-chairman (Mr. Pettersson) presided in the absence of Mr. Holden. Letters were read from Bournemouth C.B.S., H. H. Towers, and F. Hammond, enclosing the following sums towards our funds, viz., 10s. 6d., 5s., and £1 1s. 6d., and from Mr. Carl cheque value £7 10s. 4d., the result of CAGE BIRDS' collection. Decided to have nest feather show July 26. Messrs. R. Tindale and J. Maddison were appointed to judge same. The following classes were decided: Norwich, clear yellow, clear buff, ticked or variegated; Yorkshires ditto, Borders ditto, Crest or Crest-bred, A.O.V. Canary, Mule, Goldfinch or Bullfinch, Linnet, A.O.V. Finch or Bunting, Softbill, Foreign, Cardinal and larger, A.V. smaller. Decided to hold show in same hall as last year. An egg-food-making demonstration was given by Messrs. R. Tindale, H. Wellsbury, and J. Scott, and a very interesting item it proved to be. Mr. Tindale was the first to take his place at the table, and he said that he preferred bread to biscuit, the same to be at least three days old; he used the crust as well as the soft, as he thought it was the best part. For the first week he only used half slice of bread, adding a little caster sugar and maw seed. After a week he used one slice of bread (fairly thick), two spoonfuls sugar, same of maw seed. He thought the sugar was the means of saving the food from going bad. He advised that the egg be boiled for twenty minutes. After putting the egg and bread through the machine, he mixed it by rubbing it well through his hands, and if he found any of his hens that were not feeding well, he added some scalded rape. Mr. Wellsbury started by saying that he used bread a week old, putting in the oven first, cutting same in slices, and leaving it until it was well dried; then he put it through a machine, and stored it in a stone jar, and he used one cupful of powdered bread to one egg, putting both through his sieve twice, as by doing this he got it thoroughly mixed, and he added one spoonful of moist sugar. Mr. Scott was the next to try. He only used his machine to put his egg through; he also used bread, but only the soft part, which he crumbled through with his hands, about equal parts of egg and bread. After the foods had been handed around for inspection, the demonstrators were questioned as to the results they had had. Mr. Tindale said that in his second year he reared 104 young birds on similar food to that which he had just made. Mr. Wellsbury said that he had good results in past years. In regard to Mr. Scott's food, most members thought it would be very expensive if any fancier had a big stock up for breeding. But in regard to the other two, it was the opinion that they were both good and cheap, seeing that they used the crust as well as the soft part of the bread. A vote of thanks was accorded to these gentlemen for their most interesting and instructive demonstration. Committee meeting will be held May 28; business important. Subscriptions are now due.—W. Curry, Sec.

NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE R.C.C.

Special meeting held May 17, at Evan's Cafe, High Street, Newcastle. Mr. Leese presided. The meeting expressed sympathy with Mr. Hemmings in his illness, and hoped for a speedy recovery. The use of club room has been obtained on very favourable terms; payment to commence from next meeting, 2nd Saturday in June. A members' show will be held in the autumn. Young birds competing must be rung with the B.R.C.C. rings. These can be obtained from Mr. Tomlinson. Members are requested to bring birds to the meetings.—J. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Crown Hotel, Hill Street, May 7th, a fair number of members being present. Mr. A. Breadhurst, chair. All new members proposed at last meeting were elected. The judges for the nest feather show were nominated: Mr. Rae, Handsworth; Mr. G. Baker, Perry Barr; and Mr. Wills, Birmingham. Mr. J. Burke kindly consented to give a lecture on the Yorkshire Canary at next monthly meeting Mr. De Maillet read a lecture on the Roller Canary, kindly lent by Mr. Harper, of Bilston, which was greatly appreciated. Mr. Breadhurst proposed votes of thanks to Mr. De Maillet and Mr. Harper, also that the Secretary should write the latter thanking him for his kindly effort.—J. H. Jones, Hon. Sec., per R. Tipper.

The Shows.

MORLEY C.B.S.

Table show of British birds held at Sycamore Hotel, May 17, open to the district; entries, 2d., the club to add 4d.; no member to take anything but the card. Prizes to go to non-members only; visitors free. Mr. D. Holliday judge. 1, Gomersall, a beauty of a Yellowhammer, lovely col.; 2, Liscoe, Linnet, grand markings, h.m.; 3, Foster, Linnet, h.m.; vhc, Burnell; hc, Cockrem; c, Grayson. After judging we had more visitors than I can remember. The following were elected members: H. Licence, T. Burton, W. Grayson, J. Tipling, T. A. Botterill, G. Charlesworth, and C. Brown. It was proposed that we have a Linnet singing contest in a few weeks' time, on the same lines.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A.

Monthly show, held at headquarters, May 14th, but owing to the breeding season and holiday week very few entries were staged. Messrs. J. Gravett judged Canaries, and S. Sparks British. Special best 1913 Canary, given Mr. H. James, Mr. F. Dandridge, nice clear yellow Yorks.; special for member previously out of cards in Yorks., given by Mr. C. Pearson, Mr. F. Pelling. Monthly competition: Dandridge 15; Wall, 4; Absolon, 3; Bignell, 3; Morrish, 3; Pelling, 1.—Will H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

PORTMADOC.

Twenty-ninth annual show, held Portmadoc Park, May 14th, in connection with the Horse, Dog and Poultry. Quality in general exceeded that of former years. Classification is very meagre at this fixture, still the entries mustered well. British were the best filled classes throughout the show, special for best bird being awarded to Mr. R. E. Griffith (Hon. Sec.), Carnarvon, with a good field-moulted Bullfinch. Local special, Mr. O. Jones, Harlech, nervy yell. Yorks. Pres., Mr. Randal Casson; Vice-Pres., Mr. A. P. Percival; Chair., Mr. W. Morris Jones; Treas., Mr. W. Jones. Mr. D. R. Evans held the secretarial duties once more; everything seemed to be in apple-pie order through the day, and birds were despatched in good time. We hope to see the classification extended another year. Mr. J. R. Owen was steward in charge of section, ably assisted by a competent staff. Mr. Clem Watson, Watford, judged, and gave general satisfaction.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous Issue, Page, and Column are stated by the advertiser.

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which me must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

APPLIANCES.

What do you know about Canaries? It is just upon that depends your prospect of getting pleasure, profit and prizes. But if you want to improve your knowledge so that you can win prizes, so that you can back your pets against the best in your Club and still be proud of them, you will do well to send for the free booklet offered below. It was written chiefly to describe the real use to every class of cage-bird lover, of the splendid one-volume work "Canaries, Hybrids and British Birds," but it is full of interest and well worth sending for on its own account; the 15 illustrations in the booklet will take your fancy.

Do not wait, send to-day for this handy free booklet, it will be a ½d. well spent.

CANARIES
HYBRIDS & BRITISH BIRDS

By the well-known authority
MR. JOHN ROBSON,
is a complete Encyclopædia

of everything pertaining to the hobby. It is far and away the best guide any man can have, because it contains chapters by the leading Bird specialists, and the whole matter is brought into shape and expertly edited.

There is nothing in regard to the subject that is too small to be overlooked; everything any man can possibly want to know is in the book; it is the most authoritative work on the subject ever issued.

That is why so many thousands of the work have been sold since it came out. Its 41 practical chapters are the result of many years' experience and cover with remarkable fulness every side of the subject. There are 26 exquisite full-page coloured plates painted from life subjects, and 140 other illustrations.

Please bear in mind, however, we cannot supply another copy after the 670 have gone. Get the free brochure; it will convince you how splendidly and completely the work can meet every requirement.

"PHOSTO"

The recognised greatest food on the market. It has caused a sensation amongst experts. Hens, after use, will feed, and this is not all; the youngsters thrive and grow to a wonderful degree. It will not make a small bird a big one, but I will guarantee it will make them considerably larger. Testimonials coming in daily from all parts. Sent immediately on receipt of P.O. Give it a trial. It will save you pounds. "Phosto" is not a medicine to be given when ill; it is a food for all times, but most beneficial now. Never been known to fail. 184, Leighton Road, Kentish Town, May 24. 1913. Dear Sir,—Will you kindly forward another 2/6 tin of 'Phosto.' I think it a most wonderful food; no bad feeding hens now, and young birds at five weeks as big as Bullfinches.—Yours truly, W. S. Day" Sold in tins, 1/-, 2/6, and 4/6.—Judge Silk, the Norwich Specialist Whitstable. (713)

SOFT MOULT.

Wanted a trial. We are confident our Medicines will give you satisfaction. Special offer to all bird fanciers. If you have a cock bird that you are relying upon for the breeding season, that is not in full song, or has gone into the soft moult, or a hen that is dull and moping, and will not shape for breeding, we guarantee you a perfect cure. We have the grandest medicine ever introduced for bringing birds into breeding condition. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for loss of voice, soft moult, egg-binding, going light, feather-plucking, diarrhœa, and for dull and moping birds. In 7d. and 1/1 (treble size) bottles. Special size, 2/-. This medicine is undoubtedly the finest pick-me-up ever offered for birds that are run down or gone off song. Fanciers note: If our medicines fail to do as advertised, we guarantee to return full money. For bronchitis, wheezing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic. Also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. The safest and most reliable medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. As an advertisement we will send a 7d. bottle of each of the above medicines for 1/-, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9. All post paid, per return, at our risk. Two valuable seed recipes: How to Feed Linnets and Rollers for Contest Singing, given free to all purchasers of our medicines.—Frank Ditchfield, Bird Specialist, Oldham.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Meeting held May 15, at headquarters, Horse and Jockey, Mr. Hibberson chair. After the usual business a very important item was our Nest Feather Show, it being finally decided to hold it this year at our club house, June 21. Judges were nominated; their names will appear in due course if they accept. Hoping all members will try to attend the next meeting, when a treat is promised, viz., a lecture on "British Bird Life," by Mr. Darlow.—W. Hailstone, Sec.

NORTHERN NORWICH P.H.C.

Annual general meeting, held May 21. Mr. Topping presided over a fair attendance. Balance-sheet showed an income of £2 15s., and expenditure £2 9s. 11d., balance 5s. 1d., and was passed as correct. After the rules had been gone carefully through, it was carried that they remain as they were. Decided to hold a meeting on June 14, in Lockhart's, 65, Grainger Street, near Monument, to allot patronage for the forthcoming show season. Societies desiring same must have their application in by then, time 7.30. It is hoped that those members who live in the country will try and attend, as this meeting has been specially called on a Saturday to give them a chance to have a say in the allotting of our patronage. Decided to ask Mr. W. H. Butler to stand for Presidentship; vice-presidents, Mr. J. Mackenzie, Mr. Tindle, Mr. Crawhall, Mr. Cracknell, Lady Patron, Mrs. Crosby; chair, Mr. R. Topping; vice-chair, Mr. Lawson; committee, all local members, with the addition of Messrs. G. Dobinson, Seaton Delaval; E. Cowling, Morpeth: Thos. Fletcher, Rowlands Gill. Auditors, Messrs. A. Holden, J. Pierson; sec., Mr. R. Laidlaw, 55, Colston Street, Benwell, Newcastle, to whom all future correspondence must be sent, I having resigned, owing to not having the time to look after same, since taking over the secretaryship of Gateshead Society. A vote of thanks was given to the late secretary for his past services, and to one and all I extend my most sincere thanks for their kindness to me while I have been secretary. Mr. Hodson Birtley was elected a member. I appeal to Norwich fanciers in the following counties: Northumberland, Durham, Cumberland, and Westmorland to join us, as this society was formed to look after the interests of their favourite, and to see that proper classification and equal prize-money was given. Societies desiring our patronage must give not less than six classes, and one or more novice classes, and state name of judge, and apply by the date mentioned herein. Annual subscription, 2s. 6d.—W. Curry, late Sec.

LOCHGELLY C.B.S.

Meeting held in the Drill Hall, May 23, Mr. T. Wildridge presiding. Several new members were put forward and accepted. Secretary intimated that the schedule for this year would show an increase of 9 classes, making in all 88. Ramble takes place on Monday to Raith Estate. All fanciers are heartily invited to join in the day's outing.—R. Muir, Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Meeting held Oldham Hall, May 22, Mr. G. Green, chair. 25 new members were elected. The following were proposed: Messrs. Higham, Lomax, Redpath, Fawcett, Rushton, for election next meeting. Applications for patronage were read from Preston, Manchester, Bradford, Halifax, Newcastle, Scottish National, and Sheffield. It is proposed to hold a nest feather show July 19; see advertisement later. After a very interesting time, meeting closed.—F. Handley, Hon. Sec.

CHESTER-LE-STREET C.B.S.

Meeting held May 24. Business re Nest Feather Show. was settled; also chairman and sec's report re hall for annual show was heard, and it was decided to leave that over till next meeting. Table show, held same night. Mr. R. Wilford judged with satisfactory results. GREENF.: 1, Redpath; 2, Davidson; 3, Wild. BUNTING: 1, vhc, Davidson, Yellow and Corn Bunting respectively; 2, hc, Wild Yellow and Reed Bunting; 3, Forster, Yellow Bunting.—R. Ward, Sec.

WESTERN COUNTIES O.S.

Meeting held at Oddfellows Hall, Plymouth, May 20. Mr. C. Dart presided over a very good attendance for the time of the year. Arrangements were made for Nest Feather Shows for cup competition, June 4, June 25, and July 15. Judges for June 4th show; Yorks., Mr. C. Large; Norwich, Mr. J. E. Rowe; Crests, Mr. C. Hoar; Cinnamons and A.O.V., Mr. F. Snell; Mules and British, Mr. G. Pridham. Sec.

NORWICH C.C. OF ULSTER

Meeting held May 3, at Headquarters, Clarence Place Hall, May Street, Mr. Adams, and as Mr. Barclay, our sec., is still unable to be present, Mr. J. Stewart again kindly took his place. Specials referred to in our last report coming to hand all is now satisfactory. Six new members nominated: Messrs. A. Vernor, F. E. Wheatley, J. Woods, G. McKeown, J. Bradley, W. Kane; next meeting in above hall, June 7, and as all members should be clear on the books a good muster is requested to attend, when some very important business will come forward, and as some of our members are using closed rings we shall be pleased to have their opinion of them. A hearty welcome to the Fancy and their friends is extended.—Walter Connell, Asst. Sec.

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Monthly meeting held Guildhall, Wandsworth Rd., May 22, Mr. H. Norman presiding over a good attendance. The rules as drawn up by the committee were submitted, and after being carefully read and a few alterations made, were passed. Decided that the club's patronage be given to societies providing four champion classes and two novices, as follows: Champ cl. cr tkd. buff cock, ditto yellow, A.V. hen, A.O.V. cock or hen, novice yellow cock or hen, ditto buff. The society will give a silver spoon at each show held under the club's patronage. Mr. R. A. Newley very kindly offered a marble clock, value £2 for champion section, and there is a cruet for novice section. Mr. J. Robson and Mr. F. Burton were elected auditors. The following members were elected:—Messrs. Allen Silver, Willis, Earwaker, Green, Wall, Dr. Lawrie, Hands, junr., Burnell, Bobberts, Woods, Jopling, Maycock, Mrs. Thynne, Mrs. Aitken. Mr. R. A. Newley, 24, Stockwell Green, was appointed cage maker to the club, and has promised a percentage to the club on all cages sold. A cup fund has been opened, and was well supported, and as it is hoped to get a £10 10s. cup, all members and friends are earnestly requested to subscribe to the fund. Subs. are now due, and members would greatly assist the committee by forwarding same as early as possible.—F. Moore, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BRADFORD O.S.

Meeting held at Flying Dutchman Hotel, Leeds Road, Bradford, May 17, before the largest gathering of members this year, over 40 being present; Mr. Morement, chair. After we had made two new members, sample show prize cards were handed round for inspection, business here being curtailed in order to proceed with the debate on the breeding and feeding of Canaries, as announced at last meeting. Mr. Chittenden should have been asked to open the debate, but, unfortunately, through an error, was not notified, so our hon. sec., Mr. W. Helliwell, kindly consented to act in his place. In opening the debate, he said he believed the best plan was to run birds in pairs and not sets, as a great many of our members ran their birds in sets. One or two questions being asked as to the quantity of birds he had reared in one year on his method of pairing, he said he usually used about 13 or 15 hens, and for the last eight years he had never missed rearing 100 young. Green food he strongly recommended—watercress, fresh every day if possible, and egg-food fresh daily. Where anyone had the opportunity of making his egg-food twice a day during the feeding period, this plan was the better. For birds in the nest their best meal was first thing in the morning. Cages should be cleaned once a week, and when the young were ready to be taken from their parents no one need be afraid of having drinking water in the cage, because, if the water be clean and pure, it could not possibly harm the youngsters. Mr. Helliwell brought his remarks to a finish to allow a little time for questions and general discussion, after which a vote of thanks to Mr. Helliwell was unanimously carried.—P. N. Jenkinson, Asst. Sec.

ARBROATH C.B.S.

Meeting held May 21. It was gratifying to see the membership increasing, also the funds coming up. It was arranged to have a ramble on Sunday, June 1. Meet at Tower-Nook at 10 a.m. Other minor matters were considered, and the meeting was brought to a close with a vote of thanks to the chairman.—J. Gray, Sec.

CLAY CROSS C.B.S.

Meeting held May 21; Mr. J. G. Bescoby presided over a good meeting. Decided to hold members' F.F. show, June 7th. Classes:—Buff Norwich, yellow Norwich, buff Yorkshire, yellow Yorkshire, A.O.V., Linnets, Mules, and Goldfinch or Bullfinch. Birds must be staged by 6.30. Special for best bird in the show. Anyone wishing to become a member before the show may do so by writing for particulars to the secretary.—J. Griffiths, Bridge St., Clay Cross.

TREDEGAR C.B.S.

Meeting held at headquarters, Silver Grill, Tredegar, May 22; Mr. J. Griffiths, chair. Messrs. J. Harding and D. J. Vaughan were accepted as members. Decided to hold table show of first feather birds, June 10. Birds to be staged by 7; judge, Mr. Evan Powell; entry, 3d. per bird; money to go towards open show fund. Secretary instructed to obtain ornamental prize cards, same to be awarded at above show. I hope members will bring all their young birds and so help on the show funds. A hearty invitation is extended to all fanciers. Admission free.—W. B. Watkins, Sec.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

Second evening show held May 22; judge, Mr. Forse, Leyton C.B.S.; a splendid entry of 183. Silver spoons, specials and cards presented next meeting, June 12, 8.30, Workman's Hall, by Mr. Forse. Mr. G. A. Parker won special for best bird in show with a fine Yorkshire, also special for most points.

NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

On May 21, at Library Hall, Church Street, Stoke Newington, the above association held an interesting egg-food mixture competition. Eight members entered, and the various ingredients and methods adopted by them were fully explained during the process of mixing, which in each instance was done with great care and precision. There was little to choose between the various mixtures, which was proved by the even distribution of votes by members present, who were requested to place them in order of merit. First prize was awarded to Mrs. W. J. Salter, the only lady competitor, and second to Mr. H. Neightown. There was a fair attendance, but I am hoping for a record at our next meeting, June 18, when we hold a young stock table show. Members and friends are cordially invited.—P. W. Jeffries.

YORKSHIRE C.C.

Committee meeting held Market Tavern, Bradford, May 24; Mr. Towers, chair. There was a good attendance. Decided that there be ten patronage shows only, and full patronage be given to each show; members to show separate birds for the separate competitions, three birds to count in each, and competing birds to be marked as follows:—For the Ogden trophy, Y.C.C.O.; Ramsden cup, Y.C.C.R.; amateur competition, Y.C.C.A.; the junior novice competition, at Yorkshire Union shows only, Y.C.C.A. Mr. J. Bailey offered a cup value 3 guineas as 1st prize in the amateur competition, which was accepted with thanks. The following were granted the club's patronage:—Great Horton; Windhill O.S., Halifax; Bradford East, Carlisle; Sheffield O.S., Blaydon-on-Tyne; Bradford City; Bradford West; and Bradford Nat. Messrs. P. Taylor, J. Bushey, Marshall Bros., and J. C. Beaumont, were elected members.—John Greaves, Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.C.

Committee meeting held Market Tavern, Bradford, May 17; chair, Mr. W. A. Wilson, Leeds. Resignation of Mr. S. Dean was accepted with regret. New members elected:—Messrs. J. Wilson, C. Parks, T. Proctor, J. Livingstone, E. Hattersley, J. Smith, F. Hodgson, Pickup and Son. Letter read from Mr. J. W. Ramsden; the club to thank him for special prize offered. Decided to let members' show with closed ring birds if they wished (except at Yorkshire Union shows, where the club's patronage is given). Sub-committee appointed to transact any business of minor importance:— Messrs. Cowgill, Simonett, Fortnam, Hammond, Chittenden, Wilcock (Sam), J. Roe. Decided to give patronage at ten shows. Owing to clashing of dates, we are open to accept applications for shows held on Oct. 14th, Nov. 15, 29, Dec. 13, 20; these are open dates. Patronage was granted to the following:—Oct. 10-11, Leeds C.B.S.; Oct. 17-18, Halifax O.S.; Oct. 25, Bradford East O.S.; Oct. 29-30, Border City (Carlisle) O.S.; Nov. 7-8, Sheffield O.S.; Nov. 22, City of Bradford O.S.; Dec. 5, 6, 8, Bradford National C.B.S.; Dec. 31-Jan 1, Scottish National. It is hoped that the few members in arrears for 1912-13 will forward same on to me as early as possible. Intending members send in your names early.—F. Rhodes, Hon. Sec.

LONDON C.B.A.

Adjourned annual general meeting, held at New Headquarters, "El Vino," 3, Piccadilly Place, May 20th; president, Mr. R. L. Crisp, chair, with a good attendance. Balance sheet was adopted and passed as correct. Votes of thanks were accorded to officers for services rendered during the year 1912, and to the dinner committee, Messrs. Trower, Shepherd, Boxall, and Wallington. Mr. Trower replied on their behalf. President presented a silver-plated teapot to Mr. Marley as special prize for most points in the British section during 1912, two similar teapots and a silver cup were there to be presented, but unfortunately the winners were not in attendance. Proposed to ask Mr. Pickard to take charge of the silver cups, etc., belonging to the association, and that a vote of thanks be accorded to Mr. Pickard for his kindness in taking charge of same for 1912. The following were nominated for membership:—Messrs. Brownlie, Stevens, Johnson, Clark, and Shearman. Letter from the London Federation was read, also a proposal for the reconstruction of the Federation, this having been previously discussed by the committee, who recommended the adoption of same; the proposal was carried. Decided to hold young bird show, June 21; Mr. John Robson, judge. Schedule as last year; birds staged by 2 o'clock. Mr. R. L. Crisp kindly gave a silver-plated teapot for most points in the Canary section at three shows. Mr. John Robson had kindly prepared some most interesting questions on Canaries; these were handed to the members, and some most useful information was obtained in the discussion of same. Owing to the late hour it was decided to close the meeting and to take the remainder of the unanswered papers at next meeting, when it is hoped that every member will endeavour to be present. A committee meeting was held after the meeting, and the following were elected members:—Messrs. Thurley, Hall, Nicholls, Brownlie, Stevens, Johnson, Clark, and Shearman; officers and committee please note, the next committee meeting will be held at the "El Vino," June 3; no further notice will be sent.—Jas. Bray, Junr., Sec.; F. Knight, P.C.

GLASGOW SOUTHERN (Confined) O.A.

Monthly meeting, held May 5, in the Grand National Halls, S.S. There was a fair turn-out of members. A record was taken of the number of young birds (Scotch Fancies) each member had to report. Pres. Fulton topped the list with 16; Messrs. Gray and Orr reported 11 each, Mr. Fleming 6, Mr. Renwick 4; total 67 young; a much better report than on the same date last year.—R. Jolliffe,

SCOTCH FANCY NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

The following are additional members for 1913:—F. Strathearn (South Alloa); J. D. Maxwell, P. Maxwell, J. Carlaw (Falkirk); L. Jackson (Kirkmuirhill); J. Morrison (Helensburgh); J. D. Brown, J. Brown (E. Kilbride); R. Johnston (Musselburgh); G. C. T. Hope, P. McNiven, Jas. Tait (Edinburgh); Wm. Hunter (Wishaw); W. Wilson (Blantyre); M. Frew (Neilston); R. Thoms (Dundee); W. McClure, J. Muir, Jas. Orr, John Orr, J. McMahon, W. Lees, W. Gray (Glasgow); J. Y. Millar (Cardonald); G. Fulton (Partick); A. Clark (Rutherglen).—A. M. Baird, Sec.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting held May 23, at Assembly Rooms. Present:—Chairman, Mr. J. Jones; vice-chairman, Mr. G. Jones; hon. treas., Mr. R. T. Edwards; Messrs. G. W. Jones, E. Jones, E. Hughes, and R. E. Griffith, sec. Letter read re badges for presidents and committee, and the committee decided to have these. Letter read from Mr. A. Wynne Williams, enclosing a cheque of 10s. 6d. to the funds of society. The following have been enrolled members for 1913 and 1914:—Miss Violet Boxer, Bangor; Messrs. Daughty, Holyhead; Hughes, Beaumaris; Gallishaw, Menai Bridge. Decided that the sec. put show posters in printer's hands. Those wishing to join in order to compete at our record members' show, held July 5, please enclose p.o. 1/-, to sec., Mr. R. E. Griffith, 5, Balaclava Road, Carnarvon, who will send a membership card and schedule of show.—R. E. Griffith, Sec.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in Cairns Memorial Hall, May 20, Mr. A. W. Watson, chair, a good turnout of members being present. Classification for F.F. show:—3 Norwich, 1 Crest and C.-B., 4 Borders, 2 Scotch Fancy, 1 each A.V. Can., Hybrid or Light Mules, Dark Mules, Lizards. Mr. J. F. Dewar, judge. Birds staged by 3; date, Aug. 2. The members were then entertained to a lecture by Mr. A. W. Watson on "Mule and Hybrid breeding." The same gentleman explained the different ways in which to bring the Finches into condition, also the various crosses with which he had been most successful, not forgetting to mention those that he had been unsuccessful with, but he was still looking forward to the day when he could produce something out of the common. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Watson brought the meeting to a close. Subs. are now due, and should be paid at once. Mr. Wm. Watson, and Mr. J. D. Robertson were elected members.—J. C. Charlton, Sec.

CINNAMON-MARKED YORKS. C.C.

Committee meeting, held at Market Tavern, Bradford, May 24, Mr. P. Dick chair. The principal business was the arranging of our competition prizes and allotting patronage. Only six societies applied, and patronage was given to the following: Gt. Horton, Windhill, Manchester, Sheffield, Bradford National, Shipley. Any society willing to comply with our rule regarding classes, and applying to me may have our patronage, but please apply as early as possible, as I want to get year book printed. Specials are far more valuable than ever before, owing to the generosity of Messrs. H. H. Towers and Mr. A. Brown, a trophy, value £10 10s., to be won three times, not necessarily in succession, along with £3 3s. trophy is first prize in open competition; 2nd prize open £1 10s.; 3rd prize, Mr. Morrison will give, value one guinea; 4th, Mr. T. Sandiford, North Road, Preston, will give case of silver dessert cutlery; amateur competition, 1st, value £1 1s.; 2nd, value 10s. 6d.; 3rd, value 7s. 6d.; 4th, value 5s. These prizes, along with CAGE BIRDS' prizes for amateurs, make a total for this competition of nearly £5. Novice competition, 1st, Mr. A. Cooper, if possible similar to last year; 2nd, Mr. Morrison; 3rd, Mr. Brown, value 10s. 6d., costume length; 4th, value 7s. 6d.; 5th, 5s.; this novice competition runs through Y.U. novice classes, and it behoves all Y.U. novice members to join our club. Last year our entries dropped to just under 11 per class; let us make a better show this year. Mr. J. W. Ramsden gives two silver plated cruets or teapots, one in the open and one in the novice. Mr. A. Brown, Mr. P. Drake, and the Sec. were appointed to meet the representatives of the Y.C.C. and G.M.Y.C.C., to try and form some scheme of amalgamation.—R. Garnett.

"PHOSTO"

The Phosphatic Food Adjunct.

Invaluable for Bad Feeding Hens. Acts like Magic as testified below.

Langton, Hulse Road,
Southampton.
May 20th, 1913.

Dear Sirs,—I enclose order form for another tin of "Phosto." I cannot speak too highly of it, and have used it from the commencement of the breeding season. I have never had such fine strong young birds, and I attribute it all to "Phosto," especially as nearly every breeder is complaining of the season this year.

Yours truly, (Mrs.) K. SPOONER.

In tins, post free, 1/-, 2/6, 4/6, sample 3d., or from our Specialist Agents.

Our "Phantom British Bird" Puzzle.

Five Shillings Cash (or Books) for the Successful Solver

The above sketch represents the "ghost" of a certain species of British bird. We will forward 5/- cash (or our bird books to value, as may be preferred) to the reader who correctly identifies the bird. In the event of a tie, the winner will be drawn for by an independent person.

Points in the Breeding of Yorkshire Canaries.

A lecture given by Mr. Hulme before the members of the Leigh and Dis. C.B.S.

On May 14, Mr. Hulme gave a lecture on "Breeding the Yorkshire Canary," before a good attendance. Mr. Taylor took the chair, and said he was glad so many members were attending these lectures, but he was very sorry that we didn't get many outside fanciers present, he was sure there were a lot of fanciers in Leigh that only wanted rousing a little to get them to join the society, and he was also sure that they wouldn't regret it, once they joined. Mr. Hulme then rose and said, Mr. Chairman and fanciers, having been asked to give you a lecture on the Yorkshire Canary, I will do my best to tell you the methods I adopt in my own bird room. It being my first attempt to give a paper, it will well repay me for my trouble if I say anything that any of you may benefit by. There are several different methods, used by different fanciers to obtain certain results, so it must be borne in mind that what will do for one will not do for another, and my advice is to use your own discretion, providing you know anything about birds at all. I have devoted my time solely to breeding Yorkshires, and I leave it to you to choose whether you follow on the same lines that I have done or not, but if any of you differ from me, I shall only be too pleased for you to speak.

The Cages and their Fitments.

First of all, you want the cages, I like the double breeding cages with sliding partitions, so that you may construct them into small flights, about 3ft. long, 18in. high, and 10in. deep. I limewash them twice a year. The reason I use limewash is that I think it lets more light in, and it is better for the birds to peck at than distemper, as it helps to shell the eggs. Keep the crevices well dosed with paraffin, keep your seed hoppers and glasses perfectly clean, and don't forget to use plenty of paraffin in the nest pan before putting the lining in, for this will help to keep down red mites. I use swansdown linings, which you can make at a small cost, as I think they allow more room for the young ones, and let more air through than the ordinary thick felt ones.

All through the winter I feed my birds on plain canary seed, with a spoonful of rape seed twice a week, and a bit of apple or carrot occasionally. When February comes in, I give them a little inga seed, and add a little egg food, as the breeding season comes on.

I pair up the first week in April, placing the wire slide between for young birds. I think it is not needed for old birds that have been together before. For nesting material I use moss and cow hair.

The birds I advise you to go in for are those with short, silky feather, about 6¾in. long. I like the cock and hen to be as typical as possible, with a small beak, nice round head, neck nicely filled in, back to be nicely rounded, showing very little shoulder, long evenly carried wings, a neat waist, tapering down to a wedge shape, breast to be round, showing no frill whatever, and cutting away clean under a long compact tail. The legs should be long, showing plenty of thigh with erect and firm position. I like to have a bit of Belgian blood in my stock birds, because if you want position you will have to breed for it, and it is the one thing that plays a prominent part in a good Yorkshire. I also like a bit of green blood in, so as to get colour and quality from it.

Training and Feeding the Young.

When the young are hatched, I feed on egg and bread, watercress, hemp and soaked rape seed. When they get three weeks old, I place them in a Yorkshire show cage, which I find makes a good nursery cage, and I hang them in front of the cage occupied by the parents till they can pick for themselves. Then I place them in a small flight cage, giving them a spoonful of cod liver oil food for each bird, and a little soaked rape, gradually bringing them on to hard seed.

You must not forget to hang a show cage in front of them so that they can pop in and out at their own leisure, run them in as often as you can, and let them have plenty of handling, as it is only by so doing that you may expect them to know what the show cage is for. Now I will conclude by thanking you for your kind attention, hoping to be of more service at some future time. Several questions were asked, to which Mr. Hulme suitably answered. We concluded a very pleasant evening by moving a vote of thanks to Mr. Hulme for his lecture.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Ancient History Quoted.

The Editress of "Dainty Novels," in reply to my letter of last week, challenging her statement that two convictions at least had been obtained during the past twelve months in cases of blinding Chaffinches with red-hot needles, writes as follows:—

May 23rd, 1913.

Dear Sir,—I am obliged for your courtesy in inserting a portion of my letter in your issue of May 24th, and am glad to be able to give you part of the information you require. I am still tracing the particular case to which I referred, but the other one (you will remember I said there were two) was heard at Lambeth Police Court on the 25th October, 1909, before Mr. Hopkins, when a labourer named Frederick Collins, of Sultan Street, Camberwell, was sentenced to three months' hard labour for blinding two Chaffinches, severing the artery at the back of the eye by inserting a needle. A very steady hand is required for this operation, and in this particular case the defendant said he had had to be a teetotaller for that reason—a fact which makes it plain that he was not guilty in an isolated case. Your editorial remarks assure me that you will print this statement in your paper.

The above case was fully reported in Cage Birds of October 30, 1909, and a column was devoted to editorial comment, in the course of which appeared:—

It might be gathered from the opening statement of the prosecuting solicitor that this diabolical blinding process is quite commonly practised—in fact, an essential to success at the contests. If it was the intention to urge this view, then we meet it with an emphatic denial. . . . In short, it is only among certain of the "old hands" that the practice of blinding contest birds now obtains. And this abomination ought to be put down with a strong hand. We welcome the efforts of the R.S.P.C.A. to this end, and we will gladly aid the society to attain this consummation. We only hope that every person found to be in possession of a Chaffinch (or any other bird) which has been so cruelly and shamefully ill-treated may be brought within the pale of the law and prosecuted. That the sentence of three months' hard labour was richly merited none can question, and we are sure that the actions of the R.S.P.C.A. and the magistrate will be endorsed by every reader.

Confirmation Still Pending.

I sent a copy of our paper containing the report to the Editress who had made the statement referred to above, with the remark that I knew quite well of the occurrence which she now quotes as confirmative evidence, but I said that it was not fair to instance a solitary case as showing that the brutal practice was a general one, and that in any event it was quite outside the allegation that at least two convictions had been recorded within the past twelve months. I have received a reply as follows, and am waiting for the promised details:—

Dear Sir,—I am obliged for the copy of your paper, dated October 30, 1909, but I am still making inquiries with regard to the other cases, and hope to be able to write you further in a few days. I was very glad to read your editorial.

Yours truly,

Isabel Thorne.

Mrs. Sargeant, an enthusiastic bird-lover, whose account of her pet Cuckoos appears in our columns this week, refers to the 1909 case, and says: "All readers of Cage Birds must know that you are the first to give publicity to cases of cruelty which come under your notice, and properly condemn them in your columns. This lady evidently thinks that such exceptional cases make the rule, instead of proving it, as the saying goes."

I shall be obliged if our member, Mr. W. H. Grant, late of Woking, will kindly let me know where a letter will find him.

An Industrious Associate.

Among the letters this week from readers wishing to be registered as associates of Cage Birds League is the following. It shows the true fancier's spirit:—

Dear Sir,—I have been a long time in getting five of my friends to sign a pledge coupon. But I managed it all right. I had to give two of them a pair of Canaries to start with. I am very glad I did, as one of them has built a very fine aviary in his yard, and has also got a good few birds in his house. I have also got them to take Cage Birds in every week. I would sooner go a day without anything to eat, rather than I would miss having my Cage Birds. I have been in the bird fancy ever since I could walk, and I knew a few things by the time I started on my own, but I have learnt things out of your paper which I think I should never have known. Wishing Cage Birds every success.

Alf. Wellings, jun.

Hockley, Birmingham.

Our Bird Dealers' Certificates.

I am gratified to hear of the pleasure with which our Certificates have been received by those entitled to them, and practically all those to whom certificates have been granted have applied to have their names kept on the books of Cage Birds League, so that their shops may be visited from time to time by representatives of the League with a view of granting renewal certificates every six months. Those bird-dealers who are willing to accept inspection visits from a member of Cage Birds League, duly appointed for the purpose, have only to convey their wishes to me, and certificates will be granted at the end of six months if the reports are favourable. Among the acknowledgments received is the following from Mr. Geo. Bousfield, of Derby: "I thank you very much for the 'Certificate of Inspection,' which came to hand a few days ago, and can assure you I am delighted with it, and when framed shall be proud to exhibit it in my window, hoping by doing so to obtain more recruits for our army."

More Abuse of Bird Dealers.

An article by Mrs. K. Curry, in the May issue of the "Avicultural Magazine," is extraordinary as coming from one who is herself a keeper of birds. With a paragraph which reads as follows no bird lover will disagree. Mrs. Curry writes, "I for one should be inexpressibly thankful if a law against the wanton and indiscriminate capture and improper caging of birds were put into force; a strict supervision of dealers' shops made compulsory, and bird traffic relegated to those dealers who recognise their duty towards the inferior creation, and understand the nature and needs of the birds they sell."

Of course, some of us know that there are already laws against the "indiscriminate" capture of wild birds, for their catching during the close season is prohibited everywhere in our country, and also that there is a supervision of bird shops exercised by the officers of two humanitarian societies; but these are details.

In a paragraph inveighing against bird dealers as a body, and without making any exceptions, Mrs. Curry uses language which might have been taken bodily from a "Humanitarian" pamphlet, and says, "This is no fanciful fiction, but a stern and hideous reality." If Mrs. Curry knows of any individual bird-dealer who practises the horrible cruelties she alleges to be general, what was she doing not to take steps to have that individual punished? If she does not know of such an individual case, then she has no right to use the language employed in her wholesale denunciation of a trade which numbers no more delinquents among those carrying it on than are to be found in any other profession or occupation that may be named.

The Associate Coupons.

Among the large number of coupons being received, I am still getting some which in one way or another are not being sent in accordance with the very simple rules stated above each coupon. Some come without a postage stamp, some sets are obviously filled up by the sender himself, and not signed by separate people, some are without the addresses, and this week several readers send one coupon only. May I ask all who wish to become associates of Cage Birds League to be kind enough to read the conditions carefully, and especially to note that it is not sufficient for a reader himself to fill in the names and addresses of his friends. The friends themselves must sign the coupons with their full names and addresses.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of Cage Birds have written to say that they would like to join Cage Birds' League, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the League, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of Cage Birds League, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the League. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same

BIRD SERVICE AT HALIFAX.

Song Birds in Cages Decorate a Chapel.

In association with the Hanover (Halifax) U.M. School recent anniversary, there was a "bird" service on the Sunday afternoon. Cages containing several varieties of birds (including songsters) were hung between the pillars supporting the gallery, under the pulpit, and, by means of cords, across the body of the chapel. A large number of flowering plants, palms, etc., were happily introduced in association with the idea. The hymns had also been specially chosen for the occasion, the "Song of the Lark" and "O little birds that all day long," being among the number, and Miss Blanche Stott rendered appropriate solos.

Mrs. D. J. Macaulay, who presided over a crowded congregation, spoke of the pleasure that children could derive from a close acquaintance with the birds—even with the sparrow, of whom everyone seemed to think so meanly. She suggested to the scholars that they should persuade their parents to allow them to have a board put out from a window, or at least a window-sill that they could call their own so that they could put crumbs out each day and watch the birds from behind the window. Another plan was to place the half of a cocoanut in the tree or fence and fill that with food for the birds, which would soon become good friends.

The "Naughty Boy" & Three Others.

The Rev. John Naylor, who had previously spoken of St. Francis of Assisi and read his sermon to the birds, pleaded for the birds in a charming address. First, he asked that they should be given more freedom, and not confined in small cages with just a perch or two. They should have companionship, too. If they had only enough money to buy one bird instead of two or three, let them buy none. The birds that did not sing, such as the Crow and the Eagle, were the solitary ones; the singing birds needed company. "A bird," he said, "would much rather sing to another bird than sing to you."

Mr. Naylor asked for protection for the birds against four persons. First, "the naughty boy." Never was he so angry as when he saw boys mercilessly robbing nests and even killing the young. The extent to which the sin and robbery was carried on in Halifax was a scandal and disgrace. Secondly, there was the good-natured farmer, who did not know his enemies and his friends. He should study the list of each which had been drawn up by the Government, and then he would know which were the useful birds in the farm and garden and orchard. Then there was the sportsman, who took his gun and shot the prettiest birds so that they could be stuffed and put in a case. Lastly, there were those ladies who were not satisfied with silk ribbon and artificial flowers for the adornment of their hats and bonnets, but would like some lovely bird's feathers or a wing from a Bird of Paradise. He did not object so much to the Ostrich feather, for the bird did not suffer much, but the Osprey was killed for its feathers, and for the same cause the Bird of Paradise was dying out rapidly. He was glad to see that there was very little of this kind of desire in Halifax.

The collections amounted to £38 2s. 2½d., an advance of over £5 on last year.—"Halifax Weekly Courier."

Twitterings.

Mr. W. Clubb, sec. Stirling C.B.S., writes that the increase in subscription was to 3s., not 3s. 6d., as reported in last week's issue.

We hear from Mr. A. Wood, sec., that Mr. J. Pitchford, London Road, Stoke, will judge the Burton-on-Trent Nest Feather Show on July 19.

Mr. J. Burdett, sec., writes that Wingate and Dis. F.S. intends holding its 2nd annual show on January 1st, 1914. Mr. J. Stanger will again judge cage birds.

Kindly announce, writes Mr. W. Broadbridge, 34, George Street, Sittingbourne, that I have been elected secretary to the Sittingbourne and Dis. C.B.S. All correspondence should be addressed to me.

The following societies have been granted the patronage of the Norwich Plainhead Club for their open shows, writes Mr. F. Cunliffe, sec., Bolton, Burnley (Club Show) Manchester, Preston and Bradford National.

We hear from Messrs. Heseltine and Lambert, hon. secs., that the First Nest Feather Show of the Hull C.B.S. will be held at Oddfellows' Hall, June 2. Birds staged by 8 prompt. Judges, Messrs. W. T. Pepper and H. H. Frith.

Kindly announce, writes Mr. F. Moore, hon. sec., that owing to the date fixed for the annual show of the Metropolitan C.B.A. clashing with the City and Sub., we have changed our date to Nov. 8th. Mr. H. Norman will judge.

We hear from Mr. J. R. Meikle, Sec., that the judges for the Scotch Fancy section at the next Scottish National Show will be: Messrs. J. A. Stewart (Glasgow), A. Hamilton (Caldercruix), J. Carson (East Houses), and J. Hogg (Oakley).

Societies wishing for the patronage of the Southern Border Fancy Club should apply at once to Mr. F. Moore, 49, Kelmscott Road, Clapham Junction, London. The classification required is champion, clear or ticked buff cock, ditto yellow, A.V. hen, A.O.V.; novice, A.V. yellow, A.V. buff.

Mr. W. J. Moran, 2, Brunswick Street, Swindon, forwards the rules of the Swindon F. and F. A., with a programme for the year showing dates of papers on various subjects connected with the Fancy, dates of shows for the year, and a lantern lecture on Cage Birds, November 26, by Mr. J. T. Edmonds.

The programme of the Walkley and Dis. C.B.S. is to hand from the secretary, Mr. C. Tomlinson, 95, Winter Street. Twelve interesting items are included in the syllabus, comprising four lecture nights, question night, 4 table shows, a nest feather show, a washing exhibition, and the annual show for November 15.

The balance sheet and rule book of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club have been received from Mr. F. S. Matthes, hon. sec. and treas. The balance sheet shows a balance in hand of £5 15s. 3d., an increase of 10s. 2½d. upon last year's amount, and there are assets (cups, etc.) to the value of twelve guineas. The rule book contains the usual information, and has on its cover a map showing the district covered by the club.

We have received from the hon. sec. of Windhill C.B.S. the list of members' shows for 1913. There are two First Feather shows, June 14 and July 19, with ten classes each, and two winter shows, Sept. 27 and Dec. 27, with 28 classes each, of which ten in each show are for novices. The judges for the F.F. shows are June 14, Mr. Broadley, Windhill; July 19, Mr. J. Greaves, Manningham. For the winter shows the judges are: Sept. 27, Mr. W. Mundell, Manningham, and Dec. 27, Mr. H. J. Chittenden, Manningham. The hon. sec. is Mr. J. A. Taylor, 36, Airville Road, Frizinghall, Bradford.

To Society Secretaries, Advertisers and Correspondents generally.

Will all correspondents, and secretaries and officials of societies in particular, please note that CAGE BIRDS now goes to press on Wednesday afternoon so that all matter for publication in our issue of the same week MUST reach us on TUESDAY TO BE CERTAIN OF INCLUSION, or first post Wednesday at latest.

It would much facilitate our work if Secretaries and others would kindly write out their club reports, notices, etc., in the style in which they see them printed. Write on ONE SIDE ONLY of each sheet of paper used.

Mr. W. G. Andrews, hon. sec., writes that West Bromwich C.B.S. has fixed November 21 and 22 for the annual open show; will secretaries kindly note to avoid clashing.

I think your new departure "Our Hobby Week by Week," is an excellent idea, and you have a capable man in Mr. G. E. Weston. I wish Cage Birds continued success.—A. Ward (Deeping St. James).

Societies desirous of the patronage of the Open Norwich Plainhead C.C. on Oct. 4, Nov. 15, 29, Dec. 13, 20, kindly send in application as early as possible to F. Rhodes, 32, Barlow Street, Bradford.

Our annual ramble to Broadbottoms and District, writes Mr. J. Cope, sec., Oldham C.B.A., will take place on June 1. Train leaves Clegg Street station at 9.35. I shall be pleased to see a good number of fanciers and friends; all are welcome.

Will you please make it known in Cage Birds, writes Mr. Jeffery Jefferis, Sec. and Treas. Middlesex O.S., 40, High Street, Southall, that we are offering our patronage to three or four shows this coming season, competition will be for one cup each for Norwich, Yorkshires, and British, to be won outright this year. Societies desiring our patronage, please apply to me, stating judges and number of classes, etc.

OBITUARY.

Mr. John Taylor, Oldham.

It is with regret, writes Mr. J. Cope, Sec., Oldham C.B.A., that I have to report the death of one of our oldest and most esteemed members, in the person of Mr. John Taylor, who passed away on Tuesday last, May 20, at the age of 68 years, and was interred at Saddleworth on May 23. Mr. Taylor had been ill for a considerable time, but up to a fortnight ago, I am sure he fully expected to be with us again, and we were hoping the same, as he was one of those fanciers that societies can ill afford to lose. Although he had got so far advanced in years he was a regular attendant at our meetings, and always a familiar figure at our shows. The sympathy of each and every one of our members is with Mrs. Taylor and family in their sad bereavement. Our society was represented at the funeral by Messrs. Jas. Hampshire, F. Steeple, W. Hardy, and Mr. Geo. Fitton, who acted as bearers.

Would you kindly state in Cage Birds, writes Mr. E. Mitchell, hon. sec., that the Radius Show of Wadebridge and Dist. F.A. will be held on Nov. 19?

We hear from Mr. A. McCagherty, hon. sec., that the judges arranged for the show of Banbridge C.B. and P.A. are: Scotch Fancy and British birds, Mr. J. Kean; Norwich and Yorks, Mr. J. Trengove.

The Rule Book of the Norwich C.C. of Ireland has been received. It contains the rules of the club and the club standard of the Norwich Canary.

All members and friends, writes Mr. G. Hunt, hon. sec. Doncaster C.B.S., are invited to attend ramble on May 31. Meet at Balby tram terminus at 2.30 prompt. I hope all members will bring their wives or sweethearts.

Mr. R. Bamber, sec. of Ealing and Hanwell F.S., forwards the rule book of the society. Besides the list of officers and committee, and the rules, the book gives particulars of the challenge and other cups and the names of members in each section, together with the variety shown by each individual one.

I am anxious that fanciers around Abertillery should join our society, writes Mr. George Broome, hon. sec. (30, Powell St., Abertillery). There is a silver rose bowl to be won outright at our first feather show, also a number of cash specials allotted for novices only. I give all a hearty invitation to our next meeting (see club and society notices).

The members of the Sunderland C.B.A., writes Mr. G. Davison, hon. sec., intend having a ramble to Corbridge and Hexham on May 31 (weather permitting). A hearty invitation is given to all fanciers and friends in the district. Meet at Central Station at 12.30; train leaves at 12.45; return fare 1s. 9d. Hoping to see a good turn-out and a fine day.

Arrangements are now completed to hold the annual ramble of the Dunfermline C.B.S. on Saturday, June 7th, to Pitreavie (permission kindly granted by Henry Beveridge, Esq.), writes Mr. R. T. Campbell, Sec., 7. James Pl., Dunfermline. Members will meet at car terminus (top of New Row), at 1.45; then by car to Halbeath, where they will meet Mr. Oswald, head Forester, who will conduct the party over the ground. We have arranged to have tea at Mastertown about five o'clock. Members who intend being present on that date should notify us at earliest, and not later than Saturday, May 31st. District members could join the party at Halbeath at two o'clock. We welcome all fanciers and friends. In view of the ramble there will be no meeting held this month.

Allow me to congratulate Cage Birds upon the new feature, "Our Hobby Week by week," writes Mr. Thos. Pope (Plymouth). It is quite up to date and very interesting.

Novice members of the Sheffield O.S., writes Mr. Woodall, are asked not to forget the table show of Canaries on Tuesday next; 3 classes, prizes 4s., 2s., 1s., and no entry fees. Fancier friends will be welcomed at the meeting.

Mr. W. Curry writes that he has resigned the hon. secretaryship of the Northern Norwich Plainhead Club, and that correspondence should in future be addressed to the new hon. sec., Mr. R. Laidlaw, 55, Colston Street, Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

It was a pleasant surprise for me to see my hen. greater Spotted Woodpecker depicted on your front page last week. She has been caged now three years, and was formerly in the possession of that well known aviculturist, Mr. O. Millsum. She is to-day in the pink of condition. Wishing Cage Birds every success, which it well deserves.—James Yealland.

We hear that highly favourable reports have been received of success met with in the rearing of young birds by users of Ramsden's new food, "Lacphos" (note advertisement under "Foods") which is a preparation of milk, in powder form, combined with phosphates. A number of fanciers have used it as a substitute for hard-boiled eggs, with the best of results, judging by the fertility of the eggs laid by their birds, and the way in which the young have thrived and grown.

Leaving for Old England.

I am leaving Canada for England again on May 22nd, writes Mr. J. Nicholson, and my address for the present will be 3, Ellenborough Place, Maryport, Cumberland. If you will kindly notify this, it will save me writing each fancier friend.

Sparrow's Cross Channel Flight.

A Sparrow which was found in the garden of a house in Hartington Street, Loughborough, Leicestershire, had a thin sheet of paper carefully wrapped round one of its legs, bearing the following message: "Liberated in France, May 18, 1913.—J. R."—"Daily Express."

Lucky Llandrindod.

Mr. G. M. Hand, the proprietor of the "Kino" Cinematograph Theatre, Llandrindod Wells, is kindly running his theatre on Friday night, June 6, for the benefit of the Llandrindod Wells F.A. We, as an Association, would like to thank him through the medium of your valuable paper, writes Mr. F. Beard, Hon. Sec.

A Question of Rivalry.

We occasionally hear that the Nightingale is being heard further than usual to the west of England, but that his song does not equal the peerless melody of a brother performer in the Surrey lanes or the Hertfordshire woodlands. Possibly there is not the keen rivalry in the Devonshire Coombs there is in the Home Counties where the finest singer is brought to the front.

Country Rambles.

The following rambles have been arranged: Watford C.B.S., June 1, to Ivanhoe, train to Berkhampstead, 9.30 from Watford; Doncaster C.B.S., May 31, through Edlington Woods, meet at Balby tram terminus, 2.30; Leith O.S., June 14, to Raith, train leaves Edinburgh 2.15; Torbay O.S., June 4, to Dittisham; Clydebank C.B.C., May 31, meet at Erskine Ferry, South side 3.0; Ardwick and Manchester C.B.A., June 1, to Alderley Edge, meet 2.15, at London Rd. Station, Manchester; Oldham C.B.A., June 1, train leaves Clegg St. Station 9.35; Bolton Woods C.B.S., May 31, to Esholt, meet at Victoria Hotel Corner 2.0; Arbroath C.B.S., June 1, meet at Tower Nook 10.0; Lochgelly C.B.S., June 2, to Raith; Sunderland C.B.A., May 31, to Corbridge and Hexham, meet Central Station 12.30, train leaves 12.45.

Captain Trench's Pet Canaries.

Captain Trench, one of the three Englishmen who were sentenced in Germany for alleged espionage, and who has just been pardoned by the Kaiser, has given a dramatic account of his life in a German fortress, writes "J. B. W.," and it will doubtless interest readers of Cage Birds to know that the gallant officer is a great lover of the Canary, whose merry song and engaging ways helped him to bear up during the period of his incarceration. Captain Trench says, inter alia: "Soon after I came to Glatz the Commandant suggested that it might cheer me up if I had some birds to look after. He presented me with a pair of Canaries, which soon increased and multiplied. They sang and flew about my room or rested on perches I had fixed up near the windows, and were a source of great delight to me, and good company, too." Any true fancier can quite believe this, and, although the Captain naturally appreciates his liberty, there is no doubt his mind will often wander back to his merry little birdie companions in the lonely fortress.

RESULT OF OUR "BEAKS AND TAILS" COMPETITION.

Our first "Beaks and Tails" competition has proved immensely popular, and though admittedly not easy, yet among the many attempts at solution three were absolutely accurate. These came from Messrs. E. Dobson, Clapham; A. Woolley, Balham, and J. Dudley Morley, 84, Cornford Road, West Hill, East Putney. In accordance with the conditions these names were placed into a hat. The first one drawn proved to be Mr. Morley, and the prize of five shillings has been awarded accordingly to him. Will Mr. Morley therefore let us know whether he prefers cash or books, etc.? A curious feature in connection with this competition is that quite a number of attempts were hopelessly wrong through competitors ignoring our statement that the beaks and tails were those of British birds; they allotted some of them to various kinds of Canaries. Quite the funniest of all of these was the guess of one competitor who thought that tail No. 7 (Jenny Wren) belonged to a Scotch Fancy! One competitor coupled up the beaks and tails, thinking that each beak had a corresponding tail, and in doing this added to the Kingfisher's beak (No. 2) the tail of the Swallow (No. 9)! Two competitors, besides giving beak No. 5 as that of the Bullfinch, agreed also in allotting tail No. 6 to a "Wagstaff." This name for the Wagtail is quite new to us. The competition has proved so attractive that we shall publish shortly a second one of the same kind. The correct solutions were: Beaks—1, Greenfinch; 2, Kingfisher; 3, Jackdaw; 4, Blackbird; 5, Goldfinch. Tails—6, Wagtail; 7, Wren; 8, Shrike; 9, Swallow; 10, Blackbird.

The annual ramble of the members of the Ardwick and Manchester C.B.A., their wives, and friends, will take place on Sunday, June 1, to Alderley Edge, writes Mr. J. Spencer, hon. sec. Our Mr. A. Taylor will act as guide to the gentlemen, and Mrs. Taylor will accompany the ladies, and take them a shorter route, when we all meet for tea, to be provided at 1s. per head. Fanciers and friends welcome, meet at 2.15 p.m. London Road station, Manchester.

The May issue of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, opens with an account of the Blue-rumped Parrot, by Mr. L. W. Hawkins, with a coloured drawing by Mr. Goodchild. Major Perreau continues the interesting details of the wonderful consignment of Indian birds he has recently imported. Mr. Wesley T. Page's, "Some Interesting Birds," contains this month an account of Amherst and Elliot's Pheasants, with photographs, by Mr. H. Willford. Mr. Page also writes of "The Breeding of Grey and Guttural Finches." Mr. Otto Puck concludes his "Keeping of Softbills in Cages." There are Editorial Notes on members' aviaries, and a list of the Indian birds recently brought over by Mr. Frost for Major Horsbrugh. A "British Bird Calendar" is commenced, and the number contains Reviews and Correspondence as usual.

Some splendid samples of color-food for the 1913 season have reached us from Mr. J. W. Ramsden (11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, S.W.). "Ramsden's Pepper" has already achieved a wonderful reputation as a valuable agent for producing that "red-hot" colour and beautiful sheen so necessary to the plumage of most modern exhibition birds, and this season's peppers are assuredly better than ever before. The colour of the tasteless pepper is marvellous—very deep and rich—while it is ground to just the right grade, and free from all deleterious husk and foreign matters. It should be noted that Mr. Ramsden guarantees it under the Food and Drugs Act as absolutely pure and unadulterated, and as it is merely "powdered ripe fruit," so to speak it cannot be harmful to birds. Those colour-feeding should make a point of seeing Ramsden's 1913 tasteless pepper. The hot (Natal) pepper is also very fine, and will no doubt have a big sale amongst those who favour its use.

The First "Rung" Eagle.

A Golden Eagle was taken from its nest in the forest of Glendoe, in Inverness-shire, last year, and brought up in captivity by the head keeper. The bird has thriven well, its food being chiefly rabbits, and it is now to be released. In order to furnish proof of the migratory habits of Eagles, a migration ring from the Aberdeen University has been affixed. This is believed to be the first Eagle that has been "ringed" in this country.

Cage Birds 1913 Annual.

So far as our offices are concerned, Cage Birds 1913 Annual is quite out of print. We have not a single copy left of the large edition published, which should be good news to the advertisers therein, as it is gratifying to ourselves. We have had to refuse orders for the last fortnight, and if any secretary of a society (or any agent, in fact) should have unsold copies on hand, we shall be glad if he will return them to us at once; we will dispose of them for him.

THE 12 BEST BIRDS OF THE YEAR.

In order to stimulate public interest in the keeping of Cage Birds, and to promote still further the circulation and influence of our Paper "CAGE BIRDS," we have devised the appended colossal scheme.

THE FOLLOWING CASH PRIZES WILL ALSO BE OFFERED FOR COMPETITION AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW;—

£10 10 0 for the best Coupon bird exhibited in our Champion Sections.
£10 10 0 for the best Coupon bird shown by a novice other than the winner in the Champion Section.

HOW TO WIN THE PRIZES.

The foregoing handsome prizes will be offered under the following conditions:—

We intend issuing coupons at a cost of 6d. each, to be purchased from us before the end of August 1913. Each such coupon will entitle the purchaser thereof to enter one bird in the competition for the diploma and special prize of 10s. at any show which accepts our scheme, provided, of course, that the usual entry fee is paid to the show authorities for such entry. An exhibitor may purchase as many coupons as he pleases, provided he does so before the last day of August, 1913.

When making an entry or entries for our competition at a "diploma" show, the exhibitor must have fixed to his entry form a coupon for each bird he wishes to enter, and he must put the initials "C.B." against the entry of each bird he wishes to compete.

No exhibitor may win more than one diploma in the season in any one section, and no exhibitor will be allowed to win more than two of the 10s. prizes offered at the diploma shows.

No winner will be allowed to enter more than four birds in any one of the 12 sections in the final competition at the Crystal Palace show, and for each entry made for the final competition at the Crystal Palace a coupon will be necessary.

SOME IMPORTANT CONDITIONS.

1.—One coupon—one bird—one coupon show.

2.—No coupons sold after the last day of August, 1913, except to previous purchasers, who have the right of duplicating their order up to the end of October.

3.—No bird with trimmed, painted or dyed plumage will be eligible to compete, and all entries must be the bona-fide property of the exhibitor.

4.—No bird entered for this competition may wear a ring, or have any distinguishing mark, apart from its natural characteristics.

5.—The Judges will be instructed to withhold diplomas should the merit of the competing birds not justify its award.

6.—We reserve the right, in the event of there being less than 10 separate competitors in our competition at any one diploma show to withhold the cash prizes thereat altogether, the diplomas remaining on offer for as many birds as are eligible for them.

7.—An exhibitor who has won a diploma need not necessarily enter the same bird for the final competition. By winning the diploma he has the right to nominate and enter not more than four birds in any one of the 12 sections for the final competition.

8.—No exhibitor in the final will be allowed to win more than two prizes with his four entries.

9.—In all cases of dispute arising out of this competition the Editor's decision will be absolutely final and legally binding in every respect, and only upon this understanding will entries be accepted.

10.—The Editor reserves the right to alter the conditions from time to time in whatever manner he thinks best in the interests of competitors themselves, and also of the competition.

NOTICE TO SOCIETIES.—All Societies desirous of availing themselves of our Championship Competition should send immediately for our conditions.

The above is merely a rough draft of our intentions, and is open to revision and alteration. We invite and are open to receive and consider suggestions for the improvement of this scheme, but all letters concerning it should reach us by June 10th at latest.

Bird Dealers, Corn Merchants, Secretaries of Societies and others desirous of retailing our coupons should apply for wholesale cash terms.

Address all letters: The Editor,

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Questions and Answers.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who receive letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

A FEATHERED AMAZON (J.M.).—If not too late—that is, if the variegated hen has not already laid her eggs—place the Norwich cock with her and leave them to take their chance together. The quarrelling is probably more apparent than real, and is not likely to do any material damage. If the hen has laid, allow her to sit the eggs the full time. You may very probably have a pleasant surprise if you do so.

UNFERTILES (Aviary).—Clear eggs among those produced in the early part of this month are by no means a novelty. In the vast number of cases I'm afraid the weather-clerk may be justly blamed. In your case, however, I am not clear whether the "moulting out" of the colour-fed plumage you mention has occurred recently during the spring months, before or since the birds were mated. If this has been the case, then the moulting is certainly the cause of the eggs being unfertile, and it was quite useless mating the birds, so long as the cocks were in this condition. You do not even say whether any feathers are still being lost. If there are, treat birds as advised to "F.W.B.," in last issue.

A DUET (Roller).—(1) It is difficult to prevent some hens coming into breeding condition again before young are out of the nest, but the fact of all your hens doing so, even with the cocks removed, suggests something wrong with your method of feeding, which I might have detected had you gone into details of feeding whilst young are in nest. Possibly you give too much hemp, or begin it at too early an age. Try feeding next broods as advised to "A.H." last week, but reverse the times of starting to give hemp and soaked rape—thus, begin with rape at six days old—watch it closely if weather is warm to prevent it remaining after becoming sour, which it does very rapidly—and start giving the hemp when young are eight or ten days old. If you notice hen begin to flag, add as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece to the water for one half of each day for a few days, and after a bath in which a little common salt has been dissolved—just enough to give water a slightly saline taste. If you find hen will feed on green food, keep her supplied with fresh crisp young chickweed and groundsel. (2) Seifert Rollers, which would be more correctly termed Hartz, which you can procure at 7/6 a pair, are as hardy, prolific, and easy to breed as any variety you could get.

A TRIO. (F.S.D.).—(1) Of the two kinds of grass you enclose, the one you term a spray is the best to offer Canaries. The coarser kind, which is one of the rye grasses, is, in my experience, ignored by Canaries. However, you need not limit yourself to any particular kind of grass. Collect a truss of any or every kind of seed heads you come across, and throw in cages, and leave birds to choose for themselves. (2) In sending a sample of seed it should be carefully wrapped in tough paper to prevent loss in transit. Only the merest pinch of your sample reached us, not enough to warrant us expressing any definite opinion. It seems a tolerably well proportioned mixture of second rate seeds, which as a mixture should be quite wholesome for all ordinary use. But I do not consider any elaborate seed mixture "the best diet that could be given." A staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape only, and all other extras and tit-bits given separately, would be better. For these "extras" see these replies the last few weeks, or get No. 10 Nutshell booklet. (3) Yes, the size of perch you sketch is a nice size for Roller, and quite thick enough. But if two perches are in cage, make one a trifle thicker or more oval on top to give variety of grip. The length of claw you sketch is not excessive. If they impede bird's motion at all, assuming you have sketched the actual length, you may safely snip off with small sharp scissors a length equal to height of capital letters forming title of this reply.

YOUNG AND OLD (C.B.A., S.O.).—(1) Your feeding is probably the cause of your young birds going thick at five weeks old. At this age they do not require egg-food in the morning, and bread and milk in the afternoon, in addition to groats. Soft-food once daily is sufficient, and the supply of groats is best limited. For full details of feeding from this age onwards, see reply to "Nosey Parker," on May 10. (2) Give the cock a diet of plain canary only for a fortnight, varied only by a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts rape, niger, millet, and teazle, at intervals of four days—that is, three times during the fortnight. Give a liberal supply of fresh crisp green-food daily—chickweed, groundsel, lettuce, dandelion, or watercress. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece every second day for a week, and in the following week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day, and on the alternating days ten drops of lemon juice and six of glycerine.

REFUSING TO FEED (H. Hall).—See first part of reply to "Roller" in this issue, and reply to "A.H." last week, and act on the advice in these replies, making the same variations as advised to "A.H." On the first day only after young are hatched give a little pure egg-food; after this mix with it bread crumbs or powdered biscuit, as usually advised. You might, if this does not have the desired effect, make up egg-food of equal parts of egg, bread crumbs, and crushed sponge cake, and dust a tiny pinch of maw over it. Give a little fresh crisp young groundsel flower heads once daily from time of hatching, and twice daily after young are three days old. Also keep a little rape soaking in cold water, changing water every morning and evening, and begin giving this as soon as the hen flags in feeding—from the second or third day if necessary.

WILL NOT BATHE (Anxious, N.B.).—It is an idiosyncrasy of some birds that they totally refuse to bathe. It is really of no great importance to them, beyond removing their inartistic grimes, and sometimes, but by no means always, slovenly plumage. If a bird refuses to follow the cleanly example set by other birds, the best way to deal with it is to remove the drinking water for an hour or two daily, and, meantime, hang on the bath. To offer an extra inducement to it to enter the bath, place a small tempting spray of green food in it, and withhold any from the cage for the time being. If bird does not enter bath in a day or two, continue same tactics, but when hanging on bath, give bird a light blow over with a spray, to just bedew the plumage. If this fails, get a small earthen saucer, such as a flower-pot saucer, half full of water—with spray of green stuff in—and place inside cage for an hour or two daily. Any time that you notice it starting to bathe its head in the drinking vessel, remove the drinker for an hour or two, and try either of the above methods immediately. If all these plans fail, the bird is incorrigible, and you can only rely upon spraying and hand-washing.

A CLUTCH OF SEVEN (F. O. B.).—You have done quite right to allow all the eggs laid to take their chance, though it is not altogether fortunate that two of the eggs are of such a size as to suggest "double yolks." If this is so, there is a risk of some freakish monstrosity being produced from them. It is certainly quite possible for the last four eggs, laid after the cock has been removed, to be fertile. With a hen possessing only average reproductive vigour, it is very probable that the last two would have proved unfertile, but with a hen possessing exceptional vigour in this respect, as your hen undoubtedly does, there is every probability of their being fertilised. It would be a wise plan to try to get a foster hen available to take over the charge of a portion of this brood, if necessary. Should be pleased to hear result in due course.

TROUBLED WITH SNEEZING (Bird Lover, Staveley).—It is not unlikely that the birds are exposed to occasional draughts; perhaps from an open window since the weather has been tolerable, or is the situation damp or dusty? In either of these cases you should remove these conditions as far as possible without disturbing the birds. You cannot properly treat them whilst breeding, but as the cases are at present just simple catarrhal colds they may, under the influence of warmer weather, come all right with the following treatment:—Give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed daily for a week, and add to the drinking water five drops each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a week. Stick the bread and milk in the wires at end of seed box for the hen that is sitting.

A POOR BEGINNING (W. H. B.).—It is not so very uncommon for a hen to starve her first brood as yours has done, and then bring up the next and subsequent broods quite satisfactorily; but I confess to having a preference for the hen that gets through her first family duties successfully. You may with advantage follow advice given to "A. H." last week, when the hens go to nest again. It will certainly be advisable to try removing the cock next time, and in this event it will be quite permissible to run him with a second hen whilst the first hen is sitting and rearing a brood. Keep both hens in separate cages, and when cock is not engaged putting either to nest keep him caged by himself until hens are again ready to begin nesting.

NOT SINGING (H. R., Beginner).—Considering the time of year you left the bird in charge last year, it doubtless ceased singing prior to dropping into moult. That it has not sung since may be due to many causes. Its moult may have gone wrong and left it in a broken state of health, or it may be kept in an unsuitable place, or not correctly fed. Try the following treatment for a month and if bird still shows no signs of coming in song, write again and give full particulars how and where it is kept, and what condition of health it exhibits. Examine cage closely for red mites, and if any are found, thoroughly overhaul cage and exterminate them. See that cage does not hang in a direct draught, nor high up near the ceiling, or near or over burning lights in the evenings. Let it be in a bright, healthy, well-ventilated position, but hanging in a window is the worst possible place. Keep floor strewn with clean gritty sand. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. In addition, give separately twice a week a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar, every third day. On the intervening days give one day a pinch of a mixture equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame, and the next a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle. Give a fair-sized spray of green food, or a few ripe dandelion heads daily, and offer the bath daily as long as weather is warm. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepennypiece daily for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

HAND-REARING YOUNG (E.C.D.).—At seven days old about every hour would suffice to feed the young. As they grow older, and take more food at each meal, the intervals may be lengthened to two hours. It should be remembered that the youngsters have their natural feeding hours, as it were, during which they will feed oftener, and dispose of considerably more food than at other times. Thus in the early morning, and again towards evening, they are, or should be, exceptionally keen "on the feed." The best plan is to commence feeding somewhere about 5 a.m., and feed every half-hour or so, giving only a light meal each time, for two hours. After this uncover them (a light fold of woolly material should be kept over them until they are getting nicely feathered) every hour to see how they are, and if they "rise" promptly and gape for food, feed them. Otherwise, cover again and leave them alone. Keep nest clean, and at each meal give only as much food as they readily gape for. Do not try to incite them to over-gorge their crops. As regards food, the ordinary egg-food, or any good substitute, made into a moist paste with a little water, is most suitable. In the early morning, and again in the afternoon, for a few meals, finely mince a little fresh crisp green-stuff and mix with the food in the proportion of about a fourth part of the bulk. As the birds get older you may also add a little mashed soaked rape now and again. To avoid the risk of it being given, in a sour condition, this addition should only be made to sufficient food for one or at most two meals. In mashing rape, reject the bulk of the husks. The particular food you name will answer quite well, but needs a little green food all through the day to counteract its constipating tendency.

HENS NOT FEEDING (E.H.).—There are several little points where you are going wrong, which, in combination, may be of sufficient moment to cause your trouble. You should not give salts in the water the day before hatching. This is only called for when there are indications of the hen going off feeding, which cannot be the case before the young are hatched. Even when something of the kind is necessary, sulphate of soda and not Epsom salts should be employed, and for not more than one-half of any one day. Then you should not begin to give hemp as soon as young are hatched, and you should strictly avoid giving dandelion to hens behaving in this manner. Now, avoid these things for the rest of the season. Try removing cocks when hens are put to sit with next nests, and keep them caged alone until young are reared. If weather keeps warm offer hens a bath with a little common salt in it on the second and third days after hatching. If hen shows signs of flagging, only, add as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny piece to the water for one-half of each day for two or three days. For the rest follow advice given to "A.H.," in last issue, but in your case you may give a small spray of groundsel on the second day, and start giving the rape on the sixth, and the hemp on the tenth day, instead of vice versa. This should end your losses.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each) No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London E.C.

BREEDING IN CRYSTAL PALACE AVIARY (W. Stanley).—The aviary is really only a moderate sized cage for a single pair of birds to breed in. It will be quite possible for you to breed Canaries in it with success, and you should have no difficulty at all in doing so if you limit your breeding stock to a single pair—cock and hen. Being open wire, you should see that the nest is not in a direct cold draught, and if cage is where people are constantly passing to and fro, it would be judicious to fix up some sort of shield over a portion of the wires where nest is placed to ensure a little more privacy for the hen when sitting and rearing young.

CAUSE OF CLEAR EGGS (Songster).—I also am inclined to think the very long claws and coarse scaly legs of the cock have something to do indirectly with the clear eggs, but certainly not in the way you suggest. The idea of correct and sharp claws being essential to ensure fertility by giving the bird a good grip is a mere superstition. The real cause is, undoubtedly, that the bird has lost its virility from age, and the condition of its legs and claws, beyond being indicative of age, have nothing whatever to do with the matter. It is quite true that a cock may be expected to fertilise eggs as long as he remains healthy and vigorous, and some will do so up to quite a great age, but others lose their powers quite early in comparison, even whilst remaining in apparently perfect health and vigour. Even in the best cases you cannot expect general or constant virility, except in the most exceptional cases. Your best plan to succeed in getting a brood from this cock is to mate him with a lusty well-breeding hen, not older than 1911-bred, which has hitherto produced full normal clutches of fertile eggs to any ordinarily healthy cock, and leave them together permanently until your hopes are fulfilled, or despair enters your soul.

SNAPPING BEAK AND LOSING FEATHERS (H. M. V.).—See that the bird is kept in a fairly equable, but not heated, temperature, and is quite free from cold draughts. Do not hang cage near or above burning lights in the evenings. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape only. In addition, give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days twice each week give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Give a little green food daily. Continue this feeding for a month. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel, continuing the latter until feathers cease dropping.

FOR THREE WEEKS ONLY (Mrs. W. Grady).—You say nothing about the movements of the hen after she ceases to feed her young at three weeks old, so I can only assume that she probably comes forward for laying again about this time, and forthwith goes to nest again and forsakes the young. Some hens would continue feeding also, but not all of them. Most cocks also should take over young at this age and finish rearing them, and the young should, in fact, be practically ready to leave the nest, and in every case should be quite forward enough to place in a nursery cage, which should be hung on the front of the breeding cage, when both parents should complete the rearing even whilst engaged with preparations for another brood. Perhaps, had you given details of your method of feeding, I might have detected some weak point. As it is, however, I can only suggest that you follow the advice given in detail to "A. H." in this issue, when the next brood comes along.

PARENTS GOING BALD (And. R.).—As the birds are now engaged in parental duties, you had better let matters slide until the end of breeding season, unless you find on closer inspection that the birds are badly troubled with insect pests. Grey lice, which live upon the birds, are the most likely pest to cause this effect. But in any case, keep nests as clear of insects as possible by dusting freely around the edges with freshly ground pyrethrum powder, or Keatings, and add a few drops of quassia essence to the bath, and allow birds to make daily use of it. Should the skin appear unhealthy or scurfy, it would be advisable to slightly anoint it twice a week for a time with Lanocyllin, beginning when the young brood are able to look after themselves. If the skin looks healthy and parasites are not the cause of the bareness, you need not fear the trouble infecting the other birds.

SEED SAMPLES (Rugby).—The hemp marked "Liverpool" is a very good all-round seed of excellent quality. "Manchester" hemp is excessively hard in the husk, and would be most difficult for some birds to negotiate; otherwise the quality is very good, but inferior to the first-named. The "Liverpool" rape is a very clean and a good sample of summer rape, Better samples may be obtained, but still this is quite good enough for all ordinary purposes. "Manchester" rape is probably a mixture of "bird rapes," and is much inferior to the last-named in quality.

DESERTION AT 14 DAYS (C. H. H.).—It is not very unusual for the hen to "ease off" a little when the young reach a fortnight old, and from this stage, when both parents remain together through all stages, the cock should really take over the business of feeding the young, and by the time they leave the nest he will be doing the major portion of the feeding. So you see it was little use taking him away at this age to try to get the young fed. Assuming the chick was healthy and "gaped" for food (you say nothing on this point), your best course was to offer a saline bath. Add to the water as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence for one-half of each day for two or three days, and offer a variety of food, especially green food, giving preference to lettuce, groundsel, or chickweed in the order named. Occasionally one comes across a pair of birds which will not persevere to the end in rearing a single chick, and possibly yours are of this type, in which case they are not likely to repeat this performance if more than one chick hatches out in the next brood. If they do, you can only try the above method, and if it fails make another attempt at hand-feeding. With young a fortnight old hand-rearing is a very simple matter, requiring only patient perseverance to get birds to "gape" for you. A little "tweeting," and very slight touches of down on head, or tip of beak, practically never fails to make them gape. After the first "meal" it is nearly all plain sailing. The two eggs you name would probably have hatched out had you immersed them in warm water for a few moments twice on the 13th day.

VARIOUS (Daisy).—If you had other hens with eggs about the same age, it would not be worth while allowing her to sit on one egg, which could be added to any reasonable clutch. But as you have no other hens, then you should allow the hen to sit six or seven days, and then test the egg by holding it in front of a strong light, when, if it appears transparent it may be discarded as unfertile. You do not mention what book you refer to, but if it had been "Canary Breeding for Beginners," you would have seen full details and illustration of testing eggs therein. Give the hen a staple of three parts canary and one part rape only. Otherwise treat for a fortnight the same as advised to "Old Subscriber" last week, except that you may give chickweed or flower heads of groundsel instead of dandelion. Keep a piece of cuttlefish-bone in cage for hen to nibble at and get material for the shells of her eggs. You must provide a nest-bag, or a little soft moss and cow-hair, for the hen to add an inner lining of this material to the lined earthenware pan.

MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

CANARY-BULLFINCH (J. E. W.).—To successfully breed Canary-Bullfinch Hybrids is no light task. You may try for years and not succeed. On the other hand you may "strike oil" first time; it is this uncertainty that makes the game so fascinating. (1) It would be impossible for any one man to give you the proportion of pairs put up for breeding, producing fertile eggs, and although I have been personally acquainted with dozens of pairs I am unable to say which were and which were not fertile, one cannot remember over a number of years. For your encouragement I might tell you that one fancier has had only two Bullfinch hens breeding during the last four years, and each has produced fertile eggs. (2) The Goldfinch-Bullfinch cross is the more fertile of the two, and it is not necessary to have house-moulted nestlings for the purpose although, of course, these are always desirable in any branch of Hybrid breeding, if obtainable. (3) An "addled" egg is an unfertile one that has been sat on for some time. In the case of ordinary fowl's eggs a single acquaintance with a nice "high" one is sufficient. You will easily detect them ever after. (4) As a rule it is not necessary to trim a bird's beak at the sides, this is generally kept in a normal condition by the mere act of shelling seeds, but if your birds beak is over grown so that it interferes with its feeding, you had better carefully trim a little off. Most Linnets will run the beak along the wires, especially if particularly healthy, and in high condition. It is as well to remove the eggs, as soon as possible after being laid to prevent accidents, but the fact of the hen sitting on one for several hours, or even a whole day, does not interfere with its freshness for hatching purposes.

Answered by H. J. FULLJAMES.

A QUESTION OF VALUE (Rara Avis).—It is not possible to say what "would be the value of a White Thrush, male and female." The value depends upon many circumstances. Some owners of such birds would require a pretty stiff sum, but a willing seller would probably ask anything from a pound up to five pounds, so much depends upon the quality of the bird. Many so-called "White" Thrushes are far from being spotlessly white in plumage, and as the only extra value attaching to the abnormality of coloration is in respect of the quality of the bird as a show specimen, there is here again a wide margin. I have paid £5 for a really White Thrush upon more than one occasion, but then the birds have been fit for immediate exhibition. Speaking with the reservations above mentioned, I should say that a young bird in good plumage and health would be worth a sovereign.

HAND-REARING LINNETS AND BULLFINCHES (L. T. G.).—The best age at which to take young birds for the purpose of hand-rearing is from ten to twelve days. For Bullfinches take some hard-boiled egg, white and yolk together, rub it through a sieve, and add about twice as much powdered sweet biscuit, make this fairly "sloppy" with boiled milk, and give from the end of a blunted piece of soft wood or a quill toothpick. You would need to feed every two hours at first, increasing the intervals gradually. Do not give too much at a meal; "little and often" is the secret. Give also house flies, spiders, and any small insects you can get. Nothing is better than "green-fly" (rose aphides), but it is rather early yet for these garden pests to be plentiful. As the birds get older, make the food less sloppy and add some chopped greenstuff, and give a drop or two of water into the beak between each meal. Linnets may be treated similarly, excepting that the live insects are not so essential in their rearing. You will find a helpful article on hand-rearing in our issues of April 26 and May 10. The feeding and proper treatment from the nest onwards is also dealt with in the "Nutshells" No. 2 the Linnet, and No. 11 the Bullfinch (2½d. each, post free, from our publisher).

HAND-REARING YOUNG PIED WAGTAILS (J. W. Seekings).—The young Wagtails which you say were about a fortnight old when you wrote will be about three weeks old by the time you see this reply, and if you have not already got them on to some sort of food, they will be fully old to take in hand. After a fortnight, at the outside, young birds frequently refuse to "gape" for food offered them, and if you have not already taken them you had better not undertake the task of rearing them. Further, Wagtails are so easily tamed when caught as adult birds that it is really not worth while troubling to hand-rear them. Should you determine to do so, however, give them at first as many living insects and small grubs as you can find; live ants' cocoons are a splendid food, and you can get these now from advertisers in our columns if you are not able to find them yourself. Make a mixture of equal parts of silkworm pupae, dried flies, dried ants' cocoons (ants' eggs), and preserved yolk of egg; double this mixture by adding powdered sweet biscuit, and you will have a "stock food" which will keep good indefinitely if kept dry. Moisten a portion of this to a fairly wet consistency and administer to the young birds by the aid of a blunted quill toothpick, or a small piece of soft wood, and give a drop or two of water or milk between "meals." They should be fed every two hours at first, gradually lengthening the intervals as the birds get older. For subsequent treatment see Nutshell No. 25 (post free 2½d. from our manager), which gives full particulars as to the hand-rearing and proper feeding of small insectivorous birds. (2) Your "aviary," 1ft. 3in. by 2ft. 4in., is practically only a fairly sized cage. The ground space is not quite three square feet, and it would not properly accommodate more than two or three insectivorous birds, or three or four small Finches, such as Siskins, Redpolls, or Linnets. Your foreign query has been sent on to our Mr. Page; this should have been written on a separate sheet of paper.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

GOULDIANS (Gould).—Regret to keep you waiting, but I will give you a reply in our next issue.

REASON OF DEATH (E. E. Taylor).—This is a case in which only a post-mortem examination could have definitely enlightened you, but I may say all the details you describe point to a chill and pneumonia. It probably was an aviary-bred bird, a young one, just completing the coming into adult plumage.

CALIFORNIAN QUAIL (T. Tomlinson).—As a rule there is but little difficulty in rearing these birds, if a good supply of live ants' eggs and well scoured gentles be given frequently during the first ten days after hatching; after the first seven days they soon begin to pick up seed and soft food. I have reared a number of these birds, and leave mine to run about with their mother. A good many are regularly reared by foster parents, usually silky hens are used, and dieted as above, they are somewhat easily reared. There are some species of Quail that require more care, but Californians are quite a robust species. Another method is to keep the hen in a coop, to which a small run is attached for the chick, the hen being confined to the coop in the usual way, and the live food scattered about the run for the Quail. The coop and run being removed to fresh ground almost daily, the run is of course small, about a yard long, and the chicks are easily screened from too fierce sun or undue wet. Some give minced egg and custard to the Quail chicks. They have been hatched out in an incubator and reared by a foster mother.

BULBUL (A. L. T.).—It is a Madras or Red-vented Bulbul, and an advertisement in our columns would probably secure you a mate for it. They are hardy birds, handsome, and full of character. It was the prostration following importation that caused your White-cheeks to die, I expect, as these also are hardy once that trouble is passed.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY CAGE (J. W. Seekings).—The wording of your query makes it quite clear that you greatly over-rate the accommodating capacity of such a cage, and if I were attempting to breed birds myself I should only put one pair in. Again in such space you must not mix Budgerigars and Finches, such would only spell disaster at no distant date. Here are several selections (1) 1 pair each Green and Yellow Budgerigars; (2) 1 pair each Budgerigars and Madagascar Lovebirds; (3) 1 pair each Budgerigars and Blue-winged Lovebirds. In either case you must manage to cram in four husks somehow, or the birds will be quarrelling over nesting sites. It is just possible that a pair each of White Java Sparrows and Budgerigars might live amicably together, and each breed in due course, but at the same time I can accept no responsibility in the latter case, the risk must be your own.

MOULTING OUT OF SEASON (Perseus).—Your query tells its own tale, the bird is quite out of condition. At the same time, many Parrots do moult just about the present time or a little earlier. Cease giving table snacks and diet as follows: Seed mixture: canary, white millet, and oats, one pint of each; hemp, maize, wheat, paddy rice, shelled nuts and sunflower seeds half-a-pint of each. Well mix and keep a supply in cage; also supply ripe fruit, greenfood, pieces of plain biscuit, or stale crust of household bread. If the latter has to be moistened, use only a little tepid sweetened water. Grit and cuttlebone must be continually in the cage. Throughout the summer and early autumn, spray it twice weekly with a tepid quassia solution, keeping it out of reach of chill winds or draught till dry. Every fourth day (for a month) put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water; on other days put half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-Keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

COCKATIELS (E. W. C.).—I cannot give a reason, only suggest possible causes, such as unsteady incubation, unfavourable weather conditions, birds not in best condition. In addition, there is the individualism of respective pairs, but if the cause is due to the irregularity of your pair of birds, this will probably pass away with later attempts. This has been my experience on more than one occasion, and one must pass through the annoying experience of possessing oneself in patience till this comes about. Some pairs are prolific beyond expectation, others very indifferent breeders and rearers. I should say the young bird died because its parents did not feed it. Perhaps if you repeat query and tell me how and where you keep and feed them, I can be more helpful. Are they in best of health and feather?

GREY PARROT (H. A. H.).—You give me no clue as to food and treatment, so I can only say confine its dietary to seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit and nuts, with, of course, cuttlebone, grit and water. A stale crust of household bread may also be given, either dry or moistened with a little tepid water. Twice a week for a month put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and on the intermediate days put half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the water. After a month of such treatment report progress with full details. Now the weather is genial and warm, spray it twice weekly with a dilute, tepid quassia solution, keeping it out of cold winds or draught till dry. The irregular casting of the downy feathers need cause you no anxiety; this will practically cease as the bird recovers tone. If you send 2½d. to our Manager for the Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," you will get fuller details of food and treatment than space permits in this column.

GOULDIAN FINCHES (H. V. Starke).—(1) I should give boiled water so long as the Gouldians are kept in cages and indoors. If possible, arrange the supply in your outdoor aviary to be either running service water, or better still, soft water. In the outdoor aviary almost any kind of water will meet the case, so long as it is fresh and sweet. (2) Keep a close watch, and then remove any species which are in the habit of paying surreptitious visits to nests other than their own. All the Weavers, Cutthroats, Green Singing Finch, and Saffron Finches are possible culprits, but there is so much individualism among birds that your must observe the species named as far as possible, and remove any of suspicious demeanour. You will realise the difficulty when I state that I have kept all the species you name together without mishap; yet happenings such as have occurred in your aviary are by no means uncommon.

BUDGERIGARS NOT BREEDING (W. H. B.).—"Up to the present" does not give me any idea for how long the birds have failed to go to nest. However, I can say this, some pairs take much longer to settle down than others, but usually once started, they breed practically all the year round. Yours may be youngish birds, only just donning mature plumage, or not yet in breeding condition. At the present time you can give them nothing better than flowering (seeding) grass, as much as they will eat. All they require is grit, cuttlebone, canary seed, white millet, millet sprays, green food, and once or twice a week a teaspoonful of crushed oats per bird. Put them on a course of Byno-phosphates, half-teaspoonful in daily supply of drinking water; if the voidings are at all hard, make the drinking water just saline with Epsom salts, as often as may be required to keep the bowels moving freely. Of course on such occasions omitting the phosphates for the particular day.

BIRDS FOR OUTDOOR AVIARY (High Barbary).—You can put in the following pairs:—Zebra, Ribbon, Spice and Bib Finches, Silverbills, Avadavats, Gold-breasted Waxbills, and Grey Singing Finches. The above selection, half of which are quite small species, are the utmost you can keep with any chance of success in breeding. You should get some breeding successes each year, but each pair will not breed annually. Put in some small nest boxes, rush nests, a couple of Hartz travelling cages, and one or two coconut shell nests, about fifteen to eighteen in all. Line the brick back, and wood end and front, thickly with twiggy branches; pea or bean sticks answer well for the purpose, and I should grow grass, canary seed, etc., under open netting part of roof. Your book will give you the main lines of treatment, etc., and our "Nutshells" on respective species give fullest details.

COCKATIELS (F. L. Howell).—For your first season, it is not much use troubling about time they start, etc. Your birds will start when they are thoroughly fit, and have quite settled down. Some—nay, most—of the Parrot tribe, to which Cockateels belong, take some little time to settle down, but once they settle, then they practically breed all the year round, only stopping for the moult. I know many aviaries in which they are incubating or feeding their second broods, but there is much individualism, and the productiveness of respective pairs is very variable, some surprisingly prolific, others moderate, others only rearing an occasional youngster. Their nest receptacles should have concave bottoms; many eggs are spoiled by rolling about on flat-bottomed nest boxes. The book is right. Their value is 10s. to 15s., according to condition or whether they are newly imported or acclimatised birds.

CLEANING A COCKATOO (G. L. Weaste).—It all depends on the individual bird. If it is tame and can be allowed out of its cage, some will take a bath with "great gusto" in a large shallowish dish; others will not take a bath, but are very tame and familiar with their owner, and will permit their plumage to be sponged, first with tepid soapy water, and then with clear; others that will neither suffer the sponging nor take a bath must be sprayed with tepid water twice weekly during the summer and once a week during the winter. At all seasons of the year birds must not be subjected to chill winds or draught while their plumage is wet, but at any time chill winds and draught are very bad for them, wet or dry.

FOR OUTDOOR AVIARY (Roller).—The value you name, added to free breeding, strictly limits me. If you are interested in Hybrids, cock Green or Grey Singing Finches, Alario Finch, and Cape Canary pair fairly readily with the Canary. Zebra Finches, Silverbills, and Cutthroats are all striking and pretty birds, but they are not gorgeous, and they are free breeders. Avadavats are very beautiful when in colour, and are probable breeders Gold-breasted Waxbills may almost be termed gorgeous and are also probables; Bib Finches are small pretty birds, and are very likely breeders. You cannot introduce fresh birds into an aviary without some confusion, but I do not think it would be sufficient to cause the Canaries to desert unless your aviary is small and crowded. Supply a mixture of white and Indian millet in equal parts; this will do the Canaries no harm, and the foreign species will also take some of the Canary mixture. Keep one or two millet sprays hanging in the aviary. Green food liberally, particularly flowering (seeding) grass; grit, cuttlebone, and water. Soft food when feeding young, and a few dry ants' eggs.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

H. Fry.—Congestion of the lungs.

Mrs. J. G. Hughes.—Ptomaine poisoning.

J. C. Reynolds.—Enteritis was the actual cause of death, probably due to ptomaine poison. A few drops of oil, salad oil in preference to castor oil, to get rid of poisonous products, followed in an hour or so by the administration of 5 drops of compound syrup of glycerophosphates, B.P.C., 1907, to overcome prostration resulting from absorption of the toxins or poisons.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Miss M. E. Brown.—Thanks for the negative, from which we hope to secure a pleasing picture for a future number. We will return it as soon as possible.

F. J. K.—In the case of fig. 4 the fresh-air would come in through a suitable ventilator and fall to the floor in front of the cages. In fig. 5 the air is carried to near the floor, behind the cages, either by a ventilating shaft or pipe, or by a space left between the outer wood-work and the inner lining of match-boarding.

H. E. Pace, Tom James, E. S., and others.—We are much obliged to you for the newspaper cuttings forwarded us.

A. J. Garlick.—Many thanks; shall be pleased to utilise the contribution.

James Miller.—Any reference to this challenge must be made in the advertisement columns. We cannot entertain any discussion or dispute on such matters in our ordinary news columns.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Annual picnic, held on Whit Monday, to the residence of J. Knott, Esq., Close House, Wylam. Through his kindness, the whole of his grounds were thrown open for us, but what would have been a most enjoyable day was spoilt through the recent heavy rainfalls, the ground being too wet to allow us to venture into the beautiful woods to see what bird life was to be found. When we arrived, 72 all told, it was decided to have an early tea, and through the willing help of some of the ladies, namely, Mrs. W. Mackenzie, Mrs. Pettersson, Mrs. Smith, Miss Mackenzie, Miss Thompson, and Mrs. Curry, this was soon ready. To all these ladies we tender our best thanks for kindly help. This over, and Mr. Knott having allowed two of his gardeners to act as guides for us, we were taken on a round of inspection, including the kitchen garden, the beautiful greenhouses, vineries, etc., where we saw some fine plants, to say nothing of the ripe strawberries and various other fruits; the piggeries, where some fine pigs were seen, amongst them was a big winner at the leading shows. Near the house there were housed a Peacock and Peahen, and a fine pair they were. We now made our way to the poultry farm, and this proved of great interest. It consists of various kinds of stock pens, roosting houses, and a large piece of meadow, where the chickens and growing stock were housed, but the place of most interest was the incubator house, where we saw a great number of newly-hatched chickens, in all we saw over 600 chickens of various sizes and kinds. We finished up by having a look over the potting sheds and mushroom beds.—W. Curry.

Sowerby Bridge C.B.S. Members Spend a Pleasant Day at Harden Beck.

On May 17th the ramble took place in connection with the above society to Harden Beck. Eight members turned up—Messrs. C. Pickles (pres.), E. Crossley (treas.), A. Sutcliffe (sec.), J. Hardy, W. Wild, E. Sutcliffe, S. H. Jeffreys, and C. Crabtree. The morning was rather dull, the afternoon brighter and warmer. We started our ramble from Cullingworth, and in crossing Cow House Bridge, under which passes a little stream, one of the party said he had seen a trout; the rest came to see this, and it created much amusement, as it turned out to be a water vole. In a few minutes we passed into the wood, starting into business right away; within ten yards of entering, a glorious sight met our eyes. Built in the wild gorse, a Blackbird's nest was seen. Off flew the old birds, with the usual call notes. All of the party came upon the scene to see a beautifully shaped nest containing four eggs of a greyish colour, and well on in incubation, as they showed by their dark cast that young birds were in the shell. The Pied Wagtail was seen, the Cuckoo and the Chaffinch heard. We next came across the Whitethroat in a low bushy hawthorn tree, sitting as if it fairly wanted us to admire it, so still did it keep; we were only two yards from it. A Thrush's nest was found, not quite finished building. On we plodded steadily out of the wood without further find, except the gamekeeper waiting to inform us that we had not followed the path, and as we did not see one, he must have been right; however, we had a little conversation with him, and he proved a very interesting and pleasant person to talk to. After leaving him we came across a Blackbird's nest, too high for us to see into; the old bird was sitting with eyes fixed. A little further, and we were at our destination, "Harden Beck." Here was the "Malt Shovel" Hotel, so in we trundled. I asked our host if he could provide us with tea; he said "Ah think we can; we hev a reight goid crop o' beef, or yer can hev ham an' eggs. Go inter kitchen an' arrange with missus yer sen" (in right good Yorkshire dialect) This I did, and when she showed me that beef it made me feel hungry. All went well until the sweets were reached, and one of the party was going to have some prunes, as he thought, but to his amazement they were pickled walnuts. Two of the party who had not finished their beef were glad that the discovery had been made. Our return journey was started up a rough road and along a lane to the wood top, where we found the nests of the Blackbird, Thrush, Chaffinch and Greenfinch. I should think we found some forty nests. All had been visited previously, and every egg taken except one Blackbird's; this nest was situated in some ivy closely binding a tree trunk. The songs of the Greenfinch, Chaffinch, and Skylark were heard in passing out of the wood. A short walk, and we sighted the railway, tracks were made for the station, to miss our train by only three minutes, 45 minutes to wait. We arrived at Halifax at 8.5, and made for the "Plummet Line" Hotel, the headquarters of the Halifax O.S., where we met a few members and had a little talk; afterwards we made for King's Cross by car, where we dispersed at 9.30, having had a grand and enjoyable outing.—A. Sutcliffe, Sec.

Grass Seed as Green Food.

Sir,—In reference to grass seed as a green food, advocated by Mr. Weston in his notes, I wish to say that I am a great believer in this. It is an invaluable food for rearing young Hybrids—coming next only to Shepherd's purse in my estimation. I believe in giving it ad. lib. as soon as young are hatched.

Three Chicks from Two Eggs

And the Twins Doing Well.

Sir,—Reading in Cage Birds of Mr. W. Brotherton hatching five chicks from four eggs, I thought it would be interesting for some of our fanciers to know that I have had three chicks hatch from two eggs, the twins are green in colour and at present are doing well, but I have had the misfortune to lose the single chick through the hen dragging it from the nest the day after hatching.

Remarkable Egg Laying.

Eleven Eggs in Eleven Days.

Sir,—I have a Border hen which laid 11 eggs in 11 days. Does this break all records of egg laying? It is the second nest; there were five the first time from which I have four young in my flight, so you will see my birds are cock and hen, and not two hens as some may suggest. I might also state she is a young hen. Wishing everybody a good season; also continued success to Cage Birds.

The Use of Mules for Breeding Purposes.

Sir,—Your correspondent, Mr. A. Shaw, seems to consider a solitary experience of his own of supposed fertility in Mules sufficient to warrant recommendation of the mating of Mules to those anxious to breed birds. I certainly do not. In the case he refers to where I definitely advised a querist not to try to breed with a hen Mule, the person was particularly anxious to obtain some success in rearing young, and to advise such a one to pin faith to a solitary hen Mule would, in my opinion, not only be most misleading, but wholly indefensible. I do not by any means wish to discourage the mating of Mules, but in every case it should be with a full knowledge that the mating is purely experimental, and infinitely more likely to prove barren than otherwise—never with the expectation of obtaining early and certain results. I have come across numerous records of supposed fertility in Mules, extending back over the last forty years, at least, and in a few cases the evidence is certainly strong in favour of the claim. A case came to my notice this spring, the veracity of which I can scarcely doubt. Yet even this would not justify me in advising a person desirous of producing some young birds quickly to rely upon a hen Mule, or a cock Mule either, to breed them.

Plucking the Young Birds.

A Bitter Lesson for "Ma."

Sir,—As your correspondence column begins to show, many fanciers are being troubled once again with that wretched habit of hens plucking the feathers from their young, either just before, or just after leaving the nest. I had such a hen cause me trouble three weeks ago—four nice birds just feathering when "Ma," discovering how nice that little bit of "marrow" is that lies at the end of the quill in tail and wing feathers, set herself out to have a good time. It occurred to me that, as she must of necessity have access to her young, the only way to cure her was, if possible, to make her "tit-bit" distasteful to her. Having in mind a "bitter" experience which occurred to me when I was about $1\frac{1}{2}$ years old, I purchased a pennyworth of bitter aloes, and, dissolving a small piece in warm water, applied the liquid with a camel-hair brush to the basis of the wing and tail feathers of all four young birds. As soon as I replaced the nest, "Ma" promptly returned to the fray. After one feather had been sampled, it took her quite ten minutes to find out what had occurred, during which time she was very busy rubbing her beak on the perch. However, like ourselves, when youngsters, she was not to be broken first go, so she had another try, but, the result being the same, she decided that egg food was more to her taste, and resolved to let feathers alone. It quite broke her of the bad habit, and the four young are now on the sticks with only a few main feathers short. Bitter aloes has not, I believe, any injurious effect, and some fanciers who may be troubled with plucking hens may like to try the treatment I have found serve me so well.

The Southern Norwich Plainhead Club's Classification.

Sir,—I thank Mr. Spillman for his sarcastic letters, but thought he would have kept to a higher level. My writing on this question was with the best of intention, and not to have a tilt at him. If I answered Mr. Spillman I feel sure I should hurt his feelings, which would be a pity, so as far as I am concerned I shall not reply.

Birds Burgled at Boston.

Sir,—I should be glad if you would mention in this week's issue that some one, early this morning, May 26th, broke into one of my aviaries and cleared me of my stock of fine British birds, including Bramble cock, Chaffinch hen, two Greenies, Goldie cock, two Linnet cocks, Redpoll hen, Bullie hen, Linnet Mule, Pekin Nightingale cock, and two immaterial birds. This might enable me to trace the thief by coming to the notice of someone to whom they may have been offered. The police have the matter in hand. Many thanks in anticipation.

Are Hatching Eggs Affected by Vibration?

Sir,—I see several readers of our valuable paper. Cage Birds have been asking if vibration has any effect upon eggs. Perhaps it will interest them to know that at a colliery, where I am employed, an aviary has been erected in the winding engine house. This aviary contains about a dozen Canaries and two British birds, and in it, this year, have been bred about eight young ones, two of which are now flying about. I am sorry to say, however, that we have lost the others. We have also had about a dozen addled eggs; this, however, I think is due to having only one cock Canary with about eight hens, as I do not think the Britishers (Siskin and Redpoll) are mulers. The nests are hung round the walls, and these are constantly vibrating, owing to the movement of the winding engines, which are practically constantly working. One hen has built a nest on a pan hung on the wire netting, and every time this is touched the pan jolts violently to and fro. However, one young one has been hatched in this nest, so I do not think that vibration will stop the young from hatching. I hope to send photographs later on, but if there are any fanciers who would like to see them I will obtain permission from the manager (who himself breeds a few Rollers) to show them round.

More White Canaries.

Seven White Norwich Bred at Yarmouth.

Sir,—In Cage Birds of May 24th I notice Mr. Weston states that no fewer than four separate instances of the breeding of White Canaries have been put on record. Will you please inform Mr. Weston that I exhibited a pure white Norwich Plainhead at Gorleston in January, 1911, which secured first prize. Further, in 1912, I bred two pure white Norwich Plainheads, and in 1913 I have bred four pure white Norwich Plainheads up to the present time. I wish Cage Birds every success.

Wren's Curious Nesting Site.

Sir,—The following may interest some of your readers, and possibly, amongst others:—Mr. Weston, whose weekly notes I eagerly look forward to. In an open cart-shed belonging to a farmer, there are a lot of thick iron and wire rings, to slip over the tops of wood hurdles when sheep-folding, to save ticing. There are about three dozen, making a series of over-lapping circles, very irregular. They hang from a nail attached by a bit of rope about a foot or so long. A pair of Wrens have built in the rings, and the young are now about half grown. The nest is entirely in the rings. You can unhook the rope and carry the nest where you like. I did so this morning, as it hangs rather high, and I wanted to see how they were getting on. I then rehung the nest and departed.

Bird-catching in Lincolnshire.

Sir,—Would you kindly allow me a little space to ask brother catchers if they would kindly tell me in what month Lincolnshire opens for bird catching, and where is the best part to go for Linnets and Goldies, and nearest railway station. I should like to have other catchers' views from other counties; also as to what size of net they prefer. I shall be greatly obliged for any information given me.

Bullfinches Breeding in Captivity.

Sir,—Will you let me know if Bullfinches have ever been bred in captivity, because I have bred some this year, they hatched out on Sunday, May 18, and are going on well so far.

F. W. Skett.

Erdington.

[Bullfinches have frequently bred in aviaries, but not many cases have come to our notice where they have bred in cages (i.e., hatched and reared their young). Perhaps Mr. Skett will kindly give fuller particulars—size of cage, or aviary, food, etc.—Editor.]

Remarkable Experience with Chaffinch Eggs Put Under Canaries.

Sir,—It may be of interest to other beginners in the Fancy, like myself, to know of an experience I have just had. A friend of mine brought me two Chaffinch eggs on April 29, which had been laid on the two previous days. Having no hen ready at the time, I kept them in bran until May 8, when I set two hens, putting a Chaffinch egg in each nest with the Canary's own eggs. After they had been sitting a week, through carelessness on my part, I omitted to give seed to No. 1 hen, with the result that she left the nest, and the eggs were cold when I found it out. I took the eggs away, put them on a table, and left them there for at least two hours, then, thinking that she might take to the nest again, after having food, and perhaps would be useful to me to help rear some of No. 2 hen's young, I returned the Chaffinch egg, which was fertile (her own eggs were all clear). I also took the Chaffinch egg from No. 2 hen, and put it with the other one with the result that on May 20, 12 days from the time of sitting, she hatched out the two Chaffinches, but they both died when two days old. I was given to understand that Chaffinch eggs took the same time to hatch (under ordinary circumstances) as those of Canaries.

The Breeding of Yellows From Two Buffs.

How the Quality and Colour of Canaries may be improved in the Process.

Sir,—Thanks to Mr. G. E. Weston for backing my argument that it is possible to breed yellows from two buffs. I never even had the idea that I was the only one; others must surely have done it. Mr. Weston is quite to the point. I will give this method of quality breeding in detail to all young fanciers, as was my intention after all doubts had been cleared away. Some years ago I had the pleasure of a peep into a high-class Norwich Canary breeder's room. What quality I saw; I shall never forget it, and I have been in many since that time. Hens were even better than cocks. The grand salmon undercolour had a kind of a net or curtain of silver frosting hung over. This salmon tint was in all the buffs I saw, both cocks and hens. I thought to myself there must be a secret here to get them all like this. I had to be very careful, as my intention was to buy two hens—I had nothing to approach them. I said to the owner, you have a nice yellow hen here, a real good one, and another one there. He said he had bred them from two buffs. I asked him if this was the way he got good quality like this throughout his stock. He replied, yes. I then asked the price of the two hens, but, alas! my poor pocket would not stand the figure asked. My only way out of it was, I thought, to go home and put two buffs together, and breed myself some yellow hens. I did so, but with no success. Like Mr. Johnson, I met with utter failure. I might have tried until Doomsday and never got one that way. It was a case of gaining a little size and losing colour—I was going to Newcastle to get to London, as it were. I then retraced my steps and bought a pair of Norwich from a breeder who had introduced the Cinnamon and Crest-bred into his stock a few years previously. Here is the "secret," if I may term it so. I worked these into my stock. The following year I put up a deep yellow-marked cock to a buff hen, and a buff-ticked cock to a yellow-marked hen. The following year I paired up two yellows bred from these two pairs, both ticked. These yellows bred buffs. The buff cocks so bred I paired up to buff hens, bred from the yellow-marked cock and buff hen. Here I got a profusion of yellow blood, and the result was I bred yellows from buffs. It was here I found out the golden rule for quality. Take care of both the buff and yellow hens bred from these double yellows and work on them. You will want very little colour-feed to bring the young from them up to concert pitch. It is more particularly for the benefit of young fanciers that I have penned these few lines. Just a word to the Cinnamon breeders before I close my letter:—Is it not possible to breed buffs with a red throat and breast, like a newly-caught cock Linnet, in place of those washy pale throats you so often see, and which are so often commented upon at the shows? I think it is. The yellows will then take care of themselves.

THE STOCK BOOK

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for every-one, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

Siskin-Twite Hybrids Bred.

Sir,—Through your valuable paper, Cage Birds, I would like to state that I have bred two Siskin-Twite Hybrids in an aviary, in which there are two hen Siskins also. I would like to know if this is uncommon, and if they have been bred before?

Were there White Canaries in Years Gone By?

Sir,—In reference to Mr. Weston's notes about white Canaries in years gone by, he and others might be interested to hear that fourteen years ago I well remember a sister of mine kept a pair of common Canaries which had a nest, and duly hatched out four youngsters. The eggs having been left in as laid, the birds came out on different days. The three eldest were variegated birds, but the youngest and smallest was quite white. Unfortunately, possibly because it was the smallest, it did not thrive, and to our great disappointment it died before leaving the nest, but it was practically fully fledged, and was certainly white without a mark of any kind. It was not an albino, as its eyes were of normal colour. We certainly looked upon it as a "freak" and much regretted its demise. The father was a clear buff, and the hen was probably the same, but I cannot now remember.

The Use of Standard Show Cages in Ireland.

Sir,—The first letter was about Yorkshire cages, and "Advocate of Uniformity," answered it in a few sentences, and then broke off about the Norwich cages, proving clearly that it was the Norwich fanciers that he wanted to get at. Now Mr. Stewart has answered, and has denied the statement that some fanciers put their names on the backs of their cages. I may say that I have been attending shows for the past 20 years, and I have never seen a name on a cage yet. I am glad to see "Advocate" advocating the claims of Irish judges, but I am afraid that until we cultivate the spirit of taking a beating in the proper way, then it is a case of "pity the Irish judge." Surely an Irish judge will be more found fault with than an English one, if the names are on the cages. Does "Advocate" really think that the fanciers here would stand the latter kind of thing?

A. Creighton.

Sir,—Would it be any information to "Advocate of Uniformity" to know that it was not for holding shows on its own account that the N.P.C.C. of Ireland was formed; also his is the first information I have received of a show being held under the auspices of this club this year. It is not a lifetime ago since it was in active existence. So late as 1910, at six or seven shows the cups were competed for and won a second time by the holders, who ungrudgingly gave them up this year to be competed for afresh. Further, I think the Norwich exhibitors are not so absent-minded as "Advocate of Uniformity" would have his readers believe them to be. The members of this club, who are the principal Norwich exhibitors here, have been showing in the same N.P.C.C. show cage since 1910. I suppose it will take some salt to make "Advocate" swallow this, too. If there are so many shapes, makes, and colours of cages as you say, "Advocate," why trouble to put a name on at all—would every exhibitor not know his own cage well enough? Yet you say they have to lift them down to see whose they are before the award catalogues are on sale. You say you are surprised at me denying that many exhibitors put their names on the backs of cages. I still emphatically deny it, and say it has not been done since I joined the Fancy, and I challenge you now to name even one exhibitor that has put his name on either back or bottom of cages. In your first letter you say a fancier who had his name on all his cages won 12 specials in open Norwich classes at two of our shows; this I say is not correct either, and I challenge you to name the fancier. I unhesitatingly say there are judges come over from England to judge our shows, who are above suspicion, and who judge the birds on their merits—every man is not a rogue as "Advocate of Uniformity" would have us believe.

James Stewart.

Sir,—In your last issue "Advocate of Uniformity," I think, has overstepped the margin in saying the judges that come from England to judge our shows are not above suspicion. I quite agree with him, however, re the names on the backs of the cages, although personally I believe they are there for the fanciers' own convenience when lifting their birds at shows. There is not the least doubt that steps must be taken to stop exhibitors putting their names on cages. It is the amateurs that swell the classes, and they must get encouragement if they are to continue exhibiting. A uniform show cage would do away with a lot of grumbling and suspicion re distinguishing marks, and it is the duty of the N.P.C.C. of Ireland to take the matter up. "Advocate of Uniformity" has no doubt raised a point which show committees would do well to consider, and that is, the appointment of Irish judges. A judge from England costs a show £3, whereas in Ireland equally good judges could be had for £1 or £1 5s. I know some will say that you cannot get a man in Ireland to judge all varieties. If so, why not have two, one for Crests and Plainheads, and another for Yorks and British; or at shows where the Yorkshires were in the majority have one judge for Yorks, and the other for Nor., Brit., etc.? The advantages of having two Irish judges instead of one English judge are: (1) It saves the show committee from 15s. to 20s. in judge's fees. (2) The judging would be over in half the time, therefore the public could be admitted earlier. (3) The award catalogues could be printed earlier, doubtless with an increased sale. (4) In many cases where a two-day show is held one day would suffice owing to the foregoing advantages, thus saving £1 or £1 10s. hall rent. In my opinion it would greatly benefit such shows as Derry, Cork, Larne, Bangor, Kingstown, and Newtownards. At present it takes them all their time to keep afloat, and few have a balance on the right side. What do the officials think of Irish judges? Their opinions I am sure will be welcomed by Irish readers.

Is Insect Powder Injurious to Young Birds in the Shell?

Sir,—I should be glad to know (and I think it would interest breeders of birds in general) if there is any danger in dusting the eggs and nests of Canaries, etc., with insect powder, a practice I see constantly advocated. One of the largest and most successful poultry breeders in England, says it should never be done with fowls' eggs when hatching, as it is possible for the whole lot of eggs to be spoiled, and the chicks in them killed through the powder (which is, of course, very fine) getting into the pores of the shells, and thereby suffocating the chickens. I well remember once I had a valuable sitting of eggs within a day or so of hatching, and to make quite sure the chicks should not be troubled with insects I dusted both hen, nest, and eggs, well with Keating's powder. Only about two eggs hatched, and on breaking the others I found five fully developed chickens in them, but dead. I could not at the time in any way account for it, but on being told the above I fully believe the cause was the powder. In the book on Canaries, by Mr. House, you are told always to well dust the nest and eggs when the bird begins to hatch and again just before the eggs are due to chip. I should very much like to know if any breeders who are in the habit of following this advice ever find the young ones fully developed, but dead in the shell without being able to account for it.

The Ramble of the National British Bird and Mule Club.

An Apology.

Sir,—I feel I owe an apology, not only to the members of the above club, but particularly to the members of kindred societies who joined in the afternoon ramble, for the disappointment caused by the curtailment of the afternoon arrangements, owing to an unpardonable blunder on my part in fixing the hour for luncheon at 5 p.m., instead of 1 p.m. I assure them that nobody felt the disappointment more keenly than I did. It was most mortifying to me to discover at the very last moment that a slip of the pen had upset the intended arrangements, and that those members who had tramped hard all the morning in the broiling sun were deprived of the looked for repast. I most sincerely tender them my apologies, and beg that they will not put the mistake down to carelessness unworthy of one who presumes to give advice on the keeping of softbills, and declares regularity to be one of his mottoes. Fortunately the outing was favoured with fine weather, otherwise the consequences of the delay might have been felt more acutely, but I trust the digestive organs of the "bread and cheese" party were not seriously upset, but thoroughly "Meated off" by the late tea, and that their angered spirits were softened by the melodious strains of Philomel on the way back to the station. Five o'clock tea is conventional, but hot luncheon at 5 p.m. unique—certainly so in 1913. I never did believe, but do now, that thirteen is an unlucky number, and trust one and all will take the same view.

Captive Cuckoos and their Little Ways

Mrs. Sargeant writes again concerning her uncommon pets, in the Keeping of which she has had an unusual amount of success.

Sir,—I am now, according to promise, sending you photographs of my old Cuckoo (the one that recently died after nearly five years of captive life), as mounted by Mr. Jones, and my two young ones. Mr. Homer had to photograph them under somewhat difficult circumstances, as it was too cold to venture out of doors with them, and the weather was also against taking them indoors—we waited in vain for a ray of sunshine. I think you will agree with me, however, that they all look remarkably well. The two young ones you will see are still changing feathers; the elder of the two (by a fortnight) is showing fight in his (or her) usual aggressive way.

THE TWO YOUNG CUCKOOS "SPOILING FOR A FIGHT."

The photograph of Mrs. Sargeant's 5-year-old bird appeared on page 445 last week.

They are, like all the other Cuckoos I have had, friendly with most other birds, but show a deadly hatred towards members of their own species. The old one, who looked most lifelike as he was posed for the photo, was instantly known by the two young Cuckoos, but the other birds took no notice of him. Mr. Jones says that had he lived he would have been in far finer plumage this summer, and he failed to find any reason for his death beyond that of chill, his body being properly plump and in good condition. I am afraid I was too venturesome with him, the winter being so mild. He was in and out his cage all day long. Mr. Homer suggested that the two young ones should be photographed together. I said: "Oh, no, they could not be taken together; if both were at liberty they would fight like anything. However, I placed them both on the same perch, and sure enough they seized each other by the beak. It was my dividing hand that sent them both to the far ends of the perch, looking defiance at each other, and turning up a corner of the eye to see if that hand was still there to part them if they had another round! Mr. Homer seized the happy moment, and we were both glad to get them safely back into their cages. I said I would try and relate a few things about Cuckoos, but I find so much has been said about them in Cage Birds since their arrival this spring that I have little left to tell. Cuckoos are birds that appeal to all poets in the spring—Shakespeare and Wordsworth amongst the rest. They have been birds of mystery at all times, and taken for omens of good and bad (bad mostly). In the very early days they were considered to turn into a species of Hawk, and change their plumage in the winter. I quote from Mr. John's Natural History, which says these birds evince so much animosity towards each other that should two males meet, they will fight in mid air, wheeling and attacking each other like birds of prey. This gave rise to the idea at one time prevalent that they were the only birds of the Hawk species that preyed on each other. They were also thought to hibernate during the winter. Mr. Wood, in his Natural History, says that weodmen sometimes came upon them in a hole in a log of wood. A woman I was talking to only this morning said that her father was a woodman, and told her he came across several rolled up in their feathers in holes at the roots of trees, and that on waking them they quickly changed their feathers into spring plumage. So there are still some believers in this phase of a Cuckoo's life. It is well known now that they migrate. How long they live seems rather unsettled, as those specimens that are shot are rarely over two years old, and often not that. It appears that in Devonshire there is an old adage, still believed by the little ones, that the Cuckoo comes in the spring to eat up all the mud, and make the lanes passable for their little feet, that they may gather the spring flowers. In captivity Cuckoos are most intelligent and affectionate birds, and have a certain amount of reasoning power. One I had always knew when my neighbour (who was in the habit of speaking to him as he passed the window at dinner time) was coming. Up would go his head fully a minute or more before he passed. I used to think he must hear his footsteps long before I could, but after noticing him a few days I found he started to watch out as soon as Williamson's rung the men out of work. As soon as Mr. Roberts had passed, down would go his head, satisfied. One of the young ones I have now is by the side of the fire, farthest away from the window. He sits and watches all things that pass. I am sometimes between him and the window, but when he hears a cart or motor coming, he stretches his neck, peeps on one side, then the other, looks at me, and presses his chest against the bars. When I move away from him his eyes brighten. Their eyes change colour, like their feathers, but very gradually, at least, that is, in captivity. This bird is in all ways like my old Cuckoo. The "fighter" is different in many little respects, so possibly they are male and female. Should they live to another spring, I will let you know. I have more Bullfinch eggs, under Canaries this time, but I am not expecting any luck. I have two Greenfinches sitting steadily, and another nest complete, also a good few young Canaries.

(Mrs.) E. M. Sargeant.

Sir,—Mrs. Sargeant, who is sending photos and particulars of her tame Cuckoos, wishes me to also inform you that the Cuckoo photographed stuffed was five years old and a chill caught during moulting was the cause of death. It was very difficult to stuff, being covered chiefly with quill feathers. She took every care each moulting time but it only had a partial moult; this time it appeared to be a full moult, but the bird was not able to get through it.

A Homing Chaffinch.

Sir,—About the middle of March I had a small Chaffinch hen, field-moulted. I had no use for her, so I gave her her liberty. I was surprised to find that she had returned three days later, and I hung a show cage out. She immediately took possession of this. I then kept her until May 16 when she this time flew out of the window, and again returned on the 19th, I put the cage out again, and in less than five minutes she entered. On Saturday last I rung her, and again gave her her liberty. Next evening she returned to her habitation, and she is in my birdroom at present. I should like to know if any reader of your valuable paper has had a similar experience.

LEYTON C.B.A.

The members of above association went for their annual ramble through Epping Forest, May 17. There was a good muster at Loughton Station, and, owing no doubt to the glorious weather, everyone was in the best of spirits. Dozens of nests were found, with eggs and youngsters, including Linnet, Chaffinch, Whitethroat, Greenfinch, Blackbird, Thrush, and Bullfinch. We have never found so many Linnets' nests in the Forest; quite seven or eight were found, with eggs, one with the old bird on, bearing our inspection bravely for some time. It was found when she did move that there were five eggs. Another interesting thing was the way a Lesser Whitethroat left her nest, just hopped out and along a small branch, as unconcernedly as possible; of course this was probably owing to the care we were taking. Only one Bullfinch nest was found, and that with the hen sitting, and what a lovely specimen. Arriving at the "Owl," the whole company were photographed, to the great amusement of a party of young ladies. Curiously enough one of them exclaimed, "Look for the dicky bird." Surely they did not know we were "birdy men"; anyhow, the remark was the cause of a spoilt plate. We next adjourned to the hall at the rear, where Mrs. Langdon (the hostess) had a splendid meat tea ready for us, to which we did full justice. Having satisfied the "inner man," music was the order of the evening. Photographer Talbot presided at the piano, and there was no lack of volunteers for songs. We had a very jolly time.—Forse and Son, Hon. Secs.

A DAY IN EPPING FOREST

Spent by the N.B.B. and M.C. and other London Societies.

In their annual ramble, the members of the National British Bird and Mule Club were joined by the L. and P.O.S., City and Suburban, North London, and other Societies to Epping Forest on Saturday last, May 24th. About 28 turned up in the morning, and the ramblers were favoured with the best of weather, dry and warm, with the sun not too oppressive, and the Forest could not have looked better. A start was made from Chingford, and Starlings, Rooks, Sparrows, all ubiquitous (are all vermin?) were soon located. Then in quick succession followed the Wren, Chaffinch, Greenfinch, Missel Thrush (pair), Robin, Song Thrush, Blackbird (young), and then a Blackbird's nest. This was rather out of reach, but Mr. Askew saved climbing by an ingenious contrivance (a small round looking glass tied on to the point of his stick, which, held in the right position above the nest, displayed to one and all the contents, viz., 3 eggs). This idea of Mr. Askew's proved very useful throughout the day. The Forest is rich in Warblers, and the Nightingale was the next to display his vocal powers, followed by the Garden Warbler, Willow Wren, and Whitethroat. Then we came on a Thrush's nest, with four eggs, then a Chaffinch's nest, and the mirror displayed young ones just out, and one egg. Then in quick succession came Blue Tit, Great Tit, Chiff-chaff, and several Blackcaps. Then we came on young Robins, and after that a deer was seen scudding through the thickets. Then Green Woodpeckers and Cuckoos were heard. Up to this time we had been mainly amongst high trees, where the bird life could not be called plentiful for the distance travelled, but now we came to the plain below the "Owl Inn," and Mr. Law flushed a Willow Wren and found the nest with 7 eggs. Nightingales were heard here, and deer again seen. Jays seemed to be abundant, and Mr. Robson saw four young ones on the wing. On our way to the "Owl" the first Martin came in sight. At the "Owl" we found a Pied Wagtail's nest and four eggs, and Swallows and Swifts, and Wood Pigeons were seen. After a rest and refreshment a few of the ramblers, headed by Mr. Silver, wandered over the brow of the hill, and Tree Pipits were distinctly identified by their characteristic flight and song. The afternoon party of about 15 then joined us, and after starting away from the "Owl," we located another Willow Wren's nest, with eggs, and several Whitethroats' nests, and a Blue Tit's nest, with 7 eggs. About this time the Nuthatch was heard calling. Then Mr. Carr, who was very enthusiastic and industrious, found a Lesser Whitethroat's nest with five eggs, and he spent some time in trying to find a Blackcap's nest, but did not meet with the same success, although the cock kept singing lustily in about the same spot all the time. The cover was very thick. When we got to the "Robin Hood" a Coal Tit's nest was found amongst rockwork, with three holes in the rockwork for the hen to go in and out at. Tea was partaken of at this hostelry, and afterwards one or two short speeches were made (chairman, Mr. Robson welcoming the visitors, and Messrs. Law (L. and P.O.S.) and Jeffries (N. London C.B.A.), responding. Mr. Lott, the popular one-time secretary of the N.B.B. and M.C., also being called upon for a few words. Mr. Puck, who organised the outing, was heartily thanked for his services, the opinion of all being that a most pleasant day had been spent, despite an unfortunate hitch over the luncheon arrangements. After leaving the "Robin Hood" for Loughton, on the homeward journey, a few birds were seen and heard, but no new species. On the whole it would seem that the district is not so full of bird life as it was a few years ago, and probably the "tripper," who is now poured into the Forest by train, tram and motor bus, is responsible for this; he reminds one of the Starling and Sparrow, which oust everything else when once they take possession.—G. Crabb.

As a youngster it might possibly be rather 'leggy.'
But would no doubt have grown into a fine specimen
Amusing its owner with its merry antics
It might even have been trained to beg
And could easily spare a leg to scratch its ear
Later it would no doubt settle down to the more serious duties of life.

The Cultivation of Wild Plants for Cage Birds.

By R. MORSE.

WHENEVER possible, it is better for the rows to run from north to south than from east to west, for in the former case the midday sun shines directly up the rows, whilst in the latter it is obvious that, especially with tall plants, one row must to a certain extent prevent the sun's rays from reaching that situated immediately behind it.

Arranging the Plants.

The plants dealt with in this article have been arranged in two groups, chiefly for the benefit of those whose plot of ground is in a somewhat conspicuous position, and who therefore would perhaps rather grow only those useful wild plants which are more or less ornamental when in flower. The first group, then, will consist of plants the flowers of which possess at least a certain amount of beauty, whilst group two will contain plants which are for the most part inelegant, but none the less useful.

In each case the approximate height of the plant is given. This should be useful in planning the bed, for growers will be able so to arrange their crops that the smallest plants will not be unduly shaded by those of more robust habits or of greater height.

It will be noticed that practically all the plants dealt with in this article may be sown during the present month, so that those who decide to cultivate at least some of their own bird foods will be able to commence operations immediately. It is obvious, however, that the later the seeds are sown, the later will the crop be ready for use. For this reason it is impossible to state definitely when each individual species will be ready for harvesting. But, of course, many of the seeds have great value for birds during and about the moulting season, as well as during the breeding season.

Some Ornamental Weeds.

The Cornflower (Centaurea Cyanus) commonly attains a height of about two feet, but may be anything from one to three feet, according to soil and situation. The flowers are usually of the richest blue, and are distinctly ornamental. The seeds may be sown at any time from March to June in shallow drills, and should be covered with rather more than a quarter of an inch of moderately fine soil. The rows should be from nine inches to a foot apart, and the plants should be thinned out so as to stand about nine inches asunder in the rows. When only a small space is available, smaller distances may be allowed, but the results will not be so satisfactory; a similar remark would apply to all the plants dealt with in this article. The Cornflower thrives best in a dry soil and sunny situation, its natural habitat being, as indicated by its name, the cornfield.

CORNFLOWER, WILD OATS. SCARLET PIMPERNEL.

The Wild Oat (Avena fatua) grows to a height of about two feet, and from an ornamental point of view is extremely useful for associating with flowers. A vase of Cornflowers and Wild Oats is equal in beauty to many of the most expensive treasures of the garden. Seeds may be sown at any time during spring, the drills being about an inch or so deep, and nine inches to a foot apart. The plants should be thinned out to the distances of about three inches, or rather more if space can be spared. A dry, sunny situation is best.

A Beautiful Acquisition.

The Common Poppy (Papaver Rhaeas) usually reaches a height of about eighteen inches, and a bed in full bloom is decidedly beautiful, though the flowers are of little use for cutting. The seeds may be sown from March to June, great care being taken that they are not covered too deeply, or with soil of a very coarse nature. The best plan is to cover very lightly with a small quantity of finely sifted soil. A sunny aspect is the best, and the plants should finally stand about four inches apart, the rows being six inches from each other.

The Scarlet Pimpernel (Anagallis arvensis) is a dwarf plant, seldom growing more than a few inches high, but frequently trailing more than a foot along the ground. The flowers, though small, are very pretty, and varieties with pink, white, or blue flowers may sometimes be found. The seeds, being very small, must be covered lightly with fine soil, as recommended above for the Poppy. They may be sown at any time from March to June, the rows being about nine inches apart, and the plants being thinned out until about four inches separates one from the next. The Scarlet Pimpernel thrives best in dry soils exposed to the full rays of the sun.

A Mass of Pretty Blue Flowers.

The Autumn Gentian (Gentiana Amarella) rears its pretty blue flowers to a height of about nine inches, and a mass of it in full bloom is a very pretty sight. The seeds should be sown in spring in drills about four or five inches apart, and the plants thinned to about three inches asunder. Only a thin covering of fine soil should be given, or results will be disappointing. A sunny aspect is best, and the plant never does so well as in a dry, chalky soil.

The Common Flax (Linum usitatissimum) usually reaches a height of about eighteen inches, and its stems are surmounted by quantities of delicate, pale blue flowers. The seed (Linseed) should be sown during spring about half an inch deep, the drills being separated by a distance of about six inches, and the plants thinned so as finally to leave them a few inches apart. A light, dry soil is the most suitable.

AUTUMN GENTIAN, CANARY GRASS. WILD POPPY.

What Others Think.

I NOTICED in my daily paper last week a paragraph concerning a Thrush which had won a "world's championship" in Belgium, its claim to this remarkable distinction being based on the fact that it had sung the opening bar of a certain tune 850 times in one hour! This performance so delighted someone that he (or she) planked down £10 for the bird. That seems a modest sum for a "world's champion," but personally I wouldn't have had that Thrush if I had been offered £10 to take it away. I can imagine the mental torture of listening to those 850 bars of "music" in one hour—the same old bar every time! There would be one of two sad endings—either the sudden demise of the Thrush or the suicide of your humble. How true it is that "one man's meat is another man's poison." I remember a well-known aviculturist expressing his disgust at the song of no less a bird than the Linnet. He considered it "wooden," "jerky," and "tuneless," and altogether sadly over-rated. I thought what an impossible sort of person he must be! The song of the Chaffinch, however, has a deplorable effect upon myself. The "Kiss-me-dear" passage certainly conjures up pleasant recollections; but cannot one have too much of even a good thing? The oft-repeated "pink," "pink," "pink," I confess maddens me, especially when fired from the throat of a lusty male with the rapidity of shot from a Gatling gun, and in a kind of metallic yell that jars one's very ear-drum—at least, that's how it affects me in my own little bird-room.

Does Dusting Spell Death?

A curious and decidedly uncommon point is raised this week in the correspondence columns. "H.M.P." is inclined to believe that the dusting of the nest and eggs with insect powder may result in the death of the young birds within the said eggs. True, his one and only experience bearing on the point has been with eggs of the domestic fowl; but he backs it up by quoting the advice of one who should be an authority. On inquiring of a friend on the staff of the "Poultry World," however, I am told that the condemned practice is quite commonly in vogue amongst poultry breeders, is recommended by leading experts on poultry matters, and has never, to my friend's knowledge, proved harmful—in his experience, that is. He does not credit it. And neither do I, for I must surely have used in my own career (of course, solely on birds) as much insect powder as would make a decent-sized mole-hill. I have had no appreciable trouble with youngsters dead in the shell, however, though I have dusted nest and eggs with a liberal hand.

Could Powder "Choke" Them?

Let us examine the matter more closely, as it were. That the shell of the egg is porous we all, of course, know. One of the purposes served by the hen leaving the nest at intervals is to allow the foul air (or gases) generated by the embryo in process of growth to escape, and pure air to enter. But the pores are so arranged as not to allow of insect powder entering the egg, and that the powder could hermetically stop up all the pores, and so "choke" the chick, seems very far-fetched, even (which I cannot answer for) were it possible. The powder placed amongst the plumage is quickly shaken off; that dusted on to the nest very quickly settles down and disappears amongst the nesting material; while the eggs are frequently being moved and "rustled" about by the hen. Anyway, it would be necessary for a series of experimental cases to be undertaken to settle the point, and I have yet to hear of this being done. Nobody would accept the "evidence" of isolated cases, which can only rest on suspicion. And, of coure, supposition is futile. I understand that the shell of an egg, except in a few species, consists of three layers, and that the outer layer (or cuticular layer) extends over and closes the pores, though (except when wet) air can pass through it (vide Dr. Hans Gadow). How, then, can powder "choke" the chick?

Mother May Be To Blame

Some birds' eggs are hatched under revoltingly filthy conditions (those of the Hoopoe, for instance; vide Professor Newton) yet neither the eggs nor the young come by any harm. There are several reasons which fanciers bring forward as accountable for fully formed young being found dead in the shell. It may be that the chicks are weak, and unable at the last moment to break their way out; or some peculiarity of the shell, of lining membrane (skin), proves an effectual barrier to hatching. Further, some hens seem to develop a "tired" feeling towards the close of the period of incubation, and sit only by fits and starts, being off the greater part of the day, but sitting closely at night. It is easy to overlook such a case when one can spend only a brief time daily in one's bird-room. Last season I spotted a Norwich hen at this little game and transferred her clutch of six eggs (all fertile) to other hens. But I was just too late, as only two hatched; four contained dead youngsters—hard luck!

And Father Too Perhaps.

One other point which may have some bearing on this matter is the manner in which we treat sitting hens. To my way of thinking it is irrational and indefensible. The under-lying idea seems to be that once the hen commences to incubate the eggs, she is in for an easy, restful time, and must be reduced to "prison diet" to keep her high spirits within bounds—to suppress any desire to gad about the cage instead of attending strictly to business. That the act of incubation involves the hen in a constant physical strain to maintain the necessary heat to ensure the successful hatching of the eggs, does not seem to occur to fanciers. So they proceed to cut out of her diet those very items which enable her most easily to keep up the requisite temperature—i.e., with the least functional wear and tear. I have "argued" the point for years with those of my fancier friends who cared to listen; and convinced not a few. It is a point worthy of consideration, anyway, especially when one has hens sitting during cold unseasonable weather.

Something We Can't Do.

I had intended dealing with the breeding of yellows from buffs, but consideration of the above interesting topic has run away with my space. I may briefly refer to one other point, perhaps, and that concerns the question of ascertaining the fertility and sex of eggs before they are incubated. To put the matter briefly: it can't be done. The number of erroneous ideas floating about concerning these matters is amazing. Some think the thickened twisted cords of albumen (chalazæ) found in the white are sure signs of fertility —briefly, they are the "tread" of the male bird. The only evidence of fertility in the very early stages of the "life" of an egg is to be located in the germinal vesicle a minute body found in the germ spot and invisible except to microscopes of the highest power. I will return to this subject next week. G. E. Weston.

HOW THE EXHIBITION NORWICH CANARY IS OBTAINED.

The views of Mr. J. Raynes, a former secretary of the N.P.C., given before the members of the Manchester and Northern Counties O.S.

General meeting held May 19, at headquarters, Deansgate Temperance Hotel. After general business was over, the Chairman called upon Mr. J. Raynes to give us his promised lecture on the Norwich Plainhead. Mr. Raynes, in opening, said the system of breeding Canaries generally had been given by many, each lecturer giving his own ideas. It generally was not the lecture that was the most instructive, but the discussion that followed, and he hoped that some of the points he raised would cause a discussion, so that he as well as his hearers would benefit by it.

What constitutes a good Norwich? We will commence with the head, which has so much to do with its general appearance. I like to see a nice rise, from a short beak, over the nostrils, with a nice big round head; the eye in the middle of the head, the feathers pointing to the back of the head and straight. A bird with its head almost in a line with its beak, and quite flat, or a small head on a large body, or feathers over its eyes (called browing) looks bad. These are very undesirable points. The cheeks to be full and thick, and extended well down the neck, giving it a bull-dog appearance; the back to be broad and well-filled in, without showing any hollow, or being hump-backed; the chest to be full and deep, showing a good front; the body tapering off gradually to the root of the tail.

How the Shape may be Spoiled.

A big round lump of fat on a bird's chest is very objectionable, and spoils its shape; it should be bred out and not fed on. Wings to be short and well folded, the points to meet at the top of the root of the tail, but should not be crossed; a great drawback with a number of birds is that their wings overlap the wrong way, as it were, giving them the appearance of dropping down (sometimes called boxy wings); feet should be perfect; legs should be well set back, and clear, and be seen up to the joint of "thigh" or hock, so as not to give the bird either a stilty or squatty appearance. The feather should be of a soft silky quality, and compact; some breeders swear by the Cinnamon to get that nice quality we all desire; I use it from the hen side, and am well satisfied, with the result, it is a peculiar and interesting study, and when once in it crops up again after several generations. The tail should be short, nicely folded and compact, should not be broad at the end, in fact, should be drawn almost to a point without any tendency to droop. Colour should be deep, rich, pure, and level throughout. The bird when shown to be staged in a good, healthy, and clean condition, and not exceed 6½in. in length.

In selecting or buying stock birds for breeding I prefer a clear yellow cock mated to a ticked or marked buff hen, in preference to a buff cock and yellow hen, because by the former pairing you have a chance of getting more yellows, as the colour of the progeny takes after the cock; but whichever way you have them you must have size, and a year older, if possible, on the cock side. I would sacrifice a little extra feather anywhere if he possessed the other good qualities. The hen is by far the most important, as it is from the hen we expect to get type. Get one as good in head and neck as possible, a good typical bird. Never mind if on the small side, providing she is well bred. The man that can breed a few good hens has the best chance of success. If the progeny from any pair does not suit you, change the cock bird for the next round, and hope for better results. To be successful year after year you must know how your birds are bred, and what they are likely to throw, and note in your pedigree book the channel where the best birds come from and keep them.

The Value of Pedigree.

I think pedigree breeding is necessary, but, at the same time, I like a little face value as well, although I would rather breed from a moderate pair with a good pedigree than with a slightly better looking, or face value pair with a poor pedigree. I like to breed yellow and buff together, one of the pair to be ticked or marked; I sometimes use a green hen to a clear cock. By using these marked birds you breed better colour, which tells when put on colour food. I have tried double yellowing, but did not care for the thin and delicate looking progeny, although you get more yellows. I would rather double buff from two short birds, as it has a tendency to thicken the web of the feather, and makes the bird look thicker; I think that is why we get more buffs than yellows.

Some of you might say, quite right and true, on paper, but we cannot always do what we want, simply because we have not got the material to work with; we have not got a suitable yellow cock for our best buff hen, or a hen not good enough for a very good cock, and to make matters worse we cannot buy them, and we have to resort to some of our inferior birds to pair with the better ones, but at the end of the season we may find that we have actually bred a good bird or two from them. This is simply a case of breeding back; the points aimed at sometimes do not show themselves in the first cross, but will appear, perhaps, in the second or third generation.

A Temptation to be Resisted.

Some fanciers who, having had a good season or two, have bred a decent winner or two, are tempted to sell them. We know that money is a great temptation to a working-man, and he still has the parents left that bred these good ones; but he had not reckoned on his drawbacks, and before next breeding season arrives he has lost one or both of the parents that bred him his good birds, and rues his transaction, because he has to buy before he can pair up again.

Mr. Raynes then told us when he paired up, and treatment of getting birds in condition, the care of the young, moulting, and colour feeding; after which a very interesting discussion took place. Time came all too soon, when a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. Raynes for his interesting and instructive lecture.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

SOME BENEFITS OF JOINING A CAGE BIRD SOCIETY.

And Some Views Upon Exhibiting.

The following remarks have been extracted from two papers in the recent essay competition, promoted by the Stoke-on-Trent C.B.S. Mr. Bowers was the winner of second prize; the paper awarded the first prize is printed in full on another page.—Ed.

About four years ago I could not tell a Yorkshire from a Norwich. I started with three pairs of birds, and was successful, thanks to Cage Birds, which has been of great assistance to me. I also joined the Stoke C.B.A., and have received many benefits through doing so. I advise all fanciers to join a society. I should just like to express my opinion that the bona-fide working man exhibitor is very much handicapped in competing on the show bench with the gentlemen exhibitors, or men of means, who buy up as many of the best birds as they can get hold of, to take most of the prize-money. This does not give us working men much chance. I should like to see show committees provide amateur classes, open only to bona-fide working men; or devise some method whereby they would be competing against those whose resources are as limited as their own.—J Bowers.

Things Worth the Gaining.

Social and Practical Benefits: By attending the meetings you get to know your brother fanciers, who I find are always ready and willing to give you advice from their past experiences. In many cases there springs up a lasting friendship. You will get many useful hints, and hear papers read by some old fancier, on subjects always highly interesting, and useful; also watch washing exhibitions by experienced fanciers—quite an eye-opener to those who have never seen a bird washed.

Show and Financial Benefits: Then you have the members' shows, where the new beginner learns how to stage his birds, ready to some day become a full blown exhibitor, and possibly a future Palace winner. You benefit greatly for you get to know whether your birds are good enough to enter in open competition. You can take stock of the birds staged, and compare them with yours, and see where your stock needs improving.

Personally, the first time I showed a bird in open competition I won a first prize, and afterwards sold the bird for a good figure. Here again I must thank a brother fancier for the advice given me respecting this sale. Had I not been a member of the society I might have sold this bird for a quarter of what I did. With shows it is usual for the members to enter at a reduced entry fee; this in many instances is equal to the subscription paid. I think you will agree that I have made out a good case and that real and lasting benefits may be gained and enjoyed by every bird fancier joining a Cage Bird Society.—F. W. Alcock.

Moulting and Colour Feeding.

A paper by Mr. Hathaway read before the members of the Burton-on-Trent C.B.S.

Gentlemen: Having been asked to give a paper on moulting and colour feeding, I will endeavour to do my best for you. It is a very anxious time for the birds, also the breeder and the exhibitor. As you take your young from the parents at a month old, place them in twos in breeding cages until eight weeks old, then you can place them in flights and commence colour feeding. My reason for placing in twos in breeders is that they keep more quiet, and are not so likely to get plucked. The quieter the young birds are kept from three to seven weeks old the better they grow.

Keep the young on soft food from the time they leave their parents until you have finished colour feeding them, as I think it is a great mistake for fanciers to get their young on hard seed as quickly as they can, and then afterwards place them on colour food. A great many young birds are lost annually in this way, and I am sure there is no need for the breeder to lose his young unnecessarily. If you place your young birds in flights as soon as they leave their parents, you will find when moulted that several of them are patchy in colour. You will say to yourself that the bird has not quite finished its moult. It will not do so that season either, for those feathers were plucked before you started colour feeding. Hence my advice to you to keep them in twos until you do start the colour feeding, and even then it will pay you to keep all birds of promise caged off separately.

When the Young should be Started.

I start colour feeding my young birds at eight weeks old, that is, if they are in good health. I take the hard-boiled egg and a piece of bread twice the size of the egg, put them through the mill, then just sprinkle with maw seed, so that you can just see there is some maw seed amongst it. I put in one teaspoonful of pepper. If this quantity of egg food is too large for you, mix a quantity according to your needs, and put pepper in for a start, so that you can only just tell there is pepper in it. Gradually increase the pepper to six spoonfuls in about 3 weeks time. Don't be in a hurry to get them on full strength, as there is plenty of time. Give one teaspoonful per bird each day. You will have no difficulty in getting the young birds to eat it up; in a great many cases they would eat more than their share if they could only get it. But the amount I have described is plenty for any bird, young or old.

If your birds are in flights and you can see they are plucking one another badly, or plucking at all, you cannot do better than tie some pieces of string to the cage wires for them to pull at; it will occupy a deal of their spare time. If there is one particular bird they are stripping (some they pluck until they bleed), it is far the best to cage them off. The old birds I start colour feeding about the middle of July, and I start them the same as I do my young birds, and get them gradually on to full strength. In odd cases you find some of the old birds will not take the feed the same as the others, and in these cases I take away the seed hopper for a few hours each day, but when you have got them well in the moult, you can then leave the seed hopper on altogether with safety.

The Advantages of "Sheeting Down."

It is as well to "sheet down" your birds during the moult, as it not only keeps the strong light from them, but it also keeps them cleaner. In cases where the "sheeting down" is done, don't forget to look and see that your birds are all right each time you feed them. I am a strong believer in "sheeting down," as it keeps the birds quieter, and I believe forces the moult a little. If you have a bird "stuck" in the moult, or if you want to start them moulting a little earlier, sheet them down, and you will find it makes a difference, as it stops the bird's song; he finds himself in solitude, and will in many cases start moulting. Saffron tea is also good in assisting the moult. You may either use it in the drinker, or in the egg food; I always use it in the egg food, as it does not get wasted so much in this way.

I sincerely hope there may be some item in this paper that may be useful to the novice, and if so, I shall be well rewarded for any trouble I have been put to.

By J. TOMLINSON

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

Errata: I regret to note that two errors have crept into my article. In issue April 26th, under heading "Singing Classical Flute Notes," it reads: "in about 4-4 time, 4 quavers to a bar"; this should have been 4 crotchets. In issue May 10th, lines 2 and 3, column 2, the sentence: "It is a merry and lively tour when delivered rising, or rising and falling," refers to the water tour, not the deep bubbling water tour.

By comparison with the human voice another resemblance can be drawn from the voiced fricative Zh, or the inwardly breathed Sh, but the mouth and throat must first be cleared of saliva, or a watery sound will be heard. It will be noticed that the breath is first obstructed by having to pass over the tongue, and as the breath is drawn more forcibly, the mouth will gradually open—in a similar way to the bird's beak when the Aufzug is being sung. This faulty passage is often heard at the commencement of a bird's song, and while it may be useless to write anything in its defence, it will be found that, unlike some of the other faults, which are often prolonged, this one does not extend longer than four or five seconds. Usually the time occupied to produce it is less, and probably it is this one redeeming feature that makes it in any way tolerable.

In comparing the bird's voice with the human voice, reference will be made in the nasal tours to the uvula, so perhaps you will allow me to explain for the benefit of any who might be uninitiated in the construction of the vocal organs that the uvula is situated at the back of the mouth at the point of the nose passage. Its chief duty is to open and close the nose passage. Most sounds, letters or words are produced through the mouth with the uvula pressed back to close the nose passage. In speaking the different sounds, or letters, as ng, n, r—sounds that are found in our birds' nasal tours—the uvula is dropped, and though the breath may not always escape by the nose, yet the sound will echo, so to say, in the nose-passage and produce a nasalised sound.

The Faulty Flute Notes.

I have already described two ways of delivering the Flutes. One is a classical, or very good set, in which the consonant D and the long accented vowel u are heard. The other is a lighter toned set, the vowel in these being changed from u to e, sounding as De, De, De, De; whether these can be classed as faulty must necessarily depend upon the way the bird sings the tour. Should they be delivered in a slow- restful manner, although the tone will be a little higher than in the Du-Du style, they will not be faulty, yet they would not be valued so highly as the deeper toned set. Flute notes that are detrimental to the bird's song will be sung in a high-toned and forced voice, or, again in a sharp-toned and hurried maner, the consonant changing from D to T, sounding like Te, Te, Te, Te.

The nasal flutes are the most objectionable, the consonants, such as t, n, r, g, being heard, and sounding as nar-nar-nar-nar, gnar-gnar-gnar, or tnar-tnar-tnar. In sounding these nasal flutes in the human voice, the uvula is dropped, or partly dropped, the breath escaping by the mouth, and again through the nose, producing a nasalised tone, as is heard in the bird when singing these nasal flutes. It will be noticed that these flutes are generally sung slowly, and the beak will open and partly close as each note is delivered, but in a hurried delivery the beak will remain widely open.

There are other tours that may be nasalised; there is one that is given in the pitch of a light toned schockel and similar as regards the style of delivery—excepting the nasalised tone—and nearly approaching the key we should expect to hear the Bell tour delivered in. If we called it a Nasal Schockel, or a Nasalised Bell tour, well, English fanciers would laugh at the new term. English people always do laugh at anything that is new (the steam engine and the motor, for instance); it is a way we have. But this and any other tours that may be sung in a nasalised tone, would be classed as Nasal tours, or bad nasal tours, according to the voice-power used in their production. The harder and louder the bird forces its voice, the more objectionable will be the tour.

The High Bell tour: Whether there is a high bell tour in addition to the sharp bell tour is a matter of individual opinion, as some fanciers will speak of a High Bell tour when it is really sharp, and vice versa. It may be a fine point, but in the High bell we still get the consonant l, as in the good Bell tour, excepting that it is now pitched in a higher key and delivered more rapidly.

A Flaw that sometimes is Passable.

This tour may be admitted in one bird and yet not in another one. So long as it will harmonise with the rest of the bird's tours and rolls, no penalty should be enforced; for instance, should a bird gradually rise from roll to tour, and so on until it reaches a High Bell tour, to deliver it at a similar length to its other tours, then gradually fall one or two notes (i.e., lower its voice again to a note, or two notes, below the Bell it had been singing) this would not be out of harmony. The tour would be detrimental should the bird sing a few of the lower-toned tours and rolls then skip straight away on to the High Bell tour, and if the latter tour is prolonged the fault is still more objectionable.

The prolonging of either the High and Sharp Bell tours is a very objectionable feature in many birds, as they seem to take a delight in repeating them again and again. In the Sharp Bell tour all sound of the consonant l is lost. The bird uses all its voice-power in producing one straight long tour, and frequently it will not end there, but will follow it by faulty flute notes. This has given rise to the idea that a Bell tour is conducive to faults; whether this be correct or not, it is a tour that is fraught with difficulties, and in some birds it will tax the ingenuity of the expert fancier to keep a Bell tour to, or in, its normal tone. This he will endeavour to do by curtailing the diet; allow only the best German summer rape seed, also limit the amount of light allowed, and remove the bird into the coolest room available.

How the Moult Helps.

Even after taking these precautions one is not always successful, and nothing else can be done until the bird has gone into moult—which will take place naturally in the autumn. It is usual for birds to cease singing while undergoing the process of growing new feathers. While the moult is progressing the bird must not be allowed to hear any other bird that may be singing a faulty bell tour. Additional seeds, such as groats, a good seed mixture and egg food are now provided to keep up the bird's vitality during the trying period. When the moult is nearly completed, the bird will usually commence to sing again; then the diet is restricted to the German rape seed. By taking these precautions the Bell tour may be kept to its normal tone, especially so if the bird has only acquired it by tuition—that is, by hearing other birds sing it; when it is not bred in the bird—as there are many of the Glucke and Water Glucke bred birds that do not sing a Bell tour. But should the tour be prominently bred in, as it were, then, after all the above precautions, it will become objectionable again, as the bird gets vigorous, or in the breeding season.

Faults that are Rarely Heard.

The above method is also employed to moderate, or eradicate any other faulty song-passage, such as high flute notes, a Schockel when pitched a little above the normal tone, or a slight Anfzug, as the Aufzug is termed when it is sung short and low in tone. There are several other faulty song passages, but they are so rarely heard in the high-class Roller Canary that I think just a bare mention of them will be sufficient.

In the Hard Schwirre (pronounced by English fanciers as swir-re) the consonants w. z. and the vowels i or e, can be heard, generally in a high pitched, thin-toned voice, sounding as wizz, or wezz. It is given in one long, straight tone, which often gets louder towards the middle and the close of the song pasage.

Nightingales at 7s. 6d. Apiece.

About a year ago there appeared in the Correspondence Columns of Cage Birds. a letter from a well-known aviculturist deprecating the purchase of Nightingales at 7s. 6d. apiece, as sometimes advertised, and stating that it was impossible that a tamed and properly "meated off" bird could be sold for such a sum. The intention of the writer was good, but, as a matter of fact, he was mistaken. It certainly seems unlikely that anyone should take so much trouble for so small a reward, but it can be, and is, done. The value of any saleable article is simply a matter of supply and demand. The real reason that Nightingales are advertised so cheaply is, I regret to say, that we are not a musical nation, and that the demand for bird-music is very limited. Just a year ago I myself purchased a singing Nightingale for the sum of seven shillings, and I have that bird, in full song, to-day.

Let me tell you how he came into my possession. After parting with the young Sprosser (which turned out a comparative failure as a vocalist), for a small figure, my orchestra was reduced to a single performer—the illustrious Antony. He had to represent the first violin, the second violin, the flute, the 'cello and the double-bass, and naturally his performance, good as it was, sounded a little thin. So an order was sent to Germany for another Sprosser and to a well-known advertiser in our columns, Mr. J. Fenn, for a Nightingale. I mention the latter's name partly in corroboration of the above statement, but chiefly because I think we should always give full credit to those to whom credit is due—a little matter which is sometimes overlooked by aviculturists, especially by exhibitors! The two birds arrived on following days, the Nightingale first.

It is just possible that what follows may sound a little improbable to those who have not made a special study of these two species, but I guarantee its complete accuracy. For one day the new Nightingale remained mute. Antony shouted loud songs of defiance at him, but he would not accept the challenge. The following morning the new Sprosser came to hand after his very long journey from Berlin—a journey which under the best auspices is never less than three days, and frequently takes four days. I caged and fed him, and turned to leave the room, but, before I reached the door, Antony challenged the Sprosser. Now you must understand that the Nightingale and the Sprosser are hereditary enemies; the mere sight of the one causes the other to boil over, and an insult from a Nightingale is a thing which a Sprosser must avenge or burst. So, although the Sprosser was hungry and thirsty and weary and travel-stained, this was more than he could stand; he squared his shoulders, threw out his chest, and accepted the challenge.

A Wonderful Three-cornered Contest.

At it they went hammer and tongs, and it was difficult to believe that such a torrent of notes and such a volume of sound could possibly be produced by the throats of two small birds. All this time the new Nightingale (whom I have christened "Manx" because his tail is always broken and stumpy) had been getting more and more excited. At last he could contain himself no longer, and, quite oblivious of my presence, broke into full song. Thus began a wonderful three-cornered contest which lasted until the end of June last year. It used to begin at sunrise, and continue with hardly any intermission until mid-day, and was frequently renewed spasmodically in the afternoon. Antony and Manx began again in the middle of January this year, but I notice that Antony and the Sprosser have been getting rather sulky lately, whereas the irrepressible Manx still sings throughout the live-long day.

And please notice that Manx cost me seven shillings! The best pictures, the best yachts, the best motor-cars, the best houses, the best violins, are only for the millionaire; but the best bird-music that the world can give can be obtained by anyone by the expenditure of a few shillings and a little trouble!

Can the Nightingale Talk?

In one of the ancient bird-books you will find an amusing story about a traveller who put up at an inn and said that he could not sleep all night on account of two caged Nightingales telling one another stories about the innkeeper's wife, who (according to the Nightingales) was a lady of somewhat easy virtue. In these days of Cook's Tourist Tickets the traveller has become (comparatively) truthful, but a century ago he used to take a base advantage of his superior knowledge of the world, and his accuracy was very frequently not above suspicion. The only part of the above story, however, which I cannot quite swallow is that the traveller could understand what the birds were talking about, for I am quite sure that the Nightingale can talk.

Only the other day I heard a delightful lecture delivered in the metropolis by Mr. Seton Thompson, in the course of which he said that, though it would be too much to expect that the so-called lower animals had very complex ideas or a large vocabulary, they undoubtedly had simple words with definite meanings. I think that this is a view of the case which will commend itself to every student of Nature. I was once very much amused by hearing a pair of Nightingales carry on quite a long conversation. I had just supplied them with some gentles in an earthenware saucer. They perched on the rim of the saucer and picked up the gentles one by one and, as they did so, they chatted away in a sort of undertone. I was not wise enough to understand the conversation, but it was quite evident that they were discussing the quality of the gentles, individually and collectively.

Couldn't Bear the Sight of Her!

Not long since the maid-servant who feeds my birds told me that she thought that one of the Nightingales had taken a dislike to her, because it always "chattered" when she went into the bird-room. I tested this remark and found that it was based on fact. After the soft-food had been placed in the cages, Manx perched on his china feeder and began to talk most volubly—that is to say, he was not "chur-ring" or "tack-ing," but uttering articulate sounds. Whether he was making caustic remarks on the quality of the soft-food or on the fact that it had not been brought up as early as usual I do not know, but he certainly appeared to be annoyed about something.

Manx never talks to me, however, so I was much surprised when I went into the bird-room one night (to see if some new arrivals had settled down comfortably) to hear him commence to talk loudly and volubly. I held the lamp up to his cage to see if he was talking in his sleep and found that the unfortunate bird was hanging by one foot from the canvas top of his cage. It was a most laughable thing to hear Manx talking away most energetically, evidently he was telling me how the catastrophe had happened and all about it. I found that in some queer way a thread of cotton had become twisted round one foot so firmly that I had considerable difficulty in cutting him free and unwinding the thread, but Manx awaited the result of my efforts with great patience, and the whole time he continued to talk in a confidential kind of way. A similar incident would have put many Nightingales off song for a long time, but Manx only went off duty for a single day.

& BIRD WORLD. The LEADING JOURNAL
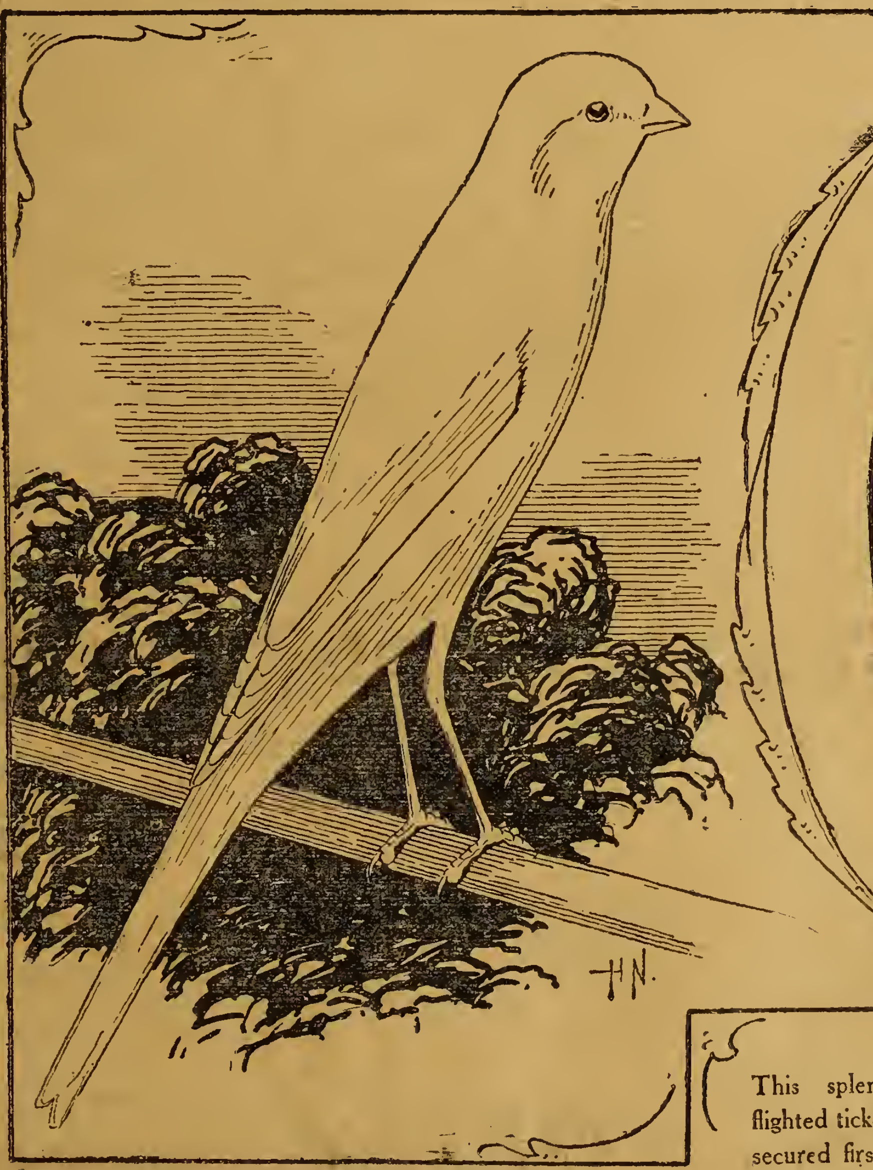
Devoted to CANARIES, HYBRIDS, British & Foreign Cage & Wild Birds.

Telegrams—AVICULTURE, London.
Telephone—5229 Holborn.
Registered at the G.P.O.

VOL. XXIII. No. 595 For week ending June 7th, 1913. Price 1d. Subscription 6/6 per ann. post free.



This splendid unflighted ticked yellow secured first prize in a very strong class for Messrs. Sutcliffe and Son, of Shipley, Yorks.

A YOUNG YORKSHIRE CANARY WHICH WON AT THE PALACE.

A CANARY COMPANION!

This Canary was hand-reared by Miss M. G. Brown, of Upper Howsell, Malvern Link. It flies about anywhere, out of doors or in, takes a particular delight in unthreading her sewing needles, and will "kiss" when asked. The photograph was taken in the garden.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even it accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which me must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

HERE IS YOUR CHANCE.

What do you know about Canaries? It is just upon that depends your prospect of getting pleasure, profit and prizes. But if you want to improve your knowledge so that you can win prizes. so that you can back your pets against the best in your Club and still be proud of them, you will do well to send for the free booklet offered below. It was written chiefly to describe the real use to every class of cage-bird lover, of the splendid one-volume work "Canaries, Hybrids and British Birds," but it is full of interest and well worth sending for on its own account; the 15 illustrations in the free booklet will take your fancy and will enable you to judge of the value of the book itself.

Do not wait, send to=day for this handy free booklet, it will be a ½d. well spent.

CANARIES

By the well-known authority

MR. JOHN ROBSON,

of everything pertaining to the hobby. It is far and away the best guide any man can have, because it contains chapters by the leading Bird specialists, and the whole is fully indexed and expertly edited.

There is nothing in regard to the subject that is too small to be overlooked; everything any man can possibly want to know is in the book; it is the most authoritative work on the subject ever issued.

That is why so many thousands of the work have been sold since it came out. Its 41 practical chapters are the result of many years' experience and cover with remarkable fulness every side of the subject. There are 26 exquisite full-page coloured plates true to nature and showing every known breed and 140 other illustrations.

Please bear in mind, however, we cannot supply another copy after the 670 have gone. Get the free brochure; it will convince you how splendidly and completely the work can meet every requirement.

MEDICINES.

MOULTINE, the absolute cure for soft moult, colds, asthma, wheezing, huskiness, etc., post free, 6d.: Parker, Chemist, Morecambe. (607)

OGDEN BROS. have found at last (after 20 years' experimenting) a certain cure for birds going light; 1/6 a bottle; if ever it fails to cure, money returned: Dudley-hill, Bradford.

EVERY birdkeeper has need of practical hints upon the prevention of diseases and their eradication from cage, aviary, and birdroom. These are to be found in "Nutshell No. 9," post free 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

"AILING Cage Birds and How to Cure Them," "Nutshell No. 6," an account of the troubles which beset captive birds, with the treatment and list of medicines to restore our pets to health. This will save you much discouragement and money, and costs only 2½d. post free. From "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Or 2d. from agents (list frequently published).

KELSO'S BRONCHOLIA positively never fails to cure asthma, bronchitis, colds, wheezing, hoarseness, loss of voice, and all bronchial and lung affections in cage birds; trial convinces; used by the leading fanciers. Bottles, 7d., 1/1, 2/8, post free, with complete directions and special dietary: Kelso and Company, 7, Western-hill, Durham. (724)

HEALTHY BIRDS.

That is what every fancier wants, and can have by using Ditchfield's bird medicines. We don't want you to make your birdroom into a doctor's shop, but we do advise you to keep a bottle of Ditchfield's medicine there. There are thousands of birds lost every year for want of treatment at the proper time. Take a bird that suddenly looks thick, and mopey, and when examined you find the stomach to be swollen and inflamed. Ditchfield's tonic drops are just the medicine for that bird, and if given immediately the bird shows symptoms of this disease, you would invariably restore the bird to perfect health in a day or two. Ditchfield's medicines are not a catch-penny, but are a genuine article, which if given in turn will almost certainly give a perfect cure. These medicines have been used for over five years by most leading fanciers, and have been proved to be the most reliable. The sales for 1912 were treble the amount of the previous year. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for not singing, soft moult, going light, dulness, feather plucking, and inflammation of the bowels. Sold in 7d. and 1/1 (treble size) bottle. Special size, 2s. For bringing birds into breeding condition, and for birds that are run down or gone off song, this medicine is invaluable. If you are in doubt about what ails your bird, please state particulars and symptoms, and we will send you the medicine you require. For birds that have been ailing some time with stomach troubles, and you have given up all hopes of curing, please ask for our special inflammation cure. Same prices as the above medicine. They are for chronic cases of stomach troubles only. Fanciers note.—If our medicines fail to do as we advertise, we guarantee to return full money. For bronchitis, wheezing, hoarseness, and inflammation of the lungs get Ditchfield's special lung tonic. The grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. Also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles, treble size. As an advertisement, we will send a 7d. bottle of each of the above medicines for 1/-, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9. All medicines post paid at our risk per return. Two valuable seed recipes: How to feed Linnets and Rollers for contest singing, given free to all purchasers of our medicines.—Frank Ditchfield, Bird Specialist, Oldham. (Q)

DONCASTER C.B.S.

On May 31 our ramble took place to Edlington Woods, 20 members and friends turning up. The afternoon was rather dull, but we all set off in good spirits with the intention of enjoying ourselves. We took the route along Springwell Lane, and entered the woods at the Edlington pit entrance, where we were met by Mr. Robinson, the woodman. On entering the wood nests were soon found of the Blackbird, Thrush, Whitethroat, Greenfinch, Chaffinch, Hedge Sparrow, etc. Hereabouts a thunderstorm came on, which made any more nesting impossible, a friendly yew keeping the thick of the rain off the members. After the storm we all made for Mr. Robinson's house for tea, where all did justice to a liberal spread of country fare, after which the members enjoyed a game of football, when some funny capers were cut. About 6.30 we all set out for Wadworth, where we found the old Fox and Hounds, and after partaking of a little Yorkshire stingo, we set off for Doncaster, arriving tired, but all agreeing to having enjoyed themselves, and being ready for the next ramble the last Saturday in June, when we hope to be favoured with better weather and a district with more cover for the birds.—G. Hunt, Hon. Sec.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

A London Bird Dealer Gives His Views on Keeping Birds in "Hop Cages."

Mr. J. H. Clarke, of Sydenham, sends me a cheering letter this week, which I have much pleasure in repeating below. I know that the large majority of bird-dealers recognise that birds look better, keep better, and sell better if they are properly caged while in their hands. It is of course not practicable, nor is it necessary, for the short time a bird-dealer is possessed of any individual bird in his stock, to keep birds in cages of the size they would require as their permanent quarters, but not only is it more humane to stock the birds in cages of a reasonable size, but it is to the interest of the bird-dealer himself to show his stock to the best advantage. Mr. Clarke is a candidate for one of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE Certificates of Inspection, and from his letter there is no doubt that the report forwarded in due course by our inspector will be satisfactory. Many bird-dealers are now in possession of a certificate to the effect that their business has been found to be carried on to the satisfaction of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and now that a start has been made I am sure it will not be long before their number is multiplied.

> Dear Sir,—As a London bird dealer I have done away with the small back cage, or "hop cage," and find the back show cage, not smaller than 10in. high, 8½ long, 6½ deep, with one bird in each cage, is much better. It keeps birds such as Chaffinches, Linnets, Goldfinches, etc., much cleaner than the small back cage, and they do not break their tail and wing feathers, but keep in splendid health and condition. This I have proved for over a year, and, moreover, it not only keeps the birds in nice condition, but it also keeps those that are opposed to keeping birds in cages from commenting on them outside one's place of business, as is often the case when small cages are used. The doing away with the small cage would be the best thing for the Fancy at large, and it would, I know, stop a lot of talk about keeping birds in cages. Why, only the other day a lady came into my shop and saw a Linnet in a small back cage I was using as a travelling cage, as he was just going on rail a short distance, and the remark she made was, "What I don't like is birds being kept in those small cages." This lady was not a faddist, but a great bird-lover, as she has quite a number of birds at her own home. I sold her a good lot only last week. I find it is not only the faddist that kicks against the "hop cage" but the right-thinking person as well.

All Members of Kippax Linnet Singing Club Sign the Plumage Bill Petition.

I am very pleased to be able to record that a very large number of readers have signed the declaration re the Plumage Bill, given in our issue of May 10, and have forwarded the same to their local Member of Parliament. Mr. A. Tomlin, hon. sec. of Kippax Linnet Singing Club, writes that he has obtained the signature of every member of the Association, and has forwarded the signatures to Sir J. Compton Rickett, their representative in the House of Commons. This is an example that might well be followed by the secretary of every club throughout the kingdom. A message of such a sort would certainly not be forgotten when the Bill is next discussed in Parliament.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is either to sign the coupon herewith, and send the same, together with sevenpence, or to get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

Twitterings.

We hear that Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) is judging Colwyn Bay open show on Sept. 3 next.

Whitby Show will be held November 26. Open classes for cage birds, writes Mr. J. G. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

We hear from Mr. W. Robinson, sec., that Mr. C. A. House will judge the show of the Empire Workmen's Club, West Stanley F. F. and C.B.S. on Nov. 22.

Messrs. W. Barron and Co., makers of the very excellent vulcanized fibre carrying cases for show, etc., cages, inform us that their London agent is J. H. Cressy, 4, King Street, Cheapside, E.C.

Please announce in Cage Birds, writes Mr. J. Bunn, sec., Nottingham Permanent O.S., that we have postponed our members' F.F. Show from June 21 to July 19, members not having bred many young birds in first round.

The Codnor Park and Eastwood C.B.S., writes Mr. A. Smith, are holding a First Feather Show on June 14, at Three Tuns, Eastwood, when Mr. E. Fox, of Long Eaton, will judge. Birds to be staged at 2 o'clock.

Mr. E. Pretty, the well-known Metropolitan fancier (one of the oldest we have remaining with us) has removed from Albany Street to 13a, High Street, St. John's Wood, N.W. Mr. Pretty is by profession a surgeon dentist, and has built up a large connection by his skilful methods.

Will members and friends, writes Mr. J. Gibbons, hon. sec. Wolverhampton C.B.S., kindly note we are holding our first N.F. show and judging competition on June 12, at the Duke of York. Master Judge, Mr. J. Crundell. Any fancier who would like to take part will have a hearty welcome.

The following well-known judges have been appointed for the annual show, of the Ayr C.B.O., October 25: Norwich, Mr. A. Cant, Hamilton; Borders, Mr. Dan Hamilton, Hamilton; Yorkshires, Mr. A. Girvan, Ayr; British and Foreign, Mr. J. Mason, Peebles. We hope to have a record entry this year, writes Mr. R. Aitken, the secretary, as we are incurring a good deal of expense to make the show a success.

All fanciers colour feeding should send a trial order for Ramsden's Pure Pepper. This season's pepper is without doubt the finest ever imported. It has been grown, selected, and ground by specialists, with colour feeding the only object in view. It may be relied upon to produce a splendid colour, and that exquisite sheen so necessary to ensure success on the show bench.—See advt. under Foods.—(Advt.)

The annual show of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. has been fixed for Nov. 4 and 5. We hear from the hon. sec., Mr. W. Hodson, 28, Barry Road, E. Dulwich, that Mr. L. J. Richardson, the well-known Norwich fancier, and the secretary of the society, have undertaken the management of the show. A splendid new hall in South London has been secured for the show, and a guarantee fund against loss has been raised.

We have received from Mr. Allen Silver, 303, High Road, Streatham, the hon. sec. of the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League, the first list of officers and book of rules of the society. Several well-known aviculturists have become patrons, and the business of the society is in the hands of a strong committee, with Mr. T. R. Trower as chairman. All those who appreciate the treat which is offered to the public by a representative collection of beautiful foreign birds at a bird exhibition will wish a full meed of success for the League.

To Society Secretaries, Advertisers and Correspondents generally.

Will all correspondents, and secretaries and officials of societies in particular, please note that CAGE BIRDS now goes to press on Wednesday afternoon so that all matter for publication in our issue of the same week MUST reach us on TUESDAY TO BE CERTAIN OF INCLUSION, or first post Wednesday t latest.

It would much facilitate our work if Secretaries and others would kindly write out their club reports, notices, etc., in the style in which they see them printed. Write on ONE SIDE ONLY of each sheet of paper used.

We hear from Mr. E. Richards, hon. sec., that Mr. W. Mundell, Bradford, will judge the Upper Rhondda C.B.S. open show at Treorchy, Oct. 29.

This week-end the ramble of the Sheffield O.S., via Wartley, etc., takes place. The officials are looking forward to having a greater success than ever this year. All fanciers and friends heartily invited. Tea is arranged at the Norfolk Arms, Grenoside.

Kindly announce that the annual ramble of the Hull C.B.S. will take place June 7th to Houghton Woods, write Messrs. Heseltine and Lambert, hon. secs. Train leaves Cannon St. Station, H. and B. Rly., at 1.20. Book for South Cave. Members and friends all welcome.

Mr. J. Pitchford (London Rd., Stoke-on-Trent), the well-known fanciers' provider, has just issued a supplementary illustrated list, embellished with a portrait of his champion undefeated Goldfinch of the 1912-13 show season. Mr. Pitchford has some very good lines of foods, appliances, etc., at most reasonable prices.

I have just received my Birthday Number of Cage Birds for 1913, writes Mr. E. V. Clay (Mt. Albert, Auckland, N.Z.), and feel that I must write to congratulate you on such a splendid and useful issue. Your paper is always eagerly looked for each mail by the fanciers here, and I can assure you I have found much valuable information in your columns, and have much pleasure in wishing both you and your paper another year of success.

OBITUARY.

I am sorry to have to report the death, after a severe illness, of the wife of that sterling fancier, Mr. John Dalgleish, of Trinity, Edinburgh. Mrs. Dalgleish passed away May 20, and was buried on May 23. Several fanciers followed the remains to their last resting place. Mrs. Dalgleish was well known and much esteemed by a large circle of fanciers, and will be missed for her pleasant and kindly welcome to all. I am sure we all sympathise with our friend and his family in their sore affliction, and trust that the Great Healer will strengthen them in this their hour of need.

R. Lile.

Samples of Sandiford's colour foods for the 1913 season have come to hand, and we have no hesitation in describing them as exceptionally good—the noted "Royal Red" tasteless feed being a really grand deep colour, while the hot Natal is but little behind it in this respect. They should well uphold the high reputation of these colour-foods. Mr. Sandiford writes:—"The success attained with them last year was a record. At the Crystal Palace in eight champion Norwich classes, seven firsts, eight seconds, seven thirds, championship diploma, L.P.O.S. challenge cup for best, Victorian special, special second best, went to birds which had never eaten anything to colour them, except 'Royal Red,' and every winner in Cinnamons (1, 2, 3) was the same. The N.P.C. challenge cup winner, S.N.P.C. cup winner, O.N.P.C. cup winner, Welsh N.P.C. cup winner, and Scotch N.P.C. special winner all used only 'Royal Red.' By our sales this last week (which exceed a ton) our sales look like being bigger than ever this year."

Rosy Pastor's Rough Reception.

Now and then birds that are not strictly migratory gather in enormous flocks and sweep over several hundred miles of country. Many years ago Turkey and Bulgaria were invaded by enormous flocks of the Rose-coloured Pastor. These birds proved destructive to vineyards and growing crops, and the peasants had to turn out in force and kill them by hundreds. A flock of these birds would strip a tree of fruit in less time than it takes to tell of it, and there were public rejoicings in places after the vast flocks had passed.

The Patronage of Specialist Clubs

Societies desiring the patronage of the specialist clubs at their 1913 shows should apply as follows, stating classification given, and judges appointed: National Green Marked Y.C.S., Mr. J. Chambers, 22, St. Anne's Mount, Burley Hill, Leeds; National British Bird and Mule Club, Mr. J. P. Carr, 45, Overdale Road, S. Ealing, W.; Southern Norwich P.C., Mr. F. S. Matthes, 34, Rotherhithe New Rd., S.E.; Northern Yorks C.C., Mr. R. Tindale, 141, Stanton St., Newcastle-on-Tyne; Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C., Mr. R. Garnett, 8, Leeds Rd., Windhill, Shipley; Green C.A., F. Handley, 23, Coventry Rd., Wavertree, Liverpool; Yorks and Lancs. Brit. B. and M.C., T. H. Inman, 43, Derby Rd., Thornbury, Bradford; Northern Counties Plainhead Club, Mr. R. Laidlaw, 55, Colston St., Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne (latest date June 14); Cinnamon C.C., Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, 68, Brunswick Rd., Liverpool; Northern Border and S.F.C.C., Mr. M. C. Potts, 52, Falmouth Rd., Newcastle-on-Tyne.

A SEX CONUNDRUM.

Can You Solve It?

Your Post-card May Bring You Five Shillings.

We have pleasure in offering this week five shillings cash (or our bird-books to value, as may be preferred) for the best answer to the following question:—

What is the best and easiest method of distinguishing young cock Canaries from young hens?

All that competitors have to do is to write their reply on the back of a postcard, put their name and address at the foot, and send the card to reach the Editor Cage Birds, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., not later than first post Thursday next, June 12. The winning reply will be published in our issue of date June 21. Write your answer clearly, briefly and to the point. Entries are only received subject to the Editor's decision being accepted as final.

Country Rambles.

The following rambles have been arranged: Leith O.S., June 14, to Raith, train leaves Edinburgh 2.15; Manningham C.B.A., June 7 to Fewston, train leaves Bradford 8.30, Manningham 8.34; Hull C.B.S., June 7, to Houghton Woods; train leaves Cannon St. Station, H. and B. Rly., 1.20, book for South Cave.

A Dublin Address Wanted.

We have received from Mr. J. Briggs, who signs himself sec. pro. tem., a report of what purports to be the first meeting of the "City of Dublin Cage Bird Society," apparently held May 26, at Iveagh Buildings. Mr. Briggs, however, does not send his address, and until this is supplied we cannot publish his report.

A Hint to the Bird Trade.

Traders should take up the sale of Cage Birds "Nutshell" Handbooks, and other publications. They are wonderful selling lines, and bring a fair profit. The names and addresses of all agents are published frequently (note this week's issue) with particulars of the kind of business they do, this being a valuable free advertisement calculated to bring them local custom.

Our Most Admired Nest.

The sprightly Chaffinch builds a nest which has perhaps been more admired than that of any wild bird. It has one advantage over all, which is, that it is so easily recognised, and cannot be mistaken for any other. The nest is a felted one, easily distinguishable in itself, but the eggs are quite unlike those of any other species, pale bluish-green, with rich purplish-brown markings, not clear and distinct, but shaded, as though smudged, while the colouring matter was wet.

To All Whom it May Concern.

Someone on the staff of our printer sends us the appended rhyming lines. We are not quite sure to whom they are intended to apply—whether members of our own staff or to our contributors generally—so we give them to the world as a message To All Whom It May Concern.

"There is a man the printer loves, and he is wondrous wise: whene'er he writes the printer man he dotteth all his i's. And when he's dotted all of them with carefulness and ease, he punctuates each paragraph, and crosses all his t's. Whate'er he says he says in short, no extra words he uses, the printer treats him as a friend, nor o'er deletions muses. Upon one side alone he writes, and never rolls his leaves; and from the man of ink a smile and mark 'insert' receives. And thus by taking little pains, at trifling care and cost, assures himself his manuscript will not be burned or lost. So let all those who long to write take pattern by this man, with jet black ink and paper white, do just the best they can; and then the printer man shall know, and bless them as his friends, all through life's journey as they go, until that journey ends."

Wild-Bird Life.

Concerning Birds' Nests.

As the summer advances, the hedgerows become so thick with foliage that in some places it is quite a difficult matter to locate the nest, which we know to be securely hidden among the masses of greenery. This is part of the charm and pleasure of wild bird nesting. If we could locate all nests at sight, we should care very little for them; anything that man gets for nothing he does not value. One can recall days spent in the woods and fields with scarcely a find, but the few nests located have given more real pleasure and enjoyment than the dozens seen on some other occasions when birds' homes came to hand in almost every bush. There is an infinite variety in birds' nests that makes the pursuit of finding them a constant source of pleasure. The common Finches' homes are not all of the same pattern, nor constructed of the same material, nor finished off quite alike, while there is variety even with birds of the same species. The Warblers are particularly interesting, and it is among their nests that we find some of the most delicate construction, some apparently so flimsy and so loosely put together that even when the eggs are deposited the nests look as though the builders had still a few finishing touches to put to them to make them sufficiently snug and warm for their purpose.

NEST OF THE GOLD CREST.

Of all nests those of a domed pattern appeal to the writer more than any, there is something about them almost human in their architecture; the little worker not only builds a nest after the manner of most birds, but proceeds to cover it in and make a roof, but whether for security, shelter from the sun's rays and rain, or as an extra screen from prying eyes, one can hardly say, excepting in the case of the Magpie, whose dome collection of thorny twigs is undoubtedly built for security. The writer knows of one which is re-constructed annually, and is quite inaccessible, excepting with a long step-ladder. It is placed in the top part of a thorn bush some twelve feet high, a bush that one can neither climb, nor push one's way into, and here for several years a pair of birds have brought off a lusty brood. Of the suspended nest we have really only one example, that of the Gold Crests; this is slung hammock-wise, from the twigs at the extremity of a branch—a most charming piece of birdwork.

Robin's Nest in a Bed.

A Robin's nest has been recently built in the fold of a bed, which is one of forty-seven in a dormitory of a large public institution near London. The bed being temporarily unusued, was rolled up, and although beds on either side were nightly occupied and cleaning and bed-making operations were constantly going on in the dormitory, the nest was built in the short space of four days.

A Freak Nesting Place.

For a freak nesting-place the site selected by a daring Sparrow at Llandrindod Wells would surely be hard to parallel, says the "Western Mail." This is the operating-box of a cinema which at present is performing in the town. The hen has laid her eggs, and does not appear to be at all staggered by the dazzling light and humming sound emitted by the machine during the nightly performances, while it is already on the best of terms with the operator.

The Latest Idea for Exterminating Red Mite.

We have just put on the market, write Messrs. Spratt's Patent, Ltd. (24, Fenchurch St., London, E.C.) a red mite trap, patent No. 10772/12, for cage-birds. We are the sole manufacturers. It is very easily fixed to the wires of any bird-cage with the round tin box on the outside. There is a small piece of wool inside the trap, in which the red mite are caught. There should be a large demand for this patent trap by all who keep cage-birds, as there is nothing yet that has been able to rid the birds of this pest, no matter how clean the cage is kept. With Spratt's Red Mite Trap the mites are caught, and this allows the birds to have perfect rest at night, and fits them for song in the day. Directions for use: Push end of fluted perch well into trap, which must be lightly filled with cotton wool, fit perch on cage as shown in sketch. The bird must roost on fluted perch for trap to be effective. Wool should be changed often, and burnt on removal. Price 6d. each (post paid) or can be obtained from any bird dealer, or corn merchant.

MY AURORA FINCHES.

This article on the tiny West African bird, the Aurora Finch, is No. 37 of the new series of personal birdy experiences related by that eminent aviculturist, the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

MANY years ago a great desire entered my soul to get some Aurora Finches. Some people have a gift for finding things; they have a gift for collecting Toby jugs; everywhere they discover a Toby jug. I couldn't find out one if I tried for a year. It was the same with Aurora Finches. Go where I would, write to all the likely dealers, eagerly scan the advertisement columns of Cage Birds, Aurora Finches seemed to have completely dropped out of being. I even went to see the late Mr. Joseph Abrahams, hoping he would be able to help me in my trouble. He told me, in his most impressive manner, that I was seeking a vain thing; and before his reproachful glance I felt like the Sunday-school children, taken to task for having failed to learn the Kings of Israel and Judah.

Gems in a Shabby Setting.

I had made up my mind that it was useless to continue my search. When passing hurriedly through what used to be Seven Dials, but which I believe is now known as Shaftesbury Avenue, I passed a dingy little bird shop. In my young days, every other shop in "The Dials" was a bird or reptile shop. Now, alas, they have all been swept away, like so many other parts of old London. There, in the window, in a shabby little cage, I saw what I was almost sure were some Aurora Finches.

I rushed hastily in, and asked the very unsavoury-looking owner of the emporium the price of the little birds in the cage I pointed out. I must have appeared unduly excited, for he looked at me as unconcernedly as the gentleman in the poem at the peak of Darien, and laconically answered: "Five and a tanner." I closed at once with his offer, for looking back is fatal. The truest thing in Scripture is Lot's wife; she looked back and was turned into a pillar of salt. I had no wish to experience her fate. I lose opportunities as people sometimes lose trains; but this time I determined that the train should not go without me.

A RARE THRUSH FROM INDIA.

This fine species, the Rufous-necked Laughing Thrush (Dryonastes ruficollis) is one of the splendid consignment of birds recently landed by Major Perreau, details of which were given in a recent issue.

The cage in which they were confined was very dirty, and I argued that a bird that could live and thrive under such conditions would live anywhere. I was surprised at their resignation. If we hear that Guy Fawkes was fretful in "Little Ease," we are not pained at Guy Fawkes' lack of Christian fortitude!

A Foolish but Pleasant Pastime.

I began at once to build castles in the air. It is silly, no doubt, to do such things, but the silliness of the inexperienced is a matter for the pity, not the reprobation, of the judicious. If they take the world for their oyster and think, when they open it, they are going to find pearl necklaces ready made, we must not blame them. Rather, let hoary-headed sinners envy them their imaginings. We have all been young once. Even I was. I got the man to catch the birds and transfer them to a travelling box; but when he suggested putting in their seed and water tins, I gently but firmly declined the offer. I thought these birds had run sufficient risks already. I had some doubts about the sex of the birds. Indeed, I had a dreadful suspicion that they were all of what the grammars call the nobler gender. However, to give myself a fair chance, I picked out three, and hoped that one might prove a hen.

I carried them to South Kensington, where I was staying for my holiday, and when I told the housekeeper that I had bought some little birds, and put them in my bedroom, it caused no surprise, as I had done so many strange things in the past. All the same, it required a certain amount of moral courage to take live birds to a swell boarding house. The next day I went out again on the lookout for birds, hoping I might meet with a lady Aurora Finch. It never rains but it pours, and in Covent Garden I found among a lot of other little Finches, what I felt pretty sure was the object of my search. At any rate, I had the confidence to back my opinion by buying the bird on the spot, and taking it home in a new clean cage.

A Simple, Trusting Soul.

The moment I got to South Kensington, I went upstairs to my bedroom, caught the largest and most likely looking of my former purchases, and introduced him to my latest acquisition. He accepted her unquestionably, as the simple Trojan accepted the Olympian lady who appeared to him, clad in grace, but otherwise scantily, from a rosy cloud. I felt so happy that I went down and ate an extra good dinner.

When I got back home, my thoughts at once ran on a nest and a medal. I put the pair of Auroras in my indoor birdroom, and kept the two gentlemen as a reserve in case of accidents. These soon came about, for in less than a week I found the cock Aurora dead on the floor. He was fat and well-looking, when I picked him up, and not quite cold. Years ago, when I was a schoolboy in Sussex, I used to wander over the downs, bird-nesting. I often got into talk with the old shepherds. I was talking to one on a certain occasion, and I happened to ask him if they were a long-lived race. "Why, yes, sir," replied the ancient one, in all good faith; "we doesn't ha' no doctor; we just dies a nat'ral death." I could only conclude that my friend had done the same.

Looks are Not Everything.

I was thankful now for my forethought in buying those two spare cocks. Aurora Finches are not much to look at, unless you enjoy the harvest of a quiet eye. They are quite little birds, of a declicate lavender colour, with a reddish rump, and a patch of red on the shoulder, a rather curved dark beak, and a small black beady eye. The hen is rather smaller, and her colours are much less pronounced.

In my bird room are any number of nest receptacles, to suit all tastes. Cardboard boxes, such as birds are often sent to travel in, find special favour with the little African Finches. Some of these have been up for years, and contain old nests, built when Adam was a little boy. The Auroras selected one of these, and after doing a few necessary repairs, they settled down to the toils of domestic life. Hardly had they done so than a pair of Zebra Finches arrived on the scene. Zebra Finches, as some of my readers will know, are the most inquisitive of birds, and no nest is safe from their impertinent curiosity. No sooner does a new pair of birds select a site for a nest, but Master Zebra suddenly discovers that this is the very box he has been looking for for years, and the new tenants get prompt and peremptory notice to quit.

Masters of the Art of Bluster.

In the case of such gentle little birds as Aurora Finches, there is absolutely no opposition. At the first little trumpet blast they meekly clear out, and Master Zebra having got his own way, suddenly discovers that the site is not all that he thought, and turns his attention to some meek and inoffensive neighbour. But then the harm is done. It was so in the present instance. The Auroras quickly deserted, and you can imagine my anger when I found a finished nest with one egg already laid. Of course, we must expect failures; they come to teach us success. Time is the best of teachers: he not only exposes our mistakes, but shows us how to correct them, and so learn to bear our disappointments like the Irishman, who said that his pig had not weighed so much as he expected, but then, he never thought it would.

Peace after the Storm.

I saw that there was no hope of a successful nesting so long as those Zebra Finches remained about, so I got the net, and promptly caught and caged them out of harm's way. The cock was most indignant and trumpeted defiance like a miniature elephant. With these disturbers of the peace safely out of the way, we started again, like Robinson Crusoe, with a good heart and modest confidence.

Fortune favoured me, as it often favours the first efforts of the gambler, for in a few mornings I found the Auroras busy at work again upon a new nest. I had read somewhere that aloe fibre was the thing to get all African Finches to go to nest with. It is; but there was something else I was not told—the holding power of the said fibre. Let a bird get a bit of the infernal stuff round his leg, and he is doomed to a slow and lingering death. The fibre twines itself round and round the limb with all the power of a live thing, and sooner or later the poor little creature gets hung up on a twig as he flies up to the nest, and there he hangs till, like little Jim in "We are Seven," "Death released him of his pain, and then he went away." These accidents always make me feel sick, for I feel that somehow I am to blame. One morning I found the second cock hung up to a twig and quite dead.

When One and One Made Naught.

Now, like the two little niggers, we were reduced to one. All my hopes were centered in the remaining cock. If anything untoward happened to him, goodbye to my chance of a medal.

I put him in the aviary, and hoped that the hen would accept him with a glad and ready mind, as we are told to accept the admonitions of our pastors. Not a bit of it. She was evidently tired of the constant change of husbands. She had endured two without a protest, but self respect now called for action.

SOME LOVERS OF LINNET SONG.

In the cage he had seemed a brave bird. I had even fancied him saying: "Dare to be a Daniel," but it is one thing to swagger behind the bars of a cage, and quite another thing to do it in the presence of an angry little lady. In the cage he had swaggered away; every tone of his voice, every jerk of his tail had seemed to say: Nemo me impune lacessit. In the enlargement of the aviary, he quite changed his tone; now his motto seemed to be: Blessed are the meek! It was all no good; the lady would have nowt to do with him.

Seeking Safety from Slaughter!

Was it not Disraeli who said that a politician should have for his wife or his mistress one whom he returned to at night with repugnance, and left in the morning with delight? I am sure these words exactly described the attitude of my miserable cock. He spent his whole day in trying to avoid deady onslaught by the hen, and I firmly believe that if I had not mercifully removed him out of harm's way, his days would have shortly been ended by a violent death.

I felt very sad and depressed that I had failed, but at any rate I had done my best. I consoled myself with the words of, I think, Longfellow:

Store of Truth was vainly set
In the world's wide fallow.
After hand shall sow the seed,
After hands from hill and mead
Reap the harvest mellow.

It is a beautiful sentiment, but somehow I don't like it. I do hate to be beaten. It always reminds me of that lovely old story in the Gospels, of the poor man who went on hoping, year after year, to be healed, but who ended his pathetic tale with these well-known words: "While I am waiting, another steppeth down before me." That poor man always had my deepest sympathy.

The Cultivation of Wild Plants for Cage Birds.

By

Canary Grass (Phalaris canariensis) grows to a height of about two feet, and its greenish yellow heads are distinctly ornamental. The seeds may be sown during spring in drills about half an inch deep and six inches apart, the plants finally being thinned out so as to allow ample sunshine to reach the seed heads. Canary Grass is not really a native of this country, but has probably been introduced from southern Europe, where it is much cultivated to supply the Canary Seed of commerce.

Inelegant But Very Useful Weeds.

Common Groundsel (Senecio vulgaris) is usually found growing to a height of about a foot, though it may be considerably less or greater under varying circumstances. The seeds may be sown from March to June in rows from four to six inches apart, the seeds being very thinly covered with fine soil, and the young plants thinned out so as not to become overcrowded. Groundsel will grow in almost all soils and positions, but if good seed is required, ample sunlight should reach the plants.

Shepherds Purse and Common Knot Grass (also showing lower leaf of the Shepherds Purse, and seed-pod bursting to discharge the seed).

Shepherd's Purse (Bursa pastoris) may be sown during the whole of the spring and early summer. As the seeds are rather small, only a very light covering of sifted soil should be given. The drills should be four inches apart, and the plants, which usually reach about a foot in height, should be thinned out so as to stand two inches or so asunder.

Chickweed (Stellaria media) is usually quite a small plant, seldom growing more than ten inches or so in height. The seeds may be sown from March to June in drills six or more inches apart, only a thin covering of soil being given. If required for seed, the plants must not be allowed to become overcrowded, thinning being continued until each plant has ample room for growth. Chickweed will thrive even in shady spots under large trees, but the crop of seeds is in most cases a poor one, though the plants appear to be healthy and strong.

A Very Useful Weed.

Common Knotgrass (Polygonum aviculare) is a very straggling plant, and requires a lot of room, for a single plant will sometimes measure fully three feet across. This fact should be borne in mind in making the drills, about a foot being allowed between each if sufficient space be available. The seeds, which may be sown from April to June, are quite small, and need only lightly covering. If a good crop of seeds is required, the plants should be thinned out to about six inches asunder.

Flax.

Charlock (Brassica Sinapistrum) may be sown during the whole of the spring and early summer, the drills being made some six or eight inches apart, and about three-quarters of an inch deep When thinned, the plants should stand at least three inches asunder in the rows. Charlock is a very hardy weed, but requires ample sunlight if it is to develop properly.

Corn Spurrey (Spergula arvensis) in its wild state is a weed some ten to eighteen inches in height. It may be cultivated by sowing the seeds (which are very small) during spring in shallow drills six inches apart, and thinly covering with fine soil. The plants should be thinned out so as finally to have sufficient room to develop ample flowers and seeds. A dry, sunny aspect is best.

Gold of Pleasure (Camelina sativa) is not really a wild British plant, and when found apparently so is always to be regarded as an escape from cultivation. The seed may be sown during March, April, May and June in drills from six to nine inches apart, and about half an inch or so deep. As the plants sometimes attain a height of three feet, they must be thinned so as not to become overcrowded. Gold of Pleasure thrives best in an open situation.

Gold of Pleasure.

Corn Spurrey.

Chickweed.

Useful only for One Year.

It should perhaps be mentioned that all the plants named in this article belong to the class known as annuals; that is, they live for one season only, dying completely away after having produced flowers and seeds. It is therefore of no use to leave the roots in the ground (as is done with some plants) in the hope that they will spring forth another year. Some gardeners sow the seeds of annual plants in the autumn, and thus secure earlier crops than those who sow in the spring.

In practice it may perhaps be found that the distances apart of rows and plants given above are either too great or too small, for many of the weeds are so variable in their growth that definite measurements to suit all cases cannot be given. If, however, the plants appear to be over-crowded, more should be thinned out until each one left has sufficient room. The plants removed—unless useful as green food—should be discarded, for if planted elsewhere they seldom repay one for the trouble taken in transplanting them.

Those who wish to cultivate such species as lettuce, sunflower, and other garden plants, can, of course, obtain the necesary information from any seedsman.

By

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

The Schnatter (snat-ter) is more objectionable in sound than the Schwirre, but it is not so often met with. The bird, with an open beak, appears to be trying to gobble the consonants s, c, h and the vowel i in a more or less nasalised voice, or again it may be in a gular (throaty) sounding cic, or sich. Our judges have been very lenient on the show bench with faulty song passages, and the idea is gaining ground that faults should be penalised more severely. I will illustrate it in this way: say two birds are singing the Aufzug, and the second bird is bringing it out more forcibly and in a more objectionable sounding manner than the first bird, the idea now is that if the first bird be penalised one point then the second bird should have two points deducted. It seems to me to be a very fair method, as it is far more difficult to breed a bird with good tours, without a fault popping up in some part of the song, than it is to breed good tours combined with faults.

Two Vanishing Faults.

The Zit and the Chop, as far as the contest Roller is concerned, are gone. When I write that they are gone, I do so advisably, for these two faulty notes are far too dangerous to be again admitted into our Roller song tours. Since I wrote about the flat "clattering" sounding Glucke tour, my London friend has very kindly sent me the bird down that I had heard when I was at his home, so that I may study this faulty Glucke tour at my leisure. Many of us made our first acquaintance with this flat Glucke tour at the International show held in London in February last. As new hands are continually joining the Roller Canary Fancy, perhaps it will bear retelling how that enterprising society, the British Roller Canary Club, came to hold its first International show.

A great deal of discussion had always taken place in Roller circles regarding the merits of our birds compared with those belonging to the German fanciers across the North Sea. So our B.R.C.C. decided to hold an exhibition and invite the German people to send their birds for competition. At the same time, a prominent judge of Roller Canaries residing in Germany was invited to come to England and officiate upon our English birds competing in the same classes with those belonging to the Germans. This was decided upon to ascertain how the value of points given by a German judge would compare with those given by our English judges. The result of this experiment was very satisfactory indeed, from our point of view, for there was practically no difference in his opinion on the value of the tours the birds sang at this show from that set by our own English judges.

Advice from a German Judge.

A full report of this show was published in Cage Birds of February 15th last. If those who are interested in this flat Glucke will look up this report, it will be seen that I mentioned that this gentleman, Herr. H. Frisch, spoke strongly on what he termed the Flat Glucke (it is delivered in a clattering, choppy manner), and we are advised not to breed with a bird singing a tour like this, because the youngsters would probably bring out a chop. Unfortunately, only one team of birds arrived from Germany—a team to comprise four birds—and this took the fifth prize.

Charlock, also showing leaf and unripe and ripe seed-pods.

Turning again to the flat Glucke singer that I have had sent to me, I have had this bird in my possession for a week, and I have well studied its Glucke tours. The bird is a very free singer, and each time he opens, or sings, he brings out this flat Glucke in various ways, and as I have sat for hours each day listening to this bird, I feel more competent now to advance an opinion on it. I have already said that I had arrived at the conclusion that the flat, clattering Glucke tour came from the Bell Glucke, and I cannot yet see any reason to alter my opinion. This bird is a valuable one, from a student's point of view. As I have already said, he will bring out this flat Glucke sounding in several different ways. I have heard it delivered as Chalp-Chalp-Chalp-Chalp, with a very flat sounding vowel a.

A Sound Like Sobbing.

When the bird is singing the tour sounding in this way, a faint sobbing, or a faint bubbling, sound, as of Glu-Glu-Glu-Glu can be distinguished, underlying the more prominent sound of Chalp-Chalp-Chalp-Chalp. This is the least objectionable form in which I have heard it sung, for when the bird has raised its voice and delivered the tour more quickly, the faint sobbing of the Glu is lost in a very flat-sounding Chat-Chat-Chat-Chat. The most objectionable feature has been when this bird has, in an excited moment, raised its voice, and delivered a very rapid sounding, yet at the same time a very flat-sounding Chap-Chap-Chap-Chap; towards the latter part of the word the faint sounding of the consonant "I" is discernible to my ear.

What an Enthusiast Will Do.

I should mention that I have had the bird quite close to me; in fact, not more than a couple of feet away, when I have been studying this tour, and at all times of the day—and night, too, for I have been downstairs at one and two o'clock in the morning! I recollect one morning in particular going to bed at 2.30 a.m. for just one half-hour, to be up again at my daily occupation at 3.15 a.m.! I only mention these facts to show that I have left, as it were, no stone unturned to obtain at first hand a knowledge of this tour. It is a bad song passage in itself, and very objectionable; further, in my opinion, it would, without any efforts of cultivation, turn to a chop. It is a true remark, "Look after the deep tours; you can always breed the high ones"; and it can be applied to this flat Glucke tour. It is a song passage that is far from being common, and it evidences the first approach of the Chop coming back again in the high-class Roller.

Wonderful Reception of Our World's Championship Competition.

"CAGE BIRDS" OFFER OF £200 WORTH OF PRIZES CATCHES ON.

Exhibitors and Show and Society Officials everywhere evince the keenest interest in our colossal scheme, which will benefit both Fanciers and the Fancy.

We are very much gratified with the hearty and friendly reception accorded our latest and greatest Prize Scheme, preliminary details of which were placed before cage-bird fanciers for the first time last week. Already a large number of requests for coupons have reached us from bird-keepers and breeders, and an almost equally large number of enterprising secretaries have immediately seen the splendid possibilities of the Competition as a magnet for the attraction of entries and interest to their annual fixtures, and have sent in applications for the latter to be enrolled amongst the coupon shows.

One thing, however, has surprised us above all, and that is the entire absence of criticism upon, or suggestions for the improvement of, this great and novel scheme. It will be remembered that in our last issue we specially invited both. It seems incredible that there should not be a weak point somewhere, or some condition or other that cannot be improved upon. We ask our readers to frankly and freely favour us with their views; we will give them full and careful consideration. Write us at once; this week-end, certain.

The Idea; and the Prizes.

The main idea of this Competition (which is Open to the World) is to ascertain which are the 12 Best Birds of the season. It will also stimulate public interest in the keeping of Cage Birds, and, we hope, promote still further the circulation and influence of our paper, Cage Birds. Prizes and Diplomas will be offered at a large number of Shows all over the Country, the winners of these Diplomas subsequently taking part in a Grand Finale at the Crystal Palace Show, 1914. The Competition will be open to every Show appearing in Cage Birds List of Guaranteed Fixtures, provided application is made to us by the management of that Show before the end of July, 1913.

Two Prizes of 10/- Each, one for novices and one for champions, will be offered (under certain stipulations), at each guaranteed show accepting our conditions.

Twelve Diplomas of Honour will be offered, in addition, to each guaranteed show taking part in the competition, such diploma to be given for the best bird in each of the following sections:—

(1) YORKSHIRE CANARIES.
(2) NORWICH.
(3) CRESTS AND CREST-BREDS.
(4) BORDER FANCIES.
(5) SCOTCH FANCIES AND BELGIANS.
(6) GREENS.
(7) LANCASHIRES AND LIZARDS.
(8) ANY OTHER VARIETY CANARY.
(10 BRITISH, HARD-BILLED.
(11) BRITISH, SOFT-BILLED.
(12) FOREIGN.

The winner of any one of the foregoing diplomas to have the right to compete with not more than four birds, on payment to the Crystal Palace Authorities of the usual entry fee, in our final championship competition at the Crystal Palace show of 1914. It will be noticed that an important correction is made above, an oversight on the part of our printer last week having left an error in the section headings. No. 5 then read Scotch Fancies, and No. 6 Belgians. These should have been as they are now given, viz., No. 5 Scotch Fancies and Belgians, and No. 6 Greens.

The Grand Finale.

FIRST PRIZE, £3; SECOND PRIZE, £2;
THIRD-PRIZE, £1; FOURTH PRIZE, 10s.

£10 10s. for the best Coupon bird exhibited in the Champion classes in the above twelve sections.

We propose also offering A Ten Guinea Challenge Shield, to be won three times in succession, for the best bird at the Crystal Palace Show entered in our Competition.

What This Means to You.

Cage Birds Championship Scheme will introduce a new and pleasant interest to your hobby. It will provide you with a fresh standpoint from which to view your birds—as potential winners of diplomas, cash, cups and shield in our coupon competition.

It may bring you lasting fame in the hobby. A fair field and no favour is assured to all. Every good bird will have its chance; and no individual exhibitor can corner all the good things we offer.

That it can benefit you directly cannot be questioned. The winning of a Cage Birds Diploma of Honour will set the seal of excellence upon your stock, and ensure a ready market for your surplus birds.

Our list of guaranteed shows embraces fixtures in every part of the United Kingdom (see page 489), therefore fanciers will be able to compete on their own doorstep, so to speak, as well as at shows at a distance. And please note, that any one fancier can win only one diploma in each section in any one year. Wherefore, every good bird has, as we have said before, a good chance, or chances. The Novice is fairly catered for; he has an equal chance, each and every time, with the champion.

A Charming Lesser Redpoll.

This splendid specimen, which excelled in size, chubbiness of build, and colour, and was at the same time well marked, won First Prize in a strong class at the last Crystal Palace Show for Mr. Davidson, of Mossend, N.B.

How to Win the Prizes.

The following are the simple and straightforward conditions under which everyone may compete for the above-mentioned handsome prizes:—

We intend issuing coupons at a cost of 6d. each, to be purchased from us before the end of August, 1913. Each such coupon will entitle the purchaser thereof to enter one bird in the competition for the diploma and special prize of 10s. at any show which accepts our scheme, provided, of course, that the usual entry fee is paid to the show authorities for such entry. An exhibitor may purchase as many coupons as he pleases, provided he does so before the last day of August, 1913.

When making an entry or entries for our competition at a Diploma Show, the exhibitor must fix to his entry form a coupon for each bird he wishes to enter, and he must put the initials "C.B." against the entry of each bird he wishes to compete.

No exhibitor may win more than one diploma in the season in any one section, and no exhibitor will be allowed to win more than two of the 10s. prizes offered at the Diploma Shows.

No winner will be allowed to enter more than four birds in any one of the 12 sections in the final competition at the Crystal Palace show, and for each entry made for the final competition at the Crystal Palace a coupon will be necessary.

Some Important Points to Note.

2.—No coupons sold after the last day of August, 1913, except to previous purchasers, who have the right of duplicating their order up to the end of October.

3.—No bird with trimmed, painted or dyed plumage will be eligible to compete, and all entries must be the bona-fide property of the exhibitor.

4.—No bird entered for this competition may wear a ring, or have any distinguishing mark apart from its natural characteristics.

5.—The Judge will be instructed to withhold a diploma should the merit of the competing birds in any particular section not justify its award.

6.—We reserve the right, in the event of there being less than 10 separate competitors altogether in our competition at any one diploma show to withhold the cash prizes thereat, the diplomas remaining on offer for as many birds as are eligible for them.

7.—An exhibitor who has won a diploma need not necessarily enter the same bird for the final competition. By winning the diploma he has the right to nominate and enter not more than four birds in any one of the 12 sections for the final competition.

8.—No exhibitor in the final will be allowed to win more than two prizes with his four entries.

9.—In all cases of dispute arising out of this competition the Editor's decision will be absolutely final and legally binding in every respect, and only upon this understanding will entries be accepted.

10.—The Editor reserves the right to alter the conditions from time to time in whatever manner he thinks best in the interests of competitors themselves, and also of the competition.

We shall be glad if Societies wishing to avail themselves of our Championship Competition will write us immediately so that we may send on our conditions.

Bird Dealers, Corn Merchants, Secretaries of Societies, and others desirous of retailing our coupons, should apply for wholesale cash terms.

All letters concerning the above scheme should be addressed to The Editor, Cage Birds, 154, Fleet Street London, E.C.

I do not offer any advice to the old Roller fancier, as he will know quite well what to do, and how to get rid of it, should any of his birds be inclined to sing it. To the young fancier, or to the new beginner, who has already got birds singing this tour, I would say don't dispose of your stock (unless you can afford it and feel inclined to do so), because, though you will be parting with one fault, you will probably get another of a different kind. Breed with the birds, and on no account let the youngsters hear the tour, if possible, in the breeding room, or, better still, in the training room, for I do not attach much importance to whatever they may hear in the breeding room, as by giving a good tuition by the time the youngsters are nicely through the moult those faults that were heard in the breeding room will be very likely to have been forgotten.

What's Bred in the Bone.

Of course it will be understood that if the fault is in the blood, this would be an inducement for the birds to sing it, and the first time a youngster is heard attempting to sing the tour, it should be removed at once. If you have not heard it sing the fault previously, you may be inclined to think that it was a mistake on either your part, or the birds, and decide to let it remain a little longer with the rest of the youngsters. Probably you will not hear it sung again for two or three days, and then you will get it again, and sounding to you more objectionable than it did the first time, because the bird's voice is gradually getting stronger. So the first time you hear a young bird sing anything faulty that its tutor is not singing, remove it at once, and place it in a position where the rest of the other youngsters cannot hear it, and, further, where it cannot hear the fault being sung. Should the recruit to the Roller Fancy not have this faulty Glucke tour, I would strongly advise him to seriously consider the subject before purchasing birds that sing it; or, if I may put it to you bluntly, take a "Fool's advice, and don't."

Another Faulty Glucke Tour.

In addition to the flat sounding bell Glucke, I have found another faulty, or inferior-toned Glucke tour, a faulty tour quite apart from the one already described; while it is not so objectionable, it is nevertheless a tour that has "Taken the wrong turning." I believe it was Mr. Lester who first wrote about this, and advised Roller fanciers to give more study to the breeding of the Glucke tours. If I may be allowed to "coin a term" for this tour I should unhesitatingly call it a flat, or flat toned, Hollow Glucke tour.

I have only heard it sung a few times, yet there is no mistaking, or confusing, it with anything else. It is heard in a slow, restful manner, sounding as Glak-Glak-Glak-Glak, and delivered in rather a deep toned voice, yet pitched a little higher than we hear the good hollow Glucke tour which sounds as Gluk-Gluk-Gluk-Gluk, or again as the case may be, Gluk-luk, luk, luk (when I described the Hollow Glucke amongst the good tours I should have omitted the consonant c, as it is not sounded in voicing, or singing, the Glucke).

Questions and Answers.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3) Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6) If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who receive letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. Mules and Hybrids—H. Norman. British Birds—H. J. Fulljames. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S.. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES

CAUGHT A CHILL (J.F.M.).—(1) Your bird needed warmth more than anything else, and protection from draughts was essential. Unless these points have been in some measure complied with, I am afraid it has already left this "vale of tears." If this climax has not happened keep the bird in a warm, comfortable temperature. Give a diet of plain canary as staple, with half a teaspoonful of scalded rape, separately, each day. Also give daily for a fortnight a morsel of bread and milk, with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled liberally with maw seed. In the drinking water give 30 drops of brandy and five each of oxymel of squills, ipecac. wine and glycerine, daily for a week, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food every second day for two or three weeks. Gradually resume the usual dietary after the end of the first fortnight. (2) The samples of grass seeds you enclosed are excellent for Canaries, or any small seed-eating bird.

NORWICH COCK SLUGGISH.—(A.M.P.).—I suspect the bird has some digestive derangement arising out of its change of quarters and ownership. Try the following treatment for two or three weeks. As a staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every third day give a morsel of bread soaked in cold milk, drained and sprinkled with soft sugar. On the intervening days give first a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, inga and teazle, and next a small teaspoonful of soaked or scalded rape. Give a good-sized spray of chickweed or flower heads of groundsel daily, and a few ripe dandelion seed heads at any time. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece every second day for a week, and in the next week substitute four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

IS IT POSSIBLE? (Jack, Watford).—Certainly, it is quite possible, and reasonable, to get another clutch from this pair this season, if the cock is in good health and active condition, on which point you say nothing. If in good sound health they should require no special feeding at this season. You may, however, give a small teaspoonful of egg-food to the pair every third day, and if you have a few fine fat mealworms available, mince three or four and mix in the egg food each time. On the intervening days give first a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure and sesame, and next day a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and broken groats. Give green food daily and ripe dandelion heads, as advised to "A.M.P." this week. Also give the rhubarb mixture mentioned in that reply for three consecutive days, and the gentian tonic afterwards for a week.

NO RESULTS (G. E. Cox).—It is not clear from your letter whether you removed the cock whilst hen was sitting the first clutch of eggs. If you did not, she has not been fully tested yet, having hatched no young in the second round. Let the birds try once more, treat for a fortnight as advised to "Jack, Watford," in this issue, if they do not appear to be about going to nest quickly, and remove the cock again when hen begins to sit. Also look up a number of replies in the last four issues, which you will see apply to your case, and act upon any of the suggestions you may not have tried already. If she then fails to respond, I'm afraid your only chance of success with her is to have a reliable foster hen available next season to take over and rear her young. Treat the Norwich cock that is still moulting as you will see advised in detail to another querist on same subject this week.

YORKSHIRE MOPY (J. T. D., Clapham).—Treat the bird for a fortnight, the same as advised to "A. M. P." in this issue, and if not then quite well, please write again and repeat particulars.

GIVING YOUNG BIRDS BATH (Frank Tall).—You need not worry about any stated time for beginning to give a bath to young birds. If you provide the adults with their usual bath, as you should do after the young are a few days old, the youngsters will begin to use it on their own account almost as soon as they leave the nest. When the young are separated from the parents offer them the bath the same as you do the adults, but do not allow it to remain on cage too long—say from ten to fifteen minutes—and only whilst you are in the room at the beginning. Also be careful not to put in too great a depth of water until the birds have acquired a little practice. These precautions are advisable, as young birds are apt to overdo the business, and so saturate their plumage that they are practically unable to crawl out of the bath. Apart from these risks, there is no harm in giving the bath just as soon as the youngsters care to use it.

TWO ROUNDS, RESULTS NIL (A. C. H. P.).—The Norwich hen is clearly out of condition, and the cock is not in the best condition, so your results from them are not surprising. Leave them together and treat them for a fortnight, as advised to "Jack, Watford," in this issue. But in your case give the rhubarb mixture for two days, and then every second day for the remainder of one week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and tincture of steel every second day.

LIZARDS AND YORKSHIRES (Brebote).—(1) I confess I hardly understand what the noise is which you describe as a "short, sharp, Robin's long-drawn sigh." It conveys to me nothing definite. In case it is a wheezy noise issuing from the respiratory organs, try giving each bird half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it daily for a week, and add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecac. wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together every second day for a week or so. Possibly the birds contracted a slight cold in travelling to you. You have done right in separating the one bird, and leaving the two that are probably a pair together. (2) I see no necessity for keeping the Yorkshire isolated any longer. As she does not appear to take the Parrish's give her the gentian tonic as advised to "A. M. P." in this issue for a fortnight.

CAKED VENTS IN YOUNG (Constant Reader).—I think your egg food is the cause of this trouble, as it is of a too constipating character, and the addition of sugar is not an advantage in these circumstances. I think you will do better next round if you try making your egg food of crushed plain biscuits and egg, or, better still, crumb of stale household bread and egg, adding only a small amount of bread or biscuit the first day, and gradually increasing the proportion to two parts bread or biscuit to one part egg. Add no sugar, nor any moisture other than what is contained naturally in the egg. Look down replies this week, and I think you will find details for rearing in one. Or refer to reply to "A. H.," on May 16th. Follow these instructions implicitly, particularly with regard to hemp, green food, etc. The samples of hemp and rape you sent are both of very good quality. If any young are now suffering from caked vents, cleanse them with a small camel-hair pencil dipped in quite warm water, but do not wet birds: then slightly anoint them with lanocyllin.

UNDEVELOPED OVARIES (G.F.C.).—These hens are clearly of a type in which the reproductive organs remain dormant for some length of time. It may last only a few weeks, or it may continue for a whole season, or more than one season. They are almost invariably very unsatisfactory cases to treat. Your best course is to give the hen that now sits in the nest a good deal, a clutch of common fertile gegs to hatch out and rear, if she will do so, provided, of course, you can get a clutch of eggs for experiment. If Canary eggs are not available, try a clutch of Finches. This method will often result in bringing about a normal cycle of reproduction in future. Treat the other hen that does not sit in nest the same as advised to "A. C. H. P." in this issue.

IS IT A TEST? (Victor).—I read your letter to mean that you discovered two eggs in the nest on the same day that you returned the cock bird, and that the hen laid three more on the three following days. If this is correct, then, this is my reply to your question concerning the fertility of this clutch. It is "possible," but not at all "probable," that the two first eggs will prove fertile; the third may be fertile if the cock was returned in the morning or quite early part of day (you omit this detail); if not returned until midday or later, this will probably prove unfertile, but there is, of course, the same "possibility" for this as the first two; the last two have the full normal chances for being properly fertilised as if birds had been together some time. As you have marked the eggs, please let me hear result, especially of the third egg, if it is distinguishable. The youngsters doubtless needed feeding by the parents a little longer. I trust you kept a little soft food on with them for that purpose.

VARIED (L.S.)—(1) No, when the cock is removed during incubation it is not advisable to return him when young are three days old. Unless, indeed, one was fully aware of the temperament of the cock, and knew that he was trustworthy with young chicks, such a procedure might be disastrous. If the hen shows no signs of starting to nest again it is better to keep him away until young are ready to leave nest, and could, if necessary, be transferred to a nursery cage with perfect safety. If hen is coming forward again the cock may be returned when young are about fourteen days old, and a second nest pan given when hen wants to nest again. Should plucking occur, the young will still have to go in a nursery and take their chance—still a good one. (2) The period of incubation is 14 days—a few hours less in warm, favourable weather—from the time the eggs are set. If you remove eggs as laid, and return them on the evening of the third day, you may expect all four to hatch, this is assuming a fourth egg is laid on the fourth morning, on the fourteenth day, counting every day from time eggs are set. If eggs are not removed as laid, hatching is usually spread over three days, that is, each fourteenth day from time second, third and fourth eggs were laid. (3) Depends on circumstances. Some hens do much better when the cock is removed, others do better when he is allowed to remain. There is no means of knowing which plan is best in any particular case except the actual test. If a hen does badly when the cock is left with her, remove him next time, and vice versa. Glad you find CAGE BIRDS so helpful. As regards other hen that remains unsatisfactory, treat her for a few weeks as advised to "C.B.A., S.O. (2)" in last issue, and give a few ripe dandelion seed heads anytime same are available.

PROLAPSUS (H.W.).—The bird was suffering from this trouble, or "Anal prolapse," as it is also termed, and it is doubtful if any treatment would have been of any permanent benefit. It is apt to occur in weak and debilitated hens from the strain of laying an unusually large or a shell-less egg. I note you say you have been a regular reader for two years. Why, then, did not you pay a little more attention to the article on "Accidents" in our pages on May 24th, which contained advice precisely meeting your case, and would have helped you to do all that was possible for the bird's relief or cure?

MOULTING FOR THREE MONTHS (W. L., Small Heath).—The first and most essential step towards curing this abnormal moulting is to discover and remove the cause, which is practically certain to be either exposure to cold draughts, or extreme and rapid fluctuations of temperature. Keep the bird in a bright, healthful position, well ventilated, but free from cold cutting draughts, and not over heated, such as by hanging near or over a burning light in the evenings, or high up near the ceiling. Then, in addition to the staple diet of plain canary and rape, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a month. On the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats. Give a spray of chickweed daily, and a few dandelion seed heads at any time these are available. Allow bird to bathe freely. In the drinking water add a quinine tonic the same as advised to "H. Edwards" this week.

SLIPPED CLAW (A Reader).—Yes, the bird is suffering from what is often termed "slipped claws," and it ought to have been attended to as soon as possible after the deformity was noticed. when, by giving it only thin perches—about the size of a lead pencil—a cure would in all probability have come about naturally by this time. If you notice the bird when resting gradually "work" the hind toes over back of perch, you may still rely upon this method. But otherwise it will be most advisable to leave in the ordinary sized perches and put a rubber band on each claw for a fortnight or so as a preliminary. Make bands by cutting off slightly less than one-eighth of an inch from the end of feeding-bottle tubing. Through the rings thus formed pass the three fore toes of each foot—separately, of course—hold the hind toe back against leg, and pass on ring up leg until near the end of toe, and leave it there. When bird is released the ring will still hold the toe in a far backward position. After wearing these for a fortnight or so remove them and put in the thin perches, which should be kept in for several weeks until the bird has a good strong grip with the hind toes.

A YOUNG FREAK (Perplexed).—From your description I am strongly inclined to think the youngster is an abnormal freak, and that the palpably crippled limbs are congenital, belonging to the same class of freaks as those unfortunates which sport surplus legs or wings. This view is strongly supported, too, by the clearly abnormal character of the eggs laid in the clutch it belongs to. Such freaks are frequently recorded, and whilst not common, are certainly not great rarities. If your youngster still shows palpable signs of being always unable to perch it would be by far the kindest thing to end its career at once. Get a chemist to give it a whiff of chloroform. The thunderstorms which occurred during incubation would have absolutely nothing to do with producing this deformity. Only just try to imagine if thunder produced such effects the hundreds of thousands of birds, both wild and tame, we should see going about as freaks.

SECOND ROUND FAILURES (H. Edwards).—The cause of the second round of eggs being addled after a good first round of young is in all probability owing to the cocks having already started to go out of condition on account of the moult being imminent. Now that the weather promises to be warm and settled, it would certainly be wise to move the birds from the kitchen to an unheated room, but it will be quite useless keeping them mated as long as the cocks are losing feathers. Separate them until the cocks have regained condition, and meantime give them every second day for a fortnight half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and on the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle. Give a leaf of dandelion, spray of chickweed, or a few seed heads of dandelion daily. Dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the water every second day until feathers cease dropping.

NOT FEEDING YOUNG (Beginner).—Your method of feeding was certainly very faulty, and doubtless had something to do with the hen's desertion of young. The ordinary staple seed diet of plain canary, or canary and rape, as the case may be, must be kept on regularly after the young are hatched as well as at all other times, so you made a big mistake to remove it and feed entirely on soft food when young were first hatched. You also began giving hemp too early, and the soaked rape would have been better deferred a little longer. When the next brood are hatched keep the seed hopper replenished with good, sound canary seed. On the day of hatching give half a teaspoonful of egg-food in the morning, and a small teaspoonful ditto in the afternoon. Make this with only a small proportion of bread crumb or biscuit powder. Next day add rather more bread or biscuit, and give a small teaspoonful morning and afternoon. Each day gradually increase proportion of bread until by time young are eight days old you have it at two parts bread to one part egg, and also gradually increase quantity given daily as the needs of the growing brood demand more. Feed twice or thrice daily with fresh soft food, and aim at giving each time only about enough to last until next feeding-time. When young are three days old, give a spray of green food, and afterwards give a little, gathered freshly, each morning and afternoon. At six or eight days give a teaspoonful of soaked rape daily, and at ten or twelve days add a similar quantity of cracked hemp each day, and gradually increase quantities of both to double those named.

Answered by H. J. FULLJAMES.

A JACKDAW QUERY.—If "H.D.P.," who sends a query as to a Jackdaw, will forward his name and address and comply generally with the simple rules at the head of these queries, I shall be very pleased to give him an answer.

GETTING HAND-REARED LINNETS ON TO SEED (Bird Lover).—You should first add a little soaked rape seed to the egg and biscuit, and, later, add a little dry rape and canary seed. Continue with this until you see that they are able to crack the dry seed, when you should get them gradually on the hard seed diet alone. Some soaked teazle might be combined with the soaked rape, and some dry teazle added to the canary and rape when they are cracking the seed. Afterwards, give in a separate vessel a good wild-seed mixture, and any fresh wild seeds which you may be able to gather for them. When using soaked rape be careful that it is not kept long enough to go sour.

SCREENINGS FROM A THRESHING MACHINE (C. B. Byrne).—Your query should not have been addressed to Mr. St. John. Mr. St. John answers questions relating to Canary-keeping only, not on British birds. The sample sent contains many seeds which would be useful for the keeping of Goldfinches and Linnets, but it also contains a very considerable proportion of dust, which must be somehow cleaned from the seeds before they are offered to the birds. Be careful not to lose in the cleaning the tiniest of the wild seeds, which are in the mixture, as these are quite the most useful. A "hair" sieve would be the proper kind to use in screening the dust from the mixture. In addition to the wild seeds, the birds would require the ordinary seeds so often recommended. The latter should be offered in a separate vessel. Our Nut shells, No. 1, the Goldfinch, and No. 2, the Linnet (2½d. each, post free, from our Manager) would help you as to the general feeding and proper keeping.

IDENTIFICATION OF NESTS, &c. (Novice).—In not a single case do you give sufficient details. So many birds build nests of "moss and grass lined with hair." A Chaffinch nest is unmistakable. It is a very compact cup-shaped structure made of moss and wool tightly woven together. The outside is more or less covered with bits of lichen used in such a way that it is difficult to distinguish the nest from the gnarled branch on which it is generally built. An old apple tree is a very favourite site with the Chaffinch for nest building, although a bush is sometimes chosen. A Bramble would be a most unlikely place. As for the young birds which you say were hatched from "three big round eggs," and are "greeny-fawn" in colour with a "white spot on the head," I am not inclined to make even a guess at them without further details. What colour and markings had the "three big round eggs"? The food you are giving the young birds will do for almost any kind of small British bird as a nestling, but as they get older you will have to feed them according to whether they are insectivorous or seed-eating. If you will let me have more definite particulars I will try to help you.

YOUNG LONG-EARED OWL (J. McCorriskin)—I have had no personal experience in keeping this large and exclusively nocturnal Owl. In freedom the bird lives, like the rest of the Owls, on rats, mice, bats, small birds, beetles, etc., and in captivity it would require such of these as you may be able to procure for it, supplemented by pieces of raw beef, fowls' heads, and such like. It would require a very large cage (the male bird grows to about fifteen inches long, and the hen is larger), and, from the nature of its food, the cleaning out of its cage would be a matter of considerable moment. Of course, it would require water—all birds do.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

AMAZON ILL (J. T. D.).—You will have to continue the treatment for some time yet, at the same time apply the different remedies in the manner least likely to distress her, this you only can decide by your knowledge of the bird's demeanour. You must continue the honey and borax, and put it into the mouth, say, twice a week, and in between mix it with her boiled corn. You must keep the nostrils clear by the glyco-thymoline spraying. Carry this on regularly, and the trouble should yield. At present it will be best to continue on the lines of our previous reply, modified by above comments. The trouble has been going on too long to be easily got rid of, continue and report progress in another fortnight. It might make her more amenable if her cage door was left open, and she was allowed to climb about it outside. Then she could be treated, and instead of being put in the cage, placed on the top of it, and allowed to find her way in at will.

A FEATHER PULLER (Chorltonian).—Give the Dinneford's and Byno-phosphates that you have noticed us advise to other correspondents, the former one teaspoonful to the ounce of water, the latter only half a teaspoonful, to be governed by the same conditions, viz., bowels to be kept moving quite freely, but the voidings not to be continually watery-loose; clean water once a week. During such weather as we are now enjoying, spray it with the quassia solution twice weekly, and give it outdoor treatment, say, 10 a.m. till 6 p.m., on all suitable days. Do not stand it in an exposed position; expose it to dull winds, or place it in a draughty position, nor yet where the sun will strike directly on the top of the cage. Seed mixture: One quart each canary and white millet, seed and oats; one pint each hemp, paddy rice, dari and wheat; half a-pint each sunflower seed and shelled nuts—well mix the whole. It can have pieces of plain biscuit, as well as ripe fruit ad lib; cuttlebone, grit, and also wood to cut up should be regularly supplied. Report progress in a month.

ROSELLA IN A BAD WAY (A. D.).—I have read your letter very carefully, and though you have done the best you could for it, and only have kept it alive by your care, it is merely existence and not life, and if it were my bird, loth as I am to take such a step, I should have it mercifully chloroformed out of its misery. You may, however, wish to try for another fourteen days or so, having kept it going for so long. Bathe (thoroughly soak) the legs and feet daily with hot water (of course not hot enough for discomfort), dry with a soft cloth, and then paint with neat whisky. While you have to continue the milk sop, add the few drops of whisky regularly, but encourage it to take seed as soon as possible, and then gradually wean from the milk. I should give the bird five drops of tasteless castor oil, either direct to the beak, or in the milk sop, the former for preference, and repeat the dose regularly once a week for a month. Give the honey and borax daily, and for the present put regularly half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates to each ounce of its drinking water. If there is no improvement in two or three weeks, have it destroyed. If it amends sufficiently for you to continue treating, report progress in about three weeks. If it dies, as is not improbable, do not use your cage for another bird till it has been well sterilised. I should advise the prompt removal and burning of the bird's voidings.

FINCHES FOR SMALL AVIARY (A.M.S.).—I take it your small aviary is out of doors; if it is portable it would be better lifted into some dry, well lighted shed for the winter months, but you give no details on this point, and it handicaps me considerably. In such an aviary, though you could keep in it a couple of dozen small Finches, merely as a collection, I do not consider you would stand much chance of breeding luck if you put in more than four pairs. If I were using such a place myself, I should only put in two pairs, or at the most three—then again I do not know your county. Gouldian Finches, Ruficauda Finches, and Long-tailed Greenfinches are all beautiful, and some or all should breed, but they are not cheap birds, and with the limitations of your aviary should go indoors for the winter at the end of October. Zebra Finches, Silverbills, and Bib Finch, are all pretty and attractive, the first-named is fairly gay, but not the other two. All are probable breeders, cheap, and could be left out all the winter unless you are very far north. Or you could put in a larger number, say, pairs each of Zebra Finches, Silverbills, Avadavats, Gold-breasted Waxbills, Orange-cheek Waxbills, and Cordon Bleus. All the above are pretty or beautiful, mostly the latter, and excepting the last named, are all hardy and would make a nice show; some of them should breed, and with the exception of the Cordon Bleus, should winter outside. If the above does not meet your case, repeat query with fuller details.

COCKATEILS (F. W. C.).—Your birds certainly ought to do well, and if mice do not get into the nests and disturb them, it is a case of individualism, and they are unsteady and unreliable incubators; if they are young birds, they will probably grow out of it, but if not, you must get rid of them and try another pair. Note: Are the bottoms of your nest boxes flat? If so, make them concave. In such weather as we are now enjoying, and also all through the summer, give ample ventilation—all you can without creating a draught. Add white oats to your menu, also corn and other cereals in the ear when obtainable. The corn should be well formed, but greenish—i.e., not fully ripe. Cockatiels are fond of a bath; give them a good-sized shallow dish of water to make their ablutions in.

YELLOW-FRONTED AMAZON (S. H. B.).—The heat has probably had something to do with the shedding of the plumage, but during the summer there is no harm in giving the bird a weekly spraying with a dilute solution of quassia (tepid). Your diet covers its need and is wholesome; you might offer a nut occasionally. I should still continue to use the Dinneford's Magnesia sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving quite freely without being really loose, and twice a week put either Chemical Food or Byno-phosphates in the drinking water. The bromide sedative need not be given unless there is a return of the habit you object to. Sun and air will be a great help, and I should put it out of doors on all suitable days, but not when cold winds prevail. It should not be stood in a draughty or exposed position, nor should the sun be allowed to shine directly on the top of its cage. The spraying had nothing to do with the shedding of the plumage. Yellow-fronts as a rule do not make such good talkers as Blue-fronts, and I consider you have given utmost value for the bird.

ANTS' EGGS AND CRESTED PIGEONS (T. Tomlinson).—Live ants' eggs (cocoons) can be purchased from most of the large dealers who advertise in our columns, and the same applies to gentles—you will find them advertised very shortly in our pages. Never give the latter to the birds until they have been well scoured. Keep them in sand or bran until they are white right through, changing the bran, etc., every two or three days. When quite white and with no black line visible in their bodies, they are wholesome food for the birds. An advertisement would secure you some of either now. I cannot give names or individualise any one trader. (2) These are usually a free breeding species, and can be kept out of doors all the year round, but they sometimes take a season to settle down, but once they make a start, several broods will be reared annually. I have never tried them with ordinary fancy pigeons, but should think they would agree well enough with them; putting on one side domesticated varieties, Doves and Pigeons do not as a rule agree well together, but providing they are not too closely related, several pairs may be kept in the same aviary.

GOULDIAN FINCHES (Gould).—When it reaches the extreme stage I fear there is no remedy; it was a case for prevention. In spite of the apparently fit condition of your bird, the trouble was there, though it only became apparent when the acute stage was reached. The post-mortem result explains much concerning the egg-laying trouble. It is a pity the bird would not take milk-sop, as this would have helped, but you must not take your bird as settling the matter for all Gouldians, as there are many that will take it, and your bird does not stand alone in refusing it. Constant observation should be kept over the bowels of all seed-eaters kept indoors, and there should be kept constantly regulated by a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia, sufficiently often to keep them moving quite freely, without being really loose. If a bird reaches the stage yours did, and is plump and fat, use Syrup of Buckthorn, ten drops in the drinking water for three consecutive days, and then, after an interval of three, renew the treatment, and so on for a fortnight, then cease giving the buckthorn, and give instead for a couple of days two or three drops of Elixir of Vitriol in the drinking water. The main trouble is that indoor-kept seed-eaters more often than not eat very sparingly of green food, and other means (as above) must be taken to keep their digestion in proper order. Grassfinches are almost as lethargic as Mannikins, and soon pile on flesh and other troubles unless well looked after. Their regular menu was an ample and good one.

COCKATEILS (E. A. B. N.). (1) Canary and white millet in equal parts, also a few oats; green food, fruit if they will eat it, and continual access to grit, cuttlebone, and mortar rubbish. (2) A small piece of rock salt is good for all cage birds that will make use of it; it will require damping daily this weather. If your query has reference to common salt, I have never given this, but a small piece for them to peck at at will could do no harm, but I do not consider it necessary.

BUDGERIGARS NOT BREEDING (E. C.).—Many Budgerigars are moulting just now, and also many are breeding; yours should do so at the termination of the moult. You give me no particulars whatever save that they are kept in a long flight. I can only suggest a few points for you to look into for yourself. Are last year's husks still up, or have you replaced them by new ones? If not, take them all down, clean them, then give them a good soaking in boiling water and put in the open air to dry. I take it your flight is indoors; if so, examine it for parasites. These gain a hold sooner or later if annual preventative measures are not taken; if you find any, well wash the place out with some strong insecticide, and then distemper with Hall's Washable Distemper or some similar preparation. The latter will be a wise precaution even if you cannot trace any parasites. If you have not already got our Nutshell "Budgerigars," it would be well to get it, 2½d., post free from our manager.

CALIFORNIAN QUAIL (Aloa).—My experience is that the clutch consists of from nineteen to twenty-four eggs, and that it is not well to interfere with any eggs till incubation begins, as it often happens that they do not incubate the first clutch, or if the clutch is incomplete and you take some away, she at once makes another nest and commences another clutch. I have always reared my Quails by the natural method, and have never used foster parents, etc., and have supplied ants' eggs and gentles mostly for the first week, supplying a little insectile mixture (soft food) or game meal to get them accustomed to it, but they soon begin to take to seed and the mixture, then live food is supplied in smaller quantity; but I always see that both adults and chicks get some live food daily. I am not aware of any popular book dealing with these birds, but there are many accounts of successful breeding of many species in the pages of the avicultural Press.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Mrs. G.—The case was quite incurable. The disease from which the Canary was suffering was bacterial necrosis of the lungs. Portions of these organs were totally destroyed, there being large necrotic areas. The distress in breathing was due to this, so much lung tissue being put out of action that double respiratory movements were necessary for proper and adequate breathing.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

J. L. Wilson.—If you send a stamped addressed envelope, a specimen of shepherd's purse will be forwarded you. There must be "acres" of it in Nottingham and suburbs. An illustration appears in the next instalment of Mr. Morse's article.

W. H. Talbot.—Neither biscuit nor bread could be harmful to the Canaries, and could be mixed with the food. But whether it is wise to mix them in is another matter; if you are in doubt on the point why not write to the makers?

G. W. F. Lythgoe.—Letter has been duly forwarded.

R. A. Tyler.—A good idea, certainly, but we have illustrated similar drinking fountains before.

P.H.—There is no need to look for any special kind of grass seed; take that which is nearest to hand. Of the specimens you send we prefer them in this order. (1) hard fescue, (2) sweet vernal, (3) rye, (4) cock's foot. Grass seed can be given at all times.

Use our Notepaper
Special design headings can be had; send for a specimen, stating the breeds you are interested in.

WALLASEY C.B.S.

The first ramble of the season took place on May 18th, under ideal weather conditions. There was a good turnout of members and friends. Included in the party were Messrs. Wilson, Alston, Read, Weare, Young, Benson, and Sons, Metcalf and Son, Mallinson, Walker, Hodkins, Smith, Hanson, Barber, and a few friends. At 11 a.m. a start was made from headquarters, and we were not long before we were out in the fields. Passing through Wallasey and over the marshes, we were soon heading up for Bidston. This is an ideal spot for the Nature lover, for wild birds and flowers abound in abundance. Through the kindness of the keeper, the party inspected the old mill; after condemning same as unfit for a birdroom, we made for the woods. Here the sweet song of the Willow Warbler was heard; the busy little Chiff Chaff was also noted. Leaving the woods and passing through Oxton and Noctorum, another two miles across fields brought the party to Woodchurch; here on the hedge banks great patches of the Greater Stitchwort were noticed. After inspecting the quaint old Church, our lookout sighted a coaling station, so our skipper decided to put in for bunker filling. After passing through beautiful wooded lanes we arrived at Upton. Here some of the party decided to return by train. Another mile and a half and we arrived at Moreton. A discussion took place here, much to the amusement of all present, between our chairman and George Formby, a village rustic. The conversation, as far as the writer could make, was something about a machine for taking the roe out of bloaters. After adjourning to the bowling green to face the camera, the party were soon off again, making for Leasowe, and Wallasey was reached at 7, all feeling tired, but having thoroughly enjoyed the ramble. Wild plants in bloom noticed during the ramble were wood-sorrel, herb robert, fumitory, sow thistle, hawthorn, burdock, hedge mustard, bridfoot, purple clover, red campion, thale-cress, soft cranes bill, germander speedwell, scurvy grass, birdfoot trefoil, storks bill, and many others. The larvae of the tiger and drinker moths were also noticed. Nests were plentiful, also young birds, of the latter the Turdus family seemed to predominate; a good many migrants were noticed, and resident birds of all kinds were seen. Thanks are due to our Liverpool friends who joined us on the ramble. It is to be hoped the Wallasey boys will return the compliment.—G. E. Barker.

Fond of Its Home.

Some people think it "cruel" to keep a bird in a cage, but I have one Canary which I left over four hours with the cage-door open, and it never tried to get out of the cage. It is a nice bird, and very lively.—J. R. Johnson (age 15), Deepcar, near Sheffield.

Are "Breeders' Cups" a Success?

Sir,—I have waited a few weeks for objections against and criticisms upon the adoption of breeders' cups to appear in reply to my letter addressed to the Fancy generally, and so kindly inserted in your valuable paper of date May 10th. None having appeared, may not this silence be accepted that there is no argument against the rule?

The Birds that Migrate.

Sir,—In reply to the query of "Migratory," in your columns on May 24, I think I may say that it is a fairly well-established fact that summer migrants to this country—to which, I presume, he is alone referring—do not breed again while in their winter quarters abroad. The majority moult in July or August, immediately after rearing their last brood, and just before their departure, but a few, such as the Garden Warbler, appear to defer the moult until December, that is to say until long after they have quitted our shores for a warmer climate—in most cases, of course, Africa.

New Headquarters for the Openshaw C.B.S.

Sir,—Will all fanciers in Gorton, Openshaw and District please note that we are holding an important meeting on June 11, at 8 p.m., in our new room in the club room, Alhambra Buildings, Higher Openshaw. This room has been placed at our disposal through the kindness of the manager, Mr. Evanson. He has also promised to give his support in helping to make our Society a success. The new room is very well suited both for meetings or shows; well lighted, it has also three radiators and electric lights, so you see that we are well off to have so good a room. New members invited; we want to fix date for a first feather show, also other important business. Members of other societies especially invited; entrance to meeting room is by side door of the picture palace.

More Chaffinch Eggs Hatched by Canaries.

Sir,—Seeing the letter by Mr. Wm. Stockin last week about a hen Canary hatching Chaffinch eggs, I thought the following notes might interest fellow fanciers. We have a cock Linnet and hen Canary together, and she laid four eggs, on which she started to sit on the 12th May. These turned out to be all clear, and so on the 22nd, as I had nothing to do, I went for a walk on the common in hopes of finding some Finch's eggs. I found a nest of five Chaffinch eggs, about 8.30 a.m., and these I took, and carried them about loose in my pocket until I got home about 11.55 a.m. I broke three, which were clear except for a very fine red vein in them. I put the other two under the Canary, along with two of her own. The Chaffinch eggs hatched on May 30th, and at the time of writing the young were going on nicely. If this is of any interest to your readers, I will let you know if they live or die. I wish Cage Birds and everybody connected with the bird Fancy the best of luck.

A Cockatoo Over 116 Years Old!

Remarkable Case in Australia.

Sir,—In the "Sketch" reference was recently made to a Cockatoo in Australia, said to be over a hundred years old. This drew the appended letter from an Australian, and I have no doubt that it will greatly interest your own bird-loving readers: "There is no deception about the age of 'Cocky Bennett'; as a matter of fact she is probably much more than 116 years old, but the present owners who keep the hotel at Tom Ugly's Point, where she resides, can only speak with certainty as to that age. I say 'she' advisedly, because some fifty years ago, although 'Cocky' had never strayed from the vicinity of her cage, she surprised herself, and all who knew her by laying an egg; the offence has never been repeated, however, and remains now only a legend. 'Cocky' wears a few, very few, scraggy-looking feathers, but her skin is black and shrivelled, and periodically her beak and claws are trimmed. She has a large and varied vocabulary, which is seldom exercised, however, although the great joke of her life is sprung fairly often. The poor old bird flaps her shrivelled stumps of wings most vigorously, and in a harsh, discordant shriek screams out, "By heavens! I'll fly!" I am an Australian, have seen the bird twice, and can vouch for the above facts.—Sydney Cove."

Why do Young Birds Die in the Shell?

Is our Treatment of the Sitting Hens to Blame?

Sir,—In answer to Mr. A. M. Johnson and his question, does thunder kill young birds? my own opinion is, no. I have for the past three years been trying to find out the cause why young die in the shell, and I have done so to my satisfaction, and, as I am well-known among fanciers, I have been asked hundreds of times the same question. Now the reason is that when we are getting our birds into breeding condition we cram them full of good rich food of all kinds until the hen lays her first egg; then what a contrast, she has only dry bread (plain canary seed) to keep her alive and to retain her heat for incubating her clutch of eggs. The consequence is her heat dies down too low. The young are formed and live up to 10 to 12 days; this is the time they require more heat, and so the hen has not enough to supply the eggs with. Hence the result is the young die in the shell, and the saying goes, "I have another nest of eggs with all the young dead." I set to work to find out the cause of this great trouble, and I now give it for the first time. I have not much time for writing, but I like trying to help the Fancy as much as I can, and more so the novices. When I sit the hen I give her a little mixed seed every other day until the young hatch, along with egg food three or four times a week. But don't give too much egg. On the days that I don't give egg food I supply a little hemp. Mind that it is good hemp. There is hemp seed and hemp seed. I am more particular over buying my hemp than any kind of seed I use. I know from past experience what having bad hemp seed has done for me. Don't have hemp that is green; see that it is a good rich brown seed, and large. I never have bad results by it now, and I use 7lbs. a week; and during winter time I use double. On this treatment I have only had one young die in the shell. As for thunder killing young, or turning the eggs, I don't believe in it, as I have found that I have had young hatch out while other eggs being sat at the same date have been what some of us call "muddled." The cause of these bad eggs is the breeding birds not being strong enough for their work; hence weak germs. I will write a little more on this if you think it will help the Fancy a little.

Is Insect Powder Injurious to Young Birds in the Shell?

Sir,—I should like to inform "H.M.P." that he need not be afraid to use Keating's insect powder either on poultry, or Canaries, eggs or young ones. I have used it freely for many years, and more than once some of the powder has gone into the young Canaries' mouths when I have been dusting them with it, but I have never known it do them any harm.

How to Keep Dandelion Seed.

Sir,—I see in last week's issue of Cage Birds Mr. Williams asks how to keep dandelion seeds. I find the following method satisfactory. Collect good big white heads, just beginning to open, break the stems off, also clip the white close down to the seed, then place the heads in a box in the sun, the seed will then fall loose. Enclosed is a sample dried for winter use in this way.

Sexing the Song Thrush.

Is This the Solution?

Sir,—The accompanying sketch will serve to show the difference I have found between the male and female Thrush (which in my opinion is the most difficult Britisher to sex). The dotted line shows shape of hen's head as compared with solid line of male. The hen is, or appears to be, on account of flatness, much wider also across the head from eye to eye. I have come to this decision as the most reliable way after a good many years seeking for an infallible method of sexing, and send it to you with the hope that it will be of some use to readers of Cage Birds who hand-rear Thrushes. The difference is noticeable even before the young are feathered.

THE STOCK BOOK

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

A Successful Start with Roller Canaries.

Sir,—My first attempt at breeding has been so easily successful that I venture to relate it as an encouragement to beginners. I paired two Rollers, the cock variegated, the hen a clear deep yellow. Result, 3 young, 1 variegated green cock, 1 yellow cock, 1 ditto hen. They were well fed by the parents from the first, and left the nest at 14 days old. I then removed the cock bird, and the hen brought them up alone for another 14 days, when they fed themselves well. She has now gone to nest again and laid 4 eggs. Though now only just over 5 weeks old, the two cocks warble freely. They are kept in the room with a Linnet and seem to imitate his song. I have throughout followed the directions given in "Canary Breeding for Beginners."

A Roller Hen Objects to the Marking Ring.

Sir,—I have read with great interest the article on the Roller Canary by Mr. G. Tomlinson in Cage Birds. I think we can do with articles on this lovely singer, especially for Scottish readers, as this bird is not so well-known here as it is in England. I wonder if anyone has had the experience that I have had in ringing with the closed ring? I had a hen with one youngster, and I thought I would try my hand at ringing it. I did so one morning, and I was successful. When I got home at dinner time my wife told me that she had found the youngster out of the nest. She put it back, but found it in the same place an hour after. When I got home at night I was told that the hen had put the young one out four times. The hen would have nothing to do with it with its ring on, it seemed. The wife has been hand-feeding it for four days, and it is getting on well. I should like to know if any reader of your valuable paper has had a similar experience.

Canaries Rearing Insectivorous Birds.

A Success with Tits.

Sir,—I thought the following would interest some of the readers of Cage Birds: Some years ago a boy brought me two very small birds, about two or three days old, which he said were lying at the base of an old oak tree. Having a hen Canary with only one youngster in the nest, I put them in with it, expecting, of course, to find them dead in the morning. But she reared both of them, and they thrived well on the same food as the young Canary (no insect food). They turned out to belong to the "Tit" family. They were very small and short, about 2½ inches when fully feathered, black cap and white strings, or stripes down the cheeks. They were very pretty and very amusing. Anyone wishing to rear any of the Tits can do so if they have a steady and good feeder, that does not feed too coarsely. They must be same age as the Canaries, and be put under the hen at night. I may add that these birds were seen by a medical gentleman who is an authority on all kinds of birds. I have bred Canaries and British birds for twenty-five years.

J. Drewett.

[Could not Mr. Drewett tell us the precise species of Tit? It would very considerably enhance the value of the record. His description reads like the Coal Tit, but might also apply to the Great Tit.—Editor.]

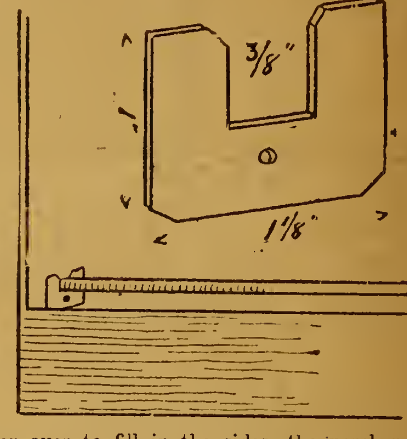
Goldfinch Returns After Four Months of Liberty.

Sir,—Here is an example of whether keeping birds in captivity is cruel or otherwise. On January 29 last I brought a Goldfinch home, and unfortunately in putting him into a cage he escaped into the garden. I saw him about for an hour or so, but could not catch him, so thought he was gone. To-day, May 25, I saw a Goldfinch trying to get into the out-door aviary, so I opened the door, and my lost bird immediately went in and started singing joyfully at being once more "in captivity." Can one say in "durance vile?"

(Mrs.) M. Scholes.

Simple Holders for Perch Ends.

Sir,—One of the best and simplest ways to make holders for front perches, both for cleaning and re-fixing, is to procure some fairly hard leather cut to sketch. Screw one piece at each end of cage, leaving 1¼in. from centre of slot to front rail. Paint or distemper over to fill in the sides, the perch need not be too long, but just to grip the sides of slot.



J. W. Yarwood.

[By a curious coincidence, Mr. W. Taylor, Gravesend, and Mr. W. J. Salter, Hackney, both send similar ideas, but in the latter cases the holders are made from three-ply wood for fixing to back of cage to hold cross perches.—Ed.]

The Career of a Light Twite-Canary Mule.

Sir,—It was with much pleasure as well as surprise I saw my noted Light Twite Mule on the front cover of Cage Birds. This bird took 3rd at the Palace, 1913, in a hard class, and also took many other honours at other shows. He was one out of two to win the North Wales C.B. Society's challenge cup for me in 1912. This Light Twite was bred by Dr. Galloway, and I believe that it is the only one living of its kind. I may let my fancier friends know that a fortnight ago I sold it for £6 10s. to Mr. H. S. Davies, a noted Mule exhibitor, of Llandilo, South Wales, and I have bought the Goldie-Bullie, winner of 1st in novice class at the Palace, 1913, to fill the place of it in my team. I may say that the drawing of my Light Twite-Canary Mule is excellent, and perfectly true to life. Your artist deserves great credit for producing so fine a likeness.

R. E. Griffith.

(Owing to a slip of the pen on the part of our artist, this bird was inadvertently described as a Siskin Mule last week.—Editor.)

A Pet Bullfinch which Roams at Will.

Sir,—Seeing Mr. H. Webster's account of his Chaffinch I write to say we have a tame Bullfinch. He got asthma at the end of the moult, and did not get any better, so about a month ago I decided to hang his cage out of doors (we are surrounded by trees and birds) and fix the door open, to see what open life would do. He flew off, but returned to his cage for food, and slept out in the trees. On the third day he found out the room he had always lived in and flew to his master's writing table, "asking" and flapping his wings for a sunflower seed, which, of course, he got. Now his cage is kept in its old place and "Joe" comes in for food, or a bath or rest, whenever he likes. Visitors in the room make no difference. He only comes in to sleep if the night is a bit cold. His asthma, though not cured, is decidedly better. All the people who see "Joey" free are very interested in him, and I thought readers of Cage Birds would also be.

A Flying Start.

Sir,—It may interest many of your numerous readers to know that, without any special knowledge of bird rearing, I have been successful in obtaining from one pair of Canaries a first nest of three, and a second nest of seven, all young ones doing well. Four of the latter were on the perches the eighteenth day after hatching, and they are altogether a lively lot. I have found your book, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," very helpful.

Dandelion Seed Heads as a Remedy for Unfertile Eggs.

Sir,—I see in this week's Cage Birds that Bournemouth fanciers are having a lot of clear eggs, so I have thought that my method of treatment might be a little value to them just before it gets too late; I have only had one clear egg this season yet. Get dandelion seed-heads just before they fly, and clip the top of them; break them in two, and give the cock two a day for about three days; it will improve him greatly. If you can't get the heads, the dry seed will do, but you will want more of it.

The Uniformity of Show Cages In Ireland.

Sir,—I resided in Ireland for three years and was a member of the Belfast C.B.S., and I think the uniformity of show cages quite equal to ours in England. I can also say that I never saw any fancier's cages with his name on the backs—or any other distinguishing marks. The only distinguishing marks I saw were the birds inside the cages, for I can tell you, Mr. Editor, that they had some real good birds, and you had to have good stuff to be anywhere near the top. I am afraid "Advocate" is a disappointed exhibitor; if so, let him get better birds and beat the cracks, and I am sure they will congratulate him, as they did me when I won gold medal in 1908. I can say I never met with a better lot of fanciers than my old friends in Ireland. I wish them all a good breeding season.

Prize Cards at the Last L.C.B.A. Horticultural Hall Show.

Sir,—I notice that the L.C.B.A. have appointed a new secretary. Perhaps we shall now get better attention to matters which certainly merit it. I was a winner at the L.C.B.A. Annual International Show in November last in the open novice Border section, and although I received the prize money, about two months after the show, which was delay enough, I have not yet had the pleasure of receiving two awards of merit and prize cards owing to me. I have written several letters to the late secretary, but am still waiting. Perhaps the new secretary will kindly oblige. I read he is looking forward to a record year in the history of the Association, but I would remind the L.C.B.A. that such unbusinesslike behaviour as meted out to me has the unhappy knack of re-acting upon Associations in "short entries at shows."

A Norwich Canary Said to Have Four Wings.

Sir,—Last year I sold to a friend of mine a young bird, bred 1912, so therefore unflighted, and the same has been brought to me this week, to ask if I could fathom the following—I should imagine it is a freak. The bird (a cock) has developed two distinct sets of wings, or nearly so, as on counting the flights I find that there are nine feathers in the old or original wings, and five in the other wings immediately above them, making altogether fourteen. The tail contains what I imagine is the correct number, nine. It is a most peculiar bird to look at, as the original wings are there, viz., with nine feathers, the other five overlapping. I have never seen such a thing in a bird before. He was a lovely songster as a youngster, but at present is not singing, although eating well, and appearing to be in perfect health. I am sending this to ask if you think there is a likelihood of him remaining as at present, or that after the moult he will come all right?.

Spireopolis.

[One would need to see the bird to pass a definite opinion. There are nine outer (primary flight feathers, then the inner flights, and sometimes the latter, or a number of them, get "cocked up" in an unsightly fashion, and stick out above the primaries. If this has happened, then matters may be righted at the next moult. The normal number of tail feathers is twelve—not nine, as mentioned by our correspondent.—Editor.]

An Appeal on Behalf of the Portsmouth P.P.R. and C.B.S.

Sir,—I desire to ask you to notify that we are arranging to have our next show on November 12th and 13th, when we hope that all cage-bird fanciers will rally round and support us in this our twenty-seventh annual fixture. Will readers of Cage Birds in and about Portsmouth and District note that in future the annual subscription will be 2s. 6d. (not 5s. as before) with 1s. entrance fee to new members upon nomination. I appeal to your help because there are so many fanciers who seem to think that they can always send their birds to shows without belonging to a society, but forget that if they had no local society there would be no organisation to take over the responsibility of a show. I think it behoves all fanciers to support their local societies.

The Preparation of Egg Food Made Easy.

Sir,—Having taken up Canary breeding as a hobby I have always found it a trouble to make my egg food. I would sooner make it myself, to ensure it being fresh. It is a tedious job to rub a hard-boiled egg through a sieve, and so I have made a little device for chopping my egg up in a second. First get two pieces of wood, say four inches square by one inch and half thick. Make a hole in the centre of each about 1½ round or square, whichever may be convenient, then get a piece of perforated zinc about 1-16 mesh. Place this between the two pieces of wood and fasten by screws as shown in drawing, then get a piece of wood, and make it a sliding fit in one of the holes. It may either be round or square, whatever you may find most convenient. An egg can be boiled as hard as you like, but remove the shell, and you will find that by placing the egg in the top portion and just pushing the plunger in as shown, the egg will be grated as fine as anyone could wish. I can highly recommend this device, as I am constantly using it myself.

A Grievance at Garston.

Sir,—Having a grievance, I explained it to the Secretary of the Garston C.B.A., of which I am a member, to have it faced out at the monthly meeting. I said I could only stay till 8.30, as I had to be in the house by 9 o'clock. The night of the meeting came and I was there, but the man I wanted was not. I said we must postpone my business till I get my man face to face. The next monthly meeting came, but my man did not. I left the meeting again at 8.30, saying I would write to Cage Birds (I have been a reader of that paper ten years), as I want the business cleared up. This member was showing on Saturday, 7th December, 1912, at Garston. I took my birds Friday night, Dec. 6th, and I asked him where his bird was. He said it was at home. I asked him to go for it, for me to see if I thought it would beat my bird. Now this bird was not at his home, nor in Garston either, on the Friday night. It was sent from Liverpool on morning of show, Saturday, Dec. 7th. Now, whose bird was this, as it was not paid for when shown (Dec. 7th) nor during any part of December nor January, nor up to a certain date in February? If this sort of work will do for others it will not do for me. What I am speaking about I know; it is neither "he said," nor "she said," nor second-hand. I ask you, sir, to publish my letter, and I also wish the member referred to to reply to it.

Freedom in Captivity.

Canaries that Live Partly in and Partly Out of Doors.

Sir,—I have recently read a number of letters referring to our wild birds being kept in a semi-natural state by bird-lovers, and thought you would be interested in the following concerning semi-wild Canaries. It is a letter sent by W. F. Marshall to "Country Life." The writer says: "I wonder if it is at all unusual to keep Canaries in absolute freedom for a length of time. I have a cock bird, and for over two years he has been free, spending the warm days out of doors and the winters in a conservatory. He returns to his cage for food, and always roosts on one particular branch of a tree against the conservatory wall. For over a year he had a companion, but she accidentally got hung in a creeping plant. When she died I found another hen, and she remained over a year, and the pair could often be seen in the garden flying about with other birds, and seemed most friendly with Flycatchers. A month ago I bought another pair of Canaries; but the new cock and the hen I have had over a year disappeared together. The new hen has built a nest and is now sitting."

Skylark as a Regimental Pet.

Sir,—The Sherwood Rangers Yeomanry, who are in camp at Coddington, a pretty village, three miles from Burton-on-Trent, and close on the edge of Stapleford Woods, which abound with bird life of every description, have a remarkable pet in the horse lines, in the shape of a Skylark sitting on a nest. When the ground was being prepared, the Lark's nest was not noticed, and it was only after the horses had been in the lines some time that the discovery was made. The site has since been protected by small flags and a headrope. The mother Lark does not seem to be at all disturbed by the unwonted activities near her nest, nor by the clank of military accoutrements. Occasionally she flies off when anyone goes too near her home, but she has up to now always come back again. The Larks have since hatched out a young one. Beyond this, a Starling has a nest of young in a hole in the trunk of a tree just above the sentry box. Many strange pets have soldiers and sailors been known to have, but for a wild Skylark to have the distinction of being guarded by four companies of Yeomanry while she is nesting must surely be unique.

How to Give Medicine in Drops.

Sent by S. T. Perrin, 26, Gayfield Street, Kettering.

Many fanciers have at one time or another occasion to administer medicine or tonics by drops. Few, however, do this successfully, but if a match bent into an angle be placed in the mouth of the bottle as illustrated, it is a very simple matter.

No. 627.

A Handy Way of Stoving Nesting Material.

Sent by Mrs. Clifford, 3, Sydenham Street, Radford, Nottingham.

I have enclosed an idea, with diagram, for stoving nesting material, which I have used successfully. Get a biscuit tin and place inside a jam jar, shown at A; then pack nesting material around it. Get about six red-hot cinders from the fire, and drop in the jar; at the same time pour on the cinders ¼-oz. of cayenne pepper, and put on the lid. Let it stand for five minutes, then take material out, and expose it to the fresh air before using.

BOY SCOUTS AND BIRDS-NESTING.

A Timely Appeal.

In a recent issue of the "Pall Mall Gazette" that well-known novelist and writer, Mr. Filson Young (himself, we believe, not uninterested in Canary breeding) makes the following powerful appeal against what may be termed reckless birds' nesting—an appeal directed in particular to scoutmasters and boy scouts.

"Some of the best and most unselfish educational work of our time is that done by scoutmasters. Here is a suggestion to them.

"There is a good deal of heartless but unintentional cruelty done at this time of the year by boys birds-nesting. I saw the other day a thicket in which Goldfinches, Chiffchaffs, and other birds had built their nests entirely devastated by enthusiastic young boy-scout naturalists. One does not want to be extreme or sentimental, or to brand as inhuman a kind of sport that brings boys into close touch with the beautiful and innocent life of the outdoor world. But the scoutmasters might do a good deal in teaching their troops how to discover and enjoy, without destroying. It is a secret that we all need to learn, in every department of life.

There is no cradle so lovely as a bird's nest in a may tree; and its bright-eyed tenants, who labour and build and sing, are helping to carry forward the banner of life with the best of us. And lying yesterday on a slope of grass fragrant with thyme and the smell of the sea, I heard such a concert of Larks in the sky and Finches in the trees as might express to our sad hearts the ecstasy of angels. Spring passes, and the singers will fall silent: but for those who will sing again I make this plea."

CUMNOCK & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Members and friends had their first ramble on May 31, in delightful weather, through what is known as Place Affleck Estate, by kind permission of Lord Talbot de Malahide. About thirty met at Auchinleck at 11 a.m. in high spirits at the prospect of an enjoyable day's outing. We took our departure by the Barony Road until we reached a point in it where we divided into two parties, one headed by Mr. A. Wyper and the other by Mr. J. Nutt. Mr. Nutt's party took what is known as the glen, and followed this till it reached Lugar Water. The first nest we came across with young was a Mavis with two young; next was a Chaffinch's with five eggs, several Blackbird nests with eggs, Mavis three young, Yellowhammer 1 egg, three Greenfinch nests with eggs, Hedge Sparrow five young, and Hawfinch with three eggs; the latter bird is very scarce in this district. We saw the Sandpiper, but could not locate its nest, and found empty nests of the Treecreeper and Bullfinch. We joined the other party near Ochiltree, and after a little rest here we started again, keeping to the water's edge, and to the braes. Here we again fell in with more nests, including a Blackie's with four young, on the water edge, just ready for flight: the least disturbance would have sent them all fluttering in the water. Here we came to the rocks on the Lugar, with the caves of Covenanting times hewn out of the solid rocks by hand, with look-out holes. From here we took more to the open till we struck the gardens, and also the vinery, which is a treat to see. Around the garden is a beech hedge, which is alive with birds' nests, both with young and eggs. A great argument ensued over a nest in a furze bush. Some said it was a Yellowhammer's, others a Reed Bunting's, so we sat and watched the mother bird going and sitting down three times. I had a British birds' nests and eggs book with me, and the bird did not resemble either of the two named, but both eggs (5) and nest corresponded with the description in the book of those of the Sedge Warbler. From here we took to the coach drive till we reached Slate Hole Brig, over the Lugar again, and here we met two of our Mauchline members, Messrs. J. McGavin and A. Tannock, who took the party in hand. As it was getting well on to 4 p.m. they steered us in a more northerly direction towards Mauchline, something like three miles distant; we were by this time all feeling that we could do justice to a good spread. Very few nests were found in this part of the journey, but we saw a Lapwing's with one egg, and one young Lark. On our way we passed the Haugh Mills, where they used to make the curling stones. We arrived at Mauchline at our appointed time, 5 p.m., where at Mr. Blair's (baker) there was a good steak pie tea awaiting, and we did ample justice to it. We kept two waiters doing their best till we were all satisfied, and that is no easy matter amongst us miners. After we had regaled ourselves thoroughly, Mr. J. Hainey was called to the chair to conduct a little meeting. He said he thought he would be speaking for all present in expressing his sentiments both with the scenery and sights that he had seen; he had never enjoyed a better day in all his life. Afterwards we hied our way to the Black Bull Hotel to drink toasts to those who had made our first ramble so great a success. To Lord Talbot for granting permission to his estate; to CAGE BIRDS for its reports from time to time; and to the members and friends for turning out so well. To finish a happy and enjoyable day's outing we had to do a quarter-mile sprint to catch our train. The next ramble will be to Lorn Castle Estate, by kind permission of the proprietor, Mr. T. W. McIntyre.—Jos. Nutt, Sec.

MEMBERS OF THE BEDFORD O.S. SEE BRITISH BIRD LIFE.

The members and friends of the Bedford O.S. had their annual ramble on May 29, an ideal summer day, with just sufficient breeze to temper the heat. The place chosen was "Oak Tree Farm," Old Warden, by the kind permission of Mr. Vincent. The first thing to strike one on reaching the place was a magnificent avenue of chestnut and lime trees (the former in full bloom), about half a mile in length; here we found several Goldfinch nests on the outside boughs of the chestnuts; one of these contained five young about 10 days old. The first nests found, however, as we left the farmyard were those of a couple of farm yard fowls, with nine and seven eggs respectively. As we rambled along the avenue we noticed scores, if not hundreds, of rabbits scampering across the green fields—the place actually swarmed with them. I understand one of our members borrowed a double-barrelled from the farmer's son, but Mr. Bunny was too wary for him. Serve him right—we were bird-watching not rabbit-shooting. We soon came across some young Greenfinches, quite strong on the wing, and close by was a Greenfinch sitting, a Thrush's nest with five, and a Blackbird's with four youngsters. A little further on was a nest of Linnets, nearly ready to fly, another Greenfinch's with young, and a Shrike's with six young a few days old. We then had our attention called to a handsome Wren's nest. What wonderful architects are these tiny birds! This was full of youngsters, I suppose about 10 in number. Next came a Pheasant on 13 eggs, and she was very loath to leave the nest. Tea-time having now arrived, we wandered back to the farm house where tea was provided for us by the secretary, Mr. Simons. Tables and forms were set in the paddock adjoining, and we all did full justice to the fare provided. Tea over, we rambled along another avenue of firs and yews, and here we found Chaffinches', Linnets' and Thrushes' nests with eggs and young. A Blue-Tit caused some difficulty in locating her nest of young, as the tree was full of holes. The one chosen, however, was too small to examine the young closely. In this same field one of our number caught Mr. Weasel sucking a hen's egg, and the farmer informed us that his little game must be stopped, as these pests do a vast amount of mischief. In a straw stack in the farmyard we located a nest of Wagtails, and in the cart shed a Swallow's nest with eggs. Hearty thanks are due to Mr. and Mrs. Vincent for their kindness.—J. C. Wilmot.

DARVEL AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Forty-four Species of British Birds Seen During an Ideal Day's Outing.

Members commenced a series of rambles on May 10, and if one were to judge by the enthusiasm displayed at the initial event, success is assured to any that may follow. This district is such as suits the Nature lover, and the route chosen for the first ramble is a favourite one for ornithologists, botanists, and geologists. Seventeen members and friends turned up, and started on a tramp uphill to the moorland district. Mr. N. Hopkins, our esteemed president, acted as leader, and it was not long before it became evident that he was well acquainted with the wild life of this part of the countryside. Just to get an idea how many species we were likely to see, he had drawn up a list of forty-five British birds, resident and migrant, which were generally to be met with, and we made acquaintance with forty-one of the list. We also saw three other species, bringing the total up to forty-four. We were pleased to find thirteen different varieties either with eggs or young. The first interesting sight was a Blackbird's nest at the foot of a small hedge, and although the whole party stood round about viewing it from a distance of about a yard, the old bird never left her blue speckled beauties, which were well on in incubation. A little further on our leader pointed out, flitting about the hedge, a Whitethroat. This tiny little bird was new to most of those present, and all were eager to get a good look at it. The following varieties were also observed: Wheatear, Whinchat, Willow Warbler, Sedge Warbler, Grey and Pied Wagtail, Meadow Pipit, several of the Bunting family, and nearly all of the commoner Finches. Drawing near to Overmoor farm, we were kept on the lookout for our moorland friends, and we were not disappointed, quite a number of different kinds being observed. We were brought to a standstill at this point by our leader, who had seen a strange bird rise a good way on in front of us. On a closer inspection he pronounced it to be a Common Buzzard, which he informed us was pretty rare in this part of the country. We had now reached our "farthest north," and turned to follow the course of the Glen Water. Climbing the rocks on each side of the river now became the exciting part of the day's outing. The first find was a Stock Dove's nest with two young, and a little further down another nest of the same species was located, also with young. Comment was frequent on the beautiful spots to be found on this little moorland stream, it's rocky sides, and the trickling waterfalls which were interspersed here and there, giving good subjects for our photographic enthusiasts. Our next find of importance was a Waterhen's nest in the centre of a small swamp, and surrounded by water lilies. It was a most interesting sight, and soon the whole party were gathered round, viewing from the nearest available distance the six eggs contained therein. In the same swamp a Mallard was also flushed, and round about were gathered three young ones, but unfortunately all were dead. It was considered the recent severe weather had been too much for them. Still following the course of the stream, the following varieties were observed: Common Sandpiper, Redshank, Dipper, House Martin, and a number of others. While we were resting on the bridge at this part, a Corncrake rose, and a good view of it was obtained as it flew over our heads. A pair of Cuckoos were also seen with their little friends, the "Mosscheepers," as they are named in this district, in close attendance. We had now reached one of the highest cliffs on the river, and the whole party sat down while one of our number went up on top to ascertain if he could locate a Kestrel's nest which he had found there in former years, but he was unsuccessful on this occasion. Jackdaws were plentiful here, and a number were seen flying out and in from holes in the rocks, but they are safe from marauders here, as the cliffs are almost unclimbable. From this part onward the water was so much swollen with the recent heavy rains that we had to keep to the top of the rocks on either side, and very few nests were found. In a short time we were back amidst our usual surroundings, and with our appetites made keen by our long tramp through the heath and heather. The party quietly dispersed, each one expressing himself as highly pleased with our first ramble, and looking forward with pleasure to the next, when it is hoped we shall have as good a turnout of members and friends. The place chosen, Lanfine Estate, is a haunt of many of our rarer British birds, and we feel sure something of interest to all bird lovers will be found here.—J. Robertson, jun., Sec.

LITTLEBOROUGH C.B.S.

On May 25th, a moderate number of members and friends, started from the Sun Inn, Featherstall. We wended our way past Shore Gardens, and the Cottage Homes, on to Wardle. Turning up by the Chapel, we got out in the country. Walking up by the stream we came to Alderbank Mill, which is in ruins, and which afforded us some opportunity of finding nests. Further on we came to Rhodes Mill, where we found plenty of wild plants, and more nests, some with eggs, and some with young. Leaving here we got to Stewarts Barn, and afterwards wended our way back through Wardle, having had a capital ramble, under the leadership of Mr. J. Dearden. The day was an ideal one.—H. Woodhead, Hon. Sec.

PRESTON O.S.

Members had their annual ramble on May 25th, when about 10 members left Preston by train. At Longridge we made our way towards Chipping, where we put up for lunch. After luncheon was over we made our way towards Parlic, and passing by the foot of the hill we had a view of the most lovely scenery. Eventually we landed at Seeds Mill, on the Brock, commonly known as "Paradise." Tea was ordered here, and we were ready for it. While the tea was being made ready photographs of the party were taken, and after partaking of a good spread a journey of about 4 miles along the banks of Brock brought us to Brock Station in ample time for our train homewards. The weather was all that could be desired, and the ramble of about 15 miles was enjoyed so much that the members intend having another in about six weeks. We didn't see anything unusual in the bird line; we found several Blackbird and Throstle nests, some with young and some with eggs.—T. Barton, Hon. Sec.

Club Reports.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.CC.

Committee meeting, held Market Tavern, Bradford, May 31, Mr. W. A. Cowgill chair. The following new members were elected: Messrs. T. Smith (Bradford), J. W. Bushby, and Marshall Bros. (Leeds), Ellis Self (Bradford), and W. H. Hamlyn (Harrogate). The following were elected on the committee, and to act as the club's representatives in their respective districts: Mr. W. H. Hamlyn (Harrogate), Mr. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield), Mr. J. W. Middleton (Keighley), Mr. C. E. Morrison (Brighouse), Mr. C. E. Hall (Leeds), and Mr. E. Stobart (Sowerby Bridge). Mr. W. A. Cowgill, Mr. F. Hammond, and the Sec. were appointed to meet the representatives of the Y.C.C. and the C.M.Y.C.C. to try and form some scheme of amalgamation. Patronage was granted to Great Horton, Windhill, Halifax, Manchester and N.C.O.S., Sheffield O.S., Great Horton Good Intent, Shipley, Bradford West and Bradford National, and Secretary was authorised to accept one more show if applied to, so as to bring the number up to ten for the season. Prizes for competition at the 1913-14 shows, which promise to be the most valuable ever offered by the club were not definitely fixed up. They will be arranged at an early date, and particulars will be published in due course.—J. Chambers, Hon. Sec.

Getting a Few Good Norwich Together.

Some personal experiences related by Mr. H. Bell at the last meeting of the members and friends of the Highgate and Hampstead C.B.S.

On May 26th Mr. H. Bell delivered his lecture on the Norwich Plainhead, which was much enjoyed by those present. Several questions were asked and ably answered. A hearty vote of thanks brought a very pleasant evening to a close. I would like to call the members' attention to the poor attendance at this meeting. If these gentlemen come from time to time to deliver lectures, etc., members might at least show their appreciation by turning up in good numbers to hear them. After reading a paper which he had previously read before the members of the London and Counties A.C.B., and which has already been published in Cage Birds, Mr. Bell proceeded as follows: What I have just read I read to the members of the London and Counties A.C.B. some little time back, but as our secretary has pressed me to come here to-night I feel that I must say a few more words if it will be of any use to the Fancy. Don't pay a lot of money for stock birds unless you have plenty to spare and you know what you are doing. It is not the bird you pay the most money for that will do you the most good for stock purposes. It may surprise some of you to know that I never remember paying more than ten or twelve shillings for a bird during all the years I have been in the Fancy, and I have always shown in champion classes. But when I started in the Fancy birds did not fetch the price they do now. When a man had picked out what he wanted for himself you could buy what he had left for about 5s. per pair. I don't want you to think I am running the price of birds down, because a good bird is worth a good price. If I thought I had a good one, and could not get my price for it, it would stay at home for me to look at. I always keep the best for myself every year, and that is how a man can get a few good birds together. I like to get one or two fresh ones each year. I always keep plenty of yellow and variegated yellow birds. People seem always to have plenty of buff birds, but not so many yellows. I like to see a bird which, when you put it in a show cage, looks better the more you move it; not a long, coarse feathered bird, which you are afraid to move in case it creases its flights and shows as much feather as would make a pillow That sort is no use to me for show; but you must not disregard a bird of that kind for stock purposes, for you want such to get size from. If you have a bird which you have expected something good from, and things have not turned out just as well as you expected, don't sell that bird thinking it is no good. Keep it another year, or nine times out of ten the person you sell it to will tell you how well he has done with it. Some people will tell you that there are no good birds to be bought out of selling classes, but I say there is if you will be careful how you go about it. When you see a man who has done some winning out of selling birds in a selling class, try and get to know a little about them. He has very likely got more birds than he wants to keep, and he will say to himself, "I have got what I want from this one; I will put it in the selling class." That is the bird you want to get if it is well in health; many a man's stock has been improved with a bird like that. In fact, I can answer for myself. I bought a bird out of this room a year last pair show, and I paired it with four different hens. As near as I can remember I had about thirty eggs, and only one young from the lot, but the bird I reared was what I expected to see from it. So far this year I have got two young ones from the old bird, and I would not take as much money again for the bird as I paid for it. From this you will see what can be done if a man will take his time and look around. There is no need for me to explain every point of a Norwich Plainhead here, as that is done in Cage Birds every week. This is a very fine paper for a fancier; in fact, I like to get hold of mine every week to see how things are going on in the Fancy. You will see plenty in Cage Birds from time to time about red mite. Some people will say that they have not got any. Very likely not up to now. But now is the time to look for them, as the warm weather is coming. I will tell you my way of dealing with them. If you have them in a nest which is clean, and you don't care to throw the nest away, just put it in a hot oven, nest pan as well, and you will soon see your red mite on the oven shelf. I put Keating's Insect Powder on the eggs while the hen is sitting, and on the young ones if I see any on them. If they are in the cage fronts I get paraffin and black enamel and mix together. The paraffin fetches them out, and the enamel sticks them, so that they don't get away very far. Now a little about soaked rape. When the old ones are feeding their young I am very much in favour of it. I have only taken to it the last few years, and the way I use it is to get a small sieve, put as much in as I think will last me for the next day, and let the tap run on it for about 3 or 4 minutes; then put it thinly in a saucer and let it stand till the next morning. It will not want drying with a cloth before you give it to the birds. Put their egg food in one pot, and a little of your soaked rape in another, then you will see how the old birds crack it and get the seed out, leaving you the husks to throw away. I have an idea it helps to make your young birds a nice colour for if you crack a few of the soaked seeds you will see what a nice yellow the seed is. In concluding, I wish you all a good breeding season, myself as well, and I hope to see a good first feather show, with the best birds winning in good strong classes.—J. Hyde, Hon. Sec.

HALTWHISTLE C.B.S.

Meeting held May 23, Mr. G. H. Bowerbank chair. On account of so many of our members having a poor breeding season, it was resolved to have the Nest Feather Show a fortnight later, viz., July 5, providing it was convenient for our judge, Mr. W. Pennington, Wigton. Sec. produced samples of cups, and a very pretty one was selected for competition at open show for most points, with three nominated young birds, bred by exhibitor; open to members; points to count only in open classes. As our membership is open, we would be pleased to enrol any new members, who for an annual subs. of 2s. 6d. may participate in the competition for members' specials, and the cup; also numerous members' classes. Subs. may be sent to our Sec., Mr. W. Tallantyre, South View, Haltwhistle, to be paid not later than July 5th.—J. Nicholson.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

Meeting held May 24th, at Mr. Hanningban's, Mr. S. Foster chair, with the usual good turn-out of members for the meeting and table show. We made four new members—Messrs. Christon, Bowes, Hannant, and A. Dawson. We are still open for more. We had a grand table show, 31 birds being staged—a good entry for the time of year. A good number of visitors attended during the evening. Mr. W. H. Butler judged, and his awards were well received. LINNET (7): 1, Humphrey; 2, Bentick; 3, Beadle; vhc, Yetts. GOLDF. (6): 1, Humphrey; 2, Gowland; 3, Robinson; vhc, Soulsby. GREENF. (6): 1, Bentick, a real stormer; 2, Lane; 3, Humphrey; vhc, Peart. REDPOLL, ETC. (8): 1, Bates; 2, 3, Humphrey; vhc, Bentick. A.O.V.: 1, Bentick; 2, Humphrey; 3, Robinson; vhc, Yetts.—R. Peart, Sec.

MANSFIELD C.B.S.

Monthly meeting and table show of young birds held at headquarters, Horse and Groom Hotel. Some excellent birds were staged. The Secretary's duties were successfully carried out by the Chairman. We regret to report that Mrs. Gabbitass, wife of our secretary, is dangerously ill owing to a severe operation on Thursday last. Naturally, Mr. Gabbitass was unable to render his valuable assistance as usual. Everyone will wish Mrs. Gabbitass a full and speedy recovery. We also extend our sympathy to our respected member, Mr. W. Vardy, of Huthwaite, who is having a severe attack of his old complaint—rheumatism. We understand he is going to Buxton for treatment, which we hope will be successful and make a new man of him.—L. W. Burton, Chairman.

A large number of birds were staged, and some promising youngsters were seen out. Mr. Cantrell has started on the right road, it being his first year. The Yorks that he put down will be heard of again. Mr. Marshall judged and gave every satisfaction. BULLF. OR GOLDF.: 1, Smedley; 2, Wood; 3, vhc, Hare; hc, Gabbitass. LINNET, ETC.: 1, Sparks. A.O. BRIT.: 1, Gabbitass; 2, Sparks; 3, vhc, Mallantratt. YELL. NOR.: 1, Smedley; 2, Wood; 3, Oscroft; vhc, Bennett. BUFF: 1, 2, 3, Ellis; vhc, hc, Smedley c, Barlow. YELL. CITY OF BRADFORD O.S.

Meeting held at "Flying Dutchman,' Leeds Road, May 31st. Only a moderate number of members were present. Mr. W. Morement chair. The principal item was voting on the classification for the annual open show. This occupied the greater part of the evening owing to late commencement being made.—P. N. Jenkinson, Assist. Sec.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting held May 30. Present: Mr. J. Jones (chair), Mr. G. Jones (vice), Messrs. J. W. Parry, E. Jones, and R. E. Griffith, hon. sec. Badges, etc., were on hand at this meeting. Four new members enrolled. Members are flowing in now as the show gets nearer. Those who intend to join should do so now at once, as entries close June 28. Schedules are now ready, and sent to all paid-up members for 1913. Grand classification, challenge cup for 1913 Canaries, money and other prizes. Judge, Mr. Kershaw, Menai Bridge.—R. E. Griffith, Hon. Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at Mr. Johnston's Rooms, 6, The Broadway, June 2, chair, Mr. W. H. Stoakley, with an attendance of some 40 or more ladies and gentlemen. The chief feature of the evening was a judging competition, Mr. R. A. Newley final judge. Twenty-eight birds were in competition, Yorkshires, Borders, and Norwich— a silver spoon was given for the best bird in each class. Winners were: Mr. F. Whiting (Yorks.), Messrs. Owen and Co. (Borders), and Mr. A. R. Jay (Norwich). The points gained were: Dyke 25, Hobden and Jay 20 each, Mrs. Hobden 14, Green 13, Stevens 11, Rorke and Whiting 10 each, Collins 9, J. Canale and Nash 6 each, Mrs. Owen 5, Miss Wilson 4, Saunders and Owen 3 each. Messrs W. Davis and A. J. Clarke, L. G. Owen, W. Young, G. R. Wells and T. Harris did not score. There were one election and three nominations for membership; and the sec., Mr. H. Smith, gave his report for the month. At the last meeting the question of rejoining the London Federation, as newly constituted, was referred to the committee, who now recommended the members not to take any steps in the matter, and their recommendation was almost unanimously adopted. A petition calling attention to the indefinite wording of some of the clauses of the Plumage Bill now before the House of Commons was brought to the notice of the members, and a good proportion of those present signed. Decided to apply for the patronage of the Southern Border F.C. at the annual show in October, and an appeal for "specials" for the young bird show to be held next month was made and generously responded to. A vote of thanks to Mr Newley for his assistance in the judging competition closed the proceedings.—H. Smith, Hon. Sec.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else

LONGTON C.B.S.

Meeting held Roe Buck Hotel, May 27th, Mr. J. Davies chair. Five new members were elected—Messrs. James, Walker, Lockett, Degg, and Smith. A lengthy discussion on altering the date of our nest feather show ensued, so it came to voting for it, and the proposing party won by 6 votes to 5, and it therefore remains on the same date, June 14th. Mr. J. H. Roe has kindly consented to judge. Members who cannot get their birds at the show-room by 12 o'clock on this date kindly bring them on Friday night, and I myself will look after the same. Proposed by Mr. Clay, seconded by Mr. Degg, and carried unanimously, that where there is no competition, points do not count for the cup, and that three and more exhibits to count.—Philip Ed. Barker, Hon. Sec.

REDCAR C.B.S.

Meeting held at Crown and Anchor, May 10; Mr. Metcalf chair. Owing to the poor breeding results of the majority of our members, it was decided to postpone F.F. show until June 21, when we hope to have a good show, as members on the whole are doing better now. Decided that sec. should get samples of colour food for next meeting, when members could order same in bulk from selected sample. Will members please let me know how much they will require, so this can be done without loss of time. Three new members were elected.—C. L. Mallory, Hon. Sec.

OUR 5s. PRIZE

TWO ADVERTISERS SHARE IT

70 advertisements appeared under the heading, "Exchange Miscellaneous" in last week's issue, and the following advertisers sent in correct estimates, thus sharing the prize: Rev. S. N. Sedgwick, St. Mary's, Bishopstoke, Hants; and B. Leigh, 26, Netherfield Road South, Liverpool.

Among the other estimates received some were very close, there being two of 69, one of 67, and one of 74.

It is of interest to note that the lowest estimate, 45, came from Brechin, and the highest—a remarkably optimistic one—550, from Bacup.

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous Issue, Page, and Column are stated by the advertiser.

Advt. Manager, "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which me must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

Our large Edition of the BEST one volume work on Cage Birds ever put on the market—

CANARIES, HYBRIDS & BRITISH BIRDS

is now almost cleared. This Book is

The Exhibitor's Sure Guide to Success.

Every reader of Cage Birds knows of the grand success that has attended the sale of the Waverley Book on "Canaries, Hybrids and British Birds."

The Waverley Book Company has from time to time published in these pages letters in which buyers of the Waverley book on Canaries, etc.—Canary Breeders and Cage Bird Exhibitors of many years' experience—declare themselves more than satisfied with the Waverley Canary book and highly enthusiastic with the Waverley terms, which are particularly convenient for those with slender incomes and big expenses.

The Waverley Book Company would now point out that the large Edition of "CANARIES, HYBRIDS AND BRITISH BIRDS" is now almost exhausted.

By the time this announcement appears in print, the entire number of copies remaining of this favourite and up-to-date and Standard book on Canaries and British Birds will be less than 560, all told.

When these are disposed of it will be quite impossible for the Breeder and the Fancier to obtain a copy of this grand book on any terms whatsoever.

This work is complete in one Compact Volume.

It has Grand Coloured Plates showing every variety of Canary and Oage Birds.

Its sections are all written by Experts and practically illustrated. This up-to-date Canary Book is also an Encyclopædia

The Waverley book on "Canaries, Hybrids and British Birds" makes clear the history, genesis, care, development, improvement and exploitation of EVERY KNOWN VARIETY OF BRITISH BIRDS. It tabulates specialised information on the breeding of each species of Cage Bird, but more especially on the breeding of Hybrids that has never before been published—information resulting from years of patient experiment by our most famous specialist breeders of Cage Birds.

The section on "The Breeding of Hybrids" is uniquely useful, not merely to the man who may thereby be induced to take up this fascinating and profitable branch of Cage-Bird activities, but to every intelligent Canary Breeder.

The Waverley Book Company received a letter from a Canary man the other day in which he states that though he has been breeding Canaries for thirty years, he has already found some very important instructions that were new and most valuable to him; and he had only just received the book!

The Free Booklet will tell you all about "Canaries, Hybrids, and British Birds." But you must send off for it at once; as no Free Booklets will be given when the supply of the work itself is exhausted.

The FREE Booklet

tells you all about "Canaries, Hybrids and British Birds" and how you may get it for only 1/- down.

But you must seize this opportunity at once for the supply is limited.

WANTED A TRIAL

We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. If you have a cock bird that you are relying upon for another nest, that has gone off song, or a hen that is not in breeding condition, or is neglecting her young, because she is not well, we have just the medicine you require, and we guarantee you perfect satisfaction. Our medicines are used by all leading fanciers, and have been proved to be the most reliable. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for loss of voice, soft moult, egg-binding, going light, feather-plucking, diarrhoea, and for dull and moping birds, in 7d. and 1/1 (treble size) bottles. Special size, 2/-. This medicine is undoubtedly the finest pick-me-up ever offered for birds that are run down or gone off song. Fanciers note: If our medicines fail to do as advertised, we guarantee to return full money. For bronchitis, wheesing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic. Also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. The safest and most reliable medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. As an advertisement we will send a 7d. bottle of each of the above medicines for 1/-, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9. All post paid, per return, at our risk. Two valuable seed recipes: How to Feed Linnets and Rollers for Contest Singing, given free to all purchasers of our medicines.—Frank Ditchfield, Bird Specialist, Oldham. (731)

MISLEADING THE CHILDREN.

Scandalous Misrepresentations in a Book intended for use in Schools

Notes by the Secretary of "Cage Birds League."

I have to thank a League Associate, Mr. W. Hornby, of Beeston, for taking the trouble to bring to my notice a work entitled "Animal Life Lessons," by the head master of St. Paul's School, Bournemouth, Mr. G. Guest, B.A. The book is intended for the use of teachers, and each chapter is a kind of synopsis of the subject upon which it treats, ending with a series of questions suggested as being proper for the teacher to put to the children after the subject has been expounded to them upon the lines laid down. One of the chapters is headed "The Caging of Birds," and my correspondent writes that as the statements it contains are calculated to instil into the minds of children entirely mistaken ideas, he thinks I might do something to controvert its fallacies and mis-statements.

We Will Take it up Elsewhere.

Old readers of CAGE BIRDS will remember that about two years ago there was issued by the "Humanitarian League" a reprint of an old pamphlet by Mr. E. Bell entitled "The Other Side of the Bars." The misrepresentations contained in the pamphlet were fully controverted by me at the time in our columns, and my criticism was reprinted as a leaflet. The chapter of "Animal Life Lessons" which I am now asked to review consists nearly entirely of extracts from the old pamphlet which I have already fully answered, and is illustrated by one or two of the most outrageous of the original pictures, so it would be waste of space here to devote further attention to the tissue of misrepresentations. I have still by me a few copies of my detailed criticism, and I shall be glad to send one, as long as any remain, to any reader who will forward a stamp for postage. Or, our publisher has on hand about a dozen copies of CAGE BIRDS of June 3, 1911, in which the pamphlet in question was reviewed, and these may be had at 2½d. each, post free.

Helping on the Good Work.

It is pleasing to note that many societies are doing their best to let it be known that bird-keepers are at last determined to let their voices be heard. It will be seen from our Club Reports columns this week that in several cases the members present at meetings have jointly signed the petition calling attention to the loose wording of the Plumage Bill. Every society should follow the examples set. It will be too late when the Bill becomes law.

What a Member Thinks of the League.

> Dear Sir,—I enclose P.O. for subscription to the only League which is trying to convince the faddists that we fanciers are not men that are ignorantly cruel to our pets, but men who study Nature among bricks and mortar, and not only try to make our pets happy by studying their needs and requirements, but also succeed in doing so. My British birds evince the greatest pleasure and call to me when I am anywhere near them, and don't forget to show it. Keep pegging away. They may yet learn that man can learn sufficient of the bird world to enable him to add to the length of days to his pets. Best of everything to you and all Leaguers.

THE LEAGUE BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling caps or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP, ETC.

Certificates printed in seven colours, and suitable for framing, are supplied at One Shilling each. Each certificate bears an enlarged facsimile of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE badge and Motto, and is signed by the Secretary.

For list of patrons, etc., see page 479, last week.

HENRY J. FULLJAMES,
154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is either to sign the coupon herewith, and send the same, together with sevenpence, or to get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same

Twitterings.

Mr. J. R. Meikle, secretary of the Scottish National C.B.S., has removed to 22, Brougham St., Edinburgh.

We are asked to state that Mr. T. Tow, late of Stovin Rd., has removed to 86, Holmhurst Rd., Woodseats, Sheffield.

We hear that Mr. P. Waring, Preston, is judging at Wigan, July 5, Chorley July 12 and Ormskirk old show Dec. 6.

Mr. A. Hirst, of Accrington, will judge our open show on Oct. 16, writes Mr. C. J. Robinson, hon. sec. Hanley C.B.S.

We are all pleased with the Cage Birds' watch, which arrived safely this morning, writes Mrs. M. B. Partridge, Worthing.

Entries for the Haylo show, writes Mr. H. Ware, hon. sec., 17, Mount Pleasant, are very short; extended first post June 16. Will exhibitors please help.

We are asked by Mr. R. Tindale, hon. sec. Northern Yorks. C.C., to notify that his address has been changed to 6, Gill Street, Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Mr. G. Wharton, sec., Burnley C.B.C., writes that at their annual show Oct. 17-18, Mr. J. H. Roe will judge Norwich and Mr. H. W. Battye the remainder.

Will you kindly announce, writes Mr. G. Hunt, hon. sec. Doncaster C.B.S., that we are holding our first nest feather show June 14. Birds staged at 4. Mr. Barrett, judge.

Messrs. Opie and Kemp, hon. secs., Redruth F.S., write that at the forthcoming show a class will be added for British softbill, Lark and smaller, guaranteed by Mr. F. Collins, Camborne.

We hear from Mr. T. Davison, hon. sec., that the members of the Sunderland C.B.A. intend having another ramble to Corbridge on June 14 (weather permitting), train leaving Central station 12.43, returning 9.20. Will all those who intend going meet at station at 12.30.

Kindly announce, writes Mr. W. Nichols, hon. sec. Richmond (Surrey) C.B.S., that Mr. J. Robson will judge our F.F. show, July 16. Also that we have been fortunate to secure Mr. George Cave, K.C., M.P., as our first president, also Councillors Sarney and Wheatley as vice-presidents.

Mr. J. Weir, 2, Lockhead Row, Coaltown of Wemyss, Fife, writes that he has taken over the secretaryship of Coaltown of Wemyss and Dis. C.B.S. The open show is fixed for Dec. 6. Judges: Norwich, Mr. Dickson; Borders and Yorks., Mr. Hamilton; British and Foreign, Mr. Bell.

Kindly state in Cage Birds, writes Mr. W. G. Andrews, hon. sec., that West Bromwich C.B.S. has fixed June 17 for nest feather show at headquarters. Birds staged at 8. Fanciers and friends given a hearty welcome. Mr. J. H. Roe, Birmingham, will judge our open show, Nov. 21 and 22.

We have received from the secretary of the Bankfoot and Dis. C.B.S., Mr. F. Gelder, 91, Marsh Street, Little Horton, Bradford, the schedule of shows and the syllabus for the season. Six shows have been arranged, and the syllabus sets forth quite a number of interesting lectures and debates for the ordinary meeting nights.

My address now, writes Mr. J. R. Reid, asst. sec. Cowdenbeath C.B.S., is 232, High Street, Cowdenbeath. Will secretaries and others please note? Our list of judges for the open show is now completed as follows: Scotch Fancy, Jas. Stenhouse, Kelty; Borders, W. Mossie, Annbank; Yorks, J. Bailie, Bradford; Norwich, A. Sloan, Glasgow; Crests and C.B.., Wm. Paul, Uphall; Mules and British, R. Bald, Bathgate. We are looking for a record season, many new members joining here.

Allow me, writes Mr. Thos. McCready, Stranraer, to thank Cage Birds for the excellent and explicit article, "The Master Singer of the Canary Tribe," written by Mr. J. Tomlinson. Being a beginner, I have derived much benefit from the above. I have had different books on the Roller Canary, but Mr. Tomlinson's article has taught me more than any books. I had some difficulty in knowing the different rolls, tours, etc., but thanks to Cage Birds, I am now better able to pick them out. I wish Cage Birds every success, and thank Mr. Tomlinson.

We hear from Mr. J. Stirling, sec., that members of Loanhead C.B.S. will ramble through Arniston Estate on June 28th. Any fancier who wishes to take part and will be at entrance about 3.30, will be sure of a hearty welcome, and arrangements will be made for his or her tea upon writing to Mr. J. Stirling, 20, Camp View, Bonnyrigg.

We are holding our first nest feather show in St. John's Schoolroom, Smallbridge, June 14, writes Mr. J. T. Cheetham, sec., Oak St., Smithy Bridge, near Rochdale. Mr. Schofield, Heywood, will judge. Also we intend having a ramble to Watergrove on Sunday, June 15, weather permitting; meet at Birch Road 8 o'clock; all wishing to come with us are welcome.

At the last general meeting of the Holywood and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. F. Cole, hon. sec. Priory Park, Holywood, it was unanimously decided to hold the annual show Nov. 29 in the Town Hall, Holywood; judge, Mr. W. H. Battye, Bradford. Further particulars will be given in Cage Birds later as to prizes and classes. It is expected to be the best arranged show the society has held.

Will you kindly announce, writes Mr. H. Boothman, Hon. Sec. Manchester and Northern Counties O.S., that we have engaged the following judges for our open show, Oct. 24 and 25:—Lancs. and Lizards, Mr. J. Garner; Yorks, Mr. W. A. Cowgill; Norwich, Mr. W. Vardy; Cinnamons, Mr. J. H. Roe; Borders, Mr. T. Harrison; British, etc., Mr. J. Beswick; and for our F.F. show, July 5, Mr. H. W. Battye

OBITUARY.

Mr. Hugh Mitchell, Newmilns.

I regret to have to report, after a short illness, writes Mr. R. McDowall, Newmilns, the death of an old and enthusiastic Scotch Fancy breeder, Mr. Hugh Mitchell, Riverbank St., Newmilns. The loss of his only son scarcely ten months ago no doubt weighed heavily on him. To possess the ideal was always his aim, and nothing contented him more than to be in his aviary among his favourites in his leisure hours. He was always willing and delighted to advise the young fancier, and to show one round his stock especially delighted him. None could equal Hughie as a worker for our show, and on more than one occasion has he stepped into the breach and saved a certain failure. The Fancy at large is less one true and honest member, and I am sure all fanciers, and especially those who had connections with him will join with us in extending sympathy to his widow and family in their sad bereavement.

[Mr. R. Ralston, of Newmilns, also writes us in sympathetic terms referring to the death of Mr. Mitchell.—Editor.]

A Chance for Someone.

Particulars appear this week, under the heading of "Situations," of an attractive billet at Windermere for someone well-versed in live-stock and its keeping, which should interest some of our readers.

The Life of the Warblers.

The Warblers' life must be almost an ideal one. They live continually in the sun, either here or in another country, among the flowers and flitting butterflies and buzzing insects. Dull days with them do not last long, with the first frost they depart, only to return again with the spring flowers.

Country Rambles.

The following rambles have been arranged: Leith O.S., June 14, to Raith, train leaves Edinburgh 2.15; Bournemouth C.B.A., June 18, to Christchurch British Bird Museum (Mr. Harts'); Sheffield C.B.S., June 14, meet at Intake tram terminus, 2.30; Ashton-u-Lyne O.S., June 15, to Marple, meet Ashton Market, 2.0; Border City (Carlisle) O.S., June 22, to Kingmoor, etc., meet Edestown, 2.0; Smallbridge C.B.S., June 15, to Watergrove, meet Birch Rd., 8.0; Heywood C.B.S., June 17, to Ashworth, meet St. Luke's Church, 7.0.; Loanhead C.B.S., June 28, to Arniston Estate, brake leaves Fountain Loanhead 2.15, Bonnyrigg 2.30.

Spiders that Eat Birds.

The new insect house at the Zoo is likely to be ready for occupation in the course of the next few weeks, Bird-eating spiders are to be the first tenants of the new premises, and they do, as their name implies, actually feed upon the smaller varieties of birds, and notably the humming birds of the tropical forests, although the manner in which they secure their prey is by stealthy approach, and not by means of the silken web. The bird-eating spider is considerably smaller, although not less ferocious in appearance, than the more historically famous tarantula, but visitors to the gardens will be disappointed if they imagine that its progress in the capture of its prey will be practically demonstrated, either with or without its silken entanglements. A diet in the form of the larger and more succulent variety of the common cockroach constitutes its daily food.

GUESSING THE GHOST.

Many Successful Attempts—and a Few Others—at Our Phantom British Bird Puzzle.

The identification of the Phantom British Bird which appeared in our issue of May 31 proved an easy task for many of our readers. The correct species was the Nuthatch. More than two hundred accurate solutions were sent in, and, upon the postcards containing these being well mixed up, the fortunate one to be drawn was that sent by Mr. JOHN WOOD, 103, Stockport Rd., Mossley.

Will Mr. Wood kindly let us know whether he prefers five shillings cash, or books to value, and, if books, which ones he would like us to send.

Among the incorrect solutions, the Blackbird and the Thrush appeared the most frequently, although the Kingfisher ran them somewhat closely. Some solutions were a bit wide of the mark, and among these may be mentioned the Tree Creeper, Heron, Robin, Wheatear, Nightingale, Dipper, Woodpecker, Wryneck, Skylark and the Wren. Wagtails were the idea of some of the solvers. One or two guessed the Ghost to be that of a Siberian Goldfinch; others named the Bee-eater. These solvers seem to have overlooked the fact that we declared the bird to be British.

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1913.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address.

Moderate at Ashton-u-Lyne.

Taken as a whole, writes Mr. J. R. Colville, hon. sec. Ashton-u-Lyne O.S., the results can only be termed moderate. Dead-in-the-shell and clear eggs are troubling a lot of the members, while the year after year cry of non-feeding hens is again heard. Several members are in the unfortunate position of having results to date "nil." Others, who have for some seasons been having very bad luck are creating new records for themselves. The average per member works out at 10, which, considering the near finish of the second round, is not altogether satisfactory. Norwich breeders account for the following: R. Marsland 30, J. Dowling 9, Jno. Mellor 3, W. Foxall 35, J. R. Colville 8, J. Oliver 5, H. Kelsall 7; Yorkshires, J. Whitehead 3, G. Storey 16, W. Etchells 4, J. Barnes 5, J. Smalley 13, Smith 3, L. Terns 18, W. Green 17, Radcliffe Bros. 12, H. Lloyd 3, L. Andrew 16. No results of Mules or Hybrids were given.

We have had sent us for inspection by Mr. Fred Allen (the well-known bird specialist, of Sheffield) a very large batch of testimonials he has recently received from his customers. Mr. Allen writes:—"I have also about the same quantity of picture postcards and winning testimonials, but these I am keeping. You will see that the above are from all over England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. The winning testimonials include Mr. Evans at Tyldesley show, Mr. Rogers at Neath, Mr. Taylor at Hednesford, Mr. Stewart at Greenock, Mr. Jones at Treorchy, Mr. Harrison at Attercliffe, Mr. Craven at Pocklington, Mr. Laing at Leslie, Mr. Wright at Ayr, Mr. Barras at South Shields, Mr. Mitchell at Penrhwceiber, etc., etc. My business has increased extensively. I have purchased another business, and have, too, acquired outright the shop at Porter St., Hull, previously held in partnership by myself and Mr. Dearlove. For being so successful in business I feel I am indebted to Cage Birds. I have had letters and orders from places hitherto unknown to me, also from South Africa, America, New Zealand, etc. Where, I wonder, has not Cage Birds reached?"

The Patronage of Specialist Clubs.

Wild-Bird Life.

Whitethroat Ways.

The glorious summer weather has been splendid for those who have been able to get out in the open. Wild bird life is now almost at its flood, one need not travel far to be among it, for almost every tree and bush contains something of interest. Wild birds are supposed to be shy, and while nesting to attract as little attention as possible, and although this is so as a general rule, still occasionally we have examples that rather startle us with their daring. A Greater Whitethroat has built its nest in a low bush by a much frequented road. The bush is on a bank surrounded by tall grass and weeds, which help to screen the structure. So close is it to the roadway that the dust from passing cyclists and motors at times quite obscures it, yet the bird sits tightly, and will doubtless succeed in bringing off the brood. It is questionable if she will rear them, as the road leads away into the country, and is much frequented by pedestrians every week-end. Last summer one almost succeeded in launching its brood in a similar situation, in fact, within 20. yards of this year's nest. While feeding the young she would sit on the opposite side of the road with a beak full of food, and when the road was clear would dart across to the nest

THE GREATER WHITETHROAT.

We have no more graceful and interesting bird than the Whitethroat, and as a songster it is not to be despised. His notes are sweet, but frequently repeated; he sings with force and passion, with top-knot erected, swelling throat, and quivering wings, and hurries through his song as though too busy to waste time over it. His favourite perch is an exposed one, a spray of bramble jutting out of the hedge, or some tall weed by the roadside, he will occasionally sing on the wing, returning to his perch in the manner of the Pipit. The nest of the Whitethroat is of the most flimsy construction imaginable, made of dead grass, and lined with horsehair. It is deep and beautifully rounded, and may be found in a variety of situations; among brambles, thorns, furze, and tall weeds, and nettles growing by the wayside. His propensity for nesting in the latter situation has possibly acquired for him the name of the "Nettle Creeper."

Small Boys and Birds' Eggs.

In this district, writes Mr. F. H. Chapman, F.R.H.S., of Rye, to the "Daily Mail," ever since the passing of the Wild Birds' Protection Act, boys have been afraid to go out bird-nesting as they used to do, and the result is that we are absolutely "overdone" with birds. All soft fruit has to be netted, and the hard fruit crop (apples, pears, etc.) also suffers severely from the ravages of birds. In the days of my youth this used not to be so, and I can trace it quite distinctly to the passing of the Act I name. My view is that in addition to sending the birds an all-wise Providence also sent the small boy to keep their numbers within reasonable limits. I would not advocate the entire repealing of the Act, but I would have it drastically revised.

Protecting the Cripple.

An incident came under my notice recently which I think may be of interest to lovers of birds, says a writer in the "Express and Star," Wolverhampton. For the third year in succession a one-legged Starling has been a frequent visitor to a bowling green in the town. The other day the crippled bird had secured a piece of bread too large for it to carry beyond a short distance. While enjoying a meal on the green, the Starling was attacked by a Thrush and driven off, but ere long it returned, accompanied by another Starling—apparently its nest mate. The new arrival alighted on the Thrush's back and commenced a vigorous pecking, which soon caused the intruder to beat a hasty retreat, and allowed the lame Starling to continue its meal. Further interruption was forthcoming from several Sparrows, but the second Starling kept guard till the lame bird had reduced in size the bread sufficiently to enable it to fly away with it.

ACCIDENTS IN THE BIRD ROOM.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

How to prevent, or deal with them ; with a few words on Parasites and their extermination.

Red Mite.—All birds, and especially those kept in heated rooms, are liable to be infested with red mites. These little pests remain in cracks and crevices of the cages (or surrounding walls, curtains, etc.), during the day; and during the night, if their numbers be not checked, they worry the birds so that they quickly go off song and frequently commence to lose their feathers, especially those in the region of the neck. They are very small in size, but the experienced bird-keeper quickly marks their presence. The birds show signs of irritation; then a candle carried into the bird-room during the night will reveal the red mite running about the light-coloured plumage of birds, such as clear and lightly-marked Canaries. Or a number of white (or greyish) looking spots make their appearance around the cracks and joints of the cage—the excreta of the pests. An open wire cage may have a handkerchief thrown over the top at night, and close examination in the morning will reveal some of the mites sticking thereto if they are infesting the cage.

Clearing out the Cages.

The best treatment for the cages is a stoving for ten or fifteen minutes in a moderately hot oven (a baker's oven answers admirably). Afterwards give them a good coat of sanitary washable distemper (obtainable in suitable shades from most oil and colour-men). Failing the stoving, paint thoroughly all over inside and outside with a solution of camphor in turpentine (or half turps, half paraffin), adding one ounce of the camphor to one pint of the spirit. Repeat the operation the following day, and not a solitary mite will survive the ordeal. Work the solution well into all cracks and joints. In an hour after using the fluid the cages will be dry enough to treat with the distemper as mentioned above. It may be necessary to re-varnish the outsides of the cages after these operations. See that no mites are left behind in cracks and crevices near where the cage may have hung or stood. Whilst the cage is undergoing this overhauling keep the bird in a temporary one, and give it daily a bath with a few drops of essence of quassia added to it.

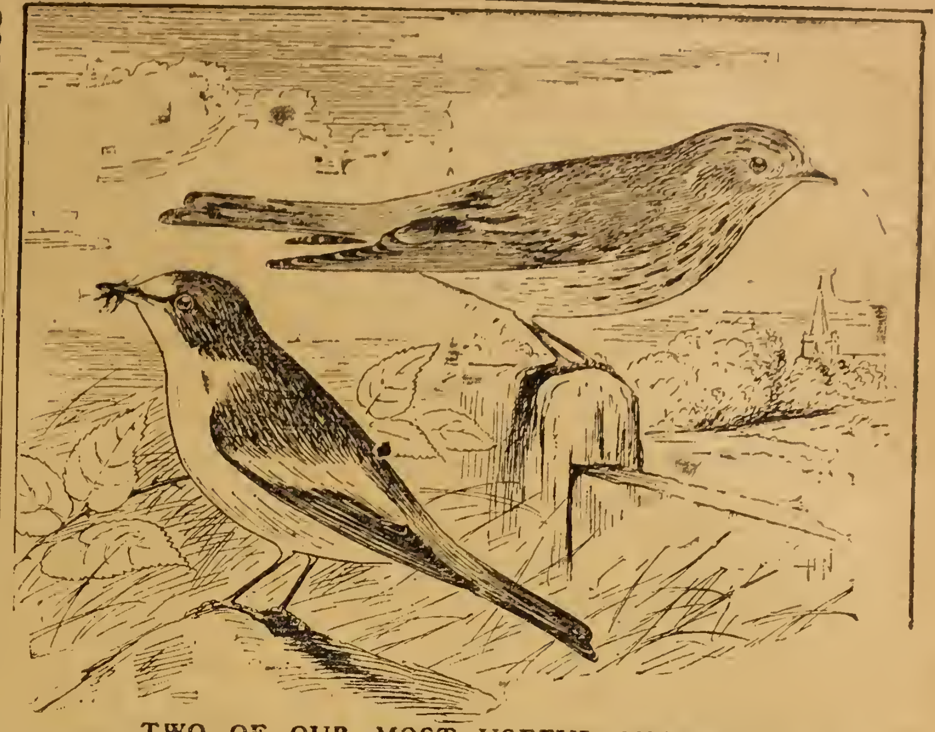
Troubles of the Feet.

Sore Feet.—This complaint may arise indirectly through a low condition of health, and sometimes from neglect of cages. First see that the cages are kept scrupulously clean and free from droppings, and if latter have departed in any way from the normal give a mild aperient, and adopt the necessary measures for restoring the digestive system to its normal condition. To treat the feet, bathe them for a few minutes each day for several days in a luke-warm solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of the acid in a saucerful of warm water. After bathing dry gently, and anoint them with a little boracic or zinc ointment. If this does not remove the trouble in a very few days, try bathing in a solution of extract of wych hazel—of similar strength to above—and anointing with Lanocyllin. Should this fail to have the desired effect, the fault lies either in the causes not being removed, or in the general health of the bird.

Worms.—Intestinal parasites occur in birds now and again, more frequently in mixed feeders and those consuming scraps of flesh or earthworms than in purely seed-eating birds. The ova may also be carried and spread by impure water. Before treating birds for worms it is best to have ocular proof of their presence by watching for them in the droppings. When they are thus proved to be present, keep cage, perches, and water vessels as clean as possible, and boil all water used for a time. Remove food at night, and, after fasting bird for two or three hours next morning, give a small quantity of soft food—bread and milk, crushed sponge-cake, or any other that is most acceptable to it—slightly dusted with freshly ground areca nut—a small teaspoonful of soft food with a slight dusting of the powder for a bird the size of a Canary, and more or less in proportion to size of patient. When this is eaten give the ordinary food. An hour later add 10 drops of syrup of buckthorn to each tablespoonful of water in drinker, and allow this to remain on two hours. On the two following days add six drops of tincture of gentain and three of tincture of calumba to each two tablespoonfuls of water. Repeat this treatment at least three times, with an interval of a week between each time. When this remedy fails the best course is to ask a chemist to make up a few doses of santonine or thymol of proper strength for the size of patient to be treated, and to administer in the manner described above.

Dealing with Wounds.

Wounds.—Simple wounds or abrasions may be painted with Friar's Balsam to arrest bleeding, holding bird for a minute or two for the "sting" of the application to pass off in order to prevent it pecking the place and starting it to bleed afresh. More severe wounds should be bathed in a solution of wych hazel, or a 1 in 100 solution of Jeyes' Fluid, which will be obtained by mixing a tablespoonful of fluid in 2½ pints of water, or in this proportion for larger or smaller quantities. After bathing dry gently, and anoint daily with Lanocyllin, boracic, or zinc ointment, as may be most convenient, until healing has made fair headway.



TWO OF OUR MOST USEFUL MIGRANTS.

The Pied Flycatcher (on the left) is a dainty black and white bird, and much less commonly found than its relative, the Spotted Flycatcher, which is a plainly clad greyish-coloured bird. As their name indicates, they hawk for flies and similar winged insects, practically all day long.

Fourteen Years in Love with the Norwich Plainhead.

This contribution, by J. Bagshaw, Penkhull, was awarded by the members, the first prize in the essay competition recently promoted by the Stoke-on-Trent C.B.S.

It is now about fourteen years since I first commenced bird-keeping, a neighbour presenting me with a pair of Canaries and a cage, assuring me that one was a cock and would make a grand songster. These I kept all one season waiting for the glorious song which never came; they were two hens. I eventually got rid of these, and went in for Britishers, but only kept them as songsters. About this time a local fancier, a breeder of the Norwich Plainhead, invited me to visit his room, and I at once fell in love with his birds. It is not my intention here to give my experiences, but to write a paper on the chubby ones.

A Bird of Shape and Color.

The Norwich is a bird of colour, and should be short and thick-set, with large round head, free from browing, full neck, deep wide chest, well filled in back, short flights and tail, flights well folded and just meeting at the tips, and should take the perch at an angle of about forty-five degrees. In my opinion you cannot get them too compact. In the commencement we require for our stock birds which should be as good as our pocket will allow. It is better to have one good pair than three or four bad ones, my motto is "quality not quantity." It takes as much to keep a bad pair as a good one. To the novice I would say, procure your birds from a man who breeds his own winners; not from one who buys winners to sell his own stock.

To produce colour we shall have to resort to the variegated bird, a variegated yellow for preference, and this I prefer on the hen's side. The greatest drawback to these marked birds is that they are of little use on the show-bench except where classes are put on for them. Therefore, I prefer putting a clear cock to a variegated hen, as in this way you breed a larger percentage of clear and ticked birds than by having the variegation on the cock's side. This has always been my experience.

Having the necessary stock birds, I generally pair up about the last week in March, or the first week in April, being guided by the weather and the condition of my birds. The cocks should be singing lustily and calling to the hens which will be flying from perch to perch, flapping their wings, a sure sign that they are in breeding condition. I prefer one cock to one hen, as besides having a larger percentage of full eggs, I think the youngsters are then much larger and stronger. When the hen commences to lay I take away the eggs and substitute a dummy one, replacing her own on the evening of the third day. By this method they all hatch out about the same time and stand an equal chance of being fed. I also remove the cock while the hen is sitting as they often molest her when she has sat a few days, particularly if they are in high breeding condition.

When the Eggs are Hatching.

When the hen is sitting I feed on Spanish canary seed only till the evening of the thirteenth day, when I give about half a teaspoonful of egg food. I supply rape seed in the seed box, and green food after the third day. For green food, I use dandelion for the first round, and lettuce for the second. I never care for dandelion after the first round, as I think it forces the hens too much, thereby causing them to go to nest again before the young can feed themselves.

If the hen seems to slacken in her duties when the young are about a week old, I put on a salt water bath, and also add about as much sulphate of soda as will lie on a threepenny-piece to the drinking water for one half of each day only. I have had hens that had practically given up feeding before I tried this, yet after an hour or so of this treatment they have fed as well as ever. It is wonderful how it cools their system and freshens them up again. Of course there are some cases which nothing will cure, the hen evidently meaning to leave the young altogether. These we shall have to distribute amongst other hens with broods about the same age if we have any, or else hand-feed them, and this hand-feeding I have generally found a wretched failure. They will live for some weeks till you think you are landed, then they will mostly die in spite of all your care. In any case they are not so strong and robust as those reared by their parents.

Bringing Up the Young.

When the young are about twelve days old you should give a little crushed hemp, it helps the hen to satisfy them better, especially if she has a large brood. About this time you may change the nest for a clean one, and also a larger one if necessary. My clean nests I make in the following manner :—Get some nesting material and put in a clean nest-pan, then get a round flint, heat this in the oven; you will find by putting it in your nest-pan for a few minutes you will get a beautiful nest, one far superior to what the hen can make. When about three weeks old the young will be ready to leave the nest, but do not disturb them if their mother does not pluck them, they will get on their own much quicker by being left with their parents.

When I take the young away I put them in a single breeder for a few days till they get accustomed to take the perches properly. If put in a large flight you will often have some with slipped claws, this makes them very unsightly and cripples them if not attended to. When this happens, get a piece of rubber tube, a piece of bicycle pump or a child's feeding-bottle is best, cut this about ¼in. long, catch your bird and with left hand hold the slipped claw back to the leg, the three front claws should be held together, then pass your tube over the three front claws on to the back one, and round the back of the foot, leave this on for at least a month before you take it off again, the result will be a complete cure. One of the best hens I bred last year has been treated in this way, and to-day I don't know on which foot she was a cripple.

After the young have left their parents I feed on crushed hemp (mind this does not become stale), egg-food, and milk sop. I never give any water till they are about six weks eold, and then add some with Parrish's chemical food, putting half a teaspoonful to a drinker; this strengthens them, and also stops them from drinking too much. From now onwards I keep reducing the egg-food, but I do not take them off it altogether. I never give green food after they leave their parents. If any of the youngsters go thick (you can easily tell by their plumage), I at once cage them by themselves and put them on milk sop for a few days, this generally brings them round again.

Negotiating the Moult.

We shall now begin to think about the moult, for the first round youngsters may start any time after they are about ten weeks old, therefore they must be put on colour food, commencing with a very small portion at first, just enough to give the egg-food a crimson tint, till by the time they are casting feathers we have got them on full strength, which is about one in six, that is one spoonful of colour to six of egg-food. This, I think, is strong enough for all practical purposes. My colour food I mix as follows: —To one pound of cold pepper I add two ounces of hot; I never put oil in my colour-food, as I think there is sufficient in it already. I also add about three ounces of castor sugar to the pound, then mix all well together and store in a stone jar. Colour-food in itself is loosening to the bowels, and oil added makes it much more so. Some fanciers add a lot of oil; this, I think, is a great mistake, we want to keep the colour-food in our birds as long as possible, not push it through them by adding oil.

I am a great believer of the bath at all times, especially during the moult, as it helps to cast off the old feathers. I like to moult my birds in the flights, they will come through quicker, and often a much better colour. They are like children at a tea party, and vie with each other, which can eat the most. I like mine to eat about one teaspoonful per bird each day, this must be given regularly, not miss two days and then give one. If you do the latter they will come through patchy in colour.

"CAGE BIRDS" COLOSSAL PRIZE SCHEME.

THOUSANDS OF CHANCES: NOVICES SPECIALLY STUDIED.

Societies and Fanciers Unanimous as to its Merits: First Shows to Join Bradford National and Bournemouth.

THE reception accorded our Championship Competition since we penned last week's notes has been splendidly encouraging. The value and importance of the scheme are evidently already widely recognised. Although our pronouncements to date concerning the matter have been necessarily only in the nature of preliminary ones, and although no matter relating to the scheme, or direct invitations to join, have yet been sent out, two powerful organisations have already signified their intention of adopting Cage Birds Championship Competition at their annual exhibitions. Further, we have received many enquiries from the officials of other societies for complete details of the scheme, whilst the number of applications to hand from fanciers for coupons exceeds our most sanguine expectations.

In returning our thanks to the Fancy for its ready recognition of our desire to advance the hobby and add to the interest and popularity of the shows, we beg to say that we are completing the details of our scheme with every possible speed, and that we hope to have pamphlets explaining it fully in the hands of all our good friends (society officials and exhibitors alike) this week-end, or, at latest, during next week.

Prominent Yorkshireman's Flattering Opinion.

The first two societies to enrol themselves in our Grand Championship Scheme are the Bradford National Show C.B.S., whose fixture is due on Dec. 5, 6 and 8, and the Bournemouth and District C.B.A., whose show is fixed for Nov. 11 and 12. The Bradford National is the third Annual Charity Exhibition held by the Yorkshire enthusiasts, and in writing to us on the subject, Mr. H. Hill, the well-known show secretary, compliments us very cordially upon what he terms "the magnificent scheme." In his opinion it will stimulate interest in every section of the Fancy. He writes:—"I feel convinced that each and all will thoroughly appreciate your marvellous generosity, and the spirit which has prompted the birth of such a universal scheme."

Societies which have signified their interest in our great scheme include the Abèrtillery C.B.S., Cardiff C.B.S., Cheltenham C.B.S., City of Glasgow O.A., Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., Leicester Hand-in-Hand C.B.S., Manchester and N.C.O.S., Scottish National C.B.S., Sheffield C.B.S. and Wimbledon and Dist. C.B.S. As typical of the opinions expressed, we may perhaps be permitted to quote the letter sent us by Mr. G. Broome, secretary of the Abertillery C.B.S. He writes:—"Please forward me on conditions of your Championship Scheme, as I am wishful for our Society to become approved. It is a very generous offer of yours, Mr. Editor, and will put a keenness into the competition at the shows, as well as being a benefit to societies that guarantee in your wonderful paper, Cage Birds. I wish the Scheme success."

We shall, needless to say, welcome applications from all societies desiring to participate in our Championship Competition under the announced conditions; we hope they will write us at once.

Some Things a Society Gain.

Here are a few of the "good things" that come the way of all societies enrolling their annual fixture as one of our Coupon Shows:—

A Competition in which great interest is being evinced all over the United Kingdom, and which will add greatly to the attractiveness of your Annual Show, and appreciably swell the entries thereat, appealing as it does to novices and champions alike.

A sum in cash for the benefit of the funds of your society, as coupons are supplied to secretaries at the rate of 5s. for twelve, to be resold at 6d. each, the profit going to the society.

The addition of two 10s. cash prizes to your special prize list, and twelve diplomas of honour, covering practically every section in your show, for participants in our competition.

Valuable free publicity for your show in the columns of Cage Birds, the attention of exhibitors being specially and prominently drawn to all Coupon Shows throughout the season.

The Pleasant Path of the Exhibitor.

The path of the exhibitor is an equally pleasant one. He will have prizes value at least £200—probably considerably more—to compete for, and all restricted to coupon birds. He can avail himself of numerous chances of competing for them. He has a good and equitable chance, whether he be a champion or a novice, with his brother fanciers. He may, in each of twelve sections, win a considerable sum of money with a very inconsiderable outlay in coupons. Here are just three items that should serve to convince every exhibitor that he simply cannot afford to miss competing in our Championship Competition.

You gain entrance into a competition which adds to the pleasure and interest of your hobby.

Your birds become potential winners of Cage Birds' Diplomas and Cash Prizes of 10s. offered at each Coupon Show, also at the Palace Show of £3, £2, £1, and 10s. cash prizes, in each of the twelve sections, £10 10s. cash for best champion Coupon bird, £10 10s. cash for best novice Coupon bird, and £10 10s. Challenge Shield for best Coupon bird in the Show.

Cage Birds Diplomas of Honour will set the seal of excellence upon your stock—they will ensure holders of them a ready market for their surplus birds.

All the Exhibitor Has to Do.

The procedure is simplicity itself. All that the fancier desirous of competing for our splendid prizes has to do is:—

(1) Buy as many coupons (sixpence each) as he chooses before August 31st next.

(2) When the show comes round at which he wishes to compete for the diploma (or diplomas) and 10s. cash prizes, opposite the number (or numbers) of the bird (or birds) he selects for this purpose, stick one of Cage Birds coupons and write "C.B."—or "C.B. Novice" if he competes in the Novice section.

(3) See that he keeps by him sufficient Coupons to cover the entries he will make in the Grand Finale (open to diploma winners) at the Crystal Palace Show.

A Brief Outline of the Scheme.

The main idea of Cage Birds Championship Competition is to discover which are the Twelve Best Birds of the Season. The Competition is open to every Show appearing in Cage Birds List of Guaranteed Fixtures (this covers every quarter of the United Kingdom) provided application is made to us by the management of that Show before the end of July, 1913.

Two Prizes of 10s. Each, one for novices and one for champions, will be offered (under certain stipulations), at each accepted Coupon Show.

Twelve Diplomas of Honour will be offered, in addition, at each Coupon Show, such diploma to be given for the best bird in each of the following sections:—

(2) NORWICH.
(3) CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS
(4) BORDER FANCIES
(6) GREENS.
(7) LANCASHIRES AND LIZARDS.
(9) MULES AND HYBRIDS.
(10) BRITISH, HARD-BILLED.
(11) BRITISH, SOFT-BILLED.
(12) FOREIGN

The winner of any one of the foregoing diplomas will have the right to compete with not more than four birds, on payment to the Crystal Palace Authorities of the usual entry fee, in our final championship competition at the Crystal Palace show of 1914.

FIRST PRIZE, £3;
SECOND PRIZE, £2;
THIRD PRIZE, £1;
FOURTH PRIZE, 10s.

The following cash prizes will also be offered for competition at the Crystal Palace Show:—£10 10s. for the best Coupon bird exhibited in the Champion classes in the above twelve sections; £10 10s. for the best Coupon bird shown by a novice other than the winner in the Champion Section. We shall also offer A Ten Guinea Challenge Shield, to be won three times in succession, for the best bird at the Crystal Palace Show entered in our Competition.

Some Important Points to Note.

2.—No coupons sold after the last day of August, 1913, except to previous purchasers, who have the right of duplicating their order up to the end of October.

3.—No bird with trimmed, painted or dyed plumage, will be eligible to compete, and all entries must be the bona-fide property of the exhibitor.

4.—No bird entered for this competition may wear a ring, or have any distinguishing mark apart from its natural characteristics.

5.—The Judge will be instructed to withhold a diploma should the merit of the competing birds in any particular section not justify its award.

6.—We reserve the right, in the event of there being less than 10 separate competitors altogether in our competition at any one diploma show to withhold the cash prizes thereat, the diplomas remaining on offer for as many birds as are eligible for them.

7.—No exhibitor may win more than one diploma in the season in any one section, and no exhibitor will be allowed to win more than two of the 10s. prizes offered at the Diploma Shows, but an exhibitor may (if able) win one diploma in each of the 12 sections.

8.—An exhibitor who has won a diploma need not necessarily enter the same bird for the final competition. By winning the diploma he has the right to nominate and enter not more than four birds in any one of the 12 sections for the final competition, and for each entry made for the final competition at the Crystal Palace a coupon will be necessary.

9.—No exhibitor in the final will be allowed to win more than two prizes with his four entries.

10.—In all cases of dispute arising out of this competition the Editor's decision will be absolutely final and legally binding in every respect, and only upon this understanding will entries be accepted.

11.—The Editor reserves the right to alter the conditions from time to time in whatever manner he thinks best in the interests of competitors themselves, and also of the competition.

All letters concerning the above scheme should be addressed to The Editor, Cage Birds, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Your Sins Will Find You Out.

I came to breed yellows from two buffs (as referred to a week or so ago) in this wise. I had always been in the habit of pairing two yellows together at intervals, for the purpose of keeping the colour of my muling stock as rich as possible. A number of years ago I had two nice clear yellows up, big birds, Lancashire-Norwich cross, and fairly closely related. While they were together I conceived an idea. I may as well confess at once that two of my not inconsiderable number of besetting sins are an itch for experimentation and an inability to avoid "argifying" about anything and everything concerning birds. My experiments sometimes leave me a little wiser, generally a little sadder, and invariably bring about my head the scorn of my better-half, who, when my interference (she prefers this word to "experiment") results in some particularly aggravating disaster in the bird-room, reminds me that I am "a pretty sort of expert to make a mess of things like this." The idea that struck me on this occasion was that it would be interesting to mate two yellows out of the progeny of this pair, then two yellows out of their progeny in turn, and so on, and see what happened in the course of the years. I did not waste time trying to resist the temptation.

How to Ruin a Stock of Canaries.

Of course, this was in-breeding with a vengeance; in fact, to a quite indefensible and absurd degree for any purpose other than experimentation. I was pairing brother to sister year after year that had themselves been produced by the mating of bother to sister; and, in addition, utilising yellows only. Now I have no desire to dwell upon this double-yellowing business ad nauseum, so will just briefly relate the main happenings. Right up to the end I had no difficulty whatever in getting fertile eggs, but after the third season I fancied I noticed deterioration setting in amongst the youngsters bred—there seemed some loss of vigour and they were certainly thinner and smaller. That this was so in actual fact the two succeeding years proved, for the old birds seemed diffident about going to nest and did not start until late in the season, while I had considerable difficulty in getting them to feed young (I did not wish to resort to foster parents.) The latter, too, were very mean-looking by comparison with the brother and sister first paired together—both bonny birds—being thin, "anæmic," and scantily feathered. In the last season but one I had only four young, one buff hen, two yellow hens and one cock (I bred, by the way, a much larger proportion of hens than cocks for several years.) And two of these (the buff and a yellow) failed to survive the moult.

A Freak From Freak Breeding.

Luckily I had left a hen and the cock. From these I had but one clutch of four eggs. Two of the babies failed to hatch. Another died soon after emerging into the world. The one left was reared only with great trouble, by resorting to hand-feeding, and proved to be a yellow hen; her mother died soon after she was fledged. This youngster was one of the most remarkable birds I have ever seen. She was not particularly small (except by comparison with the original stock) but very slim. Her legs and toes were the thinnest I have ever seen on any Canary—certainly not thicker than an average pin—and claws proportionately tiny, while she had not a vestige of underflue (or small downy feathers) on any part of her body. Her outer plumage (if I may so term it) was good in colour but painfully scanty, and when lifted revealed bare flesh underneath. The beak, too, was weak and almost transparent. I took this bird along to meetings of both the City and Suburban and Highgate and Hampstead C.B. Societies and exhibited it to the members. It certainly seemed to be the kind of freak one would expect to result from freak breeding of this kind.

A Result of Using Concentrated Yellow Blood.

It was during the fourth season that I mated two buffs from these double-yellow pairs, the idea being to see whether this method counteracted the loss of size and stamina. I found that they threw as many yellows amongst their progeny as any orthodox yellow to buff mating ever produces. Of course, while this conclusively proves that two buffs can throw yellows, the conditions were admittedly abnormal, and I have no doubt that two buffs bred in the ordinary way would be unlikely to do so. It was from one of these buff hens, too, that I bred yellow Mules, and really magnificent coloured jonques they were; they fed as "hot as fire" (as show reports term it) at the moult. To make quite sure, I tried them with Linnet, Siskin and Goldfinch, and secured jonque Mules of each variety. Further, some of the buffs (one Linnet Mule in particular) were so level and rich in colour and fine in quality of feather that they puzzled those expert in such things; unless seen side by side with jonques out of the same nest it was not easy to make up one's mind as to whether they were mealies or yellows. This, no doubt, was accounted for by the presence of so much concentrated yellow blood, so to speak, in the veins of the buff hens that bred them.

Questions and Answers.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries. Claude St. John. Mules and Hybrids—H. Norman. British Birds H. J. Fulljames. Foreign Birds Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S.. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3) Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6) If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who receive letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

DOUBTFUL SITTING (J.M.).—You have not the slightest reason to doubt the hatching of the eggs in question, provided they are fertile. I have not the least doubt myself of them hatching successfully subject to that condition, notwithstanding that the hen did a lot of "gadding about" for two days after the eggs were returned to the nest for setting. Glad you find CAGE BIRDS and "Canary Breeding for Beginners" so helpful.

SITS IN EMPTY NEST (A. S. Cheesman).—Your feeding is not by any means the best that could be, but still at this season no special feeding at all should be required to bring any healthy normal hen into good breeding condition. Probably the hen is of an abnormal type, in which the ovaries remain dormant for a time, and you might have seen several replies about the treatment of this type of hen in the last few issues, and also, I fancy, in the present issue. If she still sits without laying, try to procure a clutch of common eggs of some British Finch, if no Canary eggs can be obtained, and place under her to hatch and rear if she will do so. It is quite possible she may successfully bring up a brood thus provided, and afterwards go to nest on her own account, and breed in a normal manner. If this method does not succeed, separate the birds for a fortnight, remove nest box and material, and treat hen the same as advised to "Jack, Watford," last week. Then try her again, and if she again fails, separate her and turn her into a flight or aviary until next spring.

HEN PLUCKING YOUNG (T. C.).—You have done quite right to cage young by themselves, as soon as they could feed themselves on egg-food, but seeing that the plucking did not commence until the young were sixteen days old, you might have prevented it going so far by removing young and nest altogether, and placing them in a nursery cage, and hanging on front of the breeding cage in such a position that the hen could comfortably feed the young through the wires, but not reach far enough to pluck them. The cock might then have been returned to the hen, a fresh nest-pan and material provided, and arrangements would doubtless have proceeded for a second brood, whilst both parents would have taken a share in feeding the young during the final stage. The tails will certainly grow again after a brief interval. Keep watch over the youngsters, and if they show signs of starting to pluck each other when the new tails first appear, you will have to cage them separately—or at least the culprit—until the plumage is fully grown.

MOST HARMFUL STAGE (Canuck).—Frankly I do not know at what stage of incubation thunder is most harmful to eggs, or rather, as it should be, to the embryos contained therein. The effect of thunder in this direction is, in my opinion, practically nil; therefore, I do not suppose one stage is really any more susceptible to a negative effect than any other.

NORWICH COCK MOPY (G. T.).—It is quite possible the bird may be about dropping into an early moult, in which case you will doubtless have found a stray feather or two cast by this time. Treat as follows for two or three weeks. Keep in a bright, airy place, but out of direct draughts. Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give a morsel of bread and milk, with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw. On the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of scalded rape, and twice a week add a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Give a spray of green food daily. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepennypiece for three consecutive days. After this give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tinct. of calumba and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week, and on the alternate days 20 drops of Chemical Food, continuing the latter for a fortnight.

ARE THEY LIZARDS? (Brabote).—Sorry, but I really cannot decide from the particulars before me whether the birds are Lizards, or, as you say, some foreign Finches or Linnet Mules. There is nothing whatever in what you say to suggest they are not pure Lizards, except the "call" or chirp which, by your rendering, is certainly not Canary-like. The song and call-notes of Lizards are, of course, precisely the same as any other fancy Canary which is not a trained singer—say, for example, Borders, Norwich, or common untrained Germans. The colour and markings of the cock are not really inapplicable to a pure Lizard, in which the spangling is imperfect and runs more or less into lines, and the ground colour perhaps "mossy." Such a bird would need to be mated with a hen exceptionally clear in ground colour, and distinct in spangling, and as you say the hens are speckled like a "Lizard Canary illustration," it seems reasonable to suppose you have a trio of properly matched pure Lizards. If you still have doubts, could not you get some fancier near you to look at the birds and decide the matter. You might treat as advised to "Jack, Watford," last week, to bring them forward more quickly.

YOUNG DYING (Alf. Shaw).—The cause of the young dying undoubtedly lies in your method of feeding, but I cannot tell definitely just where the error lies from the particulars you give. I rather suspect it is in the preparation of your egg food. Try the following method. When young are separated from parents, give an unlimited supply of good sound canary in the hopper, and place on top of it a teaspoonful of summer rape daily. Give also, for every two birds, a teaspoonful of egg food each morning, made of two parts stale bread crumbs to one part egg, and sprinkle with maw seed. Use only fresh eggs, and do not add any moisture other than what is contained naturally in the egg. Towards evening throw out any remains of the egg food, and substitute teaspoonful of freshly cracked hemp for every two birds. As occasional changes give a little bread and milk in the morning instead of egg food, and substitute a similar quantity of soaked rape for the hemp in the afternoon. Give a small spray of seedy chickweed, shepherd's purse, plantain stalks, or seed heads of dandelion every now and again to help keep the birds occupied. See that all seeds and foods, especially hemp, are sound and good. Give fresh pure water daily, keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand, and offer a bath daily whilst weather is warm. Continue this treatment until young are six weeks old, then withhold the egg-food for a day now and again, the hemp ditto, and gradually bring birds on to same dietary as the adults.

WAS IT RESENTMENT? (Crest).—(1) If you only went close to cage and peeped into nest to see if young were all in order, I do not think it at all likely that the hen was so vile as to crush three of her babies to death as a form of protest against your inquisitiveness. If the one chick had a good start over the others, this might explain the catastrophe, as it is not rare for a poor feeder, or a highly strung nervous hen to favour any chick palpably more vigorous than the others, and allow the others to perish. On the other hand, either the hen or the chicks may have been temporarily deranged, and only "picked-up" in time to save the one chick, the other three being too weak to get over the set-back." Of course, you cannot peep into nest without going near cage. If the hen is obviously nervous, when next brood arrives try to see if young are all right when she is feeding them, or if you try to look in nest whilst hen is feeding, go about it quietly and methodically, without excitement, and imitate hen's call with your lips, which will, in most cases, cause young to raise their heads and "gape," when you may easily and quickly count them and note their condition. Leave a choice morsel of fresh green food behind you on such occasions. (2) No, most decidedly, I do not favour giving mixed seed and hemp indiscriminately to sitting hens. As your experiment has shown, it is very apt to work differently in practice to what theory suggests. If a mixture of canary and rape forms the staple diet at ordinary times, it is, of course, proper to continue this mixture during incubation.

NO EGGS APPEARING (R. Miller).—Most certainly I would not deny the possibility of incompatibility occurring among birdy couples, but even so, it is not anything of this kind that you must look for to explain your birds' behaviour. It is solely due to a dormant condition of the ovary of the hen, and she would act the same if mated with any other cock. The position of your cage does not tend to improve matters, and with such a hen as the one in question, would undoubtedly retard rather than help to bring her into proper condition for breeding. Try the following treatment: Take away the cock, and the nest pan, and all nesting material for a week. Keep cock where she can hear him sing, or both see and hear him every second day for a week. Add to the drinking water 20 drops of gin, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece. Give a small teaspoonful of crushed spongecake, in which you have mixed three finely minced fat mealworms, every second day. Give a small "stool" of dandelion split across the crown, so that she may nibble at root as well as leaves, and renew this as often as it loses its freshness. Also give a liberal supply of dandelion seed heads. At end of week return the cock; continue same feeding; but add to the water six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day for a week. Give just a tuft of nesting material and withhold nest pan until hen betrays a desire to build by carrying the material about. If she again begins to sit in nest pan when provided, try giving her a clutch of common eggs to hatch and rear if she will do so.

MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

GREENFINCH-YELLOWHAMMER AND OTHER (L.S.D.).—I must say I admire your pluck in trying a dip into the unknown. One never knows what rarities may be produced, and you may be the fortunate one to succeed where others have failed. Your feeding appears to be correct, excepting that you make no mention of wild food. Whatever you do, don't omit this: give rather too much than too little. The birds will possibly find something among a handful of it that escapes your notice. If you can manage to get them to eat some good insectivorous food, it will be a step in the right direction. The following makes a good food: Biscuit, dried flies, and ant eggs, 1 part each, meat meal and grocer's currants ½ part each. Hybrids have been reared upon this mixture.

HYBRID BREEDING IN SMALL AVIARY (J.W.W.).—If you do as you propose that is, partition off two feet of your bird house, you will only have room for one pair for Hybrid breeding with British birds, or a cock British bird and two hen Canaries. If you can only spare the two feet your better plan would be to divide it into two, with a false bottom about three feet from the ground. That would give you two flights, each the width of the building, which you say is four feet, making each flight 4ft. by 3ft. by 2ft., so that you would be able to accommodate two pairs for Hybrid breeding. Your chances of success would be far greater with them in this way, than by putting them into the whole of the divided portion. I am afraid you will not be able to retain your plant as a healthy growing specimen under the same roof as the birds, even if they are supplied with an abundance of green food. Birds in confined spaces are always on the lookout for something to do, and to nip the leaves off your plant would be to them "great fun."

AVIARY MATTERS (G.I.).—Your aviary appears to be nicely arranged, and the number of birds is not too many for ordinary purposes, but is too many for Hybrid breeding. You say you have two hen Canaries and two hen Bullfinches, and wish to mate with these three cock Goldies and one Linnet. The hens are all right, but three cock Goldies would be a mistake; they simply waste their time sparring with each other instead of attending to the hens. This you have already had evidence of by one of the Canaries having a clutch of clear eggs. I would advise you to watch them closely, and notice which of the Goldies is most attentive to the hens. If he is constantly following one about, he will probably pair with that one, and for the time take no notice of the others. If this should happen to be one of the Bullfinches, I should feel inclined to take out the other two Goldies, straight away, so as to leave them a good chance of nesting without interference. Anyway, I think you would do well to have only two cock birds in with the hens, and my experience is that they should be birds of different species. It is probably one of the Goldies that has broken the eggs laid by the Bullfinch. Do not forget to have an abundance of nesting materials about the aviary. If there is a shortage, a hen will proceed to pull a neighbour's nest to pieces to construct her own little home.

Answered by H. J. FULLJAMES.

CAGE FOR A NIGHTINGALE (M.C.M.).—If the Lark's cage which you have is one of the usual bow-fronted cages, it would not be suitable for the keeping of a Nightingale. A Nightingale likes a cage which affords it some degree of privacy, and the ordinary bow-fronted Lark's cage is quite the opposite of this. You will find a suitable cage illustrated in our Nutshell No. 25 (2½d. post free from our publisher). The Nutshell contains also much useful information as to the proper feeding and keeping of the Nightingale and many other of the smaller insectivorous birds.

FEEDING A THRUSH, ETC. (Novice, Wimbledon).—You may make sufficient of the stock-food to last for a whole day, or, if you have the opportunity, you may make a smaller portion, and give it twice or thrice daily. The oftener you can make it, the more desirable, but once a day, given in the morning, is sufficient; if it is not convenient to give it more often. Of course, the bird will require live food, such as mealworms, small garden worms, grubs, or insects, given at intervals during the day. Nothing is better than a snail or two daily; these will afford the bird considerable healthy exercise if a good sized stone is provided in the bottom of the cage against which he can crack the shells. What the snail thinks about it is another matter. If your bird is a cock, he should be now in full song, especially as you seem to be feeding him in the best manner. It is quite possible that it is a hen. The sexing of Thrushes is a very difficult matter. Many methods have been suggested as making this more or less easy, one of them was illustrated last week in our columns (see page 486), but I have yet to be convinced that, with an individual adult bird, it is at all easy. My own opinion is that, generally, the cocks are more "snaky" in the appearance of the head, and less profusely marked than the females; but this is all a question of degree, and one needs not to be too dogmatic. If I had a bird such as yours, which was caged before you got it, and has been properly kept in your possession for two months, and it did not sing in the month of June, I should conclude it was a hen. (2) You should not keep your Linnets entirely upon a packet mixture. Such mixtures are good for a change, or as an addition to the ordinary stock food. At this time of year the stock food for a Linnet should consist of canary three parts, teazle two parts, German rape and charlock one part each. Later, some linseed will help to give gloss to the new feathers produced during the moult, and in the winter some hemp seed might with advantage be added. Good "Finch mixtures" and "Wild seed mixtures" are advertised in our columns, and these should be offered in addition to the stock food. Full particulars of the proper feeding of a Linnet at different seasons are given in our Nutshell No. 2, and for a Thrush and other large insectivorous birds in Nutshell No. 26 (2½d. each, post free, from our publishers, or twopence each from your local dealer or newsagent). I cannot gather much from your information that one of your Linnets "is continually looking down at his feet." Linnets are now in full breeding condition, and one of their habits is to "feed their feet," that is, they disgorge food from their crops and put pieces on the perch between their toes. Perhaps this is the case with your bird.

ABOUT A GREENFINCH (T. M. W.).—There is no doubt that your three-year-old Greenfinch will be able to find food for itself if given its freedom. As to the probability of its breeding, it would have of course to wait until next year, as all the Greenfinch ladies are engaged for the present season. Next spring he would have to find, if he could, a mate who did not mind being an "old man's darling." It will not matter if he fails, for there are plenty of Greenfinches about. Your Canary query has been sent on to our Mr. St. John, who will doubtless answer you next week. Queries for different departments should be written on separate sheets of paper. Your one sheet, written on both sides, contained an advertisement, a British bird query, and a Canary query!

YOUNG THRUSH AND ITS PLUMAGE (J. O. M.).—It would be an easy matter to cleanse the plumage if you are able to hand-wash the bird. Failing this, give it every opportunity of bathing in soft water, either in clean rain water, or in boiled water, to which has been added enough borax powder to nicely soften it. Thrushes are very fond of bathing, and the bird should soon cleanse itself. In any case, it will not be long now before it moults, and the new plumage will come all right. Your query on hybrids has been forwarded to our Mr. Norman, who will answer in our next issue. Have you not noticed that Mr. Weston does not now answer these queries? The British queries now come to me, and Mr. Norman answers those referring to Hybrids.

IDENTITY OF YOUNG BIRDS (W.P.).—From your slight description the birds would appear to be Greenfinches. The Greenfinch builds in such a place as you describe, and the nest, so far as the lining of hair and moss is concerned, is "neat and tidy," as you say. The young birds would correspond with your description, excepting that I cannot quite follow your statement that they are "greenish brown and black on their backs." If their general colour is dull olive green, with brownish streaks on throat, breast, and flanks, and if they have yellow edging to their wings and tail feathers you may conclude they are Greenfinches.

CLAWS MISSING (Hopeful).—It all depends upon whether the two missing claws have been torn completely off, or simply broken. If the former, there is little hope of the bird ever reproducing them, although it is said that claws so torn out do sometimes make a reappearance. The claw or nail is really the first joint of the toe, and if this is lost completely I cannot see how it can be replaced. If it is simply broken off short, it will grow again.

FOOD FOR A BLACKBIRD (W. T., Peckham).—The food you are using is not sufficiently nutritious. It should be supplemented by some ants' cocoons, dried flies, and fine meat-meal. Why not get our Nutshell No. 26, 2½d. post free, from our publisher, or twopence from your local newsagent, or bird-shop keeper? This gives very full directions for the proper feeding and keeping of Blackbirds, and other large insectivorous birds. As for the quantity of stock food, your bird will tell you whether you are giving sufficient daily. If he clears it all up before the day is out, it is evidence he wants more. If there is a little left each morning, it is proof that he is having sufficient. Once a day is often enough, but twice a day is better, as the food, when once moistened, does not improve by keeping. Apart from the quality of your stock food, your method of feeding seems quite all right.

GOLDFINCH AILING (E. A. Avery).—I cannot gather from your letter if your feeding is correct. "Different kinds of seed" conveys nothing. A good stock mixture would consist of teasle, and canary two parts each, linseed, charlock, and German rape, half part each. Give also a teaspoonful of sound hemp seed or cracked sunflower seed daily. Wild seeds of any kind obtainable are most essential to the well-being of a Goldfinch. If you cannot gather these yourself, get some packet wild seed from a reliable dealer, and give this separately from the stock mixture described above. You must, also, not forget green food, and here again freshly gathered weeds are best—dandelion heads, young dandelion leaves, shepherd's purse, groundsel, chickweed, etc. Failing these, lettuce leaves, cress, or rape seedlings, which may easily be grown. In the drinking water dissolve twice a week as much sulphate of soda as will lie on a threepenny piece, and continue this as long as the bowels do not become "watery loose." Afterwards, give a dose occasionally. Try the above treatment for a month, and if you will report progress at the end of that time, I will do my best to help you if anything remains wrong. You should get Nutshell No. 1 (2½d. post free from our publisher, or twopence from your local newsagent or bird dealer). This will tell you all about Goldfinches and their proper feeding.

A FLEDGLING SPARROW (Sparrow).—Your bird should go on all right under the care of its Canary foster-parents. As they are feeding it well you cannot do better than leave well alone.

COLOUR FEEDING (Blackbird).—You will find directions given with the colour food as supplied by the makers. About half the strength recommended for Canaries will be quite sufficient for a Blackbird or a Thrush. It should be given throughout the moult. It would have no effect after the bird has got its new feathers.

A STRANGE BIRD (Kilbarchan). I am sorry that I cannot help you in the matter of identification. I confess I do not know of any British bird that lays "whitish eggs with straw-coloured markings" in a "hay and horsehair nest in a gooseberry bush," and which answers your description—"about the size of a Linnet, reddish brown back, greyish head, white on the belly, and looks to have a collar on." Perhaps some reader may be able to assist.

IDENTITY OF YOUNG BIRDS (Novice).—Your birds would not be Wagtails. Wagtails do not nest in bramble bushes; they build generally in holes in banks, or in a wall, anywhere where there is an overhead covering, although their nests may be sometimes found in old ivy. Although your description of the eggs and the plumage of the young does not quite tally with either the one or the other, I think there is little doubt that your birds are Greenfinches. When the birds get a little older you will be able to make sure of their identity. Any kind of small smooth caterpillar would be good for them, and any small insects, spiders, etc., that you may be able to find. When the young birds are able to feed themselves give them cracked hemp, dandelion seed, thistle and canary seed, with a little green food; groundsel heads, chickweed, shepherd's purse, etc., and gradually get them on to a diet such as recommended in Nutshell No. 15, The Greenfinch (2½d. post free, from our publisher, or 2d. from your local newsagent or bird dealer).

A CAGE MADE FROM A BOX (E. L. Curbishley, jun.).—Your box, 4ft. 6ins. long and 1ft. 4ins. wide, would provide exactly six square feet floor space, and you might keep in it any number up to half-a-dozen of the smaller Finches, say a Redpoll, Siskin, Linnet, Twite, Goldfinch, and Bullfinch. The height, 1ft. 6ins., is not much, and more than half-a-dozen would be inadvisable; less would be better. You would not be likely to be successful in breeding British birds in such a cage, unless you limited the occupants to one pair. The perches should be fixed from front to back, and you will find a convenient fixing for the inside ends illustrated in last week's issue, page 486. These should be of varying thickness, say, from that of a lead pencil up to half-an inch; the difference in the thickness of the perches will give considerable exercise to the toes of the birds when jumping from one to another. You might also have one along the cage near to the front, like the one illustrated; this will give the birds something to perch upon when taking their food and water, which should be provided in outside vessels. If you make a door in one end of a convenient size you might introduce a seed-hopper, to hang on the back of the cage, and to contain a mixture of three parts canary to one of rape, leaving the front seed vessel or vessels free for tit-bits and wild seed mixture. As for the prices of the birds, you will be able to gather these from our advertising columns. It depends entirely upon whether you will be satisfied with unmoulted specimens, or whether you buy these which someone else has already moulted, and, in the latter case, whether you want exhibition birds or merely ordinary specimens. You will suit your own taste or your own pocket in the matter.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

BRONZE MANNIKIN (J.R.).—It is quite possible that old age may have something to do with the condition of your bird. Once a week put half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and on other days the same quantity of Byno-phosphates. Put a millet spray in the cage; picking out the seeds will give exercise that will be for the bird's well being. Also supply green food daily—seeding grass, chickweed, groundsel heads, lettuce, etc; even if it does not eat much, picking it over will keep it from moping, and doubtless supply it with a small insect or two. Do not put it in a draughty or exposed position, but it will be better to hang it out of doors on all warm days, but, while the sun should shine into the cage, it should not be allowed to shine directly on the top of it for any lengthy period. If it does not bathe, spray it, and put a little quassia extract in the water you use; supply grit and cuttlebone.

BUDGERIGARS NOT BREEDING (Bird Lover).—It is evident that from some cause your birds are not in breeding condition, and many birds are moulting at the present time; from your remarks I am of the opinion that one pair will go to nest very shortly. From now till September the room window should be left open day and night, the window, of course, should be covered with wire netting. Do not have any perching accommodation which comes in a direct line between window and door or fire-place. Cuttlebone and grit must be always in the room. Supply as much seeding grass as they care to eat, also a tin of crushed oats. For one month put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water every other day. Very probably yours are young birds; if so, so much the better for you, even though they have tried your patience by a lengthy period of not settling. The probability is that as soon as the shedding of plumage ceases, both pairs will go to nest.

AILING COCKATOO (G.A.).—The bird is steadily ruining its digestion by the bit-of-everything diet. Living loose about the house is excellent, but cannot you have something wholesome on hand to offer it when it comes and clamours to share your meal. Cut off the supply of ham and eggs, and also all tea, coffee, or milk sops—it can have such things as boiled rice (sweetened), bread and butter (only a little), plain biscuit, nuts, and in limited quantity, say, a small piece per diem, raw fat bacon or ham. Cuttlebone, grit, and its seed mixture, ripe fruit, and such green food as it will take, should form part of the daily menu. For a month put it on a course of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful in the drinking water), and Byno-phosphates (half teaspoonful in the drinking water), the former to be given every fourth day, and the latter when not giving the former. It will be well to withhold the green food for a fortnight, while the remedies are taking effect, and then give it only in small quantities at first. Report progress in a month.

FEATHER PULLING (Min. F.B.).—The habit of feather pulling in birds which have been properly fed and treated is a vice, and, once persisted in, it gradually increases for the worse, and frequently becomes rather pronounced in aged birds. I should certainly give Dinneford's Magnesia sufficiently frequently to keep the bowels moving quite freely; if you stir the water at intervals during the day the bird will get the benefit of it, or if the bird will take it, let it sip at half a teaspoonful just as it comes from the bottle, or administer a few drops at a time straight to the beak, but it can be effectively given in the water as above. Take all water away over-night, and then give the prepared water the next morning; usually the bird is ready for a drink at once, then stir the water at intervals during the day; you must use a glass or china drinker. The Byno-phosphates can be procured from any of the large stores—it is a stock preparation; give this most days when not giving the magnesia. The booklet will give you all details as to regular dietary, but with a bird like this, a sudden change should not be made, it should be gradual. Get a bottle of Spratts' "Pennacura," and anoint the bare area every other day, but you must only use a little, not sufficient to run amongst and grease the plumage. During the warm weather put the bird out of doors on all suitable days, on all occasions letting it have all the air and light possible without draught. Spray it twice a week with a tepid quassia solution. Report progress in a few weeks.

SHOW CAGES (J.W.J.). A good colour for the interior of show cages is pale whitish-sage green for the Java Sparrows and a dead sage green (not too dark, at the same time not bright) for the Budgerigars. A bright variegated green like the garment of a Budgerigar stands out well against a dull sage, or dull green of almost any hue, and also harmonises well. There are very few birds that don't look well in such a setting.

RANGE OF SPECIES (C. H. Heal).—Pink-cheeked (Grey) Waxbills; Senegambia, Equatorial, and South Africa. Java Sparrows; Java, Sumatra and Malacca. Spice Finches; India and Ceylon. Combassous; the several races are found in Senegambia, North, South, and East Africa. This is a matter of taste, but Gouldian, Diamond, Long-tailed Grass, Ruficauda, Painted, and Crimson Finches are beautiful, most of them gorgeous, but the last named is very combative, and you must be careful what you associate it with. Then again there is beauty and colour of a quieter character; there are few more beautiful than Lavender Finches, Cordon Bleus, Golden-breasted Waxbills, Firefinches, Blue-breasted Waxbills, Hooded and Black-headed Siskins. Also the Weavers in breeding plumage are very gorgeous, but then many are combative or obstreperous. All the above are kept in outdoor aviaries.

LOVEBIRDS (M. Vasey).—I cannot even guess from so meagre a description what Lovebirds you have, as green-breasted would practically apply to them all, and I have never heard one by the popular name of Green-breasted. However, the treatment given in the Budgerigar Nutshell will meet the needs of practically the whole of the Lovebirds, and if you describe the plumage generally of your birds, I can then tell you what they are. Lovebirds seldom bathe; mostly they (in a state of nature) take their baths amid dewy grass and foliage. Most Lovebirds do breed, but it is in outdoor aviaries. You have no need to buy all sorts of seed, it is very wasteful—canary and white millet seed, a millet spray, and green food (seeding grass, lettuce, etc.), about meet their simple wants. Cuttlebone, grit, and water, should be continually in their cage. Their demeanour is about normal.

IN POOR PLUMAGE (B. C. Twiss).—Continue the treatment with this exception, give him two mixtures, each in a separate tin, one to consist of the seeds it eats freely, and the other of the seeds it mostly refuses—you will find it will take a few of these occasionally. Continue to give the magnesia, and on the days you are not giving the magnesia, put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water. In addition to ripe fruit (try it with sweet apple, banana, orange, or anything going), it can have nuts, plain biscuit (dry or moistened with the phosphate water). Except for modifications given above, continue the previous treatment; give the bird all the light and air possible without draught, putting it out of doors on suitable days (not where the sun shines directly on to the top of the cage for any lengthy period), and in a month's time report progress again, but I anticipate the trouble will have almost disappeared. Do not neglect the spraying.

TOLD IT'S A PARRAKEET (Stoker).—Your bird is a Roseate Cockatoo, and worth a pound or 25 shillings. I should never give up hope of a Parrot or Cockatoo talking; nevertheless there are many of this species which do not talk, and others which talk really well, but more of the former. Considering the bird is so tame, tricky, and intelligent, I should certainly persevere with it, it may prove responsive, at any rate to the extent of a word or two. Fondle with it, and make a thorough pet of it, and you can talk to it at such times; but the best time for it to prove receptive is when it is quiet and restful. At such periods, the quiet, steady, repetition of a word or two, or some simple name to begin with, should yield some result. Our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot" tells you how to teach a Parrot to talk, and the dietary of the two species is very similar.

SEED FOR COCKATOOS (E.A.B.N.).—Please accept my apologies if I misread your query (I do not retain queries). I will now rectify it. One quart each canary seed, white millet, and oats; one pint each maize, wheat, dari, sunflower, and hemp, half-a-pint each paddy rice, shelled nuts, and half-a-handful of chilies. Well mix the whole and keep supply in cage. Cuttlebone and grit must be regularly supplied. The birds can also have stale crusts, crust of toast (dry), plain biscuit, nuts to crack, also green food, and, of course, water regularly. Some Cockatoos like a piece of boiled potato, also boiled rice, and neither is unwholesome in moderate quantity.

AVIARY QUERIES (Thos. J. James).—First let me say that the cold of the present season following the first warm spell, has cost the lives of many birds from pneumonia and other causes. Cardinals, Budgies, Lovebirds, and Cockatiels will usually survive any English winter, even in somewhat exposed situations, providing they have a warm shelter (not heated) to retire to at night. For a N.W. situation, wind blowing right through is bad, even in warm weather, terrible during such gales as at present, and this side would be better permanently glass; moreover, every aviary ought to have a shed shelter, well lighted, with an opening to give the birds ingress and egress from the flight. I suggest you sending me a rough ground plan and elevation, with a stamped addressed envelope for reply (per the Editor), and I will mark up the plan, so as to make the best of the position, according to my mind; but you must clearly mark up the aspect, then I hope to be able to help you. Personally I have never succeeded in entirely excluding mice from my aviaries; at the same time I have never had birds killed by them. Kindly send me the plan asked for, also a list of the birds you have lost, and I hope to assist you definitely.

FIREFINCHES (C. Ward-Hunt).—Firefinches are not what you may call commonly bred in England, though mostly a brood, or more, has been reared annually of late years. Your food is very liberal, and they really ought to have reared the young thereon. If more are hatched I would supply a little insectile mixture (soft food), and also a few live ants' eggs. A small dish of sponge cake moistened with boiled milk would do no harm, and might assist towards success, but I presume the cold winds have been responsible for the present failure. Keep millet sprays in the aviary when they are feeding young.

AVIARY QUERIES (Breeder).—I can only give you a general idea and not a definite answer, as you give me no idea of size, etc. Birds will not do well in a place which is practically sunless; you must insert a square of glass in roof, side, or end, so as to remedy this defect. Again, you ought to have a small all-wire cage, except the bottom, outside the window, so that the birds could go out and get a rain or sun bath when they desire—it need not be large. I can say nothing yet about quantity, but Cockatiels, Budgerigars, and Lovebirds will live together in amity, and breed providing they are not overcrowded. When thoroughly accustomed to you they also soon begin to get tame, crowd round the food dish while you are filling it, etc., but much depends on the size and also the lighting arrangement of your small place, and I cannot be more definite till I get more details.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A. H. Rawlins.—We have sent your notification to the "Racing Pigeon," where it is more likely to meet the eye of the owner of the bird.

A. J. Rea.—We are much obliged to you for the suggestion, and shall be pleased to give it consideration. We published some years ago the lecture by the gentleman you name.

A.P.—No. 1 sample is too full of dirt and bits of rubbish to commend itself to us. No. 2 is very clean, and on the whole good, though we notice a small percentage of discoloured kernels when a portion is cracked. We have seen better hemp than either of your samples.

Sion Mills.—The grasses you send have been identified for us as: (1) Tall fescue grass, (2) sweet vernal grass, (3) many-headed wood-rush, (4) creeping fescue, (5) wood fescue, (6) purple-flowered small-reed. The grass recommended by Mr. Weston was the common meadow grass (the seeding heads).

A.S.T.—You must be guided by the photographer. If he says there is not sufficient light in the bird-room to take a "quick" picture, then flashlight is the only solution. The latter would no doubt startle the birds considerably, and if you decide to take the risk, let it be done just before dusk so as to leave the birds light by which to settle down again.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

B. K. Gott.—Heat apoplexy or congestion of the lungs, with rupture of a blood vessel. I do not think the Weaver had anything to do with it, but of course any fright could induce this trouble. I find it more common in summer weather, when the heat, if too closely confined, inhibits the heart's action and brings about a congested condition of the blood vessels in the lungs.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

The members of the Sunderland C.B.A. took a ramble to Corbridge, May 31. The afternoon was lovely. Arriving at Corbridge at 2.30, we started straight for the country, and were not long before we were in one of the loveliest little spots imaginable. The birds were in full song, and wild flowers were blooming in profusion. We passed Hadyn Castle, and it was not long before Jimmy Walker discovered a Thrush's nest with four young ones about a fortnight old, looking in the pink of condition. A little further, and we found the Blackbird's nest with three eggs; also a Chaffinch's with four young, about a week old. We also found the Yellowhammer's nest with three eggs, low down on the ground. We travelled along, passed Beaufront Castle, and found a nest of young Chaffies which soon flew out when we disturbed them. The old birds were very near to us, and we stood and admired the cock. One of the finest we have seen. We next found the nest of the Hedge Sparrow with five eggs, and saw a Lesser Whitethroat sitting on a tree. A bit further, and we saw the Grey Plover sitting in a field. It had young, and one of the party managed to secure one for us to look at, and very pretty they are. We were now nearing Hexham, where we arrived at 7.30, all of us famishing for something to eat. We found a nice little place where we did ample justice to the good things provided for us. After sauntering about till train time, we arrived back in Sunderland at eleven o'clock, tired but happy, having had one of the best times of our lives, and vowing that it would not be long before we have another outing.—T. A Novice Cup for the Great Horton O.S.

Sir,—The members of the Great Horton O.S at their meeting on Saturday last opened a subscription list for a cup for the novice members of the society. About 40s. was subscribed amongst the members who were present, and it is hoped that the members who did not attend will forward a small subscription to the secretary to go to this fund.

A Roller Hen Objects to the Marking Rings.

Sir,—I notice one of your correspondents, Mr. A. Dow, is greatly troubled by using closed rings on Rollers. I had the same trouble, viz., hens throwing the young out of the nest, until I adopted the following plan: I always use brown nest lining, and as soon as I get my rings I take a piece of brown paper, same shade as the nest lining, cut paper in narrow strips (just what will cover ring), then paste them on the outside of the ring. When dry the rings are ready for putting on. I find the hens never take any notice when this is done. When the young are reared and taking their first bath, the paper comes off ring and leaves it as bright as new.

Goose Grease versus a Parrot.

How a Feather Plucker was Beaten.

Sir,—Nearly every week I notice in your reply columns that correspondents are asking for a cure to stop feather plucking in Parrots. Perhaps my experience with a Parrot which I bought at an auction sale for 4s., cage included, some eight months back, may be useful to owners of Parrots which pluck their feathers. My bird is a Green Amazon, and was a young bird at the time I bought him; he had just enough feathers left on him to tell he was, or ought to be, a green bird. I put his condition down to be wrong feeding, and thought I would like to see if I could alter his condition by proper treatment and feeding. First of all, I looked in same week's Cage Birds for a cure; it was there, and I tried it, but with no good result. I was beginning to tire of the job, as when not feeding the Parrot was for ever tearing out his feathers, and by this time he had but his flights and his head feathers left. From the commencement I had taken him off what he had previously been fed on, sunflower and heating seeds, and gave him apple, orange, banana, and the like, also canary-seed mixture. Turnip I found out he liked, and whenever there is any at the house he gets his share and enjoys it. Even the altered diet did not end the feather plucking, and I was convinced something must be done to his skin to stop the itching if possible. By this time I had begun to think my 4s. was a very bad investment, and was wishing someone else had got the Parrot, even at a gift. I searched the house for something to dress him with, and found a jar of goose grease, which came out of a goose I won at a raffle some six years ago. This had gone rancid. I next caught the Parrot by putting a folded rag over his head to keep him from biting, and got him on the table to start dressing him, but he was too handy with his feet, so I had to get the wife to hold a stick for him to clutch with his feet. I then greased the whole of his body with this rancid goose grease, and for three or four weeks he looked a nice object. For the first few days he made several attempts to go on with the plucking, but could not face it, and since then he has never plucked a feather. At the present moment he is in full feather and healthy. We never fasten him in his cage; he goes in or out at his pleasure, both indoors and in the garden. We have now to teach him to talk. He has got no farther than "Hello!" and will shake hands. At present the 4s. invested looks much sounder.

Concerning Clap Nets.

Sir,—Could any experienced catcher tell me what is the best length and depth for a pair of clap-nets to work on half poles suitable for Goldfinch and Linnet catching? I am thinking of having a pair 10 yards long. What depth would be suitable, and what length should the poles be? Any information would be gratefully received.

Lesser Redpoll Twice First at the Palace Show.

Sir,—It was very pleasing to me to see my Lesser Redpoll sketched so well and truly in your last issue. For some time past I have been comparing your Mr. H. Norman's drawings of birds with other artists, and I must say he is simply charming in his productions. This Redpoll was presented to me by that well-known exhibitor, Mr. Morton, of Motherwell, and has always been in the money prizes at open shows 1912 and 1913. It also was first at the Palace in 1912, for Morton and Davidson. Mr. Morton and your humble servant exhibit together at open shows, and we hope to stage some good British specimens this year. I wish Cage Birds every success.

A Grievance at Garston.

Sir,—No member of the Garston B.B.A. could have regretted more than I did when reading the letter under the above heading in last week's issue of Cage Birds, for the writer, in my estimation is one of the old school of fanciers, upright and straightforward in all his dealings, and a valuable asset to our society. I hope I will not be thought impulsive in hastening to reply to give him the assurance that I knew absolutely nothing about any grievance existing, and to state that it was not to me that he gave the information as described in the letter. Owing to a family bereavement I had to relinquish the secretarial duties about March, 1912, and have again just taken over the management of our society; it is quite possible for my predecessors to have known Mr. Carlisle's grievance. In conclusion, can I prevail upon our worthy member to come to the usual monthly meeting at 8 p.m. on the 16th inst., and state his grievances, and if it is possible for me to bring about a settlement I shall be happy to do so.

The Cats and the Aviary: How they were "Warned off the Turf."

BIRDS, CATS, AND OWNERS, LIVE HAPPY EVER AFTER.

Sir,—Once upon a time I had a beautiful large aviary in my back garden, occupied by numbers of the most lovely British songsters. That aviary's front and one side were covered with ½-inch wire netting, which I foolishly considered safety against cats, and to that aviary to admire my birds from far and near came cats—black cats, sandy cats, tabby cats, tortoishell cats, etc., in endless procession, and they (the cats) sang during the night, but I failed to appreciate their song. There was an old black fiend of a cat who discovered that, although his paw would not pass through ½-inch wire netting, his claws would, and when one morning I heard terrified bird shrieks from my aviary, I knew that old black fiend was at work. I rushed to the window and threw things, and sure enough he was there and took himself off quite leisurely in response to my hysterical efforts. Upon investigation I found my beautiful cock Ring Ousel (purchased but a week ago) all in a heap in the corner of the aviary, and outside on the gravel path one of his legs bitten clean off close to the body. A few days after my cock Crossbill, the most beautiful red coloured specimen I had ever owned, had its side torn open. Now I swore and used language which the printing machine would refuse. Cats will stray and be after birds; their fond owners proclaim, "it's their nature." Bother their nature; it's boys' nature to enjoy fruit, but they must not steal other people's. It was my nature to hate cats furiously, and to use poisoned meat and steel traps—anything to kill the brutes. But, presently reflecting calmly, I reasoned, "well, I suppose, it is their nature, as much as it is my Softbills' to eat mealworms, and after all, cats are beautiful animals, and I love all animals." Yes, to be sure, now I remember all at once, I did love cats when a boy, wherever I met them, provided I had my good old catapult. Catapult! The very thing. Why had I not thought of it before? At once I secured one. But before giving the cat and catapult story, let me explain how in a very simple manner I protected my birds once for all against cats. A simple, light wooden frame, covered with ½-inch wire netting, 2 frames in front, one for the side, a few hooks to hang them up over the aviary's netting, so that the two nettings were now some 3 inches apart, and cats' claws were clean out of it ever after. These frames can, of course, be removed with the greatest ease when you are at home during the day time.

Well, after the frames had been hung up, my birds were safe enough, but the cats still came, and sat on the roof of the aviary, just on the edge, staring by the hour at my little pets with their cruel savage goggle eyes. Brick throwing was no use; it mostly damaged the wire netting, whilst the cat moved off slowly, with an air of "that foolish old man again." That is where the catapult came in. My catapult and a good supply of specially large, heavy pebbles from the garden path were placed ready in my study. The study window was but 15 to 20 feet from the aviary roof. The very next morning I rushed to the window, and sure enough there was the black monster on the edge of the aviary roof watching my birds. I gripped the catapult and the largest stone, raised the window (the black fiend never bothered to look). Carefully I aimed, and let fly. As if shot from a gun, he leaped straight up into the air some 5 feet high, coming down sprawling into the garden. Like a flash he covers the length of the garden and flies at the wooden fence, but a second stone crashing against the fence makes him tumble back into the garden, and not knowing whence the mysterious bombardment comes, he rushes back straight towards me. A third shot crashes down in front of his nose; round in a circle he goes, every hair on end, simply screaming with fear, grit and grass flying in all directions, until, like an aeroplane, at a mile a minute he sails over the wall. I hear furious clawing and scratching as he negotiates the wooden fences of three or four adjoining gardens, and that was the last I ever saw of him. Cats had become creatures of joy and happiness to me. I candidly believe the pleasure and exercise they gave me cured my lumbago and rheumatism. My catapult and I were ever ready for them. Many more came, saw, and disappeared like lightning, but alas all earthly joys come to an end; no cats ever come near my garden now; my catapult is idle; I long for them, but in vain. I am told there is one next door, but she lives year in, year out in the lowest and darkest recesses of the cellar, and shuns the daylight. One bold young tom cat, it is true, appeared some time ago on a wall some three or four gardens off, but raising my window was sufficient; his tail in air, he disappeared like a flash. And this brings my story to an end, and as I commenced with "Once upon a time," I finish with "and birds, cats and owners lived happy ever after."

Neglect Alleged at Oldham.

A bird fancier named Edwina Robinson, of 12, Henshaw Street, Oldham, was before the Oldham Bench on May 22, charged with cruelty to a bird.—Insp. Prince (R.S.P.C.A.) said he was walking up Henshaw Street on the 10th inst. when he noticed in defendant's shop window a cage containing a Linnet. The cage was very dirty, and the bird appeared to be in pain. He went inside the shop and bought the bird, and on examining the cage he found the bird had a lot of vermin about it. He sent it to a veterinary surgeon. The woman said she had cleaned out the cage the previous Thursday.—Mr. Ward, veterinary surgeon, said he found the bird suffering from vermin. He had destroyed it.—The defendant said she had had the shop for 11 years and had not had a complaint before.—She was fined 5s. and costs.—"Oldham Standard."

Setting Traps for Protected Birds.

At Ongar Petty Sessions, on May 31, Joseph Johnson, carpenter, Kelvedon Hatch, and William Pettit, South Woodford, were summoned for setting traps for taking protected wild birds.

P.C. Barret said that on Sunday, May 4th, he saw defendants leave Johnson's house at 5 a.m. Having some suspicion, he went in the same direction. Four hours afterwards he found they had with them two wild Chaffinches. From information received he searched a building, and found a trap cage, which Johnson admitted was his.

Johnson said he had nothing to do with the birds.—Pettit said he was on a visit to Johnson, and brought the birds down with him. They were taken out early, when other birds were singing, to cheer them up. One of them was a valuable prize-winning song bird.

The Chairman said that as it was a first offence they could only reprimand defendants. He was sorry, because it was a wretched business. Defendants could go on payment of costs, but they would have to have a better defence next time.

Pettit applied for the return of the birds, and, questioned by the Chairman, asserted positively that they were not wild birds. He was allowed to take them away.

A £5 5s. Cup for the Southern Border Fancy C.C.

Sir,—Kindly announce in Cage Birds that Mr. R. A. Newley, the noted cage maker, of Stockwell Green, has very kindly presented a £5 5s. cup to the Southern Border Fancy Club for most points gained by birds shown in cages supplied by him. This is very good, as Mr. Newley has already given a marble clock, and I think the old saying has come true that he who gives quickly gives twice.

Parrot Starts Egg-Laying at Twelve Years Old.

Sir,—A few days ago my African Grey Parrot presented me with an egg. This is the first time she has performed the feat. I have had her in my possession since she was a few months old, so am quite certain she is now just over twelve years old. It would be interesting to know how many authentic cases there are of such a performance. I know it has been recorded before, but am under the impression that it is not a frequent occurrence. Perhaps those of your readers who have come across any instances will favour me.

John Bramley.

Novice Border Classes at South Country Shows.

Sir,—Kindly allow me a little space in your wonderful paper, Cage Birds, of which I have been a reader some considerable time. Every Friday your paper is read here, and simply eaten; its contents are so interesting. Now, my point is novice classes at open shows for the Border Fancy, of which there are some hundreds kept in and around London. Time after time we hear our friends say "There are no novice classes there." Last year I had a peep at the grand birds at Clapham, and again, to my dismay, I found no novice classes for Borders. At Bromley, too, the cry was "no classes," and there are many more places where we cannot show our birds unless we throw our lot in with the champions, which does not help us to rise to fame in a fair and proper way. I and my friends can count up over 200 Borders, and would enter if the Secretaries would give us classes. However, we trust that the Southern Border Fancy Club will do something for us in the matter. Let the little Border show himself on the benches as much as Masters Norwich, Yorkie and Co.

Eggs Hatching in Eleven Days.

Sir,—Being a regular reader of your grand paper, Cage Birds, I think it would interest fanciers to know that I had a Yorkshire hen that started to sit on three eggs on Monday, May 26th, and, to my surprise, hatched two of them out on Thursday, June 5th. I think this is a record, two eggs to hatch out in eleven days—they take thirteen days as a rule. Would other readers kindly let me know if this is a record?

Improving the Pictures.

Sir,—The book on British birds referred to by Mr. Weston I purchased, and have improved on some of its illustrations. I cut out the little square portraits from one of your plates recently issued, the "Gem Portrait Gallery," and pasted them in, so illustrating the birds in colour. Where I could not see a space I "tipped" them on the edge with paste, and fixed them to the white margins of the pages, opposite the various birds. This has improved the book, and it would guide novices were they to do the same.

Singing when Twent Days Old.

Sir,—This is my second attempt at br ing, and I have a young hen this season with her first brood. One of the young, now a month old, started singing at twenty-three days old. The hen is now on her second nest with four eggs, her time to hatch being June 18. I thought this rather early for a young bird to start singing.

Rearing British Birds Under Canaries.

Their Usefulness to Hybrid Breeders.

Sir,—Seeing the correspondence in your paper re the rearing of British birds by Canaries, I may mention that during the breeding season of 1911 I successfully hatched out and reared under Canaries both Chaffinches, Greenfinches and Redpolls. The following year (1912) I had full eggs from the birds thus reared out, but only succeeded in rearing one young Redpoll, as I did not discover until too late in the season that the cock Chaffinches used to break the eggs. I had to dispose of them all this year, but if a person devoted some time to rearing Chaffinches, Yellowhammers, etc., and, as it were, built up a strain, I believe that in the second or third generation he would have sure Hybrid breeders. I wish Cage Birds every success.

Sir,—Being a reader of Cage Birds for six years, it may interest some of your readers to know that I had a hen Canary which hatched out a Chaffinch's egg on May 11, it being the only youngster in the nest. It died on May 18. I have now a hen Canary rearing two Linnets that are a week old to-day,

How to Keep Dandelion Seed.

Sir,—Seeing in your issue of May 31 Mr. Williams asks how to keep dandelion seed, I thought I would await replies. Now I would like to give my experience in gathering same. I gather for keeping when heads are full open like children blow at to tell the time. I pick between thumb and fingers, give a roll with the thumb, which deadens the fluff; put it in a paper bag or pocket, take home, and after well rolling between the hands, put it in a sieve made of a little box with a perforated zinc bottom. I find the seeds fall through leaving fluff behind. Enclosed is a sample gathered in 1912.

Canaries Nesting in an Open Aviary.

Sir,—The enclosed photo is of a Norwich hen Canary sitting on eggs in my open aviary. She tried several times to build on the ledges, but did not succeed, as they were so narrow, so I fixed up a nest pan, and she has successfully hatched three young ones. They are exposed to all weathers. I just placed a small pane of glass over the top to keep off rain, and a piece of cardboard at side to prevent the too close attention of "pussy." I have another nest of youngsters in the same aviary, but the hen was too shy to photograph. The cock bird has only one leg, but it doesn't seem to make any difference to him. I hope shortly to send you a photo of the youngsters in the nest.

An Unpleasant Kind of Freak.

Sir,—On reading in a recent issue about two peculiarities of bird life, I thought my little experience might be of some interest to your readers. At the beginning of the season I paired up two clear buffs; the hen in due course, laid three eggs. Two of these were fertile. One nice strong young one (as I thought) was hatched, but the other died on the point of emerging from the egg. The parents were young, and I had to assist in the feeding of the "baby" for the first week, when they started to carry on their paternal duties more satisfactorily. On going into the bird-room a day or two after, however, I found it out of th

By
W. E. TESCHEMAKER, B.A.

An article which I contributed to a well-known Magazine a couple of years since, elicited a very interesting letter from an ornithologist residing in the Soudan (Mr. A. L. Butler). He said that he had frequently seen Sprossers during the autumn migration resting on the ground in the gardens of Khartoum, completely exhausted by their long flight from their breeding quarters in Europe, but that he had never seen a single individual of this species at the time of the return flight in the spring. His inference was that this species returns by a different route, passing up the West Coast of Africa and crossing the Mediterranean in the neighbourhood of the Straits of Gibraltar.

It is certainly somewhat singular that certain species are seldom seen at the time of the spring flight in those countries which intervene between their winter and summer quarters. The Northern, or Red-spotted, race of the Blue-throated Warbler is a case in point, and, because this species reaches Heligoland in the very early hours of the morning and is very infrequently seen during the spring migration in those European countries which lie between Heligoland and Africa, Gaetke stated with confidence that this little bird actually traverses a distance of 1,600 miles between dusk and dawn, and at a speed of 180 miles an hour! Now, if some of our ornithologists were also aviarists, they would not, I think, so frequently make wild and improbable guesses with regard to the problems of migration and other matters. There is a very much simpler explanation of these phenomena, and that is that both these species have a vanishing trick, and that, except by pure chance or when tired out by a long migratory flight, no man will see either a Blue-throat or a Sprosser unless it wishes to be seen.

Scared at a Matinee Hat.

The Blue-throat's vanishing trick is very clever (I have not space to describe it here), but he requires a little cover of some sort, such as a tuft of grass, to perform it effectively; but the Nightingale and Sprosser are even more clever conjurers, for they can perform their trick on a perfectly bare perch. I will now tell you how it is done, and how I first noticed it. One day a lady aviculturist came to see my birds, and especially wanted to see the Nightingales. She wore a very charming hat, but it was rather large, and I had some misgivings as to whether Antony would take kindly to it. However, I took my guest to the bird-room and pointed out the Nightingales' cages. "But I can't see the Nightingales," said my guest. Neither could I; to all appearances the Nightingales had vanished. Close investigation revealed a rather curious excrescence on one perch; as the perches were twigs cut from an apple tree, it looked quite natural, and did not arrest the eye. I put my hand into the cage and grasped the excrescence—it was Antony. Of course, I wanted to know how the thing was done, so I asked my guest to stand outside the door for a few minutes and then come in rather suddenly.

Performing the Vanishing Trick.

As soon as the matinee hat departed, Antony resumed an ordinary position, but the very instant it re-appeared this is what he did. He turned quickly round to face the visitor, bringing himself into line with the perch; then he sank down upon the latter, pressing his beak and tail down tightly on it and drawing his wings closely to his sides, and, as it were, gluing himself to the perch. Perhaps the most remarkable part of the performance was the alteration in the appearance of the eyes; a moment before they had been shining brightly and rivetted on the observer; now, in a single instant, they became dull, lustreless, dark spots. I have no hesitation in saying (after several tests in an aviary) that when the bird assumes this remarkable pose on the branch of a tree it will be found an absolute impossibility for the sharpest eye to detect it, and, such is the confidence of the Nightingale in his clever device, that you will find that he will allow you to place your hand upon him before he will move. For these reasons I should require further evidence that there were no Sprossers at Khartoum at the time of the spring flight than the mere fact that Mr. Butler could not see any.

Best of All Ways to Lengthen Our Days.

I hope that I have succeeded in convincing you that the Nightingale is a bird of far more than average intelligence, and, as a further illustration, I will ask you to consider whether he does not show great wisdom in making the most of the serene hours of the beautiful summer night, which many birds waste in slumber. Let us note that he apparently shows no special structural development or adaptation, such as most of the night-fliers possess; he seems to have simply made the discovery that the night is the best time of the whole twenty-four hours, and to have profited by the discovery. Is he not justified? I notice that many of my friends like to doze over the fire after a hard day's work and pretend to read a book, but I have always maintained that this is the best of all ways to shorten one's life and acquire a liver. From 6 p.m. to 12 p.m. is the time that our vitality is at its highest, and that is the time when I like to leave home and all the worries of life behind me. For the cyclist or motorist there is no time like the night, for then the roads are our very own. For the student of Nature there is a whole world of most interesting animals which are seldom to be seen in the daytime. If the weather is bad, there is always a concert or lecture. From midnight to 2 a.m. I find a very useful time for corespondence or literary work; then one can turn in with the certainty of securing five hours' refreshing sleep, and can rise at 7 a.m. as lively as a cricket. Everyone should try the Nightingale's prescription.

I have been commanded not to overlook the practical side of Nightingale-keeping, so I will now turn to some points of feeding and management which may possibly be of some use to others who, like myself, are learners. My former notes on this subject brought me a query from a correspondent who wanted to know if I had actually tried millet-husks (as there recommended) for Nightingales, or if it was only a suggestion. This query amused me. The learner has many faults, and makes many mistakes, but he does not, as a rule, commit either of those unpardonable sins to which writers on avicultural subjects are rather prone, namely, recommending what they have not tested, and writing on subjects with regard to which they have not one iota of original information to impart.

An Old Friend's "Tip."

To tell the strict truth, the "tip" was not my own. I obtained it from an old friend—a professional singer, known to me as "Tom," but whose real name was Shama. My old friend Tom used to live in my sitting-room, but every now and then he used to become a little mopy, and was then turned out in a heated aviary for a few days. He always returned full of spirits (not the intoxicating kind) and vigour, and I used to attribute this improvement simply to the change of scene; but, after turning him out one evening for one of his periodical holidays, I happened to keep my eye on him for a few minutes, and I saw something which interested me. Tom perched upon the three-foot upright rod in the centre of the floor, to which the food-tins are attached, and cast his eye round the aviary; evidently he was looking for something. Suddenly he made a dive into a distant corner and emerged with a large piece of spray millet from which the seeds had been extracted. The piece was quite as large as the end joint of an ordinary finger, but, to my great surprise, he promptly swallowed it; if I had not seen it done I could not have believed that a bird of his size could possibly have stuffed down such a huge morsel. I said to him—"Tom, why did you swallow that." Now, a Shama rarely talks, and he does not need to do so, because he has such a wonderfully expressive eye that he can convey all his thoughts to you without speaking. So when Tom gave me a knowing wink, I knew that he meant to say—"Wait and see."

CLAY CROSS C.B.S.

Members' N.F. show, held June 7, at Angel Hotel. There were some very fine youngsters, and very keen competition. Forty birds were staged, a very good entry considering the bad time our members have had. A fair number of visitors attended, and we made three new members. Mr. A. Wilson judged, and his awards were received with satisfaction.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

First of a series of six members' shows held June 7, at Park Chapel Schools, West Bowling, with a moderate entry of 47 young birds. Mr. H. Sutcliffe (Windhill) adjudicated upon the twelve classes provided, and his awards gave general satisfaction. A valuable list of special prizes will be competed for at these shows, but competition was not so very keen at this opening show. Most points with four highest birds were secured by Messrs. J. MUSSELBURGH O.S.

Monthly meeting held at Cossar's Tea Rooms, May 31; Mr. Jas. Pearson, chair. Only a few members were present, and there was little business done; the sec. stated that a few Scotch Fancy exhibitors in the district wished for a few classes at our next open show. It was unanimously agreed to give six classes. Mr. J. Carson, Dalkieth, will judge same.—A. Hoyle, Sec.

BOLTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Members and friends met at headquarters, June 7, for half a day's outing in the form of a bowling match. We proceeded by car to the Volunteer Hotel, Turton. The secretary's side beat the president's side. We afterwards sat down to a good hot tea, and did ample justice to it. The rest of the evening was spent in bowling, etc., and friendly discussions relating to our hobby, and when home time came, we were all satisfied that we had had one of our best outings. We were sorry that our secretary and another of our members, Mr. Lawton, were kept away from us through illness and accident.—P. Brierley.

PELTON FELL C.B.S.

Meeting, June 7, with good attendance. Mr. J. Stanger chair. Letter read re British Bird and Mule Club, and it was left over for anyone to join if they care. Sec. then read letter from Mr. S. Yates re colour food and egg food, and showed samples. Decided that birds be staged at 12 at N.F. show, and lift at 7. Schedules of N.F. and annual shows drawn up for Sec. to get to printers. CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Table show of foreign and British birds, held June 4, one of the best held this year. There was a large attendance of members, nearly all of whom went in for the judging competition. Mr. Hamlin judged British, and Mr. Brazener foreign. The species winners in the British class were: 1, Yellowhammer; 2, Chaffinch; 3, Siskin; 4, Redpoll, and in foreign: 1, Bronzewings; 2, Cordon Bleus; 3, Napoleon Weaver; 4, Bronzewings. Six members placed the Yellowhammer and Siskin first and third respectively, but only one found second winner. In the foreign nearly everybody was at sea, placing the Cordons first. Decided to apply to the S.B.F.C. for patronage at our Nov. show. Arrangements were made for the F.F. show, June 28. 27 classes were provided. Two new members were elected, and all present signed the petition from the N.B.B. and M.C. It is hoped that all members will do their utmost to fill the classes at the F.F. show. Cash specials in each section.—A. S. Treasurer, Hon. Sec.

Monthly meeting held June 2, Pillar's Cafe; Mr. W. Smith, chair. A hearty welcome was given to our president, Mr. W. F. Barr, who was present. The following new members were elected:—Mr. W. Curry, and Mr. R. White, Newcastle. At next meeting a table show will be held; Mr. W. Smith, judge. Four classes for each section. Champ. and novice: Cl. or mkd. yell.; ditto buff; Green; Cinnamon. A special presented by Mr. Duncan will be competed for for most point in novices. Mr. W. Harvey then gave a very interesting lecture, "Lessons that I learned from my birds." A good deal of discussion followed, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the lecturer, which brought a very pleasant evening to an end.—M. C. Potts.

BUGLE F.A.

General committee meeting, held June 4. Mr. John Truscott presided over a good attendance. Hon. Sec. submitted draft copy of schedule for first show, July 23. One of the chief features will be the valuable cups presented for competition by Col. Sir William Sergeant K.T., Hon. T. C. Agar Roberts, M.P. (two), Mr. F. Coon, C.C., Mr. F. Thomas, and Mr. C. Being a county show, and specials confined to members, this is a grand opportunity for Cornish fanciers to join and win the coveted trophies. We should be pleased to hear from any one desirous of joining; sub., 2s. 6d. Mr. G. Gardner, London, will judge cage birds. Full advertisements will appear shortly.—A. C. Gregor, Assist. Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held June 5, at Wentworth Cafe, Mr. F. Jones chair, supported by Mr. J. Thorpe, and the two secretaries. Stewards elected for N.F. show are Messrs. Curley and Kelley; doorkeepers, Messrs. Bailey, Drabble, and C. W. Hobson. A friend has kindly given 5s. for most entries in the show, and other specials were promised by Messrs. Walsh, Curley, Bailey, and Drabble, these along with others already received will be allocated at the committee meeting, June 23, at 7, the night of taking entries. Will any other member or friend wishing to give a special kindly inform the secretary. A list of specials will be put up on entry night; members kindly look out for it. The cup kindly given by Mr. Fletcher has been given to the novice British section, Mr. Hobson's to novice Norwich, and Mr. Memmott's to novice Yorks., the four highest birds to count for cup. The members' cup can only be won by birds competing in members' classes, and there must be two classes standing in any section for the cup to be up for competition; 2s. 6d. each was given by Messrs. J. Thorpe and F. Jones for ring birds at the annual members' show; that makes 25s., and we are expecting more to come. The first ramble of the season has been fixed for Saturday, June 14, to Ridgeway. This is a splendid walk, and bird life abounds on every side. All intending going are asked to meet at the intake car terminus, at 2.30. Any friend will be welcome. The talk on the Norwich Canary by Messrs. Kelley and A. Hobson proved very instructive; many points of interest were dealt with, and seeing they spoke from practical experience, their words were all the more appreciated. Mr. G. Gill was elected a member. Next meeting, July 3; special table show of young birds, 12 classes, prizes 3/-, 2/-, 1/-; see syllabus for classification. Some valuable specials are up for competition. A vote of thanks to Messrs. Kelley and Hobson brought the meeting to a close at a late hour.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

Monthly meeting and table show, held at the Good Templars Hall, Ingram Street, June 7, Mr. J. M. Edwards presiding. Sec. read correspondence, several items being left over till next meeting. Election of judges for annual and F.F. shows was gone on with, and final selections will be made known in due course. Classification for F.F. show arranged as follows: Norwich 1, Clears, ditto varieg., same for Borders, 1 A.O.V. Can., Mule or Hybrid; to be held August 2, at 5 p.m., usual place. Five specials were handed in with the promise of more. Messrs. W. Baron and Co., Ltd., Bacup, carrying case, was submitted for inspection, and considered by all present to be one of the best in the market, being very light, strongly made, and reasonable in price. Sample was soon claimed. Owing to the success of last ramble, it was agreed to have another to Waterbank on Saturday, June 28, leaving Central Station 2.18; meet at Argyle Street entrance. Wives, families, and friends invited. Sports will be arranged. Table show specials were given by W. Telfer 1, P. Pettigrew 2, A. McFarlane. 1 Mr. W. LLANELLY C.B.S.

Important meeting held June 7, at Headquarters, Greyhound Hotel, which was well attended; Counc. D. R. Jones, chair. Replies were read from the judges, and it was decided that H. W. Battye be engaged for the Canary section, and Mr. C. Houlton for British, Mule, and Foreign. Next show January 13. The secretary reported having been successful in getting the loan from Mr. Jas. B. Clarke, Rothesay, of his case of seed. There is something to think over and study from this regular museum of seed. The case contains over 80 varieties of seeds, and it rather too large to go over and to discuss at one meeting in such a way as to do justice to the owner and the members. All members present enjoyed themselves, and those that were absent have by this time become sorry. Secretary read out the notes given with the varieties. We are all sorry that we should not have agreed to have the case for two meetings. A hearty and sincere vote of thanks is to be sent to Mr. Clarke.—D. John, Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting and table show held June 4; Mr. Coomber presided over a good attendance. Correspondence applying for our patronage was read from Carlisle, Newcastle, Hartlepool, Blaydon, Chester-le-Street, Haltwhistle, and Cockermouth. Decided to allot patronage at next meeting, July 2; societies desirous of having same must send in their application before that date. Members residing outside the district and wishing to record their vote, may do so by letter to the secretary. Mr. Crawhall has again consented to supply colour-food, members to let that gentleman or the secretary know quantities they require as early as possible. Next table show fixed for July 2; judge, R. Tinsdale. The table show was fairly well supported, and some splendid young birds were on view. Mr. Crawhall judged, and gave every satisfaction. The novice section was not up to the usual for numbers; members ought to take full advantage of the educational value of these shows, as many a good young bird may be overlooked by the novice who keeps his birds at home. Secretary will be pleased to give a silver cup for most points over the whole of the table shows, both sections to compete, points to count only in classes of over six entries. Members please note change of secretary's address, as below. Table show awards:—CHAMP.—CLEARS: 1. Deighton; 2, Hutler. MKD. or TKD.: 1, 3, Dix; 2, Deighton; 4. Hutler; vhc, hc, c, Coomber. NOVICE CLEARS: 1. Hedley; 2, Scott. MKD. or TKD.: 1, 2, Mirley.—R. Tindale, Hon. Sec., 6, Gill Street, Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting held June 6, Assembly Rooms, Market Street, Carnarvon. Present: Mr. J. Jones, vice-chair; Messrs. G. Jones, R. T. Edwards, G. W. Jones, J. W. Parry, E. Jones, and R. E. Griffith, hon. sec. Show business was the principal item. Doorkeepers, Mr. R. M. Owen and Mr. J. W. Parry. Staging is in the hands of sec. and chairman. Committee will help with staging night before and night of show. Present for day of show: Chairman, Mr. J. Jones, hon. sec., hon. treas., Messrs. J. W. Jones, J. W. Parry, R. Morris, and Master Scout Macklin. Six of the Carnarvon Boy Scouts have been engaged to carry exhibits to and from the station free of charge, but a few coppers may be given towards their funds. New members are coming in very fast, and it promises to be the record cage bird show in North Wales. The following have joined during this week:—Messrs. H. Jones, Penygroes; J. W. Parry, Carnarvon; J. Williams, Goetra; and J. O. Parry, Carnarvon. The committee have a grand room for the show. The show is open only to North Wales. Those sending a P.O. for one shilling for membership before entries close (June 28), to Mr. R. E. Griffith, hon. sec., 5, Balaclava Road, Carnarvon, will be entitled to compete at show on July 5. Doors open from 9 till 6; entrance 6d. all day. Schedules have been sent to all last year's members and every other fancier I know in North Wales; if any have been missed, I will send schedule by return, on application. Next committee meeting, Assembly Rooms, June 13, at 8.—R. E. Griffith.

MIDDLESEX O.S.

Meeting held June 5. Classification for young stock and Finch show, July 10, was arranged. Petition re Plumage Bill, signed by all members present, and has now been sent to W. Joynson Hicks, Esq., M.P., for our division. One new member was elected. A letter was read from the N.B.B. and Mule Club re members joining the Protection Association. This was adjourned until next meeting, when I hope all members will enrol, and thus help to strengthen our forces against the faddists.—Jeffery Jefferies, Hon. Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Monthly meeting, held May 31, at the Old Boar's Head, Manchester, Mr. G. Wareing chair. A good muster was present. Mr. Wareing welcomed on behalf of the members Mr. C. Portlock, of Grimsby. Several minor alterations to the rules were made. Members' show was arranged to take place Nov. 30. Other arrangements will be announced later. Will secretaries of other societies note the above, and also that the annual contest will take place January 9 and 10, 1914. The following were elected to judge: Messrs. Lyons, Wirth, Wareing, and Massey. —Andrew Percival, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held June 5; Mr. T. C. Crawhall, chair. Correspondence was read from Mr. Silver, O.N.P.C. Northern C.C., Northern Border and S.F.C. Mr. J. E. Atkinson wrote tendering his resignation as show manager. Decided to write Mr. J. G. Hutchinson, asking him to take the position. Mr. Dan Page, Lintz Colliery, was elected a member. Tickets for N.F. show were on hand. We had quite an interesting question night; a large number of questions were asked and answered, and all spent an enjoyable and profitable night, and learnt a great deal they did not anticipate learning. Committee meeting will be held June 19, at 8. Subs. now due, and must be paid before being entitled to compete at N.F. show, July 5; will members try and make this another success?—J. W. Read, Sec.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

Meeting held June 7, at Berni's Rooms, Cwm Street, Mr. J. Parfitt chair. Decided to write Cage Birds for conditions of championship competition. A long discussion took place on fixing the schedule for open show, but was settled satisfactorily. We have fixed six classes for novices, 3 Norwich, and 3 Yorkshires. We also took orders for colour food; if any member who was absent wishes to order same, let me know as early as possible. There was a fair attendance, but I am hoping for a record at our next meeting, which will be the last before F.F. show. Members should make as many entries as possible for this show, as we want a good opening for the year. Show held Market Hall, 4 till 10. Classes as follows: Norwich open, ditto novice, Yorks. open, ditto novice (2), British 3 classes. Hope all members and friends will attend same, and help to make it a success.—George Broome, Sec.

CITY OF DUBLIN C.B.S.

The forming of the above society was recently accomplished at Iveagh Buildings, Mr. Nelson in the chair. The Chairman, in his opening remarks, said such a society was necessary, as novices were very much neglected at present. It was the intention of this society to instruct them and to get the best talent to come forward and lecture to them. He believed in forming the whole society into a committee, as it gave every member an opportunity to have a say in the management and will make the society a success. Mr. Burtenshaw said he was sure the society would be successful from the novice point of view. There will be lectures during breeding season and on the preparing of birds for the show bench, of which the novice at present has no idea. It is the intention of some of the promoters to have weekly Linnet and Goldfinch singing contests, for which there is a cup run on League principle. Mr. Connor said that in a city like Dublin, with its host of breeders, one would imagine a novice would be put right; but no, the answer was, "Find out the right way yourself." Now we have started this society it will be his own fault if he does not attend the lectures. It will not be necessary for members to have their birds rung, as I believe it is not necessary, and, as you know, we have a great risk in ringing them. Of course, it may be necessary where you have to compete with the long-pocket fanciers, but as this society is only for working men in the city of Dublin, it makes no matter. Nearly every fancier has a Linnet or a Goldfinch or Lark, and as there will be weekly contests, it will keep us more in touch with each other. Mr. Kavanagh said he saw no reason why the society could not be a success. He would very much like to have the date fixed for young bird show, say late in July or early in August, when we would be sure of good entries. Mr. Briggs said he was taken by surprise at the first meeting, and it showed that the novices were determined not to be forgotten. As regards the rung birds, it was a good idea in some ways, but it had its faults with the loss of birds. He had received from Councillor Thos. Lawlor word that the bird market will be held in the Iveagh Market, Francis Street. A vote of thanks was passed to the Councillor for the pains he had taken in the matter. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chair.—J. Briggs (Sec. pro tem.), 11, Werburgh-st., Dublin.

there will be close birds entered, which shows that breeding operations in Derby and District are in a fairly satisfactory state. Fifteen new members have joined the society this spring, which is a sign that we are making headway.—Wharam and Bamsey, Secs.

SCOTCH FANCY (National Derby) O.A.

Additions to the list of members:—A. Jardine, Jas. Orr, John Orr, N. Lyle, J. McMahan, E. Bullions, J. Vernall, P. Craig, J. Fleming, J. F. Renwick, H. Campbell, A. Renfrew, Glasgow; W. Edgar, R. Lawson, Dumfries; J. Hogg, Oakley, Fife; H. Caldwell, R. Caldwell, Baillieston; Wm. Niven, Falkirk; J. Main, Coatbridge; J. Little, H. Moore, W. Neil, Barrhead; A. Allardice, Wishaw; W. Simpson, Renfrew; W. Hutchieson, T. Smith, Slamannan; J. Burnside, Lesmahagow; J. Paterson, A. Livingston, A. and M. Baird, J. Allison, A. Kennedy, H. Siddons, T. Slater, Jas. Slater, N. O'Donnell, Paisley; R. Carmyle, Broughty Ferry.—A. M. Baird, Sec.

BOURNEMOUTH C.B.A.

Well attended meeting of the committee held June 3rd. Arrangements were made for F.F. show, to be held in St. Peter's small hall, July 2. 10 classes for 1913 Canaries, 3 old Canaries, 1 Mules, 1 British, 1 Foreign, 1 Selling. Prizes on the sliding scale. Six specials of 2s. 6d. each, one of 3s. for most entries, and silver cup to be held for one year, kindly presented by Miss Penrice, our vice-chair, for best young bird shown. Diploma for best bird in each class also to the cup bird. Show open to the public at 2. Bird fanciers visiting Bournemouth at that time will be heartily welcomed. Summer outing arranged for June 18th, to visit Mr. Hart's wonderful museum of British birds, which he will describe to the members at Christchurch. Tea will be arranged for. So you will see we are trying to keep up to date, like your wonderful Cage Birds. The Nutshell series was introduced to the members, and I hope good may result.—J. A. Crawshaw.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

A record attendance, a record table show. Such was the announcement made by chairman, Mr. T. Dawn, at the meeting held headquarters, June 3. The chief attraction was a table show of young birds bred by novices, the two classes, Norwich and Yorks, totalling considerably over 40 entries. Norwich were an exceptionally good lot of 22, some rattling specimens being staged. Yorks kept up the reputation of their county, and naturally predominated in numbers. Dr. Craig judged Yorks and Mr. J. Woodall Norwich, and both had something to separate the cream; it was all cream, but the richest had to be found. Our table shows are a great attraction, as we give fixed prize money of 4s., 2s., and 1s., and no entry fee. Mr. G. Fletcher gave two 2s. specials if 40 birds were staged. We lay ourselves out to cater for the novices, giving them a helping hand when in difficulties; a kind word and a little assistance is very often the means of putting fresh life into a disheartened novice. Novice fanciers of Sheffield should attend next meeting, July 1, at Rose and Crown Hotel, to hear a lecture on Norwich by Mr. Waters, which will be particularly interesting and instructive to the beginner. The lecturer will give his own personal experience, and tell of the way he overcame his difficulties until he got to the top of the tree.—John A. T. Woodall, Press Corres.

READING C.B.S.

Usual meeting held at Palmer Hall, June 4, before a good attendance. Mr. Hebburn (Guildford) and Mr. Foster (Reading) were elected members. Arrangements for members' outing to visit Mrs. Noble's aviaries were made. Brake will leave Palmer Hall at 2.15 prompt on June 25. Fare, including tea, 2s. Only a limited party of 22 can be taken, and as I have only nine seats vacant, members who would like to go please drop me a card and I will reserve a place for them. Hon. Sec. brought forward a suggestion that we have a social night, with games tournament, for a change. Decided to arrange one later in the year. Several specials were promised for F.F. show, July 16. Full details to every member when printed. Our usual business being finished, Mr. F. Dearlove gave us an address on moulting and colour feeding. Full of practical information by a practical fancier, it was listened to with great interest. Plenty of questions were fired at him, and with two old stagers like Mr. Yates and Mr. Laurence taking part in the subsequent discussion, the utmost value was extracted from it, and a very hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Dearlove for his kindness. We are hoping to get another from him soon. Fanciers wishing to enter birds in F.F. show should let me know, so that they may be proposed at next meeting. I am arranging for an interesting series of papers on "What Variety shall I take up, and why?" to be given by various members later in the year.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Meeting held Arcade Hotel, May 28, Mr. J. C. Murray chair. Discussion took place re the children's competitions at young bird show. Decided to hold special meeting on 31st to make final arrangements for the ramble. Two special prizes which we had failed to collect were paid from club funds. The trustees were instructed to have the bank account of the society transferred to the Royal Bank of Scotland. Notice of motion was given by Mr. Joseph R. Reid (after permission had been granted by Mr. J. C. Murray, last year's winner) to include Lumphinnans, Hill of Beath, Crossgates, Donibristle, Fordell, and Auchtertool in our local district. All members residing in these places to be eligible to compete for the local members' cup. Decided to apply for all specialist clubs' patronage for the open show, including the full patronage of the S.B.B. and M.C. Vote of thanks to the chairman brought the meeting to a close.—Jos. R. Reid, assist. sec.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous Issue, Page, and Column are stated by the advertiser.

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which me must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

APPLIANCES.

In the accompanying drawing (which is true to scale) notice the relative size of the hand and that of the book. From this you will be able to judge the size of this superb volume. Not only is it the largest volume ever published upon Canaries and the only exhaustive treatise upon these lovely creatures, but it is written by the ablest authorities—men who have devoted a lifetime to the study of their habits, and who have been exhibitors, first prize winners, and judges at the principal shows for many years. The Editor of this volume and the principal contributor is Claude St. John, perhaps the best authority on Canaries in the world, and among the other well-known contributors are those well-known judges, C. A. House and G. E. Weston.

This is the only large really comprehensive Book solely on Canaries ever compiled. Experts tell you about:

1. Mating.
2. Nesting Appliances.
3. The Quality of Eggs.
4. Hatching.
5. Aviaries.
6. Incubation.
7. Feeding for Markings.
8. Breeding Stock.
9. Show Birds.
10. How to Exhibit.
11. How to Judge.
12. Preventing Diseases.
13. Training Birds.
14. Crossings.
15. Technical Points of a Bird.
16. Best Markings.
17. Modern Exhibition Crest.
18. Travelling Cases.
19. Practice in Washing.
20. Canary Diseases (alphabetically)
21. Tobin's Ventillatory System.
22. Cutting over-grown Beaks.
23. How to give Medicines.
24. Rings for Canaries.
25. How to Cut Claws.
26. Moulting Cages.
27. How to Isolate.
28. Humouring the Lady.
29. Frills without Curls.

A magnificent volume, 7lbs. in weight, containing 32 beautiful coloured plates (painted from life) with 32 black and white plates on art paper, and 28 absorbing chapters on Canary breeding and rearing, told in 380 pages, with 133 other illustrations in the text, and an exhaustive alphabetical index.

WANTED A TRIAL

We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. If you have a cock bird that you are relying upon for another nest, that has gone off song, or a hen that is not in breeding condition, or is neglecting her young, because she is not well, we have just the medicine you require, and we guarantee you perfect satisfaction. Our medicines are used by all leading fanciers, and have been proved to be the most reliable. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for loss of voice, soft moult, egg-binding, going light, feather-plucking, diarrhoea, and for dull and moping birds, in 7d. and 1/1 (treble size) bottles. Special size, 2/-. This medicine is undoubtedly the finest pick-me-up ever offered for birds that are run down or gone off song. Fanciers note: If our medicines fail to do as advertised, we guarantee to return full money. For bronchitis, wheesing, and hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic. Also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. The safest and most reliable medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. As an advertisement we will send a 7d. bottle of each of the above medicines for 1/-, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9. All post paid, per return, at our risk. Two valuable seed recipes: How to Feed Linnets and Rollers for Contest Singing, given free to all purchasers of our medicines.—Frank Ditchfield, Bird Specialist, Oldham. (731)

SMALLBRIDGE C.B.S.

On June 15 members had an enjoyable ramble to Water Grove, in excellent weather. Bird life was in abundance; we found several nests of the following: Thrush, Ring Ousel, Blackbird, Missel Thrush, containing young and eggs, also saw on the wing Swallow, Martin, Stone Chat, Linnet, Greenfinch, Blackbird, Throstle, Wagtail, Hedge Warbler. The Skylark sang beautifully in the heavens. A halt was made at a farmhouse for refreshments and a rest, a member to whom we were much obliged, kindly forking out for the lot. We made a start backwards via Nut Wood, and soon came across an old mill, where the present secretary of the Littleboro' C.B.S. was born in a house attached. Here several nests of the Martin had been destroyed, evidently by boys not realising the seriousness of their actions. It was after we left here that the most of the bird life was seen, passing through hedgerows and by rippling streams, nest after nest was found. In fact, there was one in nearly every bush and tree; we could not miss them. A most enjoyable morning being spent, we all arrived home about 12.45 p.m., all tired but satisfied, and we vowed that this ramble would not be the last.—J. T. Cheetham, Hon. Sec.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Sunday, May 25 was a glorious summer's day, which will be long remembered by those of us who took part in our annual ramble across the fields and commons of Surrey. A smaller party than usual entrained at Peckham Rye, and East Dulwich, all in the best of spirts eagerly anticipating their day with the birds and Nature at her best. Arriving at Box Hill Station, we were soon on our way to Ranmore Common. Crossing a ploughed field we came to a small wood, when Master Frank Cole made the first find, a nest of young Hedge Sparrows. Blackbirds' and Thrushes' nests were quickly found, some with eggs, others with young. Passing on to the common, a halt was made to give the camera fiend his chance. Mr. Taylor and Master John Richardson were the operators on this occasion. This over, we were soon amongst the gorse and bramble bushes. A large number of Linnets' nests were found, also those of the Greenfinch and Chaffinch. The Chiffchaff, Whitethroat, and Yellow Bunting were seen, but their nests were not located, the nests of the Jay and Wood Pigeon were found in both cases empty, and by the side of a pond, the Red and Yellow Wagtails were seen sporting themselves, the call of the Cuckoo being heard on all sides. On the far side of the common the party all met again, when a shady glen was found, in which to eat the lunch, which each one had brought with him, stretching themselves on the cool grass, thoroughly enjoying the food and rest, the air resounding with the song of the birds the while. About 2 p.m. we made another start, and wending our way past the church, across the fields and along country lanes by the pretty village of Westcot, across Melton Heath, on our way to Homewood Common, which we reached about 4 p.m. Here we spent an enjoyable time. The place was fairly alive with birds, and nests were found in quick succession. Those of the Thrush, Blackbird, Linnet, Chaffinch, Greenfinch, Whitethroat, Wren and Tit were found by different members of the party. Meeting again by the old church on the common; we commenced our walk into Dorking, where Host Dam'n, of the Temperance Hotel, had a substantial tea waiting us, to which ample justice was done. We had a most enjoyable ramble.—W. Hodson, Hon. Sec.

A VINDICATION OF BIRD KEEPING

Facts Faddists Should Ponder.

Notes by the Secretary of "Cage Birds League."

In my notes in our issue of May 31, I referred to an article by Mrs. K. Currey, published in the "Avicultural Magazine" for May. This article, entitled "For Love of Birds" was a criticism of a review by Dr. Butler of a pamphlet published by the Animal Friends' Society, consisting mainly of tirades against the study of bird and other animal life in captivity. In his review Dr. Butler said "A bird in a cage does not spend its existence in vain regrets over its lost liberty: in all probability its mind is a complete blank as regards the past. It lives in the present, and is content so long as it is kindly treated and has plenty of food suited to its needs." Dr. Butler claimed, further, that the people who wrote pamphlets of such a character were hindering the advancement of science.

Mrs. Currey, who is herself an aviculturist, wrote a commentary on Dr. Butler's review, and expressed herself in language which might easily have been used by some of the extremists whose one idea is to put an end once for all to the keeping of any kind of bird in captivity, and I had something to say in answer to Mrs. Currey, as mentioned above.

Now, in the June issue of the "Avicultural Magazine," Dr. Butler replies in full to Mrs. Currey. His reply is to be commended to the notice of the sentimentalists who are responsible for the mendacious pamphlets published from time to time. Some of his paragraphs are quoted herewith:—

> There is not the slightest doubt that the societies which have sprung up of late years, with the avowed object of advocating humanitarianism, while undoubtedly doing a little good, have (owing to their refusal to look at both sides of the question) done an incalculable amount of mischief.
> Does the so-called Bird-protectionist really believe that in interfering with man's undoubted right to claim dominion over the fowls of the air he is doing the birds themselves any good at all; or is his action dictated solely by a love for notoriety, for a malicious pleasure in meddling with concerns respecting which he is not only profoundly ignorant, but concerning which he does not desire even to know the actual truth? I am afraid, from the constant repetition in his pamphlets of statements which have long been proved unsound, that there can be only one answer to this.
> To what end does all this misplaced zeal tend? We know that the desire and aim of these reformers is to put an entire stop to bird-keeping throughout the world . . . the capture of one in perhaps ten thousand individuals can make no appreciable difference to the preservation of the species; whereas it may make a considerable difference to ornithological knowledge.
> A lot of absolute nonsense has been written about the decrease of Goldfinches and other birds in England, and the blame has been put upon the bird-catchers; as if they alone were responsible, and the comparatively few birds captured in their nets made any appreciable difference to the many millions of birds born each year in Europe. Of course, when there is a decrease in numbers it is due entirely to the cutting down of timber and reclaiming of waste land formerly covered with thistle and teazle upon which these birds delight to feed. When on migration in the spring it is not to be expected that Goldfinches or any other birds should settle down in a locality where they can neither find suitable nesting places nor food which appeals to them.
> No real lover of birds objects to a certain amount of reasonable protection, but in the present-day restrictions upon the liberty of the subject are becoming every year more unbearable, the masses are being tormented for the self-glorification of a few mistaken sentimentalists.
> As for birds being unhappy in partial captivity, that we know to be the veriest nonsense; indeed, there are scores of recorded instances in which, when liberated, they have voluntarily returned to their former owners. This is not surprising when one considers that a wild bird is subject to frequent alarms from predaceous birds and beasts, that it often has much difficulty in obtaining sufficient food to satisfy it, and that in the winter in this country it is exposed to all the bitter and trying vicissitudes of our most uncertain climate.

Readers of these columns will know that I have many times used the same arguments as indicated in the above extracts, and it is pleasing to find such an aviculturist as Dr. Butler coinciding with one's own views.

Many readers of Cage Birds have written to say that they would like to join Cage Birds' League, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the League, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is either to sign the coupon herewith, and send the same, together with sevenpence, or to get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of Cage Birds League, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the League. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same

My Cage Birds I welcome every week, and the contents always deeply interest me, for not only do the articles form good food for thought, but the queries that are constantly cropping up week after week, together with the replies, come in exceptionally useful. I wish you continued success.—Dover E. Judd (Enfield).

Mr. J. Sheppard, sec., writes that the Midland Counties Y.C.C. is now ready to consider applications from Midland Societies for patronage. Those who included this club's patronage in their schedule last season were full of praise, as profit resulted in all cases. Rules are now ready from J. Sheppard, sec., 129, Floyer Road, Small Heath, Birmingham.

First Feather Shows.

IMPORTANT OFFER.

We have decided again this year to accept advertisements of First Feather (young bird) shows at the reduced charge of 3s. 6d. per single column inch (2s. the half inch). And we will present a special prize of a bound volume of "Bird World," or two handsome specially mounted plates, to all societies spending not less than 10s. 6d. in advertising their Young Bird Show in our columns.

Secretaries taking advantage of this offer should state very clearly in their advertisements the date, time, and place of the show. These particulars put before our readers will, without doubt, result in a much greater attendance at these early fixtures, and the making of new members, while the "gate-money" (where a charge is made) will benefit, and the sale of catalogues, too. This special cheap rate, of course, only applies to First Feather shows.

Secretaries should note than we can print at very favourable rates, show schedules, posters in colours, and ornamental prize-cards. Send for samples and prices.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

Farnworth C.B.A. first nest feather show will be held June 21, Farnworth Church House, Church Road, judge, Mr. James Hopkins, Bolton. Birds staged not later than 1.30. Sec., Mr. W. Dawson, 117, Primrose Street.

The date of meeting was wrongly sent last week, writes Mr. H. Boothman, hon. sec., Manchester and Northern Counties O.S. It should have been June 16, not 23. Will all who require colour food let me know how much they want, not later than June 23?

My father and I were very pleased to see our bird on the front of Cage Birds, and thank you very much, writes Mr. H. Sutcliffe. Kindly note my change of address to 21, Valley Road, Shipley; my father still lives at 1, Back Kitson Street, Windhill.

We have received from Messrs. Hopkins and Cunliffe, joint secs., Norwich Plainhead Club, the report for 1912, and list of officers and members for 1913. The balance-sheet shows that the balance owing to sec., brought down from 1911 as £1 11s. 8d., is now reduced to £1 0s. 5d.

The annual cricket match between the City and Suburban A.C.B. and the "Early Birds" C.C. takes place to-day (Saturday) at 3 p.m., at the Paddington Recreation Ground, writes Mr V. Wynn, the hon. sec., when we hope to see a good muster of members and friends to cheer us on and enjoy the fun. The ground is near the Edgware Road (take the second turning on the right down Elgin Avenue) and easily accessible by motor 'bus, etc., from almost all parts of London.

OBITUARY.

I am very sorry to announce, writes Mr. R. Clifford, that our secretary, Mr. A. Spencer, has had a severe loss in the death of his sister, who passed away suddenly whilst attending a patient in her occupation as a nurse. The members of Old Radford Society offer him their sympathy in his sad loss.

It is with feelings of regret, writes Mr. D. Lawson, president, Thrums C. and C.B.A., that I have to report the death of Mrs. Dundas, wife of our respected member, Mr. Robert Dundas, and sister of our secretary, who passed away on June 1, after an illness extending over three weeks. Her remains were laid to rest in Kirriemuir Cemetery on June 4. I am sure the sympathy of all fanciers will go out to Mr. Dundas and family of five in their sad bereavement.

Mr. R. G. Metcalfe (8, Village Street, Lower Broughton, Manchester) writes that he and his friends are going as usual on Aug. Bank Holiday week-end to Kirkby Stephen, Westmorland. Fanciers and friends are cordially invited, and can rely on having a ripping time fishing, shooting, bird-catching, and driving, combined with a table of the best, and every accommodation. Anyone wishing to go, kindly notify me in good time, so that I can make arrangements for beds, etc. Time of departure, fare, etc., will be posted later.

These about to purchase colour food should note that at the last Palace show five championships and two five guinea cups, besides scores of cash prizes were awarded to birds fed on Ramsden's pure peppers. The Crystal Palace Company's silver medals for best novice and Yorkshire, also for best champion Mule were also won by birds colour fed solely on Ramsden's peppers. For proof, kindly refer to Palace catalogue. Ramsden's peppers are the finest that can be obtained. Are packed in tins only, and never sent out in bags. Orders received by the morning's post are executed same day. Purchasers should remember that Ramsden's peppers are sold with a full guarantee under the Food and Drugs Act, also the Merchandise Act, and are the only peppers advertised with this guarantee. This season's pepper now on sale at prices advertised in the "Foods" column.—(Advt.)

An Interesting Revival.

We hear that Prescot Society is reviving its show. This will be interesting to Norwich fanciers, as Prescot was once the hot bed of the chubby ones. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, of Liverpool, has been engaged to judge.

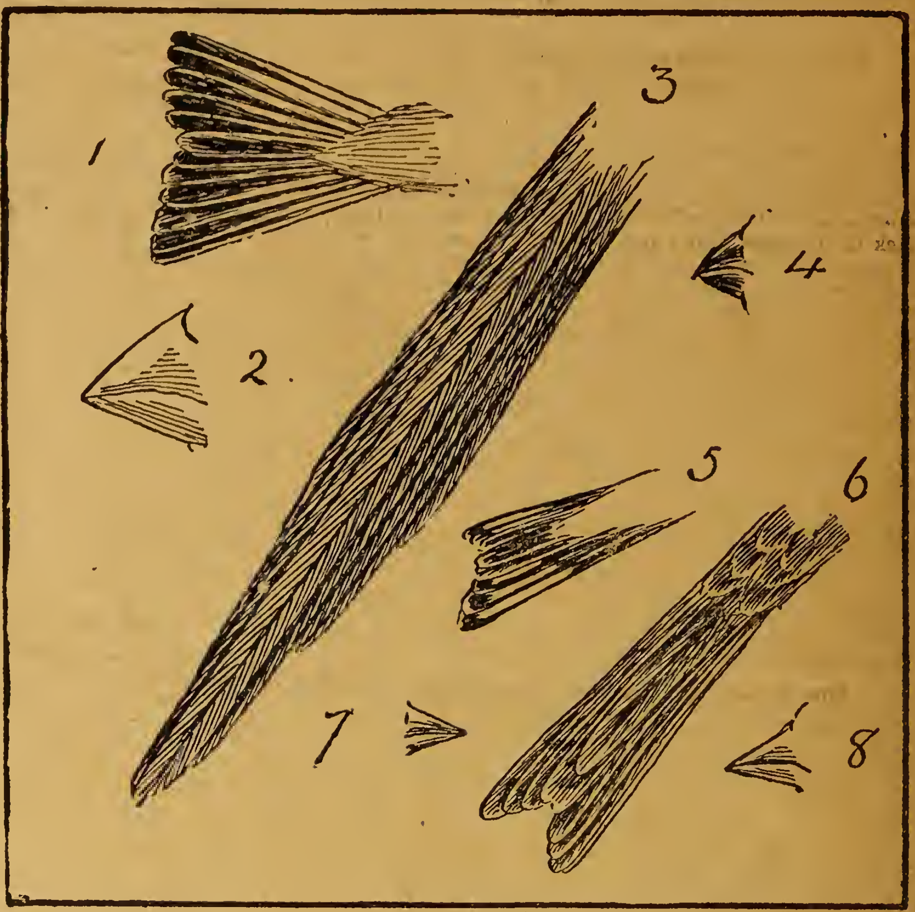
Pelican Fights Six Men.

A large Pelican was captured in a field about a mile inland from Whitstable on June 15. The bird, which had a ring around its neck, showed a good deal of fight, and it took six men to hold it. They were ultimately successful in taking it alive to Whitstable.

Humming Birds in England.

We learn from a well-informed source that several Humming Birds were recently in London, the property of the noted German importer, Herr Fockleman, of Hamburg. We believe, however, that they failed to tempt to become buyers the well-known English bird-lovers who saw them.

Our Beaks and Tails Competition.



Five Shillings Cash (or Books) for the Best Solution.

The above eight sketches represent either the beak or the tail of seven well-known species of British birds. We will forward 5/- cash (or our bird books to value, as may be preferred) to the reader who correctly identifies the birds to which they belong. In the event of no one getting the whole number correct, the prize will go to the sender of the greatest number of correct answers; in the event of a tie, the winner will be drawn for by an independent person.

RULES: Write the birds' names on the back of a postcard and write your name and address clearly underneath. Number each solution 1 to 8, in the order in which the beaks and tails appear on the drawing. Address your postcard to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., and post it to reach us not later than first post Thursday next, June 26th. Only one effort is allowed each competitor.

Robbery of Birds in London.

In the early hours of Tuesday morning last, some thief visited the garden of Mr. G. E. Weston and proceeded to break open his aviaries. Fortunately he (or they) appears to have been disturbed, as only one of the compartments devoted to Hybrid couples had been entered, and from this a large Siberian hen Bullfinch and Siberian cock Goldfinch were stolen. As the wicker travelling (Roller) cage hung up for nesting purposes was also missing, evidently the thief put the birds in this, and then probably tied it up in a handkerchief. There were marks around the lock of the next compartment, containing a Chaffinch-Bullfinch couple, but the attempt to force this door had been abandoned for some reason or other. Mr. Weston would readily recognise the birds. Will any fancier or dealer being offered a Siberian hen Bullfinch and cock Goldfinch for sale kindly communicate with him at 42, Lewisham Rd., Dartmouth Park, N.W. Mr. Weston is afraid that, owing to the many thefts of similar nature (fowls, etc., and even pigs) in the neighbourhood, he will have to abandon bird-keeping out-of-doors.

The Patronage of Specialist Clubs.

Societies desiring the patronage of the specialist clubs at their 1913 shows should apply as follows, stating classification given, and judges appointed: National Green Marked Y.C.S., Mr. J. Chambers, 22, St. Anne's Mount, Burley Hill, Leeds; National British Bird and Mule Club, Mr. J. P. Carr, 45, Overdale Road, S. Ealing, W.; Southern Norwich P.C., Mr. F. S. Matthes, 34, Rotherhithe New Rd., S.E.; Northern Yorks C.C., Mr. R. Tindale, 141, Stanton St., Newcastle-on-Tyne, latest date July 2; Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C., Mr. R. Garnett, 8, Leeds Rd., Windhill, Shipley; Green C.A., F. Handley, 23, Coventry Rd., Wavertree, Liverpool; closing date July 17; Yorks and Lancs. Brit. B. and M.C., T. H. Inman, 43, Derby Rd., Thornbury, Bradford; Cinnamon C.C., Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, 68, Brunswick Rd., Liverpool; Northern Border and S.F.C.C., Mr. M. C. Potts, 52, Falmouth Rd., Newcastle-on-Tyne; Midland Counties Y.C.C., Mr. J. Sheppard, 129, Floyer Rd., Small Heath, Birmingham; Southern Border Fancy, F. Moore, 49, Kelmscott Rd., Clapham Junction, closing date, June 25; Yorks C.C. of Scotland, R. B. Gibb, 2, Alexandria Terrace, Govan, closing date June 28; Northern British, Mule, and Foreign Club, W. Curry, 60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle, closing date July 2.

Country Rambles.

The following rambles have been arranged: Border City (Carlisle) O.S., June 22, to Kingmore, etc., meet Edestown, 2.0.; Loanhead C.B.S., June 28, to Arniston Estate, brake leaves Fountain Loanhead 2.15, Bonnyrigg 2.30; Larkhall C.B.A. July 19, to Bonnington, Falls of Clyde.

Do Owls Need Water?

In conversation recently with that expert fancier, Mr. John Frostick, we were surprised to hear him say that Owls did not need water; he had personally kept them several years without. Presumably the flesh food supplied a sufficiency. Mr. Frostick said that he gave water when first he had the Owls (Little Owls) but that they neither drank nor bathed. We are under the impression, however, that the Tawny (Wood) Owl, and one or two others are very fond of bathing. Evidently the little Owl is exceptional in this respect.

SELFRIDGE'S TAKE UP CANARIES.

World Renowned Emporium's Interesting New Venture.

That great Oxford Street firm, Selfridges, whose magnificent emporium is one of the sights of the West End of London, is to be congratulated on its latest department—one devoted to certain kinds of pets.

The live stock salon, as it is termed, is situated at 32 Duke Street, and is in the charge of Miss Frances Simpson, the well-known lover of cats, dogs, and all pets. It could not be in better hands. The salon itself is beautifully fitted, and everything possible, needless to add, has been done to secure the well-being and comfort of the pets housed there

This new department has "caught on" in no uncertain manner, and though originally restricted to dogs and cats, its fair manageress has been asked to provide many kinds of birds, including Canaries, Parrots, and Pheasants. Our own hobby of bird-keeping numbers very many adherents in the aristocratic West End, and no doubt this new move of the House of Selfridge will serve to popularise it still further in this exclusive quarter. The gracious acceptance by Queen Mary of a Canary from Norwich will be well remembered by our readers, and our beloved Queen's love of birds is shared by many amongst her own immediate entourage.

PROGRESS OF OUR GREAT CHAMPIONSHIP COMPETITION.

Making Headway Rapidly: Explanatory Pamphlets sent to Society Secretaries: Discuss our Scheme at your Meetings, Members: What a Prominent Exhibitor Thinks: Our Definition of a Novice.

OUR great championship competition scheme continues to make merry progress. We are delighted to note the interest in it so widely displayed by both societies and exhibitors. Officials of societies have been quick to recognise that CAGE BIRDS' latest scheme provides a splendid stimulus to exhibitors to send out their birds freely and often, and will add a zest to the competition in all sections that will render the results of the judging being more eagerly awaited than was ever the case before; above all, they see plainly that a scheme which can accomplish these things MUST be of great benefit to their exhibitions by bringing in entries in every section comprised in their schedules.

Our Scheme and Your Classification.

We may point out here to secretaries and others that it is not essential that the whole of the twelve diploma sections specified shall be included in your schedule to qualify your annual exhibition to become one of CAGE BIRDS championship coupon shows. It is not intended that our scheme shall interfere in any way with the classification you desire to offer. The diplomas will be in competition in whatever sections are represented in your schedule of classes.

Now Societies Let Us Hear From You.

Since we wrote last week, the following additional societies have applied for full details of the Championship Competition:—Boscombe and Dist. C.B.A., Bradford West C.B.A., Portsmouth and Southern Counties C.B.S., Selby and Dist. C.B.S., Swansea C.B.S., Tong and Dist. C.B.S., and Tredegar and Dist. C.B.S. The explanatory pamphlets are now ready, and will have been posted to all applicants ere these lines are printed, also to the secretaries of all societies who last season held on open show. We ask the courtesy of each secretary in bringing our scheme before the notice of his members at an early date. If any secretary has been inadvertently overlooked (through a change of official or otherwise) we shall be pleased to send him a pamphlet on hearing to this effect. We would mention by way of reminder that our Championship Competition is restricted to societies deciding to enrol their fixtures in our list of guaranteed shows.

A Good Opinion Typical of Many.

Exhibitors are whole-heartedly in favour of CAGE BIRDS Championship Competition, judging by the tone of the letters which reach us in ever-increasing numbers daily. Their views are well summed up in the appended communication received from Messrs. Martin & Archer, the well-known exhibitors of hybrids and British birds, etc., of Huddersfield. When ordering their supply of coupons, Mr. F. Archer writes:—

> "One can truly say that with this scheme the time has arrived for exhibitors (both novice and champion) to put down their birds so that the shows throughout the kingdom benefit. Times without number complaints have been made respecting half-prizemoney and short entries. Is this scheme going to do anything to alter this? I venture to say that it is. For a long time something of this sort has been wanted, so it behoves one and all to support it to the best of their ability. I hope it will be a huge success. I would like to read other exhibitors' opinions, and I have not the slightest doubt the Editor of CAGE BIRDS would like to as well." (I should; opinions, critical or otherwise, are specially desired.—Editor, "C.B.").

How We Define a Novice.

We have been asked how we purpose "classifying" novice exhibitors for the purpose of competing in our scheme. We have adopted the following standard definition of a novice:—

> "A novice is a person who has never won a first prize for Canaries, or Mules and Hybrids, or British, or Foreign birds, in a class at any show other than one confined to club members, or residents in the town or county where the show is held, or limited as to the price at which the exhibit is to be sold (price not to exceed £5), or three first prizes in open novice classes. All members of a family, or residents in the same house, must show in the highest section in which any of them may have to compete."

A Brief Outline of the Scheme.

The main idea of CAGE BIRDS Championship Competition is to discover which are the Twelve Best Birds of the Season. The Competition is open to every Show appearing in CAGE BIRDS List of Guaranteed Fixtures (this covers every quarter of the United Kingdom) provided application is made to us by the management of that Show before the end of July, 1913.

TWO PRIZES OF 10s. EACH, one for novices and one for champions, will be offered (under certain stipulations), at each accepted Coupon Show.

TWELVE DIPLOMAS OF HONOUR will be offered, in addition, at each Coupon Show, such diploma to be given for the best bird in each of the following sections:—

(1) YORKSHIRE CANARIES.
(2) NORWICH.
(3) CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS
(4) BORDER FANCIES
(6) GREENS.
(7) LANCASHIRES AND LIZARDS.
(9) MULES AND HYBRIDS.
(10) BRITISH, HARD-BILLED.
(11) BRITISH, SOFT-BILLED.
(12) FOREIGN

The winner of any one of the foregoing diplomas will have the right to compete with not more than four birds, on payment to the Crystal Palace Authorities of the usual entry fee, in our final championship competition at the Crystal Palace show of 1914.

FIRST PRIZE, £3; SECOND PRIZE, £2;
THIRD PRIZE, £1; FOURTH PRIZE, 10s.

The following cash prizes will also be offered for competition at the Crystal Palace Show:—£10 10s. for the best Coupon bird exhibited in the Champion classes in the above twelve sections; £10 10s. for the best Coupon bird shown by a novice other than the winner in the Champion Section. We shall also offer A TEN GUINEA CHALLENGE SHIELD, to be won three times in succession, for the best bird at the Crystal Palace Show entered in our Competition.

Some Important Points to Note.

1.—One coupon—one bird—one coupon show.

2.—No coupons sold after the last day of August, 1913, except to previous purchasers, who have the right of duplicating their order up to the end of October.

3.—No bird with trimmed, painted or dyed plumage, will be eligible to compete, and all entries must be the bona-fide property of the exhibitor.

4.—No bird entered for this competition may wear a ring, or have any distinguishing mark apart from its natural characteristics.

5.—The Judge will be instructed to withhold a diploma should the merit of the competing birds in any particular section not justify its award.

6.—We reserve the right, in the event of there being less than 10 separate competitors altogether in our competition at any one diploma show to withhold the cash prizes thereat, the diplomas remaining on offer for as many birds as are eligible for them.

7.—No exhibitor may win more than one diploma in the season in any one section, and no exhibitor will be allowed to win more than two of the 10s. prizes offered at the Diploma Shows, but an exhibitor may (if able) win one diploma in each of the 12 sections.

8.—An exhibitor who has won a diploma need not necessarily enter the same bird for the final competition. By winning the diploma he has the right to nominate and enter not more than four birds in any one of the 12 sections for the final competition, and for each entry made for the final competition at the Crystal Palace a coupon will be necessary.

9.—No exhibitor in the final will be allowed to win more than two prizes with his four entries.

10.—In all cases of dispute arising out of this competition the Editor's decision will be absolutely final and legally binding in every respect, and only upon this understanding will entries be accepted.

11.—The Editor reserves the right to alter the conditions from time to time in whatever manner he thinks best in the interests of competitors themselves, and also of the competition.

Our Hobby Week by Week.

Is "Face Value" Fallacious?: A Knotty Problem of Mule Breeding.

On the Hunt For Grass Seed.

My recommendation of seeding heads of grass as a very valuable and unjustly neglected green food for birds, and especially those rearing young, has had an altogether unlooked for sequel. I expressly mentioned the ordinary "common or garden" grass (meaning meadow grass) in this connection. But quite a number of my readers seem to have become possessed of the idea that if one kind of grass is useful, then five or six different kinds of grasses must possess a proportionately higher utility. So they have industriously ransacked the neighbouring countryside and fired in to CAGE BIRDS offices choice selections of specimens, with requests to name them and say if of any use as food for birds! As my knowledge of grasses is, like my hair nowadays, strictly limited, this procedure has proved somewhat bewildering. Further, it goes directly contrary to the purpose that prompted my original paragraph; this was, to indicate a valuable and reliable seeding greenfood which might be obtained by everybody at a minimum of trouble, but which practically everybody (Canary breeders, at least) neglected. Certain other grasses are doubtless equally useful; so many of us, however, haven't time and opportunity to hunt them down.

An Opinion of "Face Value" and Pedigree.

The relation last week of my experiment (in some respects an absurd one) of continued close inbreeding and double-yellowing, seems to have aroused no little interest, judging by the letters received concerning it. One writer asks me whether I consider inbreeding dangerous to the well-being of birds? I most certainly do not. I hold that rational and well-considered inbreeding is essential if one would establish a strain of Canaries to produce winners, and, what is of even more importance, one that will continue to produce winners. The ideal breeding birds are those that combine face value with pedigree—by "face value" I mean those standard points that go to make up a high-class specimen of any given variety. It would be easy, I think, to demonstrate that a man who relies upon face value when buying and mating his birds, and troubles naught about pedigree, will be much less certain in his results than the man who looks for something favourable in the past (i.e., ancestry) of his birds as well as in the present. But this is too lengthy a matter to go into now.

The Road to Ruin.

My own inbreeding, of course, was the reverse of rational. The result, a deterioration of the birds at all points, and rapid, too, in the fifth year, was only to be expected. In a recent (1912) work on "Heredity," by Professor Watson, these sentences occur: "It has long been known that inbreeding . . . is very detrimental to the general physiological vigour and the fertility of the breed . . . . The degree of relationship which is compatible with fulness of vigour appears to vary considerably in different species (animals), and in the same species under different conditions. . . In any case, continued close inbreeding invariably leads to greatly weakened constitution, and often to partial or complete sterility. . . Breed "in" to fix type; breed "out" to secure vigour; in general, compromise—this may be said to be a summing up of the experience of animal breeders." In my own case there was (as mentioned) a striking deterioration in the frame of the birds, and in the plumage, the last one reared being a decidedly peculiar object. I found eggs more difficult to get, though those laid were fertile, and that the birds lacked vigour was evident. The double-buff mating of which I spoke, using two of the closely-related birds, brother and sister, had no effect for the better (or exceedingly little), so far as I could tell, though I did not pursue this phase of the experiment beyond one season. But when I put up a distantly related yellow with one of these buffs, the improvement in the progeny was decidedly noticeable.

A Wonderful Offer of a Wonderful Book.

Every Bird Breeder and Lover should read and take Advantage of the offer on page 511 of this issue.

DO IT NOW.

Can You Answer This One?

Why should jonque Mules not be bred from any buff hen Canary? This is a question to which I myself can supply no answer. It is generally held that a yellow Mule cannot be obtained from a buff hen which has been bred in the ordinary way. I have often tried to get one, and always failed; yet I cannot see any reason for this failure. I remember that my old friend, Mr. W. H. Vale, many years ago, in one of the very first issues of "Bird Notes," expressed the opinion, when writing on Mule breeding, that it was practically impossible, although he admitted that Mr. Peregrine Ball had put one case before him in which success had been achieved.

I have conclusively proved that jonque Mules can be bred from buff hens possessing "concentrated yellow blood" (as I termed it); and possibly Mr. Ball's hen was one of this kind. But even if an ordinary buff hen is used, we put up a jonque Finch with her. And that the distinction between yellows and buffs is as sharply defined in Finches as in Canaries no practical man can deny. Why, then, should we not breed yellow Mules when we pair a yellow Finch to a buff Canary hen?

The Female Reproductive Cell.

On reading over the note in my recent contribution, dealing with the fertility and sex of eggs I see that I spoke of "the germinal versicle, a minute body found in the germ spot." I ought really to have written "found in the germinal disc," as "germ spot" is a term frequently applied to that still more minute body, the nucleolus, found in, and an important part of, the germinal vesicle (or nucleus). The germinal disc is that tiny light-coloured (whitish) spot found on the surface of the yolk; in a Canary's egg about the size of a pin's head—in a fowl's egg about the size of a small hemp-seed. This disc is a mass of protoplasm (broadly speaking, living matter) and contains that microscopic and wonderful body the nucleus (germinal vesicle), the latter holding those still more minute bodies the nucleolus (germinal spot), and the centrosome, and also chromatin. These bodies may be said to make up, in conjunction with the yolk, the ovum (reproductive cell) of the female. The yolk, of course, represents food matter. I would ask readers to keep this latter paragraph by them, as I will return to this subject next week.

Questions and Answers.

(For Rules See Last Week's Issue.)

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. Mules and Hybrids—H. Norman. British Birds—H. J. Fulljames. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES

SINGS FAINTLY (G. B.).—Glad to hear the bird has recovered so well under treatment advised. The hoarseness is quite natural at the commencement of its resumed efforts at singing, and will gradually disappear as the song increases. You may add ten drops each of glycerine and lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence to the water for a few days. See that it is not in a direct draught, or an impure or dusty atmosphere. No, the bird should not moult again this year.

NO RESULTS (A. Snow).—You give no idea as to the age of the hen, or the general health and condition of the birds—especially the cock, and his age makes the question of his vigour and condition very important. Unless quite vigorous and active you cannot look for certain results from him, and in any case to stand a fair chance of success he should be mated with a hen in her second season, and, of course, still in full breeding vigour. It is quite true that many birds considerably older than yours breed successfully, but it is essential they should be in good, sound health, and have plenty of vigour, and even then they are not invariably to be depended upon. If the birds show signs of going to nest again treat them until the hen has laid the same as advised to "A Novice" in this issue.

FIVE EGGS—SIX YOUNG (E. O. A.).—It is quite possible for two perfect chicks to be hatched separately, that is not attached to each other, from one egg—twins, in fact. A number of such cases have been placed on record, and I have seen several cases myself. It is not so often, however, that the twins are reared so easily. That they were not discovered earlier may perhaps speak well for your non-interference with young broods. This is assuming that you are quite certain no other chick was added to the brood in question to be reared, such as a chick from a brood deserted by their own parents. If you are certain on this point, then you may safely conclude the brood contains a pair of twins.

A DISAPPOINTING PAIR (A. Novice).—It is quite possible that the puffiness of the hen indicates the approach of the moult, and if this occurs you may just as well give up hope of doing anything with these birds this season. The loss of a wing or tail feather or two will show when it has set in. If this does not occur, leave birds together and treat as follows for a time. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a teaspoonful of egg food in which you have mixed two finely chopped fat mealworms, and add to it a third of a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame and gold of pleasure. On the alternate day give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle. Give a supply of varied green food daily, and a few dandelion seed heads at any time. In the water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid. You may bathe the foot of the cock once daily for two or three days in a warm solution of extract of wych hazel—a small teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of warm water. Dry carefully afterwards and anoint slightly with vaseline.

PECULIAR (H. G. Money).—Surely the cause of a hen having two fertile and two unfertile eggs in each of three successive clutches must be sufficiently obvious—only two of the ova happened to be impregnated by the male germ. Why this should be so I cannot say. It is just one of those things which "no fellow can understand," but may theorise about. This is assuming the birds were "pairing" freely during the time the nest was being built. One occasionally comes across hens which will not mate until laying has commenced, and in such cases the first half of the clutch are almost, if not quite, invariably unfertile. I am also inclined to think that in some cases "pairing" is not really effective until laying commences, when the effect is, of course, practically the same. Possibly your hen may be of this rather exceptional type. About a week is the length of time you may keep Canary eggs before putting them to set. If properly cared for, they may be kept double this time, but when eggs are kept long before being sat upon the normal period of incubation is somewhat prolonged, and the embryos correspondingly weakened. When kept too long the germs fail to develop at all. They should be kept in a small box covered with bran, in a cool place, and given a half turn every morning and evening.

PLANTAIN AND SAND (F. S. D.).—(1) The specimen you sent is the narrow-leaved plantain—more popularly known as "Lamb's Tongue," or "Ribwort." At present the plant is only in bloom, but when the seed is formed the heads are quite as acceptable to birds as are the seed stalks of the broad-leaved plantain, which is the variety which produces the long seed stalks, called "rat-tails," which is more generally used, chiefly, no doubt, on account of the seed stalks being so much larger and longer, which makes it so much less trouble to gather sufficient for immediate use. I have never offered the leaves of plantain to Canaries, so cannot say whether it is good for them. A simple way to avoid littering floor of cages with green food is to plait it firmly in the wires at the end of a perch. Small racks or spring clips can also be bought for a copper or two to hold it firmly on the wires. If you gave only the buds of groundsel heads before the flowers have opened you should have no trouble whatever with litter from them, as the birds usually eat them up bodily. (2) If you can get fine, gritty sand from an unpolluted part of the sea beach it would answer admirably for a covering for your cages, and if it contains particles anything like approaching the size of grains in sample you enclosed, there would be no real necessity to supply any other kind of grit.

NO EGGS APPEARING (R. Miller).—In this reply last week the printer unfortunately mixed up two sentences. Fourteenth to sixteenth lines should read: "Keep cock where she can hear him sing, or both see and hear him. Every second day for a week add to the drinking water," etc., etc. Will querist please note

MATING COCK WITH ANOTHER HEN (A Beginner).—You may quite safely mate the cock with No. 1 hen at once for another nest. It will not injure the cock in the least on account of his being a 1912 bird. Provided he is healthy and robust there will be no risk at all in mating him again. You give no particulars that enable me to suggest any reason for your ill-luck hitherto except that the hen probably succumbed to egg-binding. For rearing young see reply to "Beginner" on June 7th. Have you "Canary Breeding for Beginners?" If not, get a copy. It will save you making many mistakes.

MOST PROLIFIC AND HARDY (T. M. W.).—It is not possible to single out any breed of Canary and to say dogmatically that it is the most prolific and hardiest. The question of strain and management has a very important bearing on the matter, and may have quite as much, or even more, to do with the question of prolificacy and hardiness than breed alone. In a general way, and the question of strain and management being equal, common Germans, Borders, Norwich, Yorkshires, and Lizards are among the hardiest, but it is difficult to single out one for first place. Personally, I am inclined to divide honours equally between the German and the Border.

GASPS FOR BREATH (Border Fancy).—The hoarseness is undoubtedly a concomitant of an acute bronchial attack, which is probably due to cold draughts, and as its incidence coincides with the late spell of warm weather, it seems not unlikely that such exposure may have been brought about by being placed between open windows, or door and window. All such exciting causes must now be avoided. Keep the bird in a well-ventilated place with a pure atmosphere, but do not expose it to direct draughts. Give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it every second day for a fortnight. In the drinking water add ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, for two days, and afterwards give 20 drops of the following mixture two days in every three for a week, and every second day afterwards for another week or fortnight as may appear necessary. Mixture: Two drachms each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one drachm each of ipecacuanha wine and chlorodyne, and eight grains of iodide of potassium. Get a chemist to mix it for you.

FEEDING DURING MOULT (A Constant Reader).—You give no indication whatever what class of birds you refer to—whether Canaries, British, or Foreign. If either of the two last-named, please repeat query next week, and mark it British or Foreign, as the case may be, that it may be passed on to the proper authority. If you refer to Canaries, it depends again on whether you wish to colour-feed them. If you do, then you cannot do better than get our manager to send you the booklet on "Colour-Feeding," post free, 3½d., which will tell you all you wish to know on this subject. Also Part IX of "Our Canaries" will give full details for moulting all kinds of Canaries, either with or without colour-feeding. If not colour-feeding you need only add to the usual dictary a little egg-food two or three times a week, and fill in the intervening days with a varied supply of mixed seeds in moderate quantities, green foods, and wild seeds of various kinds. A supply of nasturtium and marigold blooms will help to add tone to what natural colour the birds possess. During the latter half of moult a little linseed or a few chopped sunflower seeds given three or four times a week will add the necessary lustre to the plumage. "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants for Cage Birds," post free, 1/2, from our manager is such a book as you enquire after.

SITTING ON NEST (Novec).—The hen would most likely hatch and rear a brood if the eggs were provided for her to start with, but if she only sits in nest at night I would advise you to wait patiently a little longer before supplying eggs. It is quite "on the cards" that she may set about laying a clutch for herself at any time. Give her a little egg-food every second day for a week or two, and mix in it each time three finely-minced fat mealworms, and sprinkle all over with a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure. On the alternate days give a small "stool" of freshly-gathered dandelion split across the crown, and add six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel to the water for a week. If she does not then lay in, say, two or three weeks, or even now if she sits in nest continuously day and night, try giving her a clutch of common eggs if obtainable, or even a clutch of eggs of some British Finch.

A BAD LOT (Desperandum).—Never despair "Desperandum"; the "glad eye" may yet sparkle in your orbits, though it is evident your stock are a thoroughly bad lot. I very much doubt you doing anything with them this season, beyond, perhaps, curing their ailments, or, which we will hope may not be the case, performing the last rites over their mortal remains. Is it only the birds you have bought that have these colds, or does it affect birds you have had for some time? If the latter is the case, I should suspect that your method of ventilation during this warm weather gives rise to injurious draughts, and you would do well to increase the top ventilation sufficiently to keep the fluctuations in check and avoid as much as possible setting up direct draughts in the cages. For one week give all the affected birds a plain seed diet with a varied supply of green food daily, and add to the drinking water every second day six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence. After this treat all that have colds and pant the same as advised to "Border Fancy" in this issue. Feed the cocks that are losing feathers the same as advised to "A Novice" in this issue, except the soft food, instead of which give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day. In the water, instead of the quinine mixture give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day for two or three weeks, and on the alternate days give those that also have colds the chlorodyne mixture advised for the hens. As regards mating the hen that has built a nest, if she has not already laid, and these colds yield readily to the treatment advised, you may try mating her with one of the cocks that is not losing feathers, as a "mere spec." It may be your only chance this season, but do not expect much from such a mating. It will be quite useless mating her with a cock that is losing feathers. Shall be glad to hear result in two or three weeks hence.

THUNDER AND MOULT (A. M. J.).—Many thanks for your information about the second clutch of eggs having dead embryos in them, and the incidence of another thunderstorm during the time of incubation. I frankly admit you have experienced a very remarkable chain of coincidences which may make it very difficult for you to really believe that thunder has no effect on eggs undergoing incubation, especially if you had no other eggs being incubated simultaneously, nor knew of any others near you, which were unaffected by these storms. As regards the lightning being the cause, it is undoubtedly possible, but in a high degree improbable, that in very exceptional circumstances, when the atmosphere is highly charged with electricity for some time it may produce some effect on unhatched embryos. But even then you must see that any such effect must be general over the affected area, and cannot be limited to a single nest. In all probability weak embryos were the cause of the failures to complete development in your cases. (2) For moulting a bird under the circumstances you name, give in addition to the staple diet of mixed seeds a small teaspoonful of egg food twice a week only. On two other days during the first half of the moult give a third of a teaspoonful of maw, and during the latter half substitute for this a pinch of linseed or a few chopped sunflower seeds. Give a little green food or wild seeds, in variety, plantain, shepherd's purse, chickweed, dandelion heads, etc., etc., daily. See also reply to "A Constant Reader" this week. Allow bird to bathe freely.

OFF SONG ALTOGETHER (Jack, Reader "C.B.").—I'm afraid you have completely ruined this bird's health by hanging it in the window. The fickle appetite is doubtless due to its generally unhealthy condition. It is quite useless treating it in its present position. Remove it from the window, and keep it in a bright, healthy, and well-ventilated place, free from impure air, dust, fumes or direct draughts. The bird would indeed be far better out in the open altogether than hanging in the window. Having altered the conditions, treat the bird for two or three weeks, as may appear necessary, the same as advised to "Border Fancy" in this issue.

STOPPED SINGING (Gerean).—The loss of the wing and tail feathers is quite sufficient evidence that the bird has already commenced its second moult. The first moult must have been completed when you bought the bird. This moulting would account for the loss of song, but its position hanging in the window, and its condition in being tormented with insects, are also each in itself sufficient to stop the bird singing on account of ill-health. Therefore, it is scarcely reasonable to expect song with such a combination of adverse circumstances. Remove the cage from the window, and thoroughly overhaul it to eradicate insects. Give bird a bath in which a few drops of essence of quassia has been mixed twice a week, and touch ends of perches, joints of door, etc., with a camel-hair pencil dipped in the strong essence twice a week for a time. See reply to "Jack, Reader of C.B.," in this issue, and treat your bird as therein advised, for two or three weeks. After this the moult will doubtless still have to run its natural course for a few weeks, but at the end of moult the bird will probably resume its song. It will not do so earlier.

GETTING THIN (Perplexed).—In the first place well examine the position of the Canaries to see if it is affected by damp or cutting draughts. If it is, this must be remedied before treatment can be properly effective. Also continue using mite destroyer regularly once or twice a week to keep this pest well under. Keep cage well strewn with clean, gritty sand, and the seed and water vessels scrupulously clean. Give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple diet. In addition give daily for the next fortnight a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled over with a third of a teaspoonful of maw seed. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of scalded rape, and on two other days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and millet. Give a little seedy shepherd's-purse, plantain, groundsel, chickweed, or dandelion heads daily. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, for three consecutive days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week, and on the alternate days 20 drops of chemical food, continuing the latter for a fortnight.

AILING HEN (Miss Pratt).—It is, of course, quite possible the hen caught cold on the journey, and this may have developed into a bronchial attack. You cannot treat her properly for this whilst feeding young, and as she has already commenced another nest it is not judicious to interfere with the course of events. For the present treat as follows: See that she is not exposed to direct draughts, and do not offer the bath on chilly days until the panting has quite ceased. Give a morsel of bread and milk with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar each day for a week or so, in addition to the egg-food. Also add a sprinkling of maw to the egg-food, and give a little scalded rape daily. In the water add 20 drops of whisky and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for one-half of each of two consecutive days, and afterwards substitute 20 drops of chemical food daily for a week or so. When she ceases feeding the young add to the water 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together. Give this two days in every three for a week, and every second day in the next week.

SWOLLEN STOMACH (E. M.).—Treat as follows for a fortnight, and if not then quite well write again and give fuller particulars. You omit to mention all the most important details this time. Keep in a bright and dry position, in a pure atmosphere, but free from cutting draughts. Give plain canary only as staple diet. In addition give every second day a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, and a third of a teaspoonful of maw seed. On the intervening days twice each week give a teaspoonful of scalded rape. Each day give a moderate supply of wild seedy things, such as plantain stalks, shepherd's-purse, seed heads of dandelion, groundsel, or chickweed. Limit diet solely to this. Keep cage floor strewn with clean, gritty sand. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny-piece for two consecutive days, and every second day afterwards for remainder of week. In the next week give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day.

MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

GREENFINCH-CANARY (J. O'M.).—If you possess a hen Canary you should not have much difficulty in producing Hybrids from your cock Greenfinch, as it is a cross that is not particularly difficult. To get exhibition specimens you want a large, good-feathered hen of nice type, a yellow bird if possible, as the yellow Hybrids are so much more valuable than the buffs. If your two birds have been in a position to see each other you could put them together at once, and if they agree fairly well leave them; if not, place the Greenfinch as near as possible to the Canary, and try him with her again in a few days. Repeat this if necessary until they settle down. Supply a nest box or pan, and plenty of nesting material, when probably the hen will soon commence to build. Feed on canary, 2 parts, rape, 1 part, a little hemp and sunflower about twice a week, with chickweed, shepherd's purse, dandelion, etc.

HYBRID BREEDING IN SMALL AVIARY (J. W. W.).—Sorry I misunderstood your previous query. In an aviary the size you mention the smaller the number of pairs you have for Hybrid breeding the better. If you intend to go in for Canary Hybrids I would advise about 4 good large hens and two cock British birds, say a Goldfinch and a Linnet or Greenfinch. If on the other hand you prefer to try for Hybrids between two British birds, three pairs would be quite sufficient, and, if the birds have not been properly mated (that is, flying together during the winter months), I would advise either Bullfinch or Greenfinch hens, as these are more likely to settle down to strange quarters. Fix up plenty of nest boxes in the partitioned portion, so as to entice the hens to build there, they will be less disturbed than in the open.

Answered by H. J. FULLJAMES.

SKYLARK WITH SWOLLEN RUMP GLAND (Fitchet).—Interfere with this gland as little as possible. Bathe gently in comfortably warm water until the obstruction is removed. I expect you will find this to be all that is necessary.

A FRAYED TAIL (Lincs. Lad).—It would serve no purpose to extract the tail feathers at this period. The new feathers would require six weeks for their development, and at about this time from now the bird will be moulting naturally.

ABOUT A LINNET (Novice, Wimbledon).—Glad to hear that you are satisfied with former reply. Please do not hesitate to ask questions at any time. Speaking for the experts who answer queries in other departments, as well as for myself, I need scarcely say that we are always pleased to do what we can to help readers of CAGE BIRDS. The packet seed does very nicely as a change, or as a supplement. I think there is little or nothing the matter with the foot of your Linnet; it is probably only a mannerism of the individual bird. If you have examined the bird in your hand, and can see nothing wrong you may rest content.

BRITISH BIRDS AS TALKERS (Garibaldi).—Either a Magpie or a Jay would make a better talker than a Jackdaw, and of the two former the Magpie is likely to be the better. Nothing in the bird's appearance would guide you as to its probable linguistic accomplishments. It is mainly a matter of chance, plus a considerable amount of patience in repeating to the bird short words and phrases. If you make a point of saying the same word or words every time you offer the bird some especial treat in the way of food it is probable that he will sooner or later repeat the phrase after you, and will afterwards use it occasionally. Birds that learn one word or a short phrase soon enlarge their vocabulary. Others never learn to speak at all.

CLAWS MISSING (C. Nicholson).—A loss of a claw is a handicap against a bird on the show bench; if the judge misses it, that is. Of course, a bird that has a claw short may be so far in advance of any other in the class that the defect does not stop it. This is entirely a matter for the judge: some would not give a prize to such a bird if they noticed it; others are not much influenced by such a defect. (2) No distinction is made between Hawfinches in respect of nationality. Quite a large proportion of winning Hawfinches are Continental birds.

MOULTING AND COLOUR-FEEDING A HAWFINCH (A. P. Morgan).—In nature, at the time of the moult the Hawfinch feeds very largely upon colour-giving berries, and these should be supplied to it when moulting in a cage. For seed, supply a mixture consisting mostly of sunflower, with a little hemp, canary, rape and linseed. Give also a mealworm or two occasionally, and for greenfood nothing is more liked than fresh garden peas. You may help the colour by judicious use of sweet pepper mixed with any kind of soft food that the bird will take. Some Hawfinches do not care for soft food, and in such cases it is difficult to administer the colour food. If you offer plenty of colour-giving berries it will not be necessary to use pepper.

SNOW BUNTINGS (Ginger). I do not know of any record of the breeding in captivity of the Snow Bunting. This is a winter migrant, and returns to the far north to breed, although some breed in the high mountains to the north of Scotland. The bird is intolerant of our summer heat, and I should take it to be a most unlikely breeder in captivity. At any rate, all those which I have had have been of far too restless a nature to suggest any hope of such a proceeding.

A CUCKOO QUESTION (T. Hart).—It is strange indeed, that your friend has never seen the stories published in the newspapers each spring alleging the arrival of the Cuckoo weeks or months before its proper time. There was quite an exceptional crop this year of these fairy tales. Certainly, the Cuckoo is a migratory bird. It arrives on our shores early in April and the old birds leave in August, the young following later, sometimes remaining until early October. An ancient idea was that the Cuckoo changed into a Hawk in autumn, and back again to a Cuckoo in spring, but this wheeze is as dead as those who invented it.

GOLDFINCH OUT OF SORTS (G.M.T.).—Are you sure that your cage is quite free of red mite? These nocturnal pests are often responsible for drowsiness during the day as a result of interrupted sleep at night. Search the perch ends and any other crevices for the fine white powder which betrays the hiding places of red mite, and cover the cage for a night or two with a white cloth, examining this each morning for any red mite which may have travelled to it on the approach of day. Instead of the seed you use, make up a mixture consisting of teasle and canary seed in equal parts, with a little linseed, charlock, and German rape added. Give on alternate days a teaspoonful of hemp, or a similar quantity of cracked sunflower. A separate mixture of ½lb. maw seed, ½ pint niger, 2ozs. thistle, and 1oz. dandelion seeds should be made, and about half a teaspoonful given daily. Give greenfood such as shepherd's purse, groundsel heads, chickweed, lettuce, cress, rape seedlings, etc. A short treatment with an aperient will be useful. Dissolve in its drinking water twice a week for a while as much sulphate of soda as will lie on a sixpence. When the bowels are moving freely, without being watery loose, give the soda only occasionally. The Nutshell No. 6, which you say you have, treats only of ailing birds. Nutshell No. 1, the Goldfinch, tells you all about the proper keeping of such a bird to prevent him from ailing.

FEEDING YOUNG GOLDIES AND CHAFFINCHES (W. G. Crofton).—Your birds should soon be getting to feed themselves. For the present, make a mixture of one part hard-boiled egg and two parts powdered sweet biscuit. The egg should be rubbed through a sieve or perforated zinc, and well mixed with the biscuit, moisten slightly with warm milk, and add a little chopped green stuff, such as chickweed, watercress, lettuce, etc; feed with this every two or three hours, and also give as many small insects, green fly, etc., as you can find, also a few steamed ants' cocoons ("ants' eggs"). As soon as they can feed themselves offer them some cracked hemp and freshly-gathered wild seeds such as dandelion, thistle, etc., continuing for a time to give a little of the soft food until you are able to wean them from this altogether. Our Nutshells No. 1, the Goldfinch, and No. 13, the Chaffinch, 2½d. each, post free from our publisher, or twopence each from your local newsagent or bird shopkeeper, will tell you all about the proper feeding of the birds as they get older.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

BUDGERIGARS AILING (Puzzled).—My opinion is that the bird is irritated by some minute skin parasite. You need have no fear of a chill if you keep the bird out of draughts. Spray it twice weekly with a quassia solution. Also put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day for a month. If the voidings should become watery loose, then only give it once a week. When not giving the magnesia, put half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water; treat as above for one month, when there should be an improvement in its condition. Watch the cage and do not permit any green deposit (verdigris) to remain on the brass wire. Diet: Canary and white millet in equal parts, also a millet spray, and give it as much flowering (seeding) grass as it will eat.

BENGALESE AND GOULDIANS (A.L.T.).—Bengalese are hardy. I have kept them out-of-doors all the year round. The aviary you describe appears to me suitable in every way, and you should have good results from it with Ruficauda, Goudian, and other Grassfinches. The Budgerigars would be better put in an aviary by themselves. All the other birds you name are safe, but sooner or later you will be picking birds up with broken legs, wings, or other mutilations—immunity for a time is always followed sooner or later by disaster. It is not maliciousness on the part of the Budgerigars, but playfulness, and Finches are ill-equipped to meet the playful advances of a Budgerigar's beak. Do not the Budgerigars cut your rhododendrons and creepers to pieces? You have an admirable aspect for keeping the birds you name.

GREEN BUDGERIGARS (H. Redfern).—Budgerigars are active birds, and ought not to be confined in a small cage; when they are so kept, they soon become moody, mopish, and unattractive. Do not have a brass cage, one of tinned wire is quite as handsome, and much more wholesome. I advocate a rectangular cage, say 24 x 12 x 15 inches high as the minimum. With a bushy twig at each end the centre of cage is left open and some exercise is compelled by the birds being compelled to fly from twig to twig. It is well too to give them their millet in the form of spray as this also entails a certain amount of enforced exercise in picking out the seeds. While it is in season give them as much flowering (seeding) grass as they will eat, tender lettuce is good when the grass fails. Supply them with a mixture of canary and white millet seeds, in equal parts, in addition to the spray millet, also grit, cuttlebone, and water. When tame enough, a fly round the room occasionally will tend to their general well-being.

FURNISHING CAGE FOR WAXBILLS (M. E. K.)—Get a couple of bushy twigs, say about 12 inches high, and fasten one at each end of the cage. Then get a rush nest and put one at the back of each spray of twigs. This leaves the middle of cage quite open, and the birds should do well and be quite contented and happy in such a cage. Waxbills, as a rule, agree together in almost any numbers, though when so kept they frequently spend so much time preening each other's heads that baldness is produced. However, I am bound to admit that many pairs of Cordon Bleus prove little demons while the nesting fever is upon them, and this is, I expect, the cause of the trouble in your birdy establishment. They will most probably live quite amicably together during the winter months.

COCKATOOS AND PARRAKEETS (J. Reid).—Seed mixture, fruit, plain biscuits, greenfood, nuts, grit cuttlebone, and water will meet the requirements of all three species, but the seed mixtures will vary a little. Cockatoo mixture: One pint each canary seed, white millet, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds; half a pint each nuts, wheat, white maize, hemp, and a gill of chilies, the whole to be well mixed. Parrakeet mixture: One quart each canary and white millet seeds and oats, one pint each hemp, wheat, and paddy rice, half a pint each shelled nuts, small Indian maize, and sunflower seeds, add a few chilies and well mix the whole. All Parrots are greatly benefited by exercise outside the cage when tame enough to be allowed out. Of course where several are kept they must not be allowed out together, neither allowed to fight through cage bars, if they should show any inclination to so indulge.

HEN BUDGERIGAR WITH SWELLING (D. E. Simpson).—Your query gives me no idea of the nature or extent of the swelling, and I really consider it a case where some vet. or experienced fancier ought to see it and tell you whether the bird ought to be destroyed or treated. I can only advise keeping it warm and fomenting the swelling with a decoction of hot camomile flowers, as hot as may be so that discomfort is not occasioned. A laxative—two drops of tasteless castor oil—direct to the beak is desirable; repeat daily till full relief has been given. Follow this by giving half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water daily for a month at least to tone the bird up a little. Personally, I should not care to use this hen for stock purposes again this season.

AMAZON ILL (J. T. D.).—Again I say continue the treatment, but after you have once cleared the nostril keep it open by spraying once or twice daily with the dilute glyco-thymoline. I should also contrive by some means to give a little honey and borax daily; if a little were smeared along the line of the two mandibles, a little, at any rate, would be sucked in. If the bird were mine, I should contrive some means of giving this without causing undue distress. I should also give the Dinneford's Magnesia sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving very freely, yet there must not be anything approaching the appearance of chronic diarrhœa. When not giving the magnesia, give half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water. While the warm weather lasts put her out of doors daily, but in such a position that it will not be exposed to driving winds, nor the sun shining directly on to the top of the cage; this may help to rouse the bird out of its lethargy, and will certainly benefit its health.

BUDGERIGARS (Novice, Enfield).—(1) Budgerigars are so kept by many, but there are occasional happenings, such as a Finch or a Canary getting a broken leg or wing, or damaged scalp—see other replies in this issue. (2) I consider in your aviary they would be better kept separate; the Budgerigar section is sufficiently large for three or four pairs to breed in. (3) Budgerigars use no nesting material; they deposit their eggs on the bottom of the husk or barrel. (4) A single pair of birds like to have some choice when seeking a nesting site, and when there are only two husks for two pairs of birds, the choice of both pairs often falls on the same husk, then instead of nesting, they fight for possession; this seldom happens when there are a number of husks about.

A BALD NONPAREIL (T.G.S.).—Nonpareils at times get into this stage; I should anoint the scaly portion occasionally with clean vaseline. Also keep the bowels quite open with occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia or salts. Put it in an outdoor aviary, where it will get plenty of light, green food, and a few insects, in addition to the ordinary seeds. If the season proves a good one, open-air treatment alone will suffice to work a cure, but you should soften the skin with vaseline and give a laxative before turning it out. Do not use sufficient vaseline to make the plumage greasy, only enough to moisten the skin, as a bird with greasy plumage is very miserable indeed till it gets rid of it.

MIXED AVIARIES (E. P. Salop).—It is quite the usual happening, though mixed series may be kept (even outrageous mixtures) for a long time without such happenings. Wherever Budgerigars, also other Parrakeets and Lovebirds, are kept with Finch-like birds, broken legs and wings, or worse happenings, sooner or later occur; but, even then, unless the Parrakeet-like birds are numerous, tragedies are not persistent. I am not advocating the mixture, simply placing the facts before you. The Budgerigars are the cause of disasters among your Canaries. Very many keepers of Foreign birds include a pair or two of Canaries, and these just take "pot luck" as to food with the other species, and as a rule every young bird hatched out is reared. The "bill of fare" in aviaries containing mixed series of Foreign birds usually includes seeds, fruit, insectile mixture (soft food), milk-sop, and live insects. If only seed-eaters are kept, then the bill of fare covers unlimited greenfood, seeds in variety, insectile mixture, and some live insects—quite ample for the successful rearing of vigorous young Canaries. You do not say what kind of Lovebirds yours are, therefore I can make no other comment than—there is plenty of time yet. I use only husks or barrels as nest receptacles for the Parrakeet tribe. I am afraid I have never computed the cost per bird in my aviary accounts. Supplies are got in and replenished as required, and I try to avoid wastage to keep cost down. Softbills and Hardbills can be kept together. Many Hardbills are keen on insects and will compete with the Softbills for these. Again, they may help themselves to the insectile mixture. But this need not be costly, and they will eat less seed. I have already partly answered your query re Canaries; egg food is not necessary for them. Finches and Softbills are annually reared in my aviary, and I have not given egg in any form for more than eight years. Seed and unlimited green food fully meets the case for Canaries out-of-doors, but I always supply insectile mixture as well. I note your remarks re mealworms; the different prices you name are all pro rata according to the quantity offered. Several Softbills go together at quite a nominal cost in a mixed aviary, but I shall not attempt to give the cost of a single Softbill—it resolves itself to this—get half-a-pound of some good insectile mixture. Yes, you could keep Buntings with your lot. They will run the same risk as the Canaries as to damage from Budgerigars. You do not tell me how many birds you have, but I should call your place overcrowded with 50. For breeding purposes a dozen pairs would be nearer the mark. Slightly moistened sponge cake is used by many Finches as an aid in the bringing-up of a family. The nest is most like that of a Zebra Finch or Silverbill, but many of the Ornamental Finches weave similar nests.

SMALL PARRAKEETS AND LOVEBIRDS (Foreign Birds).—The Peach-faced is a handsome and rare species, but it is quarrelsome and needs an enclosure to itself, though several pairs may be kept together. The choice among Lovebirds is not great, and you are practically restricted to the Black-cheeked and Madagascar, both really handsome. The Passerine Parrakeet (Blue-wing Lovebird), is another beautiful species you could have. You could also, according to opportunity, have a pair of either Tovi, Canary-winged, or all Green Parrakeets, not all three, but choose one of them; it is not well to have too many of the same genus in the same aviary. Red Rosella Parrakeets are usually amiable, and you could have a pair of these. All the above usually agree together, and all should be probable breeders; practically the same treatment will suffice as for Budgerigars and Cockatiels, but you should offer ripe fruit as well as green food. The Lovebirds named above line their nests with leaves, bark, etc.

BIRDS FOR SMALL AVIARY (A.W.).—You are not entitled to a reply, as name and address were not sent—note rules. In so small an aviary only the front, which should be as near full South as possible, should be of wire netting, and a wood and glass shutter, or canvas blind should be made to fit the front, for night use, also during bad weather. You must put sufficient glass into the ends to make the aviary light when the front is closed up; all glass must be covered with half-inch mesh netting on the inside. Put in pairs of Silverbills, Bronze Mannikins, Zebra Finches, Avadavats, Grey Waxbills, and Bengalese. These would make a pleasing series; you could also include a pair of Golden-breasted Waxbills, and these eight pairs would be as many as you could accommodate with any chance of breeding success.

REARRANGEMENT OF AVIARY (T. J. J.).—You did not send an addressed envelope, so I cannot forward you a diagram, and it is difficult, even with the aid of your photograph, to aid you without, yet you only need a little rearrangement to rectify the trouble. The main trouble is the wind blowing right through. Again, the swinging perch in the dome, the most exposed part of the aviary, is a mistake; the dome is a good place for the birds to take wing exercise in, but not for them to rest in after their exertions. I notice that you have glass at the right of photo; if glass were carried right along the back, the semi-circular portion being open would not matter so much if you take down all perches therefrom. Also front of the shelter portion should be wood and glass, and not wire netting, as shown in yours. These alterations would materially improve the aviary, which only wants a little rearrangement to be quite a success. It is a good aviary, and it is really a pity that you only get partial success therefrom. I feel this so much that if you care to get my address from the Editor, I will break through my usual rule and give you an object lesson from my own aviary by appointment. You are, I think, in the S.E. district and I am in S.W.

WEAVERS AND GRASSFINCHES (Aviculturist).—It is not possible to give full details here; get our "Nutshell, "Gouldian Finches," 2½d., post free from our manager, and you will get all details. Hen Weavers are more or less like Sparrows all the year round, but if there are any males at all among your birds, they will begin to don the gorgeous nuptial plumage almost at once. I can't name them for you till you can describe the nuptial plumage of the cocks; there are many kinds of Weavers more or less like Sparrows when in undress plumage. Gouldian Finches are not hard to obtain at the present time, but they are not easy to acclimatise. They are being advertised in our columns at the present time, and the price for good birds is about 30/- for Red-heads, and 25/- for Black-heads. It is well to give them only boiled water for drinking purposes for some little time after first acquiring them. Canary, white millet, spray millet, unlimited green food (seeding or flowering grass is best). A rush nest is a good receptacle; supply hay and grass for building material, and a little insectile mixture if young are hatched out.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

F. E. Nutman: Your communication has been forwarded to the writer of the letter.

M. C. M.: The hemp marked No. 2, seems to be the cleanest sample, but we prefer No. 1 as, so far as we can judge, it is better in the kernel (i.e., is seen to be much more free from discoloured, brownish, kernels when crushed).

W. H. M.—We do not know of any book dealing solely with the Canary from the point of view you mention. Do you not find all the necessary information in the books you already have?

H. A. Davies.—We have no doubt that the method you describe of keeping wire-work free from rust is a good one, but it is too much in the nature of a free advertisement of the polish in question for us to publish.

P. H. P.—Special boxes (known as travelling boxes or cages) are used, and these are sold cheaply by all the large dealers and appliance makers advertising in our columns. Put one bird in each box. with some seed on the floor, tie the three boxes together wrap them in brown paper, tie up securely, then label the package, using one of the special live bird labels sold by us (24 for 3d.) and make a few small air-holes in the paper covering. This should be done in the evening, and the birds be delivered to the railway company in time to reach their destination early the next morning. No water is needed in the travelling box except on very long journeys. The young bird would travel all right, but would be all the better if a week or two older.

A Cock Canary that Helps Incubate the Eggs.

Sir,—I thought the following might interest your readers. I have a Yorkshire cock mating with a Roller-Yorks. cross hen. The hen has laid four eggs, and her mate shares the duty of incubating with her. Day and night they sit side by side on the eggs, only coming off for food and water, and to stretch their legs. I should like to know if any other breeder has had the same experience.

The L.C.B.A. Young Bird Show.

The Venue: A Correction.

Sir,—My attention has just been called to an error in the schedule of the Young Bird Show of the London C.B.A. this Saturday, June 21st, at St. Margaret's School (not St. Michael's), Dean Farrar Street, Westminster, S.W. Kindly announce this correction. I hope to be at the Schools at 9 a.m. on the morning of the show. All birds must be staged by 2 p.m.

Early Hatching of a Chaffinch's Egg.

Sir,—After reading Mr. McDonald's letter in Cage Birds, I thought the few lines I am writing would be of interest to bird lovers. I have a hen Canary and cock Linnet mated together, and though the hen laid 3 eggs, I was almost sure they would all be clear. I asked a friend of mine if he knew of any Chaffinch eggs. He told me he had one, which he had taken from a nest a week ago. I had that one, and put it under the hen Canary on the 1st of June (at the same time as the Canary's eggs). To my surprise, on the 12th, in the morning, when I was feeding the Canary, I found the young Chaffinch in the nest. I did not expect it until the 14th, as it was in the evening of the first of June that I sat the hen on the eggs. I find one of the Canary's eggs is fertile. I shall let her bring the two of them up if it comes off all right.

A "Nightingale" that Hoaxed Hundreds with its Song.

Sir,—I noticed a letter recently stating that the Nightingale was singing at Wirral, in Cheshire. This may be true enough, but another is reported at Wigan, which seems to be a hoax. It reminds me of the famous hoax of four years ago, when owing to the report that a Nightingale was singing, crowds were attracted to a wood in Old Road, Ashton-the Makerfield, many making the journey from all parts of Wigan district in wagonettes, char-a-bancs, and other vehicles. Night after night people gathered to listen to what were described as bewitching strains. Probably no one there had ever heard a Nightingale, but the widely circulated reports brought to the township one who was well acquainted with the bird. Then it was discovered there was something wrong with the enchanting thrills. Certain notes were not in harmony, and when this fact was made known, the Warbler took a rapid departure. Later on it was hinted that a huge hoax had been perpetrated. A clever Wigan whistler had supplied the melody!

Some Interesting Happenings of the Present Season.

Sir,—Noticing you solicit results of the 1913 breeding season, I thought the following might prove of some interest. I have at present 9 promising young Norwich on the sticks. I also have 5 full eggs from cock Siberian Goldie and yellow Norwich hen. I also have 2 young ones in the nest nearly fledged, that I fondly imagined were from this same pair, but I am afraid I must have got my eggs mixed, as these two birds are Clears, and such a bit of luck could not possibly happen to me! I still, however, have a grain of hope left. You can understand, under the circumstances, how anxious I am about these other 5 full eggs, as I know I have not mixed these. The following I am quoting for the benefit of the people who consider the keeping of birds in cages must necessarily be cruel. I have a Greenfinch cock I caught in my garden, and gave him liberty the next day. He, however, still insists on coming to his cage for food and water, and appears to have no objection to me closing the door on him for the night. At the present time he is busily occupied in trying to reach a Greenfinch hen I have in the aviary, destined for hybrid breeding. In this aviary, among other British birds and Canaries, I have a Chaffinch hen that has built her nest and laid 3 eggs. They were, however, clear. She is now busy building again in same place, namely, a box placed just under the roof of the aviary. If any of your readers are at all sceptical about these notes, I shall be pleased to show them these birds if they care to give me a call on Sunday mornings, when I am usually at home (the Editor has my full address).

A Siskin Mule Said to have Bred Young.

Sir,—May I ask if any of your readers have been successful in breeding young from a cock Siskin Mule, and a hen Canary, as I have 3 young on the sticks now from the above cross? I should be very pleased if you think it worth while to put this in your valuable paper.

Aberavon. Wm. Jones.

[We do not remember to have previously heard of a Siskin Mule breeding. We should be interested to see the youngsters after they have moulted.—Editor.]

A Roomy Nest for Canaries.

Sir,—The breeders of Canaries, who still prefer the old-fashioned wood box, with moss and cow hair for the nest, will find a loose partition in same very useful. I find a wooden box, 4½in. x 3½in. x 2in. deep the most convenient, starting with partition in box at 3½in. sq., and extending it to the 4½in., as the young birds grow, thus giving them plenty of room, and preventing the hen sweating the young.

The Tree Pipit, a Nice Pet and a Good Songster.

Sir,—The Tree Pipit is one of our spring visitors, and greatly resembles the Titlark (Meadow Pipit), both in appearance and its song, and is often mistaken for it; but as a songster I consider it much superior, although some may differ from me. Only once have I kept this species in a cage, but the one I had proved both a good pet and a good singer, and lived with me for some years. I cannot now recall how I parted with it, but it most probably died, as I very seldom sold a bird which I loved. This bird I managed to catch in the autumn, and it readily took to cage life and soon became quite steady. I fed it on a good soft food mixture, and plenty of ants' eggs, and dried flies. I could not procure many insects for it at that time of year, but it was very fond of cockroaches, and from a bakehouse I was able to get sufficient to keep it going. It also consumed some canary seed, and small pieces of tail wheat, siftings from the thrashing machines, and mealworms. The bird is about 5½in. long. It frequents pools and marshes, and undrained meadow land and woods near rivers or water. They build on the ground. The hen lays 4 or 5 eggs of a pale purplish colour, which, however, vary to a remarkable degree.

The Puzzle of Yellows and Buffs

Mr. Johnson affirms that things are not always what they seem; also writes interestingly on the breeding of yellows from two buffs.

Sir,—It is with a contrite spirit that I commence to pen these lines, which are a very belated acknowledgment of Mr. Garner's letter, which appeared in your issue of May 31. I have been waiting for Mr. Weston's notes to appear before answering, so that I could, as it were, kill two birds with one stone; but I think that the two birds between them have nearly killed me, or at least have left me with no leg to stand on, which is much the same thing. With such talent against me as Mr. Weston and Mr. Garner, and the conclusive evidence both have adduced, one would be something of a doubly distilled churl if he weren't to acknowledge defeat. Mr. Garner's arguments, however, would have been even more reliable had he given the name of that well-known Norwich breeder, who had the Cinnamon-marked birds in his room, and if he (Mr. Garner) had colour-fed the progeny from the double buff breeding? I once bred a buff from two clear yellows, and paired him up to a buff hen bred the orthodox way; but I got nothing from them but buffs. Mr. Garner says that to try to get yellows from buffs, which have been bred in the ordinary manner, is like going through Newcastle to get to London. I agree with him. I was never much enamoured with double yellow breeding, and especially if it was for the purpose of double buffing again the year following. That to my mind is like starting from Rochdale to get to some place unknown, and after a tour in the wilderness, you find yourself where you started from. I have bred good coloured buffs from two buffs which would have passed as yellows; but all are not yellows that appear to be so. Last show season there was a Crestbred bird winning at a few classic shows in the yellow class. It is quite possible that bird was bred from two buffs; nay, considering the extent that buff breeding is resorted to in Crest circles, it is more than probable. The breeder of that bird may possibly think (I suppose he is sure) that the bird is a yellow. The judges must also think so, too; but I call it a buff. It has more meal on its neck and shoulders than many a poor coloured Norwich, and if it were colour fed, would soon show that it wasn't a yellow. To show how misleading a naturally good coloured buff is, I will mention a personal case of a few years ago. A real good coloured buff was exhibited at our first feather show, which won. The week following, it went to a show in a neighbouring town as a buff, and was disqualified, the judge saying it was a yellow. Although I protested it had won in the buff class the week previously, he wouldn't have it; and he was backed up by every fancier in the room. That was long odds against me; but I knew it was a buff, and events proved me right when it was colour fed. At the same show the judge gave a good coloured buff 1st in the yellow class, and awarded it 1st a few weeks later in the yellow class at our second show. That bird won in the open, when colour fed, as a buff, and was sold to a well-known breeder. But before it was colour-fed, it won as a yellow. No longer since than last season one of our members had a nest of four clear birds, all a very good colour. I told him two were yellows and two buffs. He exhibited them as such, and the judge promptly disqualified the two buffs as yellows. As I had advised the owner they were buffs, I was a bit upset; and of course the arguments were rather warm on the subject, so warm that I accepted a bet, myself betting that both birds were buffs when colour fed, the other party affirming they were yellows. I won. Now, sir, I have only mentioned four birds which have come under my own personal experience, but there are hundreds of cases similar; and it is certain that if these four birds had never been colour fed, they would always have passed as yellows, being such a good colour. I have mentioned these cases to show that it isn't always reliable to base arguments of colour on a natural coloured bird. Of course, when I gave my opinion that breeding yellows from two buffs was impossible, I was speaking chiefly of birds bred the ordinary way, or nearly so; but with Mr. Weston's four generations of double-yellow, sister-to-brother breeding—well, it is a wonder he ever reared any on which to base his evidence. As to breeding a jonque Mule from a buff hen Canary, I must say it is very rare; but, then, Mr. Weston would certainly have been using a jonque Finch.

Novice Border Classes in the South.

Sir,—The Portsmouth and Southern Counties' C.B.S. put on two novice Border classes at their 3rd annual show, November 5th, 1912, receiving 10 entries in the two classes, viz., 4 A.V. yellow, 6 A.V. buff. Not very encouraging this, considering they were offering good specials, and full prize-money for 8 entries. Further, we advertised the full classification in Cage Birds. If Mr. J. Williams will send us his address, we will forward him our schedule, and hope he and his friends will favour us with some entries for our next annual show, and any suggestion for making the Border classes a success.

King and Joiner.

80, Stubbington Avenue, Portsmouth.

Sir,—Respecting no classes for novice Borders at our Southern shows, I have heard this cry for the last two or three seasons. Some three seasons back Clapham C.B.A. put on a large classification, including a novice class, but the entry was not in any way satisfactory. Last year Wimbledon put on two novice classes, and received nineteen entries. But during this time the "wee gems" have greatly advanced in the South, so there is not the least doubt that it will be to the benefit of societies to add the two novice classes required by the S.B.F.C. The membership of the S.B.F.C. is now approaching a hundred, and quite half of that number are novices. The S.B.F.C. can and will do a lot for the novice, but novice members should help by sending out and filling the classes at shows receiving the club's patronage.

A Remarkable Experience with Bullfinches.

Hen Brings Her Mate to the "Old Home"—a Cage.

Sir,—Seeing Mr. H. Webster's account of his Chaffinch, I am giving my account of a hen Bullfinch. Having a cock Bullfinch in a cage on a balcony, a very young Bullfinch came, and I caught it and put it in a separate cage; this was about the middle of the summer. Afterwards I found the latter bird was a hen, so I let it loose one morning, but in the afternoon it returned and perched itself on one of my girls' shoulders. The cage was still standing on the balcony empty, and the hen bird then flew in. I gave it some seed in the cage, and it used to fly in and out several times a day, and always slept in the cage. At the beginning of spring, one day it returned, accompanied by a splendid cock, and while the hen was feeding, the cock was flying round the cage. Gradually the cock got quite used to the cage, and after a few weeks I shut both in a breeding cage, but the cock unfortunately died after being there three days. I then let the hen loose again, and a few days after she returned with another cock; I let them both remain free. At the back of the house were some trees, and they built a nest, and she laid five eggs. But they were destroyed, as the nest could easily be seen. They built again, with, however, the same result. The third nest was built out of reach, and they were able to rear three young. We brought the young ones from the tree to the cage, but before they were a week old, we missed both mother and father, and after feeding them for a time, they died. We found out the parents had been trapped by someone. The time I had them together was about 12 months. I have kept many birds, but I have never had as strange an experience with others. Many bird fanciers came and saw the Bullfinches.

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

As an experiment I have placed within hearing of this Flat Glucke songster, a young cock bird, ten months old, which is the result of several years breeding for depth of tone, at the same time experimenting to breed out a High and Sharp Bell Tour, which was prominent on the dam's side. The result so far is that this young cock is singing a light toned Hollow Roll of little value, a short Hollow Bell, a good deep Hollow Schockel, a good deep Bass roll, one deep set of Du-Du-fluto notes, also one lighter toned set, which are now as the bird is rank in song, brought high, and sometimes sharp, a short Bell Roll, and one of the old-time fashionable Water Glucke tours. For the latter I cannot find a better description than the one a novice used when returning the bird after I had lent it to put a hen to nest. His words were: "What is that deep tone, that rattles so inside the song cabinet?" This young cock's sire used to sing a good Hollow Glucke tour, but has now quite forgotten it. After a week's tuition under the flat Glucke singer, this young cock has not attempted to sing either the good or the faulty Glucke tours. He has learned to sing, in the same style as his tutor, a rising Water Roll of no value, as all the watery sound heard in a good Roll is entirely absent.

Imitating the Song With Words.

An exact sounding of the different ways the birds will bring their Rolls, and Tours, cannot always be described in writing; but as a guide to learning the names of the different song passages, I have endeavoured to describe the sounds that will be heard in the classical or well-delivered Rolls and Tours. The same may be said of the faulty tours, as some birds will sing them sounding more objectionably than other, so I have given an imitation of what may be heard in the tours when they will be the most objectionable and detrimental to the bird's song. Another way of learning the names of the song tours is to make the acquaintance of other Roller fanciers, and listen to their birds. Or if you should purchase any birds from a distance, ask the seller to tell you what tours the birds are singing. Still another way is to attend the exhibitions; as a rule, however, this is rather disappointing from the beginner's point of view, because so many birds are singing at the same time; it is confusing to him, yet if he will "buttonhole" one of the show officials he will learn something.

Song-cage is a fanciers' term, but a household word among Roller Canary fanciers. Probably it has derived the name from the purpose it is used for—that is, to house, or keep a bird in when it is only required for singing purposes. Some of our terms are quite foreign to the "man in the street"; an instance of this calls to mind the ironmonger's assistant, who sent a "Roller" fancier's son to a toy shop because he thought the lad, when asking the price of a certain "song-cage," was inquiring for some kind of a mechanical toy.

The Cage to Preserve the Song.

The two patterns of song-cages that are mostly used, are the wire song cage, and the shutter cage. The former has a removable tin or zinc bottom; otherwise, as the name implies, it is made entirely of wire. A stronger and a more serviceable cage than those usually imported from Germany can be made from punched bar and wire by any wire worker. The construction of these wire song-cages is very simple; they afford no harbouring place for red mite, and are easy to clean. A useful size is 8 inches high, 7 inches wide, and 9 inches long. In itself, an open wire cage is very unsuitable from the point of view of preserving the bird's voice; so some fanciers place them inside a song cabinet. These cabinets are a little larger than the cages, and made either of wood or tin, and have a pair of folding doors at the front. The wooden ones are mostly used; they can be made to hold from one to any desired number of cages, but it is not advisable to have a cabinet to hold more than six cages, because it would be so heavy to move about.

For Fanciers With Many Cages.

Another method that is adopted where a large number of cages are used, is to place them on a tier of shelves. with a partition, made of either wood, tin, or cardboard, between each cage. In lieu of the folding doors, a curtain made of a dark coloured material is suspended in front. Another way is to have a spring Roller blind. working on the same principle as those fitted to a railway carriage window.

The shutter-cage is an ordinary box-cage, i.e., made with the back, top, sides, and bottom, of wood, with a removable wire front; it also has a removable tin or zinc bottom, made to draw out from the back of the cage. The door is cut in the side, and a pair of folding doors at the front (on the same principle as the cabinet). This is the cage that the British Roller Canary Club has adopted as the standard show cage. It is ten inches long, 10 inches high, and 5 inches wide. The seed hopper and water fountain slide into two apertures made in the cage front. It is stained black outside, and enamelled pale blue inside. A shutter-cage to keep a bird in at your home should be made a little wider than the above dimensions.

We use several kinds of cages to breed the "Roller" in. Some English fanciers will use one that is also favoured by breeders in Germany; it is made of stout wire, and has a wooden or zinc bottom; some of these are so constructed that they may be folded up when not in use, and this will be found convenient in many instances, as when not in actual use they take up very little room. They are more expensive to purchase than the wooden breeding cages, but fanciers who have used them speak highly in their favour. With this style of cage it is usual to have them large enough to accommodate a number of birds, and to breed on what I have heard described as "swarm breeding." Four hens are sufficient for the average cock, and he must be in good condition. The hens and cock are turned altogether into one of these wire breeding cages, two cocks should never be put together in the breeding season into one cage; nothing less than a small room is large enough to hold them, or they will fight like game cocks, for of all breeds of Canaries the German is the gamest.

Eighty Young From One Cock Bird.

It will be noticed that I write the "average" cock; some will be unable to fertilise the eggs of three or four hens, while others seem to have no limit to their powers. I have a vivid recollection of one of this stamp. In the year 1893, a fancier friend turned into a small room twelve hens and one vigorous cock, and at the close of the season he had eighty young birds, while more than this number were hatched and not reared. The majority of these eighty youngsters were hens. The old cock did not fertilize any eggs afterwards, as this stupendous performance had sapped all his breeding powers. This way of breeding has its advantages, also its disadvantages. It is a labour saving method, as only one vessel is needed for the egg-food, one for water, and only one seed hopper is needed; and the cage being made of wire, there is less harbour for the red mites. The nest-pans are arranged outside the cages. A considerable outlay in the purchase of cock birds is saved when this method is adopted.

The Cockatoo in Australia 116 Years Old!

Sir,—I have often seen this bird; in fact, I seldom pass "Tom Ugly's Point" without stopping to see her, and the last time I was there she was collecting for the hospital, and I believe collects quite a large amount. I have never heard this bird talk, but I am told she says: "Give me one more feather, and I'll fly."

Hearing the Nightingale's Song.

Sir,—As I shall be in London about the 28th of this month, will you kindly inform me whether I shall be in time to hear the Nightingale, and if so where is the best place to go to make sure of hearing it; also what is the best time of day or night? If any of your readers have any singing in captivity, an invitation to hear them would be highly appreciated.

An Australian.

[Our correspondent is somewhat late so far as the wild birds are concerned. The nearest spot to the metropolis is probably Epping Forest. If "An Australian" will call at our offices, we shall be glad to give him fuller particulars.—Editor.]

Ensuring the Happiness of Caged Birds.

Sir,—I well recollect that a writer for Cage Birds Annual once said: "Remember, a cage cannot be too large—for the bird." I have been astonished at the number of people, apparently kind-hearted and fond of animal life, who doom their pets to imprisonment in cages so small that it is impossible for them to exercise themselves, or, indeed, even to turn round without brushing their tail feathers. That the little creatures can adapt themselves to such unnatural conditions of life is no excuse for our making them do so; and the selfish consideration that they sing more, having no other means of engaging their activity, even if it were true, would surely not have part in a humane mind. I think a good rule would be to have the cages of all birds at least three times the length of the bird, with sufficient perches of different sizes to allow change of movement of the feet, at the same time leaving room for them to flutter their wings. A cheap wooden cage about 18 x 16 x 10 can be had for three or four shillings; but care should be taken to remove the wretched thin perches with which they are sometimes fitted. It should not be forgotten that birds love a little amusement. I have found some of mine play with ends of string or ribbon tied to their perches, with great zest. To Budgerigars, and other birds, a bowl of freshly mown grass, at this season full of seed tips, will provide an engrossing pastime, and afford a natural meal into the bargain. We keep birds in captivity solely for our own pleasure; and the least we can do is to ensure them as much comfort and happiness as lies in our power.

Helping the Hen Bullie.

Sir,—I am trying to breed Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids, but got trouble with Finch sitting on nest, so I am trying this idea, and I thought it might interest you. My Bullfinch is now building in an old Thrush's nest, and I find she keeps out Mr. Goldfinch. The box is 8 inches square, sides 1½ high. I arranged some sprays of green box (each side) pushed in and held in place by nest. I filled in corners where nest does not fit, with moss, hole 2½in., perch 2½in. in front, fixed on end of cage, about 1in. from top of cage; no top on box, it gives plenty of light, etc.

Roller Hens which Object to Marking Rings.

Sir,—One cannot but admire many of your readers for the skilful contrivances they have adopted from time to time as a preventative against their hens maltreating nestlings wearing closed rings. Before these closed rings became "fashionable" in Roller circles we heard more of this trouble, and some fanciers would stain the rings in a solution of permanganate of potash; another would cover them with cycle valve tubing, which proved very effective. I have made exhaustive enquiries into the cases that have come under my personal notice, and have found that one cause of this trouble is that the hen is not wearing a ring. If a split ring (i.e. a ring to open) is placed on the hen's leg previous to the breeding season, and sufficiently long enough for her to become accustomed to it, I believe the trouble will cease. I thank those of your readers whose letters have appeared in these columns, also others who have written to me direct, for their kind and appreciative remarks concerning the articles now appearing on the Roller Canary. It is encouraging to know that some are receiving benefit by one's efforts.

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1913.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address.

Poor Luck at Sowerby Bridge.

I am very sorry we had such a poor first feather show, but I hope for better things later. Our members seem a little upset about their poor success so far this breeding season, but I wish them a better finish. Nearly all the members began badly with clear eggs, and also losing young, so that many had no birds old enough to show.—A. Sutcliffe, Sec., Sowerby Bridge and Dis. C.B.S.

Bad First Round at Oxford.

The majority of the members of the Oxford C.B.S., writes Mr. A. Lewin, have done rather badly on the first round, but are pulling up on the second round. Many clear eggs and young dead has been the cry. Mr. Woods has about 30 doing well. and our old veteran, Mr. White, has some Hybrids. I have myself had an excellent season, and have over 50 on the sticks, the hens feeding splendidly. I will get our Press secretary to send full list on the second round, which I hope will show better results.—A. Lewin.

KING'S LYNN C.C.

On June 1, at the invitation of the president, Capt. R. L. Bagge, 22 members had a splendid day's outing. Favoured with a fine day, a start was made at 10 a.m. from Gawood Hall. Led by our president, we were soon in one of the best wooded estates in Norfolk; it comprises the parishes of Gaywood, Mintlyn, Middleton, and Bawsey. Starting from the Gaywood woods, we were soon among the birds. Thrushes and Blackbirds were seen on the wing; here and there one could hear the notes of the Chiff Chaff, Chaffinch and Goldfinch; a fine pair of Bullfinches were seen. Making our way across the fields to the Mintlyn woods, the Woodpecker was heard, and plenty of bird life was to be seen. After walking a good distance, we found ourselves at Bawsey; here light refreshments were served, and after a rest we made our way to Gaywood Hall, the residence of our president, who honoured us with a good cold luncheon, to which we did full justice. After looking round the gardens, a tired and happy party bade our host goodbye, and we made our way home to Lynn.—A. Harrod, Hon. Sec.

HULL C.B.S.

Annual ramble to Houghton Woods took place June 7, in delightful weather, permission having been granted to visit same by the owner, Col. Langdale. Fifteen members and friends met at Cannon Street Station, and booked to South Cave, and then started on a tramp of about four miles through Newbald to the woods, Mr. F. F. Potter being the first of the party to record a find, a Blackbird's nest, with 5 eggs. More Blackbirds' and Thrushes' nests were soon found. The Cuckoo was heard frequently the whole afternoon. Other finds were: Chaffinch, 3 young, fully feathered; Blackbird, 3 young and 1 egg unfertile; Partridge, 5 eggs; Greenfinch, 5 young; Yellowhammer, 4 young, and a Hedge Sparrow's nest with young Cuckoo in. A quantity of Pheasants were seen during the afternoon. Tea time now arrived, we wandered back to the New Inn, Newbald, where the hostess, Mrs. Baker, had prepared a substantial repast, to which we did full justice. Tea over, and after about one hour rest, we retraced our steps to South Cave Station, and entrained for Hull, tired, but having spent an enjoyable time. The following members were present: Harland, Smith, F. F. Potter, Sutton, Calvard, Young, Fox, Kemp, Leghorn, Horsley, Clayton Brothers, and Heseltine.—L. Heseltine, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

An eventful and enjoyable time despite unfavourable weather.

In spite of the unfavourable conditions of the morning, 25 turned up at the starting point, the Park Hotel, Hillsboro', for the annual ramble, and we picked another half-dozen up en route, not a bad muster considering the weather. Taking the road through Beeley Woods on the way to Oughtibridge Station, where we were expecting meeting our Stockbridge members, we were greatly surprised to find the paths in the woods so dry, and the grass was not at all bad, so that we were able to at times wander from the beaten track. We soon were amongst the birds, a cuckoo greeting us in the first instance; Greenfinches, Thrushes, and Blackbirds abounded in great numbers. The first nest we discovered was of a Thrush with four young almost ready to go out on their own in the world. Blue Tits and Robins were very plentiful in all directions. We hereabouts came across an old silk hat, which had been commandeered by Master Bobbie and his mate—it was close to the pathside. This nest being so prominent caused our president to relate to us that a Hedge Sparrow has built a nest in a gooseberry bush, close to the path in his garden, but as he is a possessor of cats as well as birds, he is afraid the offspring will not have a very long life. We kept wandering on, everyone taking it easy; in fact, so much so that we were late getting to Oughtibridge Station, where we were to pick up the second contingent. When we got there the birds had flown, and the worst part was that our guide was with them. None of us knew the paths through Wharncliffe, which was the first wood we had to go through on leaving the station, so after a consultation we decided to take another route which we did know. All at once we noticed half-a-dozen or so of human beings in a plantation, at least we saw one of these individuals at the top of a tree, in which he had discovered a Stock Dove's nest. Congratulations went round as to dropping in with our guide, and we learnt that they had only gone for a stroll until we arrived. We at once tackled a steep incline which warmed us up before we got to the top of the wood. We here beheld a tremendous lot of birds: Chaffinches seemed to predominate, and some of them looked as though they would make Palace winners. After such a stiff climb, we were all glad to get on level ground, but we were well repaid for our climb. We could see all round for miles, for we had got on the top of the highest part of the district, and the panorama was glorious. We are now nearing our half-way house, where our president has arranged for a conveyance to meet us with refreshments on the road-side, and they were very acceptable, everyone seemed to be in form for them. After a rest and a refresher we commenced once more on a voyage of discovery in another part of the woods. This particular part is the home of the soft-bills; it is perfectly alive with ants, even to the paths; one cannot walk without killing hundreds at a time. Our guide is a great authority on ants, he making a study of them the same as we do birds, and he pointed out the different kinds, but we did not envy him when he put his arm in the midst of an ant hill amongst millions of these tiny pests; ants' eggs he tells us are at a premium this year, owing to the wet season in 1912; in fact we saw very few ants' eggs at all. We were so keenly interested in ants and their mode of life, which was so ably explained by our guide, that we forgot what time tea was ordered. As soon as we made this discovery the lecture on ants and their habits had to be abandoned, and we had to make the best of our way to the Norfolk Arms, where tea was provided. After tea was over, a hearty vote of thanks was proposed to our hostess, who suitably responded. We then commenced the homeward journey, landing in Sheffield about ten o'clock. The verdict was unanimous—what a day, what a tea, how tired we all were, which is proof in itself of the way we enjoyed ourselves.—John A. T. Woodall, Press Correspondent.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

A grand day spent in a spot where birds love to build.

Members had their first ramble June 8, when about 20 turned out. Arriving from Cowdenbeath, at Cardenden Station, we were met by two guides, kindly provided by the Right Hon. R. C. Munro Ferguson, M.P. Entering the grounds at Cardenden, the party was divided into two portions, one on each side of the river. Soon we were all busy on the look-out for nests. First honour fell to Mr. A. Harvey, he finding the beautiful nest of the Blue Tit, with seven eggs. This was quickly followed by Blackbirds', Thrushes', Chaffinches', more Tits', and, nicest of all, the beautifully constructed nest of the Wren, all of these nests containing eggs or young birds in various stages. Later on, where the woods got much closer, a Goldfinch's nest was the most striking find. Next our guide showed us the fox's den; the footprints left no doubt that he had been there before us that morning. After this one party crossed the Burn to join the others, and to report progress. Crossing was no gentle exercise, more than one just missing a dip in the clear water. Both selections had equally good luck in their search, and no wonder; if birds will build anywhere, it will be here. Our next visit was to the abode of our guides, the houses being in one of the prettiest spots we have yet seen. Mr. Ping and Mr. Hamil, of Auchterpool, were waiting for us here. Passing along on our way, Friend Jeffrey treated us to a learned discourse on the growth of the trees and woods in Scotland. Our guides also showed us another interesting affair, namely, the incubating of Pheasants' eggs, by the domestic hen. The call of the Bullfinch to his mate was plainly heard here, but only one nest was found, 3 eggs. Next a nest of the Owl and a little later the Hawk was seen hovering about. At Cluny Village a halt was called, and we proceeded to satisfy the inner man. Mr. A. Simpson may not be a chef, but he can certainly make sandwiches to satisfy a hungry crowd. On again, we entered the woods once more, many of the party now taking things easily. Still the younger bloods kept up the search with gratifying results. Many nests again were found. Soon after we reached Kirkcaldy, and our friend Mr. Ping here, in a very neat and witty speech, thanked all who had helped to make everything go so well. The Cage Bird Society officials, the guides, and last, but not least, the host, whose gracious permission had allowed us to visit some of the finest woods in Scotland. Mr. Hamil, Mr. A. Simpson, Mr. Menzies, and others helped to make a pleasant hour till train time. We arrived home in Cowdenbeath, all very tired, but thoroughly satisfied with a splendid day's enjoyment.—Joseph R. Reid, Assist. Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting held June 2nd. Messrs. G. Lawton, Bucknell, T. Pointon, Norton, Tarrant, and Baeford were elected members. Final arrangements were made for nest feather show, June 21. We are expecting a record entry. Nine classes for Canaries, three Mules, and five for British. Also three open classes; Norwich, Yorks, and Brown Linnet. Mr. J. Pitchford will exhibit the undefeated Goldfinch of last show season (not for competition). A lot of special prizes have been promised, including one of 5s. cash by Mr. Butters. Members entering more than four exhibits should not omit to nominate the birds they wish to compete for the gold medals.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

STANLEY (Victoria Club) F. & F.S.

Meeting held June 15, Mr. T. H. Curry chair. Mr. Curry spoke about his co-partner, Mr. E. Forsdick, leaving us to work at Nottingham. He was one of our most enthusiastic members, and we are very sorry to part with him; fanciers of the same sort as Mr Forsdick are not very common. Decided that the best wishes of all our members be given to Mr. Forsdick. Our char-a-banc trip terms were settled, and given a fine day, we will all enjoy ourselves, as the route chosen is noted for its bird life. We have 23 names down to go, and local fanciers wishing to go, had better give their names in at once, as there is only seating for 28.—R. Peart, Sec.

NORTH STAFFS ROLLER C.C.

Meeting held June 14, Evans' Cafe, Newcastle. Mr. Hickman presided and welcomed Mr. Poole, Bignall End, as a new member. We shall be pleased to see those fanciers who are making enquiries about joining us. Half-yearly sub. 1s. Agreed to hold a members' show, two classes, one for members' young birds, other open to North Staffordshire. Local fanciers kindly note this. Details later. In the event of a local judge being unobtainable, the Sec. will officiate. For convenience of members unable to attend Saturday meetings, a special will be held on Thursday, July 3, at 7, in addition to ordinary monthly meeting. "Everybody's doing it." What? Learning something at our meetings. Won't you. We are expecting Crystal Palace and Horticultural Hall winners at meetings shortly. The word is passed for it—J. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

LEINSTER O.S.

Monthly meeting held June 9, at 10, St. George's Place, Dublin. In the absence of Mr. Cloke, the chairman, through sickness, Mr. Birre occupied the chair. Letter was read from Mr. Hawkins, Queenstown, in which he generously undertook to present a solid silver cup for the coming show to either the exhibitor with most entries, or most points, details to follow. Letters were also received from other exhibitors wishing good luck to the committee. Bills for printing and staging were passed for payment. Hon. Sec. reported the cup fund to be in a very flourishing condition, along with the general funds of the society, and was instructed to thank the following gentlemen for their generous donations and general assistance for the sound establishment of the society; Messrs. W. Hawkins, Queenstown; J. T. Morgan, Mountmellick; W. Keating, Dundalk; J. Thompson, L. Stewart, and C. Fansey, Belfast; J. Lavery, Lurgan; B. Beegan, Kingstown; P. Carey, J. Walsh, and others. The Hon. Sec. would be very pleased to hear from fanciers who would be likely to exhibit in Border Fancy or Scotch Fancy classes, as valuable specials are likely to be put up at the forthcoming show if about 4 classes could be guaranteed in each section. Exhibitors desirous of becoming members should communicate.—C. Holley, Hon. Sec., 63, Fitzroy Avenue, Dublin.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Next monthly meeting, June 25, headquarters, Oldham Hall, Renshaw Street, Liverpool, at 8. Mr. Young will open a discussion on moulting Canaries, etc. Business of young show, July 19, will be settled and specials allotted. Will societies please note, July 17 is the latest date to receive applications for our patronage in the champion section. We thank those who have already applied and anticipate a record year in the Greens. Some topping birds have been bred by the novices.—F. Handley, Hon. Sec.

AYR C.B.C.

Meeting and N.F. show held in the Wallace Tower Hall, June 10, Mr. D. Watson chair. We were a little early with our nest feather show, and only fifteen birds were staged, most of these being Yorkshires, and some very fine ones were amongst them. The buff cock put down by T. Erskine was a treat, and will be heard of again, also two yellows belonging to A. Telfer, which will do their owner some good later. Other very close runners for the honours in Yorkshire classes were J. Cameron and A. Cook. Both these members put down some very nice birds, and we hope they will do better still next show. A yellow Norwich of Jas. McLauchlan's was worthy of note, and it was a pity he had not a keener class. Decided to hold next show July 12, at 2, with a number of British classes added. Mr. J. Kelly will judge British, and Mr. A. Girvan Canaries.—Robert Aitken, Sec.

THE STOCK BOOK

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Simplifies the operations in the Bird-room and makes it possible for every-one, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

CINNAMON-MARKED Y.C.C.

Meeting held June 28, at Market Tavern, Bradford, to approve of societies for patronage. The following dates have been applied for and granted:—Oct. 4, 11, 17-18, 24-25, Nov. 7-8, 15, Dec. 5-6-8, Jan. 10; 8 shows in all. Committee would like ten shows, and I am open to receive applications on other dates, from societies who are willing to give our classification. Subs. are now due, and can be paid to any member of committee.—R. Garnett, Sec.

WEST STANLEY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held June 11, at Headquarters; Mr. Butler, chair. We had a large turn-up of members. Secretary was instructed to write to the following clubs for their patronage:—Northern Border Club, Northern Counties, Norwich and Cin., Northern Yorkshire, and Northern British Bird and Mule Club. Decided to write for conditions for Cage Birds Coupon Competition. Will all members kindly attend our next meeting, as the schedule for annual show will be put before them. Our neighbours at Annfield, are having a nest feather show, June 21. We wish them a big entry, and every success.—W. Elliott, Sec.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting held June 13, at Assembly Rooms, Market Street, Carnarvon; present: Chairman, Mr. J. Jones; vice-chairman, Mr. G. Jones; hon. treas., Mr. R. T. Edwards; and Messrs. E. Jones, E. Hughes, and R. E. Griffith, hon. sec. Three new members joined during this week; there is still plenty of room for more competitors at the show on July 5; must be paid members of the society on or before June 28. No entries received after June 28 without an additional fee of 3d. per entry. I have sent schedules out to all late members, and many other fanciers, but if there is any fancier who wishes to join, send to Mr. R. E. Griffith, Hon. Sec., 5, Balaclava-rd., Carnarvon.

OPENSHAW, GORTON & DIS. C.B.S

Well-attended meeting held at Alhambra Theatre Club-room, June 11, kindly placed at our disposal by the manager, Mr. Evanson, to place the old South Manchester on its legs again; 17 new members were elected, and a promise of more for next meeting. Decided to call the Society Openshaw, Gorton and Dis. C.B.S. The following officers were elected: Chair, Mr. Evanson; vice-chair, F. Washbourne, jun.; treas., A. Gilbert; auditor, T. Berry; asst. sec., W. Hathway, and a committee of five, whose election, owing to the great amount of business, was left over till next meeting. Decided to hold F.F. show on the third Saturday in July, for which we have a good promise of specials (subs. 2s. per annum.—Fred Washbourne, Hon. Sec.

LARKHALL C.B.A.

Meeting held in Y.M. Halls, June 14, Mr. Rindell presiding. Young bird show business was gone through, and date fixed for Aug. 2. We have been fortunate in securing the Camera Club Studio for our show. Classification: Yellow Norwich, buff Norwich, yellow Border, buff Border, common Canary, A.O.V. Can., Mules and Hybrids. We have a good sum in money specials for this show. Rambles and outings being popular, the Larkhall C.B.A. will keep up with the times, and hold their first outing of members and friends on Glasgow Fair Saturday, July 19, to Bonnington Falls of Clyde, driving along the beautiful valley of the Clyde to Lanark. Messrs. Pollock, McLean, and Graham, were appointed to conduct the outing, and they will be pleased to have names of those wishing to take advantage of the trip, and will also give particulars regarding same.—Allan Thomson, Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting held June 11 before a good muster, Chairman Willmott presiding. Mr. Turner was elected a member; the following were nominated stewards for June show on the 25th: Messrs. Hall, Perks, Yardley, Adcock, and Andrews; stewards for the show on July 19th: Messrs. H. Kidner, Hughes, Adcock, Harding, J. Burke; judge for June, Mr. J. H. Roe; July show, G. H. Russell. The classification passed as last season, and will again be printed. Specials are extra fine, and chairman submitted the silver cups to the meeting, everyone agreeing that they were excellent workmanship, the models of the Yorkshire Canary on the lids being very true to the ideal. The British cup is mounted with a fine silver model of the Goldfinch. The chairman impressed upon those present that good entries should be made; it was all to their advantage to make this season's shows a great success; competition for the cups commenced at the young bird shows; the specials were the finest offered, and would be presented as allotted, competition or not. Special arrangements are being made for receiving the birds from out of town; closing dates for June show, first post June 23, and for July show July 17. Mr. Hall, of 91, Grange Road, is taking up a subscription list for testimonial to our popular show manager, J. Wright, who is leaving Birmingham for London at the end of June. He will be greatly missed, being one of the pioneers of the South Birmingham O.S., and a real worker, securing some dozen members during the first few weeks of formation. I hope all members will make an effort to subscribe and let Mr. Hall know at once.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

SCOTCH FANCY NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

Half-yearly meeting, June 13, in Grand National Halls, Gorbals, Glasgow, with a fair attendance, County Councillor James Hogg presiding. In opening the meeting Mr. Hogg took the opportunity to thank the members for electing him President. He considered it a very great honour, and he assured the members he would do all in his power to uphold the dignity of the position. He also expressed the hope that the Association would continue to prosper as it had done. Sec. reported that Mr. Brown, vice-pres., had offered to give 2s. 6d. to the 5th, 6th and 7th birds in each class at our annual show. Same had been accepted on behalf of the Association. The members heartily endorsed sec's action, and thanked Mr. Brown sincerely for his very generous gift. It is hoped that this will be the means of stimulating young breeders and increasing membership. Fourteen new members have joined, and 19 of last year's members have not replied, and it is hoped they will do so as early as possible. Total members up to date are 97. The fund being raised for new cup is growing slowly. We are still £2 or £3 short of what is aimed at, and we hope that members that have not yet subscribed will send on their mite to the sec. as early as possible. Judges appointed; as soon as the acceptances are to hand their names will be announced in Cage Birds. Unanimously agreed that we have 7 coloured cards at our show instead of 4, and 3 white ones as formerly. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Hogg, who had come from Oakley, Fife, specially to preside. The meeting was very harmonious and pleasant throughout.—A. M. Baird, Sec.

RUNCORN B.B.A.

Meeting held at Headquarters, June 13. Mr. Sutton, chair; before a good attendance. Decided to hold a nest feather show, July 5; Mr. S. Andrews, Widnes, will judge; there will be two sections and 11 classes: 6 champion, 4 novice, and 1 selling. Entries to be made at next meeting, July 4. Please all attend.—E. Rone, Sec.

BURSLEM C.B.S.

Meeting held June 16, at Barnfields Inn, Pleasant Street. Mr. H. Hassall chair, to allot specials etc., for Nest Feather Show, June 28th, and to make new members. Decided to let the exhibitors in the open classes compete for four specials, along with the members, same being for best Norwich in show, best Yorks., best British, Mule, or Hybrid, and most points in the three open classes. Entries close June 26, or first post June 27. Birds staged by 2.30 on June 28. Mr. J. Colclough, Butt Lane, was made a member.—L. James, Sec.

LONDON C.B.A.

General meeting held at the "El Vino," Piccadilly Place, June 10; Mr. R. L. Crisp, chair. Letter was read from Mr. Mugford stating that the awards of merit, etc., had been sent to the successful exhibitors. The president presented a silver medal to Mr. Withers, gained by him at an egg-food competition, and a silver-plated teapot to Mr. Thursby for most points in amateur section at three shows. Schedule for young bird show, with entry form, was handed to members present. Samples of Messrs. Yates' colour-food were passed round to the members. Treasurer Mr. Trower gave in a report of the funds in hand. The remainder of the evening was spent in questions being passed round to the members, interesting and instructive answers being given. A committee meeting was held after the close of the general meeting, and the schedule for annual show was practically completed.—James Bray, junr., Sec., F. Knight, Press Corres.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Meeting of the Council held June 14, at Market Tavern, Bradford; Mr. H. W. Walsh, chair. Another good attendance of delegates assembled. Correspondence from Halifax, Laisterdyke, Bradford National, and the National B.B. and M. Club's Protection League, was read to the meeting. Laisterdyke Society desiring to withdraw from the official list of shows, it was proposed that they be allowed to do so on paying their share of judges' fees, thus retaining their date for another year. Decided to grant the Union's support to the Bradford National show, and all trophies, medals, and other Union competitions will be competed for at that show. Tenders for printing of Union handbooks, etc., were considered. Decided that each tender be considered on its merits, irrespective of price, and it was decided to let the contract to Messrs. Moorhouse and Hodgson, providing they meet the stipulations laid down. The president thanked the delegates for their attendance. If any member of the Union has changed his address, or any other correction is needed in last year's list, kindly notify me immediately.—H. Hill, Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting held June 9, Church Institute, Paddington Street, Mr. W. A. Shepherd chair, and thirty members present. Letters were read from Mr. N. C. Ellis, Mr. F. J. Martin, enclosing £1 as special prize, to whom the members accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his generous gift, and from the National British Bird and Mule Club and Bird-Keepers' Protection Society, drawing attention to the Plumage Act and also a petition against the Bill, which most of the members took the opportunity of signing. Messrs. Taplin and Withes were nominated for election, and Messrs. T. C. Mann, G. A. Dossett, A. G. Dossett, and A. H. Lye were elected. Hon. sec. announced result of British bird judging competition, Mr. H. Hobden taking gold medal with 55 points, Mr. E. C. Offord silver medal 54, Messrs. C. Polton, W. Large, and W. Sanders tieing for 3rd place with 53 each. A draw for the bronze medal resulted in favour of Mr. Sanders. Hon. Sec., was very energetic in collecting specials for the young bird show, and will be very pleased to hear from those members who were unable to be present. The feature of the evening was a lecture by Mr. Hedder on Norwich Plainheads, and he greatly interested his audience by the very able manner in which he spoke of his favourite breed of Canary. Type, quality of feather, pairing, in-breeding, feeding, and preparing for show were fully dealt with, and members should benefit greatly by the instructive information Mr. Hedder imparted to them. Mr. Hodder concluded his remarks by saying that bird keeping is a hobby, but to ensure success one needs perseverance and hard work. Members were unanimous in according Mr. Hodder a very hearty vote of thanks for attending and giving them such a pleasant evening. A vote of thanks to Chairman concluded the meeting.—Fred. Thynne, Asst. Hon. Sec.

UPPER RHONDDA C.B.S.

Meeting held June 11, with only a moderate attendance; ways and means were discussed of adding to our funds in preparation for open show, which Mr. W. Mundell has been engaged to judge. Decided to run a first feather show June 26, birds to be at headquarters at 5.30, when they will be classified, all members to guarantee two entries at 3d. each. We would like to see the novice members attending these meetings; it would also be to their advantage in the way of classification. There are a good number of fanciers in the district who have not yet become members. We would like to meet them at our F.F. show, when Mr. Thomas (Treherbert) will judge. Subs. are due this month. —E. Richards, Sec.

BARGOED C.B.S.

Meeting held June 10, at Parker's Temperance Hotel, Mr. H. Bye presiding over a moderate attendance. Decided to hold table show on Tuesday, July 8th. No prize money will be given, but we have specials worth trying for in addition to silver cup for best Yorkshire from W. Sims, and show cage each for best Linnet and Goldfinch from A. Huddrell previously announced, two medals value 10s. from Mr. J. Lacey for best bird and for most points. Mr. Blundell special value 5s. 6d. for best A.O.V. Canary, H. Bye seed 2s. for best nest feather bird, J. Vivian box cage for best Norwich, E. Chisholm Canary or British show cage for best vlg. Fee 6d. a bird, or 3 for 1s., admission free. Next meeting June 24, 7.30; all fanciers heartily welcome.—E. J. Chisholm, Sec.

BRIT.: 1, 2, 3, vhcs, J. Holden.

SMALLBRIDGE C.B.S.

Third annual first N.F. show, held in St. John's Schoolroom, Smallbridge. We had a good turn-over at the door, but entries were only poor, owing to the inclement weather we experienced here at the start of the breeding season, only about half of the members having birds ready for show, but we are looking forward to a bumping entry at our second nest show. Mr. Schofield, Heywood, judged, and gave general satisfaction, no grumbling being heard.—J. T. Cheetham, Hon. Sec.

[From the sheet catalogue received we gather that the principal winners were: Yorks, Coupe, Judson, Low and Johnson, Cryer, Howarth; A.O.V., Cheetham, Tonks; Brit., Cheetham, Hartley.—Ed.]

LAISTERDYKE B.F.A.

First Feather Show, held June 14, at Railway Hotel, and some very good birds out of the 77 entries faced the judge, Mr. W. Mann, Wibsey, who gave every satisfaction. CL. or TKD. YELL.: 1, Padgell and Son; 2, Parker; 3, 4, Swaine. BUFF: 1, Bateman; 2, Casey; 3, Hodgson; 4, Parker. EVEN, ETC.: 1, 3, Hodgson; 2, Choppendale; 4, Parker. SOWERBY BRIDGE C.B.S.

Nest feather show, held June 11. Mr. W. Speak judged a poor entry, no doubt due to the fact that nearly all of our members are having a very bad beginning (clear eggs and losing young) thus not having young birds old enough to show. OPEN, CL., ETC., YELL. YORKS. (2): 1, 2, Crossley. NOV. CL., ETC. BUFF (5): 1, 2, Hardy; 3, 4, vhc, Magson. VARIEG., ETC. (3): 1, Hardy; 2, 3, Magson. It is hoped that members will have better success and make up for it at the show on July 12. There are plenty of prizes to be competed for. A silver cup for open section, and a silver rose bowl for novices, to be held by the winners for 12 months along with the usual value of prizes for the season's competition, and a smoking cabinet value £2 2s. for the most entries at four of the seven shows, these four shows to be drawn for after the last show in Feb. 1914. During the afternoon a meeting was held re colour food, and Messrs Thomas's Supply Stores Hanson Lane were elected to supply us at the special club quotation with Ramsden's and Sandiford's. Members please apply at secretary's address, 46, Eldon Place, Halifax, for order card to be able to obtain the same at club price. Any fancier desirous of participating in the above prizes or colour food, apply at my address and join at once, subscription 2s. 6d. per year only.—A. Sutcliffe, Sec. 46, Eldon Place, Hopwood Lane, Halifax.

MORLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First young bird show, held June 14, at Sycamore Hotel; Judge, Mr. H. H. Clark, Bradford, who gave every satisfaction. Entries came up poorly in numbers, members having done badly in breeding.

CL. or TKD. BUFF: 1, vhc, Birdsall; 2, 3, Scholes; hc, Burton; c, Brook. EVEN, ETC.: 1, Birdsall; 2, Mitchell; 3, Scholes; vhc, hc, c, Burton. LINNET: 1, Burton; 2, 3, Gomersall; vhc, Cockrem. GREENF.: 1, Burton; 2, Gomersall. REDPOLL, ETC.: 1, 3, vhc, Gomersall; 2, Cockrem. J. Rhodes, Sec.

TREDEGAR C.B.S.

F.F. show of Yorkshire Canaries, held Silver Grill, Tredegar, June 12. Nearly 40 birds were placed before the judge, Mr. E. Powell, whose awards were favourably received. Special for best bird was won by Mr. E. J. Bevan with a promising clear yellow, which should do well in the future. He was run closely by several birds. CL. YELL.: 1, 2, 3, Bevan. TKD.: 1, Bevan; 2, Watkins; 3, Davies. MKD.: 1, Griffiths; 2, Davies; 3, Watkins. CL. BUFF: 1, 2, 3, Bevan. TKD.: 1, 2, 3, Watkins. MKD.: 1, 2, Watkins; 3 Griffiths.—W. B. Watkins, Sec.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

Members' F.F. show, held at Three Tuns, Eastwood, July 14, with a very good entry considering the very bad times our members are having. Norwich classes contained some very good birds which, with a good moult, ought to do well for their owners. Mr. E. Fox, of Long Eaton, judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

NOR. YELL. MKD.: 1, 2, Parson. CL. BUFF: 1, 2, Simpson; 3, Martin. BUFF MKD.: 1, 2, Martin. YORKS., YELL. MKD.: 1, Kew. BUFF: 1, Kew. YOUNG MULE or HYB.: 1, Bestwick. WINDHILL C.B.S.

F.F. Show, held June 14, at Blue Bell Hotel, with an entry of 50, all grand typical stuff; several look like making big winners at open shows, with a good moult. Special for most points in novice section was won by J. W. Ellis, with a good team of four Yorks. Mr. John Broadley, Windhill, judged, and gave entire satisfaction. Points up to now for season's prizes are—Champ: W. B. Atkinson, 20; H. Long, 19; J. Halliday, 19; E. Shepherd, 18; R. Garnett, 17; T. Elsegood, 13. Novice: J. W. Ellis, 19; J. Harney, 7; S. Hall, 5.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

First N.F. show held June 12, at the Duke of York. Three classes were provided for Norwich and three for Yorks., and right well did the Norwich men patronise their section; the clear class had 14 entries, the ticked or lightly marked 13, and the varieg. or green 11. This shows signs of our members having had a good breeding season. It was very pleasing to see Mr. Loach come along with a team of five and capture the specials for best bird in show, and second best with two fine Norwich. Mr. E. Crundell judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction; he also gave a lecture on the different points of the birds, and the four specimens he brought with him were very good Norwich. There was a judging competition among the members, and before each class was started Mr. F. J. Weaver pointed out the different points of the birds before each member took hold of the judging slip.

NOR., CL. (14): 1, sp, Loach; 2, Rowley; 3, Weaver; 4, c, Gibbons; vhc, hc, Hampton. TKD. OR LIGHTLY MKD. (13): 1, sp, Loach; 2, c, Garfield; 3, vhc, Robinson; 4, Gibbons; hc, Hyde. VARIEG. OR GREEN (11): 1, Hampton; 2, Hyde; 3, 4, Garfield. YORKS.. (2): 1, 2, Gibbons.—J. Gibbons.

CREWE O.S.

N.F. show held June 14 in Co-operative Hall, a very cosy room. Over ninety birds were staged, including some promising specimens. Yorkshires were exceedingly smart, especially those staged by Messrs. Lawton, Potts, and Dunn. Borders were very strong, and true to type. The hon. sec., Mr. Jaycott, put down a topping buff. Green Borders were of grand colour and quality. British were very even, Messrs. Morgan and Jaycott staging some charming species. A few Canaries were wrong-classed by the judge, yellows and buffs being mixed up. A good idea might be to let the judge alter the birds into their right classes, as it is hard lines to have a good bird wrong-classed at a young show, it being sometimes difficult to tell the right colour of a youngster, although the shape of a bird will help to indicate its right colour. The show was well attended, and the officials worked hard. Sec. Mr. Jaycott knows the ropes, and had everything in ship-shape order. Mr. R. Jones gave him valuable assistance. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) judged, and gave entire satisfaction.

YORKS., YELL. (6): 1, 3, Lawton, two neat youngsters, winner nice length and position, well drawn, 3rd not quite full tail, otherwise good; 2, Potts, smart and erect, charming qual. and shape, full of swagger for a baby. BUFF (6): 1, 2, 3, Lawton, lovely team, built on grand lines, winner should make a good one, with a decent moult; No. 1, w.c., yellow. MKD. YELL. (6): 1, Lawton, cheek-mkd., strapping baby, stands like a guardsman, full neck and grand sweep; 2, Potts, smaller, but good, well braced wings and tail; 3, Dunn; No. 5, w.c., buff. BUFF (6): 1, Lawton, nice, good head and neck; 2, Potts, smart and neat, fails in size, bit unsteady; 3, Dunn; No. 5, w.c., topping yell. BORD., YELL. (5): 1, Hancocks, jaunty and full of qual., in nice bloom; 2, Lawton, good type and qual., just a bit flat headed; 3, Jaycott. MKD.: 1, Jaycott, buff neck mkd., bonny little fellow, sweet type, braces wings and tail well; 2, Lawton, yell., capital feather, nice contour, reaches a little high; 3, Hancocks. GREEN BORD. (3): 1, Lawton, wonder for col., capital pencillings, if as good in head properties would be a "flier"; 2, 3, Hancocks, brace of beauties, better type, but fails in col. to winner, the buff should make up well. MULE OR HYB. (7): 1, 2, Potts, capital pair, Jonque Greenie Can., full of col. and fair size; 2nd, varieg. buff Goldie Mule, charming shape, in good form; 3, Elks. GOLDF. (6): 1, Jaycott, grand expansive blaze, nice bars and buttons, leaning well down; 2, 3, Dunn, brace of beauties, equal in Goldie properties, but not size of winner. LINNET (4): 1, Morgan, pink of condition, well pencilled, good nutty col., cone shape; 2, Elks, topper for size, pencilling, bit blurred; 3, Jaycott. BULLF. OR GREENF. (8): 1, 3, Bettley, leader capital col., good cap, well cut, well up in size; 2, Morgan, larger but not col. of winner, neat cap and condition. SISKIN, ETC. (3): 1, 2, Morgan, winner exceptionally good f.m. Redpoll, capital bib and lacing; 2nd, h.m., fails col. and lacing; 3, Elks. CHAFFINCH, ETC. (6): 1, hc, Dunn, monster Bramble. grand lacing, bold front, extra size, easy win; 2, 3, Bettley, brace of Chaffinches, lovely col., good heads and excellent whites, topping sheen. SELL. PUDSEY, STANNINGLEY, C.B.S.

First members' F.F. show of the season, held June 14, at the Fleece Hotel, Stanningley. The entry was 43 in five classes; several classes had to be cancelled for lack of entries. The quality was good all round, and the show was well patronised by the public. Mr. M Broadley, Shipley, judged, and he got through his work in a very able manner. Most points with four starred birds were gained by W. Richmond 20, D. Raistrick 18, W. Ackroyd 17, F. age 16, J. Butler 14.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Meeting and table show, held June 12, headquarters. A splendid turnout of birds, especially the novices, Yorkshires numbering over 40 in two classes. One thing we deplore is the lack of entries in members' Yorks. Some grand birds were staged all round. Mr. Drabble judged Yorks, Mr. Tow Norwich, Mr. Milne British. Their awards gave general satisfaction.

We are arranging to supply members with both Ramsden's and Sandiford's. A definite statement will be made at the show on Saturday.—C. Tomlinson, Sec.

PLYMOUTH, W. COUNTIES O.S.

First nest feather show for 1913, held June 4, at Oddfellows' Hall, Plymouth. Sixty-eight entries were staged, quality of the exhibits being well up to average. Yorks. and Norwich were especially good, both in number and quality, but Crests showed a falling off from previous years. Cinnamons made the best show that has ever been seen in the society. The four leading buff Norwich were of exceptional merit and were a credit to their breeders, viz., Messrs. Gill and Pethick and Mr. Spillman. Judges were, Yorks, Mr. C. Large; Nor., Mr. Snell; Crests, Mr. S. Gill; Cinn., Mr. Snell; Mules and Brit., Mr. G. Pridham.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous issue, Page, and Column are stated by the advertiser.

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which me must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct as to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

APPLIANCES.

In the accompanying drawing (which is true to scale) notice the relative size of the hand and that of the book. From this you will be able to judge the size of this superb volume. Not only is it the largest volume ever published upon Canaries and the only exhaustive treatise upon these lovely creatures, but it is written by the ablest authorities—men who have devoted a lifetime to the study of their habits, and who have been exhibitors, first prize winners, and judges at the principal shows for many years. The Editor of this volume and the principal contributor is Claude St. John, perhaps the best authority on Canaries in the world, and among the other well-known contributors are those well-known judges, C. A. House and G. E. Weston.

Don't Delay!

"The Red Feed"

The greatest colouring food in the world. This wonderful Pepper cannot be excelled, and with Hot Natal and another ingredient, which not only gives brilliant colour, but that beautiful sheen which is so delightful in one's birds, the Red Feed must become distinguished. A change from one Pepper to another in anticipation of finding "the ideal" is well worth making. A trial will convince you that the change is for the better. No "perhaps" about this feed; it is absolutely IT. Sold in tins, 2/6 and 4/9: Judge Silk, The Norwich Specialist, Whitstable.

MEDICINES.

MOULTINE, the absolute cure for soft moult colds, asthma, wheezing, huskiness, etc., post free, 6d.: Parker, Chemist, Morecambe. (607)

LAWSON'S asthma cure; absolutely cures asthma, bronchitis, colds, huskiness, etc., in cage birds; unfailing remedy, 7d.: Lawson, 7, Albert-st., Durham. (752)

OGDEN BROS. have found at last (after 20 years' experimenting) a certain cure for birds going light; 1/6 a bottle; if ever it fails to cure, money returned: Dudley-hill, Bradford.

"AILING Cage Birds and How to Cure Them," "Nutshell No. 6," an account of the troubles which beset captive birds, with the treatment and list of medicines to restore our pets to health. This will save you much discouragement and money, and costs only 2½d. post free.—From "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Or 2d. from agents (list frequently published).

EVERY birdkeeper has need of practical hints upon the prevention of diseases and their eradication from cage, aviary, and birdroom. These are to be found in "Nutshell No. 9," post free 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

KELSO'S BRONCHOLIA

A never-failing remedy for asthma, bronchitis, colds, wheezing, hoarseness, loss of song, and all bronchial and lung affections in cage birds; trial convinces; bottles, 7d., 1/1, post free, with complete directions and special dietary: Kelso and Co., 7, Western-hill, Durham. (752)

YOUNG BIRDS DYING.

Wanted, a trial. We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. If you are having bad luck with your young birds, try our Tonic Drops. They aid digestion and prevent going light, so common with young birds. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are undoubtedly the grandest pick-me-up ever introduced for young birds. They are invaluable when getting young birds on hard seed. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for soft moult, not singing, going light, dullness, feather-plucking, and inflammation of the bowels. In 7d. and 1/1 (treble size) bottles. Special size, 2/-. For bringing birds into breeding condition, and for birds that are run down or gone off song, this medicine is absolutely unequalled. Fanciers note, if our medicines fail to do as we advertise, we guarantee to return full money. For bronchitis, wheezing, loss of voice, hoarseness, and inflammation of the lungs, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic, the grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. Also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. As an advertisement we will send a 7d. bottle of each of the above medicines for 1/-, or two 1/1 (treble size) bottles for 1/9. All medicines post paid at our risk, per return. Two valuable seed recipes, how to feed Linnets and Rollers for contest singing, given free to all purchasers of our medicines.—Frank Ditchfield, Bird Specialist, Oldham. (749)

FRED ALLEN, BRITISH BIRD CHAMPION AND THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Gentlemen, I have sold more winners and won more prizes than any ten dealers put together, contradiction defied. I have a grand lot of giant cock Linnets in beautiful song, a treat to hear; these make the best and proudest birds ever carried to a contest, they are from the same place as my acknowledged champion of the world (cup winner), price 1/-, 1/6 each; also a few make grand exhibition birds, the real Norwich type, 1/6, 2/- each. Now, don't be misled by spurious imitations, send to the right man who knows what is wanted. If you want a genuine Roller, I advise you to wait for my Ubal's, it is too early yet (see "Twitterings"): Fred Allen, the only British Bird Champion 156, Porter-st., Hull. (748)

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Please read what others say:—174, Evesham-road, Headless Cross, Redditch.—Dear Sir,—I received Linnet quite safe and in good condition. I am quite satisfied with him, and consider him good value for the money.—Yours sincerely, E. Wall, to H. Allen. Tannery, Maryport, Cumberland.—Dear Sir,—The bird you sent me is the best Linnet ever seen at such a price. I have had the best of satisfaction with it; many of my friends have seen it, and say the same. I have dealt with a few fanciers now, but if wanting any more I will send to you.—J. Clark, to H. Allen. Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world, 1/-, 1/6, 2/-, 3/-. They make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest; for length, turns, and form they stand alone, and for voice they have no equal. This class of bird has won the English Derby and all the English championships, and the world's greatest contests. Linnets taught by the champion Linnet of the world, will sing indoors or out, with cage, and my book of secrets, 3/6 and 4/6. They are a treat to hear. I have supplied all Linnet clubs throughout England. All secretaries of Linnet clubs, please write as usual, as I have a splendid lot of birds in at present. Two splendid house-moulted Linnets, won several first prizes, both for time and quality, 10/6 each. They are singing hard, and will take some beating on the show bench with the best out. Plenty in stock; no waiting. Postcard before birds.—Harry Allen, The British Bird Champion, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds. (753)

DUNFERMLINE C.B.S. AMONGST THE BIRDS AT PITREAVIE.

It was not a large party that set out on our annual ramble to Pitreavie estate, kindly granted by Henry Beveredge, Esq., and the weather conditions were anything like enticing. On arrival by car at Holbeath, we were joined by the Townhill contingent, and taking the old waggon road, we very soon met Mr. Oswald's head forester, who had been directed to conduct us over the grounds. The backwardness of the season was very apparent in the scarcity of the flowers we were wont to see on the first Saturday in June, neither was bird life so plentiful; in fact, young birds were very scarce, but we had had plenty of nests and eggs, Robins', Chaffinches', Yellowhammers', Blackbirds' and Thrushes' predominating. We were enticed by the brightness of the sky to vacate the wood and follow our guide to a nice cover of elms where we were fortunate to locate the Linnets, and to inspect the handicraft of this popular songster and muler. Again we were forced to seek the shelter of the wood, and this time to get the find of the day, namely, a nest of young Horned Owls. One young bird was taken from the nest and carried forward to the main body of the party, who, having examined his quaint features, ordered its return to the fold. Again into the open, this time skirting a cornfield; the hedge seemed to be alive with young birds. We straightway cut a bee line for Warlertown, where Mrs. Oswald had a great spread ready for us. It was but right on the part of Mr. Rankine to give us an extra half hour to settle down. A few songs were sung, and after a hearty vote of thanks to the hostess, we again made a start. This time we were put into the hands of the head gardener, who directed us over the glass-house and the gardens. The extreme beauty of the alpine plants and lichen covered rocks was superb. The gay but still harmonising colours of the plants reminded us of these adepts of rock work, the Japanese. Within the gardens the birds have built their nests unmolested, and every other tree and shrub contained its nest, with a complement of eggs or young birds in each. The rain of the afternoon had now made it uncomfortable to walk through the long grass, and we were content to keep to the paths and let the birds settle down for the night. To those who intend entering the wild seeds competition, advantage was now being taken to collect a few of the earlier kinds, and to take notes on early flowering heads. The day's outing had been spoiled a little by the rain, but for one and all the time had simply flown past, so very interesting, varied, and instructive the outing had been; one of the best held under the club's auspices.—Robert T. Campbell.

PARTICK C.B.C. HAS A GREAT DAY'S OUTING.

Partick and Dis. C.B.C. members have had a day out, and it seems to have been a great success—at least, judging from the report of the local "wifie," who seems to see all that goes on through the window of her little shop. When I saw her the following day, she said: "My, we were proud folks in Fenwick yesterday to have the Partick bird fanciers and their friends amongst us. They sported a fine turnout, with four horses, and drove all the way here from Glasgow. They were lucky to get such a dry day, for it looked very like being wet, and," said she, "the driver was telling me (when he was in for a bit of tobacco) that they got one very bad shower on the way down. But I just said to him, it would take more than a shower to damp the spirits of your boys. And such a fine bonny road it is from Glasgow. Passing by the Glen and Giffnock, right through the Mearns; then the long road through the Moors and heather-clad tracts of land, right down here to Fenwick; and, mind, we are very proud of our old village. Strangers have told me (and they were people who had travelled a lot) that there are few places with such fine country walks as Fenwick, and they say that the landlord at the Hotel up there makes everyone very comfortable. Of course, for my part, I couldn't say, because, as you know, I am a teetotaller, and do not go into these places; but when they came out to take their survey of the country lanes and hedges they all looked sober and happy. I was glad the driver was in the shop when they passed, and Mrs. M—— was in, too; she used to be employed in the Hotel, so they could tell me who most of them were. She said: "Do you see that yin there with the big flower in his coat? That's Sam Fraser, the president, and that other chap behind him, that's Priest, the secretary. Rob the baker must have heard about his liking for pies, for he was at the butcher's yesterday, and I saw him going up the road with a parcel of mince. Of course, I don't like gossip, but you can't help seeing things. I was sorry for a fine looking gentleman with his hand bandaged up. A Maister Maxwell they called him. I heard he scratched it with his umbrella handle when the shower came on. I hope it will soon be better, poor man. And Anderson was walking down with Willie Brown, and he did look fat beside him; but they all looked happpy. They tell me Brown is collecting for his aquarium; and he had some fine specimens in a bottle. Of course he had had to empty the bottle to get them into water," but I don't like gossip. I never turn these things over." "Then," says Mrs. M., "that's Sandy Walker; he's looking real well to be on the sick list; wait till Lloyd George sees him." Of course, we couldna tell who they all were; but I saw Aikenhead and Fairweather (it's aye fair weather with him), and Webster was looking fine. They tell me he's turning keen on the British bird (4d. a time), and he was spotting the good ones by the hedgerows. Then Kid was there, and Park was there, and Hendry was there too. I was sorry Sinclair, their piper had not his kilts on, and he left his pipes at home (as if we could not appreciate them in Fenwick), but he promised me he would bring them next time. Then there were a whole lot that we did not know, but we were pleased to see them all, and one of them (who came in to see me on the way back, to get a bottle of ginger beer), told me that they had had a grand ramble round the countryside, and had come across many interesting studies of bird life, as it is to be seen at this season. I am glad to hear they got home safely." Here I had to break myself away, as I had to go on my journey, and left the lady saying, "I hope it will not be long till we have you all back again at Fenwick."—"X.Y.Z."

BOURNEMOUTH C.B.A.

Members had a most interesting and instructive outing on June 18 to Christchurch. After a stroll round the historic Priory, they paid a visit to Mr. Hart's wonderful museum of British birds. No one who has not had this privilege can form any conception of its unique character, upwards of 500 specimens, all collected and mounted naturally by Mr. Hart, who thinks he has every variety of British birds known, and the majority caught in the neighbourhood. For an hour and a half he kept his audience in rapt attention with his chatty and vivid description of their habits, etc. A most interesting fact which he said was not generally known about the Cuckoo, was the statement he made as to its artfulness when laying its eggs. Of course, everybody knew it laid in the nest of other birds, but not that every egg corresponded in colour to eggs of the bird in whose nest it laid. This caused a laugh, but he proved it by exhibiting eggs laid in different nests from a large collection he had. The outing was one of the most enjoyable ever held, and so useful. We are now busy with our F.F. show, held July 2; judge, W. Haysom, Esq., Southampton.—J. A. Crawshaw, Sec.

NORTHANTS. (H.-in-H.) C.B.S.

Members held their annual outing, June 7, starting from headquarters at 2. The party went by brakes through Salcey Forest on to Hanslope. After roaming the forest, startling rabbits and pheasants from their haunts, the destination was reached. Members had the pleasure of visiting the fine old Norman church of Hanslope, which dates centuries back. From the belfry the scenery was something to be admired. Returning from the belfry the church was inspected, and the squire's seat in which he sat 20 minutes before he was shot dead by his gamekeeper, not long ago, came under special observation. We returned to Mr. Kerridge's, "The Cock," Hanslope, where a splendid meat tea was in readiness, which the members quite appreciated. The fields around came in for a ramble. One of the members found a Chaffinch's nest with three beautiful young ones ready to fly, and two dead—the first young birds that any of us have found dead in their nests in the fields. After gathering a collection of wild flowers, we returned to our host and finished up with a capital sing-song, with musical honours to our host and hostess. It was one of the best outings we have had.—A. W. Law.

As Never Before

the Societies holding Open Shows next season have need to adopt "Cage Birds" Guarantee System of advertising.

Over one hundred have already done so, and the enormous pull which it will give them over non-guaranteeing Societies as regards entries, will be tremendously increased by "Cage Birds" Championship Scheme.

JUST THINK! A simple guarantee of 25/- (which need not be paid until you commence advertising), entitles Societies to 5 inches of advertising space (a reduction of 1/- per inch): the publicity of the "Dates Fixed" column; and a Special Prize value 5/-. And that is not all. By fulfilling simple conditions, Guaranteeing Societies secure the patronage of "Cage Birds" Mammoth Championship Scheme, which will prove the greatest source of entries in the history of Cage-bird Shows.

Send along for our Special Guarantee Form at once. Don't delay; never was time more valuable.

Twitterings.

We hear that Mr. R. E. Griffith, Carnarvon, will judge cage birds at Ruthen, Aug. 28, also at Brynsiencyn, Anglesea, Aug. 30.

We hear from Mr. G. Hunt, hon. sec., that judges for the Doncaster C.B.S. show Jan. 10, will be Canaries, Mr. H. W. Battye; British and Foreign, Mr. J. Maddison.

Mrs. M. M. Owen, Wimbledon, writes that in future Mr. F. W. Owen, Mrs. M. M. Owen, and L. G. Owen, will be showing, as "Owen and Son." Secretaries please note.

Kindly publish, writes Mr. R. P. Fox, sec. North Shields C.B.C., that we have changed our room, and are now meeting in the Co-operative Hall, Howdon Rd., the first week every month.

Mr. W. Hodgkins, hon. sec., writes that the Wallasey and District C.B.S. members will take their second ramble June 29, meet Headquarters, Fairhaven Institute, Sea View Road, Liscard, 10.30 a.m. prompt, meeting the Birkenhead fanciers at 12 noon, at Bidston Church.

We are holding our Nest Feather Show on Saturday, July 5, writes Mr. R. Ward, sec. Chester-le-Street C.B.S. Mr. A. Holden, Gateshead, will judge. Show will be open at 1, at Mr. J. Waugh's, Dun Cow Hotel. Members have done fairly well, so we are expecting a good entry.

Burnley O.S. is holding a First Feather show June 28, at the Star Inn, Church Street, Burnley, writes Mr. W. Redman, sec. Mr. T. Edwards will judge. Classes, four Norwich, two Yorks., two British. Mr. T. Edwards has promised a gold medal to the winner of the cup.

It is quite unnecessary for me to praise your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. Your articles are A.1. Your advice columns highly educative, and as an advertising medium "C.B." stands alone. What more can fanciers want? I send best wishes from the Highlands.—Peter Grant (Inverness).

Since I have acquired outright the business at Porter Street, Hull, my late partner, Mr. Dearlove, is going to Leeds to open in business, writes Mr. Fred Allen, therefore I am returning to Hull. Will fanciers please note that in future all communications should be addressed the Aviaries, 156, Porter St., Hull.

Please mention in CAGE BIRDS that all Fife societies wishing the patronage of Fife and Kinross N.P.C., should now write stating judge and number of classes to me; also those who are intending to join the club should do so now and thereby enable me to keep the work well forward.—A. Dickson, 37, Adams Terrace, Kelty.

Messrs. Opie and Kemp, 45, Albany Road, Redruth, hon. secs. of Redruth Show, July 2 and 3, inform us that they are short of entries in all classes. If exhibitors will send on entries they will classify. 25 open classes all varieties, over 40 specials, 1s. entry fee, will accept up to June 29. Please support if possible. Advert. appears this week.

At our open show, Dec. 6, writes Mr. J. Stevenson, sec., Thrums C. and C.B.A., Mr. W. Bishop, Stirling, will judge Norwich and wild birds, and Mr. W. Dods, Edinburgh, Border Fancies.

Fanciers should visit the Metropolitan C.B.A. nest feather show to-day, June 28, at Kelvedon Hall, Walham Green (near Fire Station). Motor 'buses service 15 and 5 pass the hall; open 5 p.m.

Will Mr. E. E. Spratt, who wrote Mr. Fearnley, of 92, Church St. Paddock, Huddersfield, concerning some Yorkshire Canaries, please send his address to Mr. Fearnley, as this was omitted on his postcard.

I thank you very much for publishing my letter ro awards of merit due from the L.C.B.A. Show, and am pleased to say that they have now come to hand, writes Mr. H. Stevens (Forest Gate).

We have received the syllabus of the Halifax O.S. for 1913-14. Dates and particulars of all meetings are given, and the classification at each show is set forth in full. Many of the meetings should prove of great interest.

See Sandiford's advertisement for records at last Palace show with birds fed on our colour feeds in the two varieties, Norwich and Cinnamons, where colour is most needed. I don't give records on Borders, Crests, Mules, Lizards, etc., where colour counts nothing. I give the championship winners.—(Advt.)

The schedule of the City and Suburban A.C.B.'s Annual Young Canary and Hybrid and British and Foreign Bird Show is to hand from the hon. sec., Mr. V. Wynn. We note that the society keeps up its reputation for the wonderful number of special prizes it offers its members, no fewer than 57 being up for competition at this fixture. The show is due July 5, at the Church Institute, Paddington Street, Marylebone, W.

Great Demand for a Great Book.

Read page 527 this week and fill up and post the form thereon.

if you wish the splendid offer to be open to YOU, as the demand is simply phenomenal.

We hear from Mr. R. Heggie, sec., that the judges for the City of Glasgow Show, Oct. 17 and 18, are: Norwich, Messrs. Allan Chalmers, Kirkintilloch, and Jas Winter, Edinburgh; Borders, John Craig, Brechin, and Andrew Walker, Lesmahagow; Crest and C.B., Geo. Dobson, Blaydon-on-Tyne; Yorks., Dr. Syson, Glasgow; Mules, British, and Foreign, Messrs. P. McQuiston, Ayr, and R. V. Raine, Glasgow.

We have received in an envelope bearing the post-mark "Fencehouses, June 23, 4.45 p.m." a P.O. for a shilling with a request that we send a volume of "Our Canaries" on the terms of instalment payments mentioned in our issue of last week. The order, however, bears neither the name nor address of the sender, and we are therefore unable to forward the volume until we hear again from the writer of the letter.

Three very fine colour-foods are being put on the market for the 1913 season, by Mr. W. Rudd, the noted Norwich dealer and specialist—the "A 1 tasteless red-feed," the "blend" (a correct blend of hot and tasteless) and the "Excelsior Yellow-feed." All three samples to reach us are excellent. These feeds of Mr. Rudd's should meet with a ready sale amongst fanciers anxious to put the right colour and bloom on to their birds ready for the exhibition season.

The hand-book of the National British Bird and Mule Club is to hand from the hon. sec., Mr. J. P. Carr, 45, Overdale Rd., S. Ealing, W. Besides the usual information as to officers, committee, rules, and addresses of members, it contains a list of British birds desirable as cage birds, with their Latin names, and particulars showing whether they are residents, winter migrants, or summer migrants. Schemes of classification are provided, covering any number of classes from nine to thirty in British, and for Mules and Hybrids from three to fourteen classes.

A Record in Cygnet Rearing.

At Worksop, on a small island of the dam at Beard's Mill, a Swan has reared the largest number of Cygnets known—twelve. Nothing was known as to the sitting until the mother bird took the whole dozen into the water. As recently as two years ago this same Swan reared eleven cygnets.

First Feather Shows.

IMPORTANT OFFER.

We have decided again this year to accept advertisements of First Feather (young bird) shows at the reduced charge of 3s. 6d. per single column inch (2s. the half inch). And we will present a special prize of a bound volume of "Bird World," or two handsome specially mounted plates, to all societies sending not less than 10s. 6d in advertising their Young Bird Show in our columns.

Secretaries takin [illegible] ntage of this offer should state very clearly in their advertisements the date, time, and place of the show. These particulars put before our readers will, without doubt, result in a much greater attendance at these early fixtures, and the making of new members, while the "gate-money" (where a charge is made) will benefit, and the sale of catalogues, too. This special cheap rate, of course, only applies to First Feather shows.

How the Robins Ruined the Films.

THEY JOIN IN THRILLING ADVENTURES AND CREATE GENERAL CONSTERNATION!

An Ealing family of Robins have now finally left their nest after witnessing, undismayed, more thrilling episodes than have probably ever before fallen to the lot of a well-brought-up brood.

Their nest, composed of stray fragments of gaudily coloured theatrical garments, was situated in the glass-covered theatre of a large cinematograph film-producing company's works, and for weeks past the domestic life of the family has caused infinite trouble to the actors and actresses employed in portraying thrilling scenes for new films.

All about the nest the most alarming scenes have been enacted every day, says the "Observer." Duels have been fought, bombs thrown, murders and robberies committed, but the young Robins and their parents have not been in the least disturbed. They basked in the devastating glare of two great limelights and took cheerful trial flights from the nest while the hero was in the act of dying of grief in a dungeon to make a climax to some carefully rehearsed cinema play.

Sharing the Good Things.

This habit of joining in a play has been the cause of many feet of spoilt film, for the little birds became so tame, that they could not be persuaded to allow the players to act their scenes by themselves. No sooner was a table laid to represent a scene in a West End restaurant than the whole family of Robins would fly on to the table—regardless of the actors in evening dress who were trying to depict some midnight revel. Every Robin would instantly commence picking up the pieces of bread used to represent the food on the plates, and the scene was spoiled.

The Robins were on familiar terms with everybody connected with the theatre, which is at West Lodge, Ealing. Some of the amusing juvenile escapades of the birds were described to a Press representative by the proporietor, Mr. Barker.

"We were all fond of the Robin family," he said—"we couldn't help it—but I am thankful that they took their leave this morning, for they nearly brought work to a standstill on one or two occasions. They were the most hardened young ruffians I ever saw, and cared no more for a murder scene than they did for the heroine's suicide.

Confounding the Villain.

"On one occasion a desperate villain was supposed to be in the act of rifling a safe in the dead of night. Of course, the actual scene—even 'at dead of night'—is acted in a comparatively bright light for cinematograph purposes.

"All was going very well till somebody shouted: 'Mind the Robins!' To my horror I saw two of them making straight for my beautifully rehearsed midnight robbery scene with the evident intention of perching on the moon-lit safe. What was to be done? We crowded round, as close as we dared go without getting inside the cinematograph machine's range of vision. We hurled insults at those Robins—we shook our fists at them—we promised them some dainties if only they would leave us alone, and all the time the unhappy actor was tip-toeing about with one hand to his ear, as much as to say: 'Hark. Am I alone?' All our efforts were in vain, however, for in flew the Robins. Of course, they sat on that moon-lit safe!"

The June number of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, is beautifully illustrated by some clever photographs; the Great Spotted Woodpecker by Mr. H. Willford, various Owls by Mr. F. D. Smith, nests of the Rusty-cheeked Scimitar Babbler, Flame-shouldered Troupial, Olive Finch, and Cuba Finch by Mr. W. Shore Baily, and a snapshot of a Hemprich's Gull in flight. Mr. Wesley T. Page writes on the Woodpecker; Mr. F. D. Smith contributes a most interesting article on Owls in captivity; Major Perreau continues the account of his Indian consignment; Mr. H. Whistler tells of birds seen during a sea voyage from Trieste to Bombay, and Mr. Page resumes his "Visits to Members' Aviaries."

The "Avicultural Magazine," the journal of the Avicultural Society, for June contains articles on "White-necked Cranes," by Mr. F. E. Blaauw; "American Robin and Dhyal Bird," by Mrs. K. Currey; "The Capercaillie at Home," by Mr. M. Cunningham; "The Lesser Egret," by Mr. H. D. Astley; "The Ruddy-headed Goose," by Messrs. Blaauw and Astley; and "Peter, My Painted Bunting," by Mr. W. Craig. A spirited article by Dr. A. G. Butler, entitled "For Love of Science," is a reply to last month's note by Mrs. K. Currey "For Love of Birds," and should be read by everyone interested in bird-keeping, especially by those who decry practical aviculture as being synonymous with cruelty. The number is illustrated by clever drawings by the Editor, Mr. H. D. Astley.

No Young Storks for England.

There will be no young Storks in Kew Gardens, this year, says the "Daily Express," because the parent birds—the only pair of Storks that breed in England—have been disturbed by somebody and have deserted their eggs.

Country Rambles.

The following rambles have been arranged: Loanhead C.B.S., June 28, to Arniston Estate, brake leaves Fountain, Loanhead 2.15, Bonnyrigg 2.30; Larkhall C.B.A. July 19, to Bonnington, Falls of Clyde; Glasgow and Western Counties C.B.S., June 28, to Waterbank Farm, train leaves Central 2.18; meet at Argyle St., entrance; Hyde C.B.S., June 28, meet Town Hall 2.30; Wallasey C.B.S., June 29, meet Fairhaven Institute 10.30, Birkenhead fanciers join at Bidston Church 12.0; Halifax O.S. to Bingley, June 28, train leaves Old Station 1.50, St. Paul's 1.48.

Cage Birds 1913 Annual: A Few Copies Now for Sale

Some time back we had to announce the fact that our very successful "Annual" for 1913 was out of print. We have now, however, succeeded in getting together about 50 copies from various agents, and these can be obtained direct from our offices at the usual price; viz., 8d. post free. Orders should be sent early, as there is no possibility of more of this splendid edition being on sale. Please note that these copies can only be obtained through the post, direct from 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

The Birds and Fruit.

Blackbirds are doing immense damage to the fruit crops in Kent and Surrey. The continued dry weather prevents the birds finding their usual food, and so they turn their attention to the fruit, some of which they attack as soon as it commences to ripen.

A Wash Every Day.

In the case of alleged neglect of a Linnet recently heard at Oldham, we learn from a local paper, the "Oldham Standard," that the magistrates' clerk, Mr. Hesketh Booth, said that a bird should be washed every day! Concerning this statement, the paper makes the following very sensible comment: "This, of course, is an extreme view, based on the assumption that the bird does not wash itself, a thing which is very rarely heard of. The ordinary householder who has his Canary or his Linnet will, if he knows anything of birds, see that the cage is kept perfectly clean, and that the occupants get a thorough cleansing occasionally."

Another Robbery in London.

Just as we go to press the news reaches us that Mr. G. E. Weston's garden in the early hours of Thursday morning last (June 26) was again visited by thieves and more birds were stolen. Mr. Weston says: "This time the door of my bird-room was broken open, the lock being smashed. I heard my dog barking about 6 o'clock and went down to investigate. Whether the thief had a furniture van waiting to cart away the lot, but was disturbed, I can't say; anyway I found the bird-room door open and saw that three birds were missing. It looks very much to me as though the scoundrel responsible for my losses knows a good deal about birds. It will be remembered that last week my best Hybrid couple were selected. This time my best house-moulted Linnet (a fine exhibition bird) was selected from stock-cages on the shelves containing half-a-dozen other Linnets. My best Twite, another fine show bird, was also taken, and my best Norwich Plainhead cock, a clear yellow which, as an unflighted bird, won the cup for best youngster in the show at a certain London exhibition. It is surely odd that the very best should be picked out like this. In addition, the lock was broken on another compartment of my Hybrid aviaries, and a cock Chaffinch stolen out of it; the hen Bullie, its mate, I had fortunately sold. My annoyance is not decreased, of course, by reason of the fact that I had sold the Linnet and Twite, and was to have despatched them on the Thursday evening! I wish whoever has them joy of their possession. I promise him a charge of shot if ever I am fortunate enough to get the sight of my gun on him while in my garden. I should be pleased to hear from any dealer or fancier who may be offered these birds (address 42, Lewisham Rd., Dartmouth Park, N.W.) or would cheerfully pay a reward for their recovery, or for information leading to a conviction of the thief.

The result of our "Sexing Young Canaries" Competition will be announced next week.

Our Championship Competition: Coupon Orders Flow In.

Some Points of the Scheme Explained: Further Flattering Opinions Reach Us: Our Pamphlets for Exhibitors Now Ready.

THE friendly reception accorded our Championship Competition when first put before the Fancy was evidently thoroughly sincere, for no sooner had our explanatory pamphlets been sent out to societies than orders for coupons commenced to flow in. The first two orders (they arrived in the same post) came from:—

HALTWISTLE AND DIS. C.B.S., 6 DOZ. COUPONS, and WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S., 5 DOZ. COUPONS.

Flattering Views of Powerful Societies.

The secretary of the latter society, in his accompanying letter writes: "Our members are greatly in favour of your colossal scheme, so kindly add my society to the Diploma Shows, and send me 60 coupons. Should I want more I will write for them."

The secretaries of Liverpool O.S., Messrs. Metcalfe and Deacon, also write: "We beg to make application for your Championship Scheme on behalf of our society. It has every appearance of being a great source of revenue to societies. Accept our ardent good wishes for its success."

We would again ask secretaries of societies to kindly bring our scheme officially before the notice of their members at the earliest possible date; also repeat that if any secretary has been inadvertently overlooked, we shall be pleased to forward him one of our pamphlets explaining the scheme if he will be good enough to notify us to this effect.

We Are Ready For Exhibitors.

A number of exhibitors have also already placed their orders for coupons, and these will be despatched at the earliest possible moment. Our pamphlets explaining the scheme from the exhibitor's point of view, are in the press, and will be ready within the next few days. We shall be delighted to forward a copy to anyone making a request for the same; you have only to notify us on a postcard. We are hoping to send out several thousands this week-end to exhibitors whose addresses are known to us. Should any exhibitors be overlooked, by reason of change of address or otherwise, we trust they will write and let us know, so that we may rectify the inadvertent omission.

No Restriction to Number of Entries.

An important point is raised by the secretary of the Ramsgate and Dis. C.B.S., Mr. Frank Thomas. He sends us the following letter:—"Personally, I think very favourably of the scheme. Do I understand rightly, however, that an exhibitor can show only one bird at a coupon show, or one bird in any section providing a coupon is attached to each exhibit? If that is the case it will limit the sale of coupons, I think, and restrict the competition. In all probability some who keep more than one variety would like to show specimens of each, say one in British or Foreign, and one in Canaries, or may be more than one variety of Canary. I may have misunderstood the meaning of the "One bird, one coupon, one show," but if not I think it would be well to reconsider it. With regard to the one prize one show, I agree, as it gives others a chance, but don't limit the competition for it. I wish the competition success and an increased sale to CAGE BIRDS."

We have replied to Mr. Thomas thanking him for giving us the opportunity of making this matter quite clear, as we now see that it may well have been misunderstood by others. It is not our wish to restrict the competition in any way. The point we intended to make was that one coupon entitled one bird to compete at one show. An exhibitor can exhibit as many coupon birds at any Diploma Show as he thinks well to do, and can compete in any or all of the specified sections. He can, however, win only one diploma in each section. There is nothing in the rules to prevent a fancier from competing for diplomas at one show with every variety of bird he keeps.

An Adverse Opinion Considered.

The first adverse opinion upon the scheme reached us this week, from the Cardiff C.B.S. The secretary, Mr. E. Thomas, writes: "I laid before the members particulars of your coupon scheme, and after a long discussion I was instructed to inform you that we could not accept it. . . . The strongest point against the scheme was that it is useless for Norwich, Yorkshire, and Border fanciers to buy coupons, for what chance would they have against rare Hybrids, or Foreigners, or Crests? These will take your specials every time. Unless this is altered I am of opinion it will not be much of a success."

In our reply we have pointed out that Norwich, Yorkshire, and Borders do not compete against the above-mentioned birds for our diploma specials, but have these allotted at every Diploma Show solely to their own sections, and that at the Palace Show they each have £6 10s. in cash specials solely to themselves (which means that we offer £78 over the whole 12 sections at the Palace alone); in addition they have their chances for the £10 10s. cash prizes and £10 10s. shield. Rare Hybrids, Foreigners, and Crests cannot possibly take our specials "every time."

We invite anyone in doubt upon any point concerning the scheme to write us at once. All letters should be addressed to The Editor, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A Brief Outline of the Scheme.

The main idea of CAGE BIRDS Championship Competition is to discover which are the Twelve Best Birds of the Season. The Competition is open to every Show appearing in CAGE BIRDS List of Guaranteed Fixtures (this covers every quarter of the United Kingdom) provided application is made to us by the management of that Show before the end of July, 1913.

TWO PRIZES OF 10s. EACH, one for novices and one for champions, will be offered (under certain stipulations), at each accepted Coupon Show.

TWELVE DIPLOMAS OF HONOUR will be offered, in addition, at each Coupon Show, such diploma to be given for the best bird in each of the following sections:—

(1) YORKSHIRE CANARIES.
(2) NORWICH.
(3) CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS
(4) BORDER FANCIES
(6) GREENS.
(7) LANCASHIRES AND LIZARDS.
(8) ANY OTHER VARIETY CANARY.
(9) MULES AND HYBRIDS.
(10) BRITISH, HARD-BILLED.
(11) BRITISH, SOFT-BILLED.
(12) FOREIGN

The winner of any one of the foregoing diplomas will have the right to compete with not more than four birds, on payment to the Crystal Palace Authorities of the usual entry fee, in our final championship competition at the Crystal Palace show of 1914.

FIRST PRIZE, £3; SECOND PRIZE, £2;
THIRD PRIZE, £1; FOURTH PRIZE, 10s.

The following cash prizes will also be offered for competition at the Crystal Palace Show:—£10 10s. for the best Coupon bird exhibited in the Champion classes in the above twelve sections; £10 10s. for the best Coupon bird shown by a novice other than the winner in the Champion Section. We shall also offer A TEN GUINEA CHALLENGE SHIELD, to be won three times in succession, for the best bird at the Crystal Palace Show entered in our Competition.

Some Important Points to Note.

1.—One coupon entitles one bird to compete at any one Diploma Show. Any number of coupon birds can be entered at the same show.

2.—No coupons sold after the last day of August, 1913, except to previous purchasers, who have the right of duplicating their order up to the end of October.

3.—No bird with trimmed, painted or dyed plumage, will be eligible to compete, and all entries must be the bona-fide property of the exhibitor.

4.—No bird entered for this competition may wear a ring, or have any distinguishing mark apart from its natural characteristics.

5.—The Judge will be instructed to withhold a diploma should the merit of the competing birds in any particular section not justify its award.

6.—We reserve the right, in the event of there being less than 10 separate competitors altogether in our competition at any one diploma show to withhold the cash prizes thereat, the diplomas remaining on offer for as many birds as are eligible for them.

7.—No exhibitor may win more than one diploma in the season in any one section, and no exhibitor will be allowed to win more than two of the 10s. prizes offered at the Diploma Shows, but an exhibitor may (if able) win one diploma in each of the 12 sections.

8.—An exhibitor who has won a diploma need not necessarily enter the same bird for the final competition. By winning the diploma he has the right to nominate and enter not more than four birds in any one of the 12 sections for the final competition, and for each entry made for the final competition at the Crystal Palace a coupon will be necessary.

9.—No exhibitor in the final will be allowed to win more than two prizes with his four entries.

10.—In all cases of dispute arising out of this competition the Editor's decision will be absolutely final and legally binding in every respect, and only upon this understanding will entries be accepted.

11.—The Editor reserves the right to alter the conditions from time to time in whatever manner he thinks best in the interests of competitors themselves, and also of the competition.

Our Hobby Week by Week.

A DECISION given in a recent County Court case at Spalding should provide show officials with a little of that provender known as "food for thought." A keeper of live stock (not pet birds) saw a bill exhibited in some public place announcing the holding of a show, and stating that certain prizes would be given thereat. He posted some entries to the secretary at the address on the said bill, and in due course his exhibits were awarded certain prizes. When forwarding the prize-money, the secretary enclosed a note to the effect that the show had not been a success, therefore they were only paying prize-money on a reduced scale, as per one of their rules. The exhibitor replied saying that he knew of no such rule; that he had entered through the particulars given in the advertisement; and that therefore he claimed the amount of money to which he was entitled according to the said advertisement.

Why the Society Lost the Case.

A deadlock occurred. The society declined to entertain the claim; the exhibitor persisted in his demand. Eventually the officials of the society were sued for the balance in the local County Court. The Judge asked the secretary whether there was any mention on the bill of the fact that the show was held under certain rules, or in any advertisement, and the reply was in the negative. The Judge thereupon held that the exhibitor was entitled to recover, and gave judgment for the amount claimed, with costs. It is clear, then, that to avoid trouble of this kind, societies holding shows should state on all bills and in all advertisements that the fixtures are being held under certain rules (or, in the alternative, that entries are only accepted subject to certain rules). Otherwise any exhibitor who enters birds without signing the usual entry form (which, of course, generally embodies a declaration that the rules and regulations have been read and are agreed to as binding) is under no necessity to accept the rules laid down in the schedule; and in this age of "late entries" there must be many such cases at the majority of cage bird shows. It should be noted that this exhibitor admitted, when cross-examined, that he knew it was the custom to have rules.

Are Facts "Elastic" as Figures.

We are all familiar with the saying that "figures can be made to prove anything," and no doubt many of us have met with cases in which this seemed to be true. It is surely rather unusual, however, for two entirely opposed sets of "facts" to result from a simple investigation carried out presumably on similar lines. In 1900 Mr. S. D. Judd (vide his paper, "The Relations of Sparrows to Agriculture," published by the Board of Agriculture of the United States of America) set out to discover to what extent the House Sparrow was responsible for the spread of the weeds on the seeds of which it fed. Seven Sparrows were fed on various weed-seeds and their droppings examined. The result, it is stated, went to prove that the larger seeds were cracked before being swallowed, and afterwards thoroughly pulverised. Other seeds (such as crab-grass, for the spread of which on lawns, etc., the Sparrow has been blamed) were swallowed whole, but voided in such a condition that they could not possibly germinate. This seems to be only what one would expect, for if the seeds (or the great majority of them) are not digested, the bird clearly can derive no nourishment from them. In the case of soft-billed birds which swallow the seeds of fruits, it is, of course, different; the seeds themselves are not the objective from the food point of view.

A Test Fanciers Might Undertake.

A well-known English investigator, however, Mr. W. E. Collinge, who from time to time has written highly interesting papers on the foods of our wild birds, in an article published in the Journal of our own Board of Agriculture gives details of experiments which disclose an entirely different state of affairs. Assuming them to be trustworthy (this can surely be taken for granted) they are of particular value to keepers of Finches as revealing exactly the kind of weed-seeds on which the various species feed. Possibly some of our fanciers who are in a position so to do may be inclined to experiment on similar lines; what has Mr. J. Steel to say, or Mr. J. B. Clark? The results of properly-conducted cases, especially if undertaken in different parts of the United Kingdom, and at different seasons of the year, would be very educative and of considerable practical value. Mr. Collinge tells us that soil which had been sterilised (note this) was put into flower pots, the droppings of various birds collected and placed on the same, and then lightly covered with a layer of fine soil.

What the Experiments Revealed.

In one instance, from 54 droppings of the House Sparrow 133 plants were grown, including ribwort plantain, chickweed, mouse-ear, groundsel, daisy, yarrow, dock, dandelion, buttercup, and sheep sorrel. Thirty-eight droppings of Greenfinches yielded 54 plants, including charlock, dock, knot-grass, dandelion, plantain, goose-grass, and corn marigold. Fifty droppings of Bullfinches produced 96 plants, including sow-thistle, chickweed, dock, ragwort, hawkweed, plantain, self heal, groundsel, and charlock. As showing the change of food material during the nesting season, Mr. Collinge states that he observed the visits of House Sparrows to their nests on 84 occasions on various dates, and identified on 23 of these bread, potato, or other "soft" kitchen refuse; on 15, beetles; 3, "ladybird" beetles; 2, spiders; 12, larvæ of the winter moth; on others small dipterous flies, and on a large number, small dipterous larvæ. I may say that a pair of House Sparrows which became on very friendly terms with us some five years ago carried away any number of mealworms with which to feed their nestlings, and daily ate up all the insectile mixture left unconsumed by our insectivorous birds, but would only tackle the latter when nothing better (in the shape of live food) was discoverable.

My notes on the fertility and sex of eggs will, I am afraid, have to be "crowded out."—G. E. WESTON.

Questions and Answers.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who receive letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. only queries so sent will be answered. Post-cards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. Mules and Hybrids—H. Norman. British Birds—H. J. Fulljames. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S.. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES

FEEDING GREENS (W.).—It is not necessary to colour-feed green Yorkshires for exhibition, nor is such a course advisable, as the colour-food injures rather than improves the tone and purity of the green colour. The best colour food, if such it may be properly termed, for this variety is a fairly liberal and varied dietary, in which various wild seeds, fruits, and green foods take a prominent place. Nasturtium or marigold blooms may also be given, and a little saffron added to the water occasionally. Towards the close of the moult a pinch of linseed or a few chopped sunflower seeds may be given three times a week to add lustre and bloom to the plumage. Regular free bathing will also be very beneficial. The Nutshell booklet No. 24, on Green Canaries, might help you with more details, and Part IX. of "Our Canaries" deals with details on this subject more largely than is possible here.

LOST THREE BROODS (J. R.).—If, as I take it, you have only one pair of birds, which have lost three successive broods at eight to ten days old, it is scarcely worth trying again this season, as, if nesting has not already progressed some way, the probability is the parents would drop in moult before the next brood was reared. Besides this, the birds have already produced enough for one season. I have no doubt whatever your feeding is the cause of the losses. You make no mention of green food, yet this also, given with discretion, would have counteracted the constipation and saved the situation in each case. The hemp and rape which you appear to have begun to supply much too early, would aggravate it and hasten the catastrophe. You also might have seen a number of replies in the last few weeks which should have shown you where you were going wrong—notably, one to "Beginner" on June 7th. If the birds are already nesting, look up these replies, or get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and follow advice therein for next brood. But if not nesting, my advice is to separate them now for the rest of this season.

SLEEPY BABIES (L. B. J.).—It is certainly natural for birdy babies, like all others, to doze away some portion of the time, but they should not be dull and fluffy, nor sleep all the time unless "livened up." Forty winks now and again, especially about middle of day and early afternoon, is of no serious import. You give no idea of the age of your birds, which is, of course, of some moment. Try following treatment, and if birds do not quickly improve write again and repeat full particulars. Keep on the staple of plain canary, on top of which place a little dry rape daily. In addition, give a large teaspoonful of egg food between every four birds each morning. Twice a week withhold this and give instead an equivalent quantity of bread and milk. In each case sprinkle with maw seed. In the afternoon throw out any remnants of soft food and give a teaspoonful, heaped, of cracked hemp to each four birds, and here again withhold it twice a week and substitute either a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats, or a similar quantity of scalded rape. To keep them occupied give a few plantain stalks containing the green milky seeds, seedy chickweed, shepherd's-purse, grasses, or seed heads of dandelion. A few nasturtium or marigold blossoms may also be given. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand.

A GREAT TOPER (W. G. C.).—The abnormal thirst is the natural concomitant of the excessive diarrhœa. Certainly fill the drinker daily, or, better still, empty, cleanse, and refill it in the afternoon as well as in the morning, as the water of birds so affected often becomes very foul and smells badly in a few hours in warm weather. Keep cage and perches as clean as possible, and renew sand or sawdust daily for a time. Sawdust would be the best floor covering whilst the trouble lasts. Give a staple diet of plain canary, and add separately each morning a small teaspoonful of scalded summer rape, and towards evening throw out any remnants of this and give a pinch of good, sound hemp. Each day for a week give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut dusted all over with carbonate of bismuth, and then sprinkled liberally with maw seed. Give no green food except seed heads of shepherd's-purse or plantain. In the water dissolve as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, half as much sulphate of iron, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid daily for a week. If the looseness is not cured by the end of the week add to water in the following week, instead of the above, six drops of dilute sulphuric acid and four of tincture of opium every second day.

SWOLLEN LEG (Morriston).—Assuming you are satisfied the bird has not broken that part—a rather likely part to give way when a bird is excited and enjoying a vigorous dash about the perches, especially if the perches are loosely or awkwardly placed—bathe the foot daily in a warm solution of extract of wych hazel—a teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of warm water. After bathing for a few minutes, dry gently, and paint over all, foot included, with a feather dipped in Friar's Balsam, and continue holding the foot for a minute or so afterwards until the "sting" has passed away. If you have reason to suspect a fracture from cause suggested above, your best plan, after this lapse of time, is to leave it for Nature to cure in her own way. See that the perches fit firmly, and are placed quite comfortably and conveniently for the bird.

WAS IT PREVENTABLE? (Edina).—If you kept the hen quite warm after the steaming, and added a stimulant to the water, such as 30 drops of brandy, you did practically all that was of any use to her, and as your treatment prior to mating seems to have been quite correct, it is reasonable to assume that the egg-binding could not be prevented in that case. The condition of things you describe could scarcely have been otherwise than fatal, and the case seems to have been of quite an extraordinary kind. To gather precise information on such a subject, however, you should have sent the body to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem. Your own description of the appearances leaves much to be speculated upon. I cannot, for instance, tell whether you found the egg in the oviduct or within the abdominal cavity.

WILL IT MOULT AGAIN? (W. T. P.).—If the moult that is just finished has been complete, including wings and tail, the bird will not moult again this year. The probability is it will moult very early next year; therefore, if your conditions are favourable for early breeding, and both he and his intended mate come in good condition early next season, it would be judicious to make an exception and mate them any time from the end of February onwards. Otherwise you may not get more than one brood from them next year.

SHAGGY AND SCRATCHERS (Benedicta).—Beyond the birds scratching continually, you mention nothing that leads me to any conclusion of ill-health. The scratching is almost certain to be due to one of two causes—either the birds are troubled with insect pests, or the irritation is due to the moult being near at hand. In the latter case no treatment is really necessary. Things will right themselves when the birds moult, which may be very soon. If it is due to insects this could be readily discovered by examining the sleeping place, especially the ends of perches and in the vicinity where most of the birds habitually roost. If any red-mites are discovered, destroy all than can be found, and afterwards brush over the ends of the perches and any other harbour with carbolic fluid, or any good insecticide, twice a week regularly for a time. If no red mites are found, catch one or two of the birds and examine well into their plumage under wings, round base of neck, and base of tail to see if any grey lice can be found. If so, in addition to using insecticide as above, add a teaspoonful of sulphuretted potash to each pint of bathing water three times a week for a time. The shaggy plumage you describe might well be quite natural in a Crest-bred or Lancashire Canary, as also might the bareness at back of neck. You do not say what variety they are. Dissolve a teaspoonful of sulphate of soda in a pint of water for drinking every second day for a week, and on the alternate days add six drops of tincture of gentian and three of dilute sulphuric acid to each ounce of water. You can do little else whilst the birds are nesting.

UNCANNY APPEARANCES (Crest).—(1) It is quite possible for the Scotch Fancy to be a hen, notwithstanding that it, as you say, sings louder than any cock you possess, and has hitherto been regarded as a cock. Such exceptional cases are met with now and again. If it is really a hen, the fact has probably been amply proved by this time. (2) The egg that persisted in standing upright on its end had solved the problem of standing an egg on its end in a cleverer manner than the genius of a Columbus. Had you broken the egg, you would have found the contents dried up into a small hard collection of albumen and yolk which had retreated into the end of the shell and was there firmly attached to the shell. Thus, practically the whole weight was concentrated in a very small space at the end of egg, and, of course, acted as ballast and compelled the egg to remain always in a more or less upright position. It seems a rather uncanny phenomenon, but is very simple when the cause is understood.

YOUNGSTERS TRAVELLING (First Time Out).—Certainly, it would be quite safe to send young birds a journey of 94 miles at eight or ten weeks old, and if properly packed and despatched, they will bear the journey without the slightest risk. I daresay you have seen the travelling cages used by dealers to accommodate one or two birds, which are practically small rectangular boxes, with two-thirds of the depth of one side filled with wires, and a portion of another side, to form the top, cut out and filled in with a small door for inserting and removing birds. For casual journeys you cannot very well beat this type, and can make it any size you like to hold a number of birds. It is best, however, to send only small numbers in one cage—say six. For this number a cage six by six inches and twelve inches long would be ample. Two perches should be securely fixed across the width near the floor for birds to hold on to. Put a handful or two of canary seed on floor, and at last moment throw in a few small pieces of stale bread saturated with water. Put in birds, and wrap cage bodily in stout brown paper and tie with string. Use a clearly printed "Live Birds" label for address, and be careful to place it on the side that should be kept uppermost—the top of the cage. Proper labels can be obtained from our offices. If the weather is quite warm—not otherwise—push a lead pencil through wrapper in a few places over wired front. Always pack and despatch birds in the evening, but early enough to get away by a passenger express. Never send by goods train. Two cages as above may be packed back to back, or four in two tiers, securely tied together and wrapped up as one parcel.

DEFORMED TOE (Poor Cripple).—I note you say the hind toe does not grip the perch at all. If this remark applies to the time when the bird is at roost at night, or resting quietly on perch for a time, you should at once put on a rubber ring for a month or so. Make this ring by cutting off rather less than an eighth of an inch from feeding bottle tubing. Catch the bird, and, holding the three front toes close together, place the ring over them, and then, holding the hind toe back against leg, push on the ring up leg until nearly as far as the end of the hind toe and leave it there. When bird is released the ring will hold toe in a backward position. When you remove ring, give the bird thin and nearly round perches about size of a lead pencil for a few weeks. If the bird gradually works the hind toe over back of perch when resting, the ring is probably unnecessary, as the thin perches given at once would gradually correct the deformity. Ordinary perches should be used whilst bird is wearing ring.

CARE OF UNDEVELOPED FEATHERS (K. S.).—Similar cases have been referred to in these replies on a number of different occasions as abnormal feather growths. The only feature which is uncommon is that in your bird the growths should prove so persistent in appearing on different parts of the body. It is not at all uncommon for a case to recur frequently on the same part of body, and most frequently it is the wings, tail, or head that is attacked. If there is a narrowed portion forming a kind of neck at the base of the growth which will allow a ligature to be readily tied on securely so that it will not slip off, tie a ligature of silk or thread tightly around the base, as closely as you can get to the skin of the body, and allow it to remain. Cut off, ends of ligature fairly close to prevent bird pulling them. In a short time the growth, deprived of its blood supply, will dry up and drop off without danger.

Answered by H. J. FULLJAMES.

A BARBARISM (W. Towel).—It seems strange that in the twentieth century there can be still found anyone who asks whether the talking powers of a Jackdaw, or of anything else, may be improved by "slitting its tongue." In the first place, neither a bird nor anything else talks with its tongue. The tongue only shapes the sounds produced in the throat, and any operation on the tongue would hinder instead of improve its functions. You may tell your friends that the idea was an ignorant one, and as useless as it was ignorant.

PRESERVING "ANTS' EGGS" (M. C. M.).—It is not a difficult matter to preserve these for winter use. The difficulty, generally, is to get the fresh ones, and you are indeed lucky to be able to get them "in any quantity" as you say in your letter. They only require to be subjected to sufficient heat to dry the grub which each contains. Use an old flat tin or frying pan, and place them over a gas ring or in an oven until the natural moisture is evaporated. A good method is to partially fill a frying pan with sand, and place over a gas ring until the sand is quite hot; then stir in some of the fresh ants' eggs, and keep them in the sand for a few minutes. Sift out the sand, and use over and over again until you have dried all that you require.

BRITISH BIRD QUERISTS

should consult Norman's British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

LINNETS INCUBATING (Mrs. Parker).—The time of incubation with Linnets and other Finches is the same as with a Canary, from thirteen to fourteen days. The old birds will, doubtless, feed the young if any are hatched. Supply them with plenty of wild seed such as shepherd's-purse, chickweed, plantain, groundsel, etc., and a little egg food, such as given to Canaries made of one part hard-boiled egg to two parts powdered sweet biscuit will help if the old birds will take it.

CAGE FOR A BLACKBIRD (W. T. Peckham).—A "box cage," that is, one which is open only in front is the best form of cage for a Blackbird. Cages that are open all round will answer, but in these the birds are subject to draughts and temporary changes of temperature. The cage you purpose making is quite of a nice size, and the change into it should not in itself stop the bird's song.

BERRIES FOR A HAWFINCH (A. P. Morgan).—You may give your bird any kind of berry in season—cherries, blackberries, elderberries, privet, mountain ash, elder, anything that may be handy, and all will help to improve the colour of its plumage.

SEEDS FOR A GOLDFINCH (F. E. N., U.S.A.).—Of the seeds you name all except millet are good for a Goldfinch. There are, however, two very important seeds you do not mention, teazle and thistle. Is it really correct that you cannot obtain these in the United States? Then there are the seeds of many weeds, which are easily gathered in this country, all of which are much appreciated by Goldfinches, and I have no doubt that if you are unable to get such as shepherd's-purse, knapweed, groundsel, chickweed, ragwort, milk thistle, and the many others which abound in England you will be able to find substitutes for them. Green food is, of course, a necessity, young dandelion leaves, lettuce, cress, etc., or you may sow some rape and give the Goldfinch the seedlings when they are an inch or so high.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

SHOW CAGE FOR CARDINAL (R. B.).—A cage 18 inches long, by 9 inches deep and 12 inches high would fully meet the case. I prefer the box type, with the wire front of cage rounded off from front to back at the top. Pale sage green is a good colour for the interior; there are few species of birds which this species does not suit.

RED-COLLARED LORIKEETS (C. B-M).—I kept this species out of doors all the year round for several years in quite a small aviary, the only trouble I found was that in frosty weather the milk sop had to be thawed several times daily. I must, however, tell you that there are few Lories or Lorikeets that will agree together or with other species of Parrakeets. The Red-collar is a beautiful and interesting species, which soon becomes quite familiar with those which attend to its requirements, and will do well if accommodated with a moderate sized enclosure to themselves. They have bred in captivity at the London Zoo.

BRANCHES FOR PARROTS (R. Walford).—Branches of any of our English fruit trees are quite safe, as also are willow, spruce, and firs; I have used poplar, beech, chestnut, and hazel, without mishap; the above will give you an ample range to choose from.

ORANGE-CHEEKED WAXBILLS (H. Hammond).—The distinctions are not great, but if you pick a bird in which the ventral region is distinctly stained with orange-yellow, and the other in which the same part is practically lacking the same hue, you will be practically certain of possessing a pair.

WHAT IS IT? (A. R. Coe).—Will you make me a rough sketch, no matter how rough, of the colour areas and indicate the position and extent of the ticked areas, and the white patches above and below, and say if there is any chestnut-brown or rufous-brown about. It must, I think, be either the two-coloured Mannikin, rufous backed, or an abnormal coloured Bronze Mannikin. I have seen immature specimens of the latter without any bronze on the wings. I am inclined to think it may be the two-coloured, in which case it should be worth 10s. 6d. or 15s., as these only rarely come over; many years ago I got a pair sent me as Bronze-wings, but unfortunately they only lived one day. If your bird is only blackish slate colour, and white, then it is the two-coloured, but if you can give me any further details, I will confirm, or otherwise, the above definition in our next issue.

PEKIN NIGHTINGALES (Klnock).—The Pekin Robin has the crown of the head a richer green, the pale area round his eye is also a brighter yellow, the red margins to wing feathers are also richer in hue, and make a larger patch. From your description, you may have a young cock, but I incline to the opinion that it is a female from your details. The hen has a few notes, but nothing like the song of the male, but the capacity of individuals is very variable.

AVIARY QUERIES (S. Starling).—So far as I gather from your sketch, the shelter portion on the left is inside the poultry roosting shed, and providing you can keep the atmosphere sweet, and it is not draughty, it should answer well, seeing that it is fairly well lighted. If it is outside, then the front of it must be covered in with wood and glass. The flight and other portions are well arranged. If the bird should show signs of feeling the cold, then you must, during the winter months, only screen part of the front of the covered flight. The Ribbon Finches, Budgerigars, and Canaries should breed, and some of the odd birds may hybridise. The females of Weavers and Whydahs retain practically the same plumage all the year round, only the males don the gorgeous nuptial or breeding garment. Zebra Finches and Silverbills should also do well, and breed with you. Bib Finches, Bengalese, Bronze Mannikins would also be probable breeders, and are pretty birds. You must not let the Budgerigars get numerous, or they give trouble by breaking the legs and wings of the other birds in their mischievous play.

INDOOR AVIARY (Bird Cage).—I gather you are in a position to put up an aviary 8ft. long, 2ft. wide, by 5ft. high, and that you want to make the most of your space. It should be sufficient if only the front is wire netting. The back and ends to be lined with twiggy branches, at the back of which rush nests and nest boxes must be freely dispersed. You could put in 1 pair each Zebra, Ribbon and Bib Finches, Avadavats, Golden-breasted Waxbills, Silverbills, and Spice Finches. All are pretty and cheap, and when you have had some experience with these, you could try some of the rarer and more expensive species.

ROSE-BREASTED COCKATOO (Mrs. Marsland).—Your best course will be to call in a local vet., but I very much fear that in a case of such long standing it will be very difficult to check the habit. Some vets. refuse to treat birds, and if you have any difficulty in the matter, I shall be pleased to name one. Nevertheless, unless you can contrive a bandage or something that will prevent the bird reaching the given parts, I much fear nothing can be done. Painting the swelling ("lump") on abdomen with tincture of iodine, so long as the skin is sound, should gradually reduce it.

COCKATIELS (Novice).—Your dietary is satisfactory, and it appears that the erratic season has been largely responsible for the delay, but they should settle down to nesting as soon as the moult is past. It can do no harm to give them a tonic, say, half a teaspoonful of hypo-phosphates in the drinking water daily for a month, but giving them plain water once a week. You do not mention the character of your nest. It should have a concave bottom; if it is flat, there will be little result. Give them a small barrel if you can conveniently arrange this. It is merely a case for the exercise of a little patience; at no distant time they will settle, and will bring up several broods before the season closes. I should not give many sunflower seeds at this season. There does not appear to be anything wrong with the birds, and the shedding of plumage is probably largely due to climatic changes. Lettuce and seeding grass are the best green foods, also growing cereals just before they are fully ripe. From the details you give you appear to have a breeding pair, and with the present fine weather they should soon be in condition and settle down. Many pairs of Cockatiels play about just as yours have been doing, for some weeks before settling down to serious work. A nest receptacle with a concave bottom is a necessity.

CUTTHROATS (Price, Jun.).—Cutthroats, though free breeders, on the whole are not always good parents, and there are many pairs which act similarly to yours. But probably yours may do better with the next nest. If any more eggs are laid, supply soft food about the eleventh day, and as soon as young are hatched supply some ants' eggs. Any make of insectile mixture (soft food) advertised in our columns would meet the case, or sponge cake slightly moistened with boiling milk is mostly acceptable to many species of Foreign Finches, when they are feeding young. Re Silverbills, these are not easy to sex, as they are very similar in plumage, but the hen is slightly smaller, more slender, and also slightly duller in plumage, her flight feathers being greyer than those of her mate.

CARDINALS, ETC. (O.J.S.).—(1) The distinction between the sexes is not great, and it is not easy to pick pairs out of a crowd. The hen Pope Cardinal has a longer and more wedge-shaped beak, and her primaries have narrower white edges on the outer webs. The hen Red-crested Cardinal is a little less brilliant than her mate, her beak is also longer and not so arched as that of the male. (2) If you can get true pairs of each, I do not think they will give trouble in a roomy aviary, but if you get three cocks and only one hen there will be more or less continuous "scrapping." (3) Pope and Red-crested Cardinals are not averse to going to nest, but the young are not always reared; if you can maintain a varied supply of live food, such as mealworms, well scoured gentles, live ants' eggs, etc., you should have a good prospect of success. They are erratic as to their choice of the nesting site; they may use the ivy, or their choice may fall on a closed box.

BIRDS FOR INDOOR AVIARY (Regular Reader).—You tell me nothing about the aviary, and give no idea as to size. Whydahs in restricted quarters frequently scare the other inmates badly when on the wing with the long caudal plumes, but the Paradise Whydah will be the best for your purpose. Inexpensive and brightly coloured species are fairly numerous, but some of them are not easy to acclimatise, especially those marked with a star: Avadavats, Golden-breasted and Orange-cheeked Waxbills, *Cordon Blues, *Firefinches, Green Singing Finches, *Pintail Nonpareils, Zebra Finches, *Green Avadavats, Cape Canary, *Lavender Finches, Spice Finch, and if the aviary is roomy enough, Madagascar and Napoleon Weavers; but the two latter are often spiteful in restricted quarters.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W. Kingsley.—Broncho-pneumonia, arising from a cold—a very fatal disease.

J. Warburton.—Peritonitis, cause of death.

Will East.—Fatty degeneration of liver, spleen, and kidneys. Cause of death, enteritis, resulting from disorganisation of the liver. It was a most extreme case. I am afraid it is due to a contagious element. In such an advanced stage of disease cure is hopeless. I should advise you to clear them out and start fresh next season.

Phyllis Gibbons.—Impaction of stomach (proventriculus) and bowels, due to error in feeding, or preparing food. Your other queries come under different heading. Write CAGE BIRDS office for this information.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

C. Shirley.—Assuming that there is no reason for, and no reasonable excuse for, the delay in returning A's bird, then A is certainly entitled to recover from B a sum as damages to cover whatever loss he may have sustained as a consequence of B's action.

W. F. D.—Of your plants only two are known to us as being of any value to give to birds, viz., No. 5 sorrel, No. 6 corn spurrey. No. 2 is one of the plantains (Plantago media), but is not to be compared with either the greater ("rat-tails") or ribwort plantains for use with birds.

Cautinus.—Write to Messrs. Wyman, Ltd., Printers, Fetter Lane, London, E.C.; enclose two penny stamps and ask them to send you a copy of the latest Wild Bird Act for Warwickshire. You would also finds the "Catchers' Guide" (published by Messrs. Trower and Co., 442, Caledonian Road, London, N., price 7d., post free) very useful to you.

W. Tebbit.—There are numbers of shops in London where dried flies and ants' cocoons (generally called ants' eggs) can be bought; we are not, however, well acquainted with your own particular neighbourhood. Try any of the large seed firms advertising in our columns.

Jas. Bridgman.—Your query has been sent on to Mr. Wesley Page, who will answer in the Foreign query column next week.

"I have no more birds to sell at present, thanks to advertising in CAGE BIRDS. I had 140 young birds, but have about sold up with the aid of your valuable paper. I shall be advertising again a bit later on.—R. JONES (Stockport).

"I have sold the hen advertised. I had so many replies that I could not answer them all, which speaks well for good old CAGE BIRDS." F. FAULKNER (Redruth).

"Please allow me to thank the numerous persons answering my advert. in CAGE BIRDS, as I had too many letters to answer separately. I have sold all my surplus birds. Wishing CAGE BIRDS the success it deserves."—E. HARRISON (Manchester).

A Very Enjoyable Ramble in Delightful Weather.

The first of a series of rambles was held June 14 to Ridgeway, the weather was all that could be desired. Meeting at the Intake Car terminus, we are soon making our way for the fields, and as we cross Birly Nab we hear the Skylark singing beautifully; other birds at this time claim our attention, by their melodious songs, and as we pass along we notice the abundance of wild seeds to provide something for the feathered tribe; one field was practically full of thistles and other weeds. The first nest to claim our attention was a Tit's, built on the side of a tree, it was indeed a wonderful piece of workmanship, and was admired very much. The next nest found was a Greenfinch's with four young ones, and as they held up their heads for food they were a pretty sight. We now enter the village, and the cottages looked grand with their well kept gardens, ivy-covered walls, and windows full of bloom. Making our way to our hosts, we find we are a bit early for tea, so we have half an hour looking around the hedges and gorse bushes. Here we found evidence of much bird life; we put up a brace of Partridges, Starlings were about in great numbers, and the sight of a Chaffinch gladdened our eyes. He was in the pink of condition, and was a treat to look at. Linnets hereabouts were very numerous, the nest of the Chaffinch was found with three young ones, also a Thrush's with three young, just about ready to leave the nest. We were now in a lovely spot amongst the gorse, and your humble thought he would snap the party, so when all had put on their best smile, the deed was done; this ordeal over we made our way back to tea, on the lawn, and right well was it enjoyed. After tea began the real part of the ramble. Retracing our steps for a little way, we have the great Marathon race, and what a race it was, coming just after a good tea. The Dorando of the party proved to be Mr. C. W. Hobson. He was last going out, but when the others turned, he turned also and so won in a canter; he will be scratch man next time. Taking the road on the left, Master Hobson made a lucky find; while playing with a ball it fell amongst some grass and nettles, and out flew a bird; looking about he soon finds the nest which turns out to be a Tree Pipit's with five young. This was built within a foot of the road and the wonder was it had not been trampled on. At this time we had a new experience, we lost one of the party. Mr. Wragg, of Starmington, somehow lost the way, and although friend Curley returned a good way back he could not be found we trust he got home safe and sound. Leaving the fields again we go up Godbier Lane, an old grass grown lane very little used; this was an ideal spot for nests, bordered as it was on either side by thick hedges. Pushing on, we pass Caterhall farm, and then for a mile or two keep to the fields, the paths are scarcely discernible as they are so little used; a Blackbird's nest is now found with one young. We now enter Elland's Wood, which is a perfect haven for birds, being very thick in undergrowth, the path on either side is very steep, and you must pick your way very carefully to escape a fall, a lovely stream runs along the bottom. Here we could not resist a halt to listen to the chorus of song as the Blackbird, Thrush, and others vied with each other. During the rest of the way birdy topics are discussed, and as the bats are coming out, the lights of Woodseats are to be seen in the distance, a car ride, and we arrive in Sheffield about 10.30 p.m., having spent a most enjoyable and instructive time with nature.—J. Woolhouse, Asst. Sec.

OLDHAM C.B.A.

We have received a list of awards at the show held on June 21. Mr. W. Cundiff, Macclesfield, judged. From the list we gather that the principal winners were: LIZARDS, Lowe. LANCS., Lowe. NOR., Sharples, Whyatt, Dalzell, Schofield, Furniss, Cope. YORKS., Addison, Wagstaffe, Wilkinson. Specials were won by Messrs. Lowe, Sharples, Wagstaffe and Downes.—(Ed.)

LONGTON C.B.S.

N.F. show held June 14, at Roebuck Hotel; Mr. Roe (Birmingham) judged. The Norwich clear buff shown by N. Leese is a nice typical bird for a youngster, and undoubtedly will be heard of in the open shows, as it is of A1 quality. Mr. G. Salt's Yorkshire is another grand bird, and will no doubt do its owner some good. British were in the pink of condition for the time of the year, especially the Linnet class, 10 nice birds being shown.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is either to sign the coupon herewith, and send the same, together with sevenpence, or to get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1913.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address.

Cremations at Cheltenham.

I may say it has been the worst breeding season I have ever known. The parents only care to rear one; if more hatch they are crushed in the nest, or dropped on the cage floor, unfed, to be cremated in the kitchen fire. Yet I have beautiful parent birds, too.—(Mrs.) E. S. Parkes (Cheltenham).

Many Clear Eggs at Ramsgate.

Some of the results of breeding so far are: Miss Gwynn over 50, Mr. J. Burgess 42, Mr. Brown 4, Mr. E. G. Kow 19, Mr. Welland 19, Mr. Clark 21, F. Thomas 24, H. E. Taylor 62, some of the latter being well on colour food. I have not the results of the other members, but clear eggs have been very prevalent this year.—F. Thomas, Hon. Sec. Ramsgate C.B.S.

In Luck in Inverness.

Although the weather has been against breeding in the far North, with only a few pairs up I have been exceptionally successful. I have Canaries and Linnet and Goldie Mules, also Canary-reared Linnets, while I had Redpoll-Siskin Hybrids up to four days old, when I unfortunately was taken ill (am still confined to house), consequently I lost them, being unable to give them proper attention.—Peter Grant (Inverness).

"Pleased to say I sold the Light Mule I advertised. Sorry I could not reply to all enquiries for him."—R. ELSTON (Crediton).

"My adverts in CAGE BIRDS this season have brought me in week after week scores of Orders both from home and abroad." JAS. HEAP (Burnley).

"The 'Filup' Feeder has had a splendid sale through our advert. in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. You might be interested to know that all, or nearly all, our orders have come through your paper, or CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL."—C. H. GOODMAN AND CO. (Kempston, Bedford).

AN ENJOYABLE CRICKET MATCH.

The "Early Birds" Beat the City and Suburban A.C.B.

The cricketing enthusiasts belonging to the City and Suburban A.C.B. on Saturday last played their annual match with the "Early Birds" C.C. Both sides seemed to be in very vigorous condition, and had evidently "fed up" into excellent show form. The result was a keen fight, but in the end the City and Subites had to yield the first prize to their friendly rivals by the margin of 21 runs. This was mainly due to Mr. Tugwood, a brawny bird of Lancashire type, who rudely smote the City bowling all over the field and into various adjacent parishes, bagging 59 runs. Mr. Dowle also played an attractive innings of 22 runs. At one time the "Early Birds" looked in for a big score, but a splendid piece of bowling by Mr. W. Saunders (5 wickets for 8 runs) served to "put up their shutters" in surprising fashion.

Messrs. J. Pooley (3 for 27) and Elmslie also bowled well, while Mr. V. Wynn kept wicket in his usual expert style. The City and Suburban A.C.B.'s innings was noteworthy for the fine first-wicket stand by Messrs. Hutt (29) and J. Pooley (35), who played free and stylish cricket, laying the wood on very hard and scoring rapidly. But with the exception of Mr. Bacon, who played confidently and was out unluckily, the remainder of the side failed to live up to the early promise. The successful bowlers for the "Early Birds" were Messrs. Panting (4 for 11), Lightfoot (3 for 24), and Collier (2 for 31). Amongst the interested spectators on the Paddington ground we noticed Mrs. Curtis, Mrs. Elmslie, and Messrs. W. Shepherd, W. Prance, J. Lethbridge, S. Turner, J. Ponsford, and E. Clements, and everybody seemed to enjoy the match immensely. Scores:—

"PHOSTO"

The Phosphatic Food Adjunct.
Invaluable for Bad Feeding Hens. Acts like Magic as testified below.

11, Kyme Street, York,
April 28th, 1913.

Dear Sirs.—Please send me another 1/- tin of "Phosto." It is certainly wonderful. I have begun to reckon all birds hatched out of shell are mine, as up to the present have 20 and not lost one; 16 of them are six weeks old, and I think "Phosto" is the only reason, as I have not one bad feeding hen so far, and the young seem stronger and larger.

Yours truly, H. SAYLES.

In tins, post free, 1/-, 2/6, 4/6, sample 3d., or from our Specialist Agents.

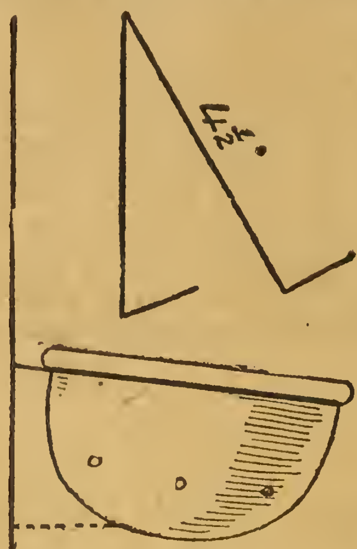
A Vibration Preventative.

Sent by R Gooderidge, 6, Brudenell Street, Hyde Park Road, Leeds.

I have found that the nest pans, when hung in the cages, spring a good deal, especially when the birds are working on them, and this causes them to be nervous. This is a good remedy: Get a piece of cage wire about 11in. long and bend it V-shape; next turn both the ends up square about 1in., or to suit the nest pan, and hang it on the same hook. The lower part of the nest pan rests against the bent ends of the wire, as shown by the dotted line, and any springing of the nest-pan wire is thereby prevented.



In the Courts,

PUNISHED FOR NEGLECT.

At Glasgow Justice of Peace Court, held in the County Buildings, June 17, John Anderson, bird dealer, 188, Saltmarket, Glasgow, was charged at the instance of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals with having, between May 29 and 31, omitted to provide sufficient food and water for two Larks and one Canary, as a result of which they died. It was stated that the birds were observed in cages by officers of the society in the window of the shop occupied by accused, and on examination they were found to be dead. A penalty of 25s., or 14 days' imprisonment, was imposed.

CURIOUS DISPUTE AT SOUTH SHIELDS

A Cruelty Charge the Outcome.

A man named Robert Pringle, of St. Hilda Lane, was charged at South Shields, on June 19, at the instance of the R.S.P.C.A., with having ill-treated a Linnet by breaking its legs. He was defended by Mr. Victor Grunhut.

Evidence was given by Jennie Douglas, of Park Street, to the effect that on June 12 she was in her house when she heard her name called outside. On going out she saw Pringle, who had in his hand her bird cage, containing her pet Linnet, which usually hung in her doorway. She tried to get the cage out of his hand but he lifted it up and dashed it to the ground, afterwards putting his foot on it. He said he would do the same to her. She got hold of the defendant and shouted for the police, but no one came.

Questioned by Mr. Grunhut, Mrs. Douglas said she did not know that her husband had sold the bird to Pringle. It was not his to sell. Pringle did say that he gave her husband a shilling for it, but her husband, who was there, denied that. She denied that she got hold of Pringle by the back of the neck and knocked the cage out of his hand. Her daughter picked up the cage and hit Pringle with it, but that was after witness had taken the bird out.

The Chairman (Ald. Wardle) interposed with the remark that the Bench thought there was no case to answer. The defendant evidently thought he was taking what belonged to him. They dismissed the case.

A Partly White Sparrow.

Sir,—To-day (Monday, June 23) I saw a partially albino Sparrow, which flew from a roof among some more Sparrows. When it was flying I mistook it for a hen Chaffinch, so white were it's wings and tail. The bird's head was white and its tail and wings pure white, not smoky-coloured.

Deeping St. James.

Novice Border Fancy Classes in the South.

Sir,—I thank for their letter the secs. of the Portsmouth and Southern Counties C.B.S. When their show was held there were three other shows going that same week, which I had made up my mind to enter in—even my own club, the New Cross and Dis. had its show then. At the same time I should have liked very much to have competed for some of the handsome prizes, which were very tempting. However, any sec. is at liberty to have my address (163, Lee Green, S.E.) and I will do my best for them at the coming events.

An Appeal to the Cage Bird Fanciers at Grantham.

Sir,—Kindly insert the following in your correspondence columns, as our attendances at meetings have been very slack this year: Grantham fanciers interested in cage birds will be heartily welcomed at our next meeting at Brewers' Arms, Brewery Hill, on Monday, July 7, at 8 p.m. I appeal to all members and others interested to make an effort to attend, that we may try and arrange for a few members' shows; also to try to get all interested to join and become live members, as the society is sound financially. It is most disheartening to our worthy secretary and the few that attend to find there is so little interest taken at present. Now, brother fanciers, show our secretary that we mean to help him make things go, as there must be plenty of fanciers in our town. Send along your names to Mr. Lowther, Agnes Terrace, and he will be pleased to forward all particulars.

Hen Canary Has Fertile Eggs After Five Weeks' Separation from Cock Bird.

Sir,—A few weeks back, in reply to a query of mine under the heading, "Is it a test?—Victor." Mr. St. John was kind enough to ask me to let him know the result of the hatching of certain eggs referred to by me. I have now pleasure in reporting as follows: The position at close of incubation was that I had 5 eggs in the nest; two were marked with an "x," these being the first two laid, (i.e., before the cock bird was returned to the hen). One marked "3" was the third egg laid; the other two had no mark whatever. The marks were made with indelible ink pencil. On the morning of the 13th June, hatching date, one egg marked "x" and one marked "3" hatched successfully. The other one marked "x" contained a dead chick (as I found next day on investigation). Of the last two laid one was clear (unfertile); the other was "pricked" by the hen at an early stage, so I cannot say whether it was clear or fertile. Therefore, an egg laid by a hen that was separated from a cock for five weeks previous to the laying of the said egg, has hatched, and the other egg laid under same conditions has proved to be fertile. The chicks are now feathering nicely and are doing well. The cock was returned at half-past eight on the morning the second egg was laid, and the third egg was laid at 4.30 a.m. next morning. This hen always lays very early.

Victor.

Shall Sale C.B.S. Flourish or Die?

Now Members, Do Your Duty.

Sir,—Respecting the disbanding of Sale Cage-bird Society, Mr. Tom Harrison, the well-known judge and fancier, of Bowdon, promised our secretary that he would come to Sale and give his well-known lecture on "Seeds their uses and abuses." I and one or two other members thought what a great treat was in store for us. The night of the lecture arrived, bringing Mr. Harrison, but to our great disappointment, owing to no members arriving, there was nothing else for us to do but apologise for the absent members. Now I want to ask each member who sees this if he thinks it fair to our secretary and the one or two members who do attend? The last four meetings have not averaged four members each. We have got one of the very best of presidents, and the chairman has not missed a meeting, also a secretary that no one can beat in managing a show, while a bigger balance is in the bank than we have ever had since the society was formed. Therefore I for one am sorry to say that unless members turn up there is nothing else for it than to see Sale society one of the "also rans." I appeal to every member to try and attend an extra-ordinary meeting to be held at my house, 10, Brook St., Sale, on Monday night, June 30, at 8 o'clock, to consider things over. I hope the members will not fail us in "our hour of need," and will make our Society popular and well known.

A Starling Builds Its Nest Amongst Grass.

Sir,—I am an old man, and I work at the Newcastle-under-Lyme Cemetery. While I was mowing the grass I came across a Starling's nest in the grass, with four young ones in it. I watched the old birds come to and fro with worms and feed the young ones. I thought it strange the Starling should build its nest there, for I understood they only build their nests in the holes of trees or under roofs of houses. The registrar came to me and I showed him the nest, also several other men that work here, so they could bear witness for me as to the truth of the matter.

Hen Canaries that Object to Young Wearing Marking Rings.

Sir,—In reference to Mr. Tomlinson's letter about the hens troubling nestlings wearing closed rings, it might interest him to know that the hen I wrote about in a previous issue wore a closed ring herself, and yet would have nothing to do with her young that were rung. At what age is it best to ring young Rollers? I ring mine at seven days, but find I cannot get them all rung at that age. I have just tried to ring two nests of young, one of four and another of three. I managed three in one nest and two in the other. I found it impossible to ring the other two, as the joint was too thick for the ring to go over. I hope that Mr. Tomlinson will treat on this subject in his artcle on the Roller Canary. I wish your paper, Cage Birds every success.

A. Dow.

A Great Start in Canary Breeding.

Sir,—It may be interesting to you and the readers of Cage Birds to hear of my first experience in Canary breeding. I have had from Good Friday, the day I paired up my birds, to now, my second round, from 49 eggs, 43 young hatched, 3 dead, 40 in flying cage. My hens now are sitting on the third round. I have one nest with 7 eggs. I took the cock away, with the previous young, after this hen had laid her third egg. I tested the seven this morning, and find they are all fertile. This is my first year of breeding Canaries, and I consider myself very lucky. My knowledge I obtained from Cage Birds, which I have every week, also "Cage Birds Annual for 1913," and "Canary Breeding for Beginners." If anyone should be interested enough to wish to see them it would be my greatest pleasure in showing them any Saturday afternoon or Sunday. I wish Cage Birds every success.

Goldfinch-Twite Hybrids Bred in Ireland.

Is this a New Cross?

Sir,—I have succeeded in rearing a pair of Goldfinch-Twite Hybrids—a new cross, I believe; or, at least, I can find no record of any specimen of this mating appearing on the show bench. The young were hatched under a Canary on 2nd and 3rd June, and reared by her with the assistance of a cock Siskin Mule. The Twite commenced building operations in her natural domicile—a heather "bush" placed on the floor in a corner of a small aviary, but was coaxed by her mate higher up into a wicker cage fixed in a whitethorn branch, where she laid four abnormally small eggs and incubated them closely. After one week I removed the two fertile eggs to the above-mentioned feeders, substituting clear ones. The Goldfinch unfortunately escaped the next morning, but I have put in his place another breeding Finch which promises to again send the Twite to nest. The young very much resemble Goldfinch "grey-pates," but are somewhat darker. One (the lighter of the two) has seven partially yellow flight feathers on both wings, fringed with white. The other has only five yellow feathers in each lot of flights, minus the white fringe. Whether they will show any blaze is a question for the moult to decide. This is the only success with two Britishers I have to record so far this season, further than one Linnet-Bullfinch egg, which is due to hatch about the 22nd inst. However, as the Hybrid season is still young, and some other pairs are most promising, I may, with a slice of luck, have more success to record.

A Young Yorkshire Feeds its Baby Brother.

Sir,—I have a nest of young Yorkshires (26 days old); three of them are quite large birds for their age, but one is a small bird. It hatched two days after the rest, so it did not get on quite as well. I had to part them off from the old hen, as she plucked them so. One of the large young ones feeds this small one, just like the old hen did. It works itself up just in the same way as the hen does when it is feeding its young. Thinking it may be of interest to your readers, I send it on to you and wish Cage Birds and everybody connected with the bird Fancy the best of luck.

A Missing Cornish Chough.

Have You Seen It?

Sir,—Will you please ask through your valuable paper Cage Birds if any of your readers has seen a Cornish Chough flying about the district or heard of one being caught? He was seen about the housetops here on June 11th, but although I have been searching this district I cannot find him. This is the second time within three months that my aviary has been broken into. I should like to get hold of the party who is breaking into and destroyng my aviary; I should make an example of him. If anyone has seen the Chough will they kindly let me know.

The Scotch Fancy Canary as it was and as it is.

Sir,—Kindly allow me a small space to express my views on the present-day Scotch Fancy and the bird of some 20 years ago. The Scotch Fancy as far back as I refer to was quite a different bird to what it is at the present day. They were birds in those days of very high merit, gracefully turned, or, as we may call it, half-moon shape when standing erect on the perch. The shoulders were nicely rounded and well filled in, and the long reachy neck and the tail following in uniformity with the body, gave the bird a graceful appearance. It was very much admired for its beauty. Most of the Scotch Fancies of the present day, in my opinion, show too much of the Belgian shoulder, which completely puts them out of position. Of course, I admit we have to use the Belgian occasionally, but then it should not be overdone. If so, we get the high square shoulders, with hollows between them, which are very objectionable to a Scotch Fancy. The frill which I often see in some of the present-day Scotch Fancies, is another great fault I strongly object to. They should have no frill protruding from the breast or back, as this prevents a bird showing off his good qualities on the show bench. I am a great admirer of the Scotch Fancy, and I myself consider him the most noble bird we have. It is well worth the time and study to get the real ideal picture of the "Bird o' Circle" impresed on your mind, as then the faults of an inferior specimen can be noted at a glance. The Belgian I consider is a bird of position only, whereas the Scotch Fancy is a bird of position and action combined. So I think if breeders of this graceful bird would try and breed for more circle rather than the high shoulder, we should see better Scotch Fancies grace our show bench. I wish Cage Birds every success; it certainly deserves it.

Distinguishing Mules from Canaries when in the Nest.

Sir,—I was somewhat interested in reading Mr. Pope's letter in your last issue respecting his supposed clear Mules, and would like to point out to him the difference between Goldfinch Mules and young Canaries. In the first place, the beak of a Mule, even in the nest, is longer and more tapered than that of a young Canary; then, again, when they are feathered the yellow of the Goldfinch's wings will show itself on the edge of the outer flights quite plainly, and when they leave the nest the wild blood will assert itself—there's no mistaking the distrustful look they give you and they will be outside their cage if there is half a chance. Last, but not least, there is their call, when asking to be fed; it is almost exactly the same as a Greypate in the wild state. I may say that I have now a nest of three variegated Mules, and I don't think anyone who has had experience of breeding Canaries can possibly make a mistake.

Cock Canaries which Help Incubate the Eggs.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. M. Cobley's letter in Cage Birds of June 21st, I have a pair of Norwich, and the cock, which is unflighted, takes his turn of sitting on the eggs all through the incubating. They have now got their third nest, and he has done this all along.

J Cain.

Sir,—Seeing Mr. M. Cobley's account of a Yorkshire cock incubating eggs, I have also in my bird-room here a Norwich buff cock (3rd season), a proved reliable fertiliser, that persists in sitting on eggs and hatching out the young birds, although it causes the hens to molest him times out of number; he rarely leaves the nest to allow her a chance to sit, otherwise he is very kind and considerate with her, feeding often and well. On the 13th and 14th days he hatched out (himself) the 4 eggs and has duly attended to the feeding of the young birds, which are doing well, also feeding the hen, who seems now to be quite satisfied with the easy time the old chap is giving her. This same cock saved me a nest of 4 young last season, and brought them up from two days old, when I found the mother on the nest quite dead—a good yellow hen I purchased from Mr. Weston.

The Rearing of Cordon Bleus in Captivity.

Sir,—I have to thank you for forwarding to me a letter from a London fancier on the subject of rearing these birds. Although the writer's experience did not extend to actually rearing same, the expressions of hope for my own success were much appreciated. The writer possesses a Canary which is stated to eat live ants' eggs; this bird should be an ideal foster for foreigners, if eggs could be procured. Superstitious readers will be interested to learn that on the receipt of this letter (13th) two little Cordons were only a few hours old. I believe four eggs were laid. On Sunday last the hen was taken ill, about 3 p.m., and the cock left the nest, but returned and was on at 7 p.m. I came home at 9 and found both birds on the perch, the hen looking awfully sick. I abandoned all idea of any luck, but the cautious insertion of a finger into the entrance of the nest reveals two little beaks. I cannot get eggs away yet. Will let you have further "bulletins" for next issue. All previous young died at a little over a week old. What will they do this time?

Some frolicsome members of the Sheffield C.B.S. indulged in a "Marathon" race when out in the country on the occasion of the society's annual ramble. Our photograph depicts the start.

Trouble with Young Canaries' Back Claws.

Sir,—I have had Canaries now a few years, and every year I have one or two young birds with stiff back claws. They come out of the nest all right and are right for two or three weeks, then some morning at about a month old I find they fail to grip the perch, and the back toenail is powerless. Can any breeder state the cause and cure? It is not the perches; I have all sorts.

Breeding with Hen Bullfinches in Cages.

Sir,—I see from time to time fanciers asking if Bullfinches will breed in cages. I have a hen Bullfinch in a two-foot cage with a Redpoll. She built a nest in a Blackbird's old nest and laid three eggs. She sat her full time, but the eggs were clear, although I saw her calling to her mate while I was feeding her. So I put two Chaffinch eggs under her, and she has brought out the two birds, which are a week old, and doing well on sunflower, sourdock, hemp and grass seed. She will not leave the nest if you put your hand on her back.

The Orange Bishop that Soon Came Home.

Sir,—Some few weeks ago there was a good deal of controversy in your valuable paper re keeping birds in captivity. I thought it might interest some of your readers to hear of my experience this week with an Orange Bishop, which escaped whilst I was entering the aviary. Away it flew over the next garden. I went to try and catch it; but, no, that was out of the question, for as soon as I got close up to it, away it went again, this time further afield, over into the public park. I said, "Good-bye, Mr. Bishop," and returned to business, very much grieved at losing the prettiest bird in my aviary. Having read in Cage Birds about birds returning, however, I asked my wife to be on the look out for him, and when I got home at night the first thing that greeted me was the news of its return to the aviary, and how it had fairly asked to be let back into its home. So my wife shut the other birds in the inside flight and opened the outer door, when in it flew, obviously as pleased to be back as we were to see it back.

Some Delightful & Cheap Foreign Birds.

By T. A. WEBSTER (Cork.)

In writing this article, I purpose dealing with the more commonly imported species, as, besides being more easily kept as regards feeding and accommodation, they are cheaper, and, as a rule, more easily acclimatised. My first favourite is the Budgerigar, and for beauty of plumage and interesting habits I think it would be hard to beat. This is a very easily kept species, requiring only white millet and canary seeds as a staple diet, with a few oats, spray millet, green food, as extras, together with cuttlefish bone. It is very ready to breed in an aviary, and may be successfully bred in a cage, providing same is at least 2ft. 6ins. long, 1ft. 6ins. high, by 1ft. deep, which same, however, will accommodate only one pair with any hopes of success.

The Nests for the Breeding Cages.

If cage breeding is resorted to, two husk nests (obtainable at most bird shops) should be hung in the cage, one in each corner, near the top. They require no soft-food when rearing young, although a little biscuit may be given if they will eat it.

The sexes are alike as regards plumage, but there is no difficulty in obtaining a true pair, as the cere of the male is a dark blue in colour, while that of the hen is a very light blue, which changes to dark brown when in breeding condition. If bred in a cage, the young should be removed as soon as they are able to feed themselves, so as not to interfere with the subsequent nesting arrangements of their parents.

There are two varieties of this bird, the green and yellow, and although the latter are more expensive, yet for beauty of plumage I can strongly recommend the green, a pair of which may be purchased for between five and seven shillings, and, if from a good breeding strain, the latter price is not excessive. The cost of the yellow variety is, as a rule, about two shillings a pair more than the green.

The bird which comes second in my affections is the cheery little Zebra Finch, who, like the Budgerigar, is also a native of Australia, and will thrive on the same diet, with the exception that they require soft-food when rearing young. An excellent recipe for this is to mix an equal parts each of dried flies, fresh ants' eggs, and crumbled sponge cake. I have found the best nest-box for Zebras, and small Waxbills generally, to be in the form of a small box, about seven inches square, with half the front left open for the entrance of the birds. Nesting material, with which they will completely fill up the box, should consist of long dry grass, feathers, and moss—as a matter of fact, I have found them ready to build with anything they could lay their beaks on. Great care should be taken not to unduly interfere with them when nesting, or they will very likely forsake the nest, and bang goes one's hope of a nest of young Zebras.

Just the Bird for the Novice.

Next comes the Cutthroat or Ribbon Finch, which, although of sober plumage, and rather clumsy build, is one of the best species for a novice to commence with, as they are very ready to breed in an ordinary breeding cage. The sexes are quite distinct, the cock having a brilliant red band across his throat, which is entirely lacking in the hen. They require the same food and treatment as the Zebra Finch, with the addition of paddy rice to the seed mixture.

We will now take a group of the small Waxbills, which make a charming collection for a "Crystal Palace aviary," and any fancier would be well repaid for his trouble if he obtained a pair each of the following:—Orange-breasted, Orange-cheeked, and Pink-cheeked Waxbills, Cordon Bleus, and African Fire Finches, the latter two being somewhat harder to acclimatise than the Waxbills, but even if you should have the bad luck to lose a pair or two, you will not have to go into liquidation, as the prices of all the above range from as low 2/- per pair, the maximum price being about 5/-.

Will Weave you their Homes.

They should have hung in their cages a few empty coconut shells filled with hay, to form snug resting places on cold days, and to which they will retire at night. Spray millet should be supplied with a generous hand, as this keeps them in good condition, otherwise treat same as for Zebra Finch. The chances of breeding these in a cage are very small, but if a cage is given up to one pair, the Golden-breast is by no mean impossible to breed.

We will now take a peep at the Weaver family, of which several species are freely imported, the more common being the Red-billed Weaver, Orange Bishop, Madagascar, and Napoleon Weavers, all of which are more or less gaily coloured when in full colour, at which time they may be purchased at from three to seven shillings a pair. When out of colour, they may all be obtained for about three shillings the pair, but at this time, both sexes being alike in plumage, one has to take the chance of obtaining a true pair. They are very interesting birds, and will, if supplied with a quantity of long grass, build any number of nests, beyond which point, however, they generally refuse to go. They will also weave the grass in and out of the wires of the cage.

Two Finches With Sweet Voices.

If song is required, one should get a Grey or Green Singing Finch cock, which is an almost incessant songster, although individuals vary to a great extent. Either of the Singing Finches, lacking a mate of its own, will readily mate with the Canary, and will produce some very pretty hybrids, the value of which, however, is not very high.

All the foregoing species, with the exception of the Budgerigar, delight in bathing, and the bath should be supplied on every moderately fine day, as this is a great help towards keeping them in good health and plumage. In conclusion, let me wish every fancier a successful breeding season, with full eggs, full nests, and full crops.

ROUND THE YOUNG BIRD SHOWS.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

N.F. show held June 14 in club room, Railway Hotel, kindly granted by Mr Hunningham. Entries came in well, 80 birds being staged. Notwithstanding the bad breeding season, some very promising ones were shown both in Borders and Norwich. British were very good. The secretarial duties were carried out by Mr R. Peart, assisted by W. Creswell, and a grand body of fanciers. The stewards were G. Lane, J. Yetts, J. Bentick, G. Bates, W. Soulsby, and S. Foster. Chairman, Mr. W. Butler (West Stanley) judged, and his awards were satisfactory to all. The show was well supported by visitors, and proved a big success.

HAYLE F.A.

Annual show held June 19 in ideal weather. This year the show was a summer show instead of a winter one, and it proved a great attraction. With the music of the Royal Scots Guards intermixed with the song of the birds, it was charming, and the society was rewarded with a good entry and a splendid gate, and everything went off in champion fashion. The Norwich section was good, and the classes for 1913 birds brought out some good stuff, especially the Yellows, good type and quality. Yorks were excellent, and the winning Buff was a gem, and will be heard of again with a good moult. The feature of the show was the Hybrid and British section, which brought together some champion birds, also a record entry, which proves that British birds are to the front when good classes are provided. Competition was very keen, and the small hardbill class was a stinger. Silver cup for best three birds nominated by a member was won by Mr. Coombe with three grand Goldfinches, closely followed by Messrs. Rowe and Richards with two good Mules and Silky Cowbird, last year's winner. Challenge vase for most points was won by Mr. F. Collins, Camborne, with a grand total of 157 points, this being his second win. We cannot speak too highly of the committee, who are all genuine fanciers and took great interest in the exhibits, and the Secretary, Mr. Coombe, is the man in the right place—very obliging and courteous to everyone. Mr. C. H. Foy (Truro) judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction.

REDCAR C.B.S.

Members' F.F. show held June 21, at Crown and Anchor. Mr. Milburn judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. Mr. Skinner (Kirkleatham) kindly gave 6s. as special prize-money in the novice Yorks. class. These was a capital entry of 49, which was very good considering the poor breeding results of the majority of our members. Quality was excellent all round, especially in Yorks, which seems the most popular section with our members.

SOUTH-WEST LONDON C.B.S.

Members' Y.B. show, held at headquarters, New Guildhall, Wandsworth Road, June 21. Owing to the ill-success which many of the members had in the first round, several were unable to show any young birds, yet the entries were considerably in excess of last year, the two classes in Novice Yorks having an entry of 30, amongst which were many really first-class birds. Mr. Slade was well to the front in Crestbreds, one bird taking 1st and two special prizes. In Borders and British some good quality birds were staged, though we should like to have seen larger entries in these classes. CH. YORKS YELL.: 1, spl, McLaughlin; 2, 3, Slade. LIVERPOOL BIRD BREEDERS' ASSOCIATION.

Meeting held in Oldham Hall, June 12, Mr. J. Abbott chair. After business our first N.F. night show was held, 82 birds being entered. If we have any larger attendance we shall have to have a larger room, as it was packed. In fact, it was difficult to obtain standing room, and we had something new in lady visitors and exhibitors for night shows. The class of birds shown was far better than in previous years, the winning birds shown by Messrs. Wilson, Maxwell, Plunkett and Malone, and W. Jones, McMahon, and Pullman being greatly admired. Mr. W. Bales, J. Lloyd, and J. W. Metcalfe judged, and appeared to give satisfaction, as no grumbling was heard. YORKS. YELL. (16): 1, hc, Maxwell; 2, Wilson; 3, Southward; vhc, Hartly; c, Handley. WALKLEY C.B.S.

N.F. show held June 21, Westmorland Street Mission Hall. A record entry of 120 birds faced the judge, Yorkshires taking pride of place. Some grand teams were staged, Mr. Tomlinson's winning Buff mkd. coming in for a lot of admiration. The birds staged by Messrs. Butler, Furniss, and Jones were also much admired. Novices also staged some slashing birds. Special for best novice Yorks was won by Mr. Pickering with a typical specimen. Norwich were a splendid lot. Mr. Lawton secured leading honours in Buffs, taking 1, 2, 3, with a grand team, also special most points in show. Novice Norwich were few but good. British were a fine lot. Mr. L. Fallding secured first in all classes, including special best British. Foreign were much admired, Mr. Lawton taking all the plums with these. Judge, Mr. G. Browning, whose awards were generally satisfying.

IDLE C.B.S.

First members' show for 1913 held at White Bear Inn, June 21, a splendid list of prizes having been obtained for the same: 45 birds were shown, and quality was excellent and augurs well for the future welfare of this young society. A goodly number of visitors attended, and were loud in their praise of the methods adopted for the carrying-out of the show. Mr. J. Bailey (Sandy) judged, and commented on the quality of the birds, especially those of the novices, some of which he had spotted. His awards, which gave entire satisfaction, were as follows:—CL. THATTO HEATH O.S.

Special meeting, held at Railway Hotel, June 16, Mr. R. P. Bixter chair, in the absence of Mr. H. Enever. Stewards were elected for N.F. show at Railway Hotel, July 5, Mr. R. Barker, Widnes, judging. Specials were allotted, viz., Mr. R. P. Bixter's medal for best novice, five shillings for best bird in show, and a material prize for most points; points to be counted on the sliding scale. Decided that no member be entitled to show unless his subscription for the present year accompany entry fee. Chairman commented on the poor attendance at so important a meeting. Schedules and entry forms were distributed, and it is hoped that members will make good use of them.—H. Cuttler, Hon. Sec.

SHETTLESTON C.B.S.

Meeting held Johnston's Hall, June 21, Mr. Lunn presiding over a good turn-out of members. Decided to hold another F.F. show July 5, in Good Templars' Hall. Mr. Smart, Carmyle, judge. Twelve handsome specials to be competed for, one class Crest or C.B., three Plainheads, three Border, two Yorkshire, and two Mules, judging to commence at four; admission 3d. This being all the business, the chairman called upon Mr. Livingston, and he gave us a splendid lecture on the Norwich Plainhead, and after the lecture Mr. Livingston had a number of questions put into the hat, and every member had to answer the one he drew. We spent a very enjoyable evening, and a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. Livingston.—A. Berry, Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

Meeting held at Mr. Hanninghan's, after nest feather show, Mr. S. Foster chair, to pay prize money and discuss important business. One of our members, providing the members give 30s. amongst them, will guarantee another 30s. towards a cup fund. His kind offer was accepted with thanks, and all our members have agreed to give 1s. each, so it looks as if we are going to succeed. This is the second time we have tried to raise money for a cup. Mr. W. H. Butler, the judge for our N.F. show, kindly returned his fee towards the fund, and we have the promise of plenty of outside support. Decided to have no table shows till the moulting season is over. We are still open for more new members, 1s. entrance fee, 4s. subscription.—R. Peart, Sec., 15, Kay Street, Stanley.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Meeting held Crown Hotel, Hill Street, June 4, Mr. A. Broadhurst chair; a fair number of members present. Mr. Derry proposed that all entry fees for the coming N.F. show be paid in prize-money. This was seconded by Mr. Austin. Mr. Roe, Handsworth, was elected as judge; it was decided to have 27 classes. Mr. Burke then delivered his lecture on the Yorkshire Canary, which was appreciated by all present. Several questions were asked and ably answered in a masterly style. A hearty vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Broadhurst. A petition calling attention to the indefinite wording of some of the clauses of the Plumage Bill was brought to the notice of the members by the secretary.—J. H. Jones (p.p. R. Tipper).

GRANGEMOUTH C.B.S.

Meeting held at headquarters, Rechabite Hall, June 4. Only three members turning up, very little business was done. Messrs. Scaife and Aitken were elected to judge F.F. show; all other business left over till next meeting.—J. Woodhouse, Sec.

CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORLAND Y.C.C.

Meeting held June 11. Decided to hold a table show for young birds July 9, at Mr. Pearson's, Senhouse-street. Our vice-chairman has promised two medals one champ. and one novice. Classes: Cl. or tkd. yellow., do. buff, mkd. yell., do. buff. Exhibits staged at 6; Mr. J. Nixon will judge at 7. We made three new members, and hope to see more come forward on night of show.—J. Huntington.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Meeting held at Maskell's Hotel. Mr. Whetton presided over a good meeting. Five new members were enrolled, viz., Messrs. Charles. S. Wiseman, J. Pearce, J. Barrow, and Phelps. A communication was read from Mr. Maskell, stating that he had let his hall on a permanent tenancy, therefore we should have to book a fresh hall for the open show. Resolved that we hold young bird show July 23. Mr. J. H. Payne judge. Letter was read from Mr. Claude Williams, Roath Court, accepting the presidency of our society. The following specials were promised:—2/6 by Mr. A. Simons, 2/6 Mr. R. L. Brown, 2/6 Mr. A. Ball, 2/6 Mr. A. Adams. Resolved that judge's fee be paid by voluntary subscription, and that we deal with classification of open show at next meeting.—E. Thomas.

PONTYPRIDD F. AND F.S.

Annual meeting held June 17 at Victoria Hotel. Officers were elected; balance sheet, which had been audited, was read, and showed a balance in hand of £4 6s. 7d. Councillor Daniel Arnott was re-elected chairman; Councillor Arthur Seaton, pres.; Mr. Arthur Herbert, vice-chair; Messrs. W. Jones and C. Payne, auditors; and the sec. re-elected—A. A. G. McLucas, 48, Rosser Street, Maesy Coed, Pontypridd. New members are being continually made each meeting, and three to be proposed next meeting will bring the total up to 45. There were 25 members last year, and fanciers are earnestly asked to join, so as to double last year's number. It is expected that next show will break all records, and the prospects of the society look very promising.—A. A. G. McLucas, Hon. Sec.

CLYDEBANK C.B.C.

Meeting held June 19th, Mr. McGown presiding over a fair attendance. The committee reported that they had secured the Conservative Hall for annual show Nov. 1, and appointed Mr. Marlin, Kirkintilloch, to judge Canaries and Mr. R. V. Raine British and Foreign. The president gave an interesting account of our ramble to Erskine, the only regret being that so few members turned up. Sec. was instructed to write for estimates for uprights for our annual show, and report to next meeting. Following classes were fixed for F.F. show June 28, Mr. S. Brown (Glasgow) judge:—Nor., 4; Bord., 4; Yorks., 1; Scots Fancy, 1; A.O.V., 1; Light Mules, 1; Dark Mules, 1; Hybrids, 1. Entries, 3d. per cage. Birds to be staged 3.15. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman.—Wm. Kane, Sec.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting held June 20, Assembly Rooms, Market-street. Mr. J. Jones chair, vice-chair Mr. G. Jones. Also present, Messrs. J. Pritchard, J. W. Jones, E. Jones, E. Hughes, and R. E. Griffith, hon. sec. Messrs. J. W. Parry, J. O. Parry, Hughes, H. Williams, R. Green, Master-Scout Mackin, J. James, J. W. Jones, and R. E. Griffith will give their full day duty for day of show. Mr. J. Pritchard and Mr. G. Jones promised to help in afternoon. Vote of thanks was passed to above for their kind offer. A few more members have joined during the week. No member can compete without paying membership on or before June 28, the date entries close. I have up to time only received one entry. There are 20 classes at this show, July 5. Those who intend joining the society kindly send postal order of 1s., and I will forward membership card.—R. E. Griffith, Hon. Sec., 5, Balaclava Road, Carnarvon.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting and N.F. show held at headquarters June 21, Mr. Farrer chair; about 20 members present. The number of entries could have been improved on, and while the Border class was empty, the Norwich provided 10 competitors. Several of our members reported a poor start in their first, and several losses in their second round, the young birds in their possession being either too young or have broken into the moult. We seem to have suffered in general with other fanciers, according to reports from all over the country. However, an improvement appears to have taken place, and I am assured that a large entry will be made at our next show, July 19. A silver medal is to be given for most points over the two shows. We are grateful to Mr. Clarke for judging. The awards were:—NOR.: 1, 2, Proctor; 3, Hunt; vhc, Smith; hc, Moore; c, Matthews. YORKS.: 1, 2, Smith; 3, vhc, hc, Moore. LIZARDS: 1, 2, G. Davidson. BRIT.: 1, 2, 3, Waters; vhc, Matthews; hc, Smith. Points gained: Smith 16, Waters 15, Proctor 11, Moore 11, G. Davidson 11, Hunt 4, Matthews 3. Decided to apply for following patronages, if classifications were as last year: N.L.C., N.C.B.M. and F.B.C., N.Y.C.C., N.B. and S.F.C., and also the N.C.N. and C.P.C. and N.C.C., if suitable to our own schedule of last year. GATESHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting held June 11, Mr. A. Holden chair. Classification for open show was arranged: Norwich, 12 classes (2 novices), Cinnamons 2, Crests or C.Bs. 4, Scotch Fancies 3, Yorks. 11 (3 novices), Borders, clear or marks, 9 (2 novices). Decided to leave Greens and Cinnamon Borders over until we see whether we get the patronage of the Green Border Fancy Specialist Club. Lizards 2, Selling 5. Mules or Hybrids 6 (1 novices), British 14 (2 novices), Foreign 5. Members' and novice members' classes are same as last year with one exception. Prize-money, 10s., 5s., 3s., 2s. if over seven entries. Subs. are now due, and must be paid before members can show at nest feather show, July 26. Next meeting we will have a question night on matters relating to breeding and feeding, so members turn up and let's have your opinions on same.—W. Curry, Sec.

WEST OF FIFE C.B.L.

Meeting held in Masonic Arms, Cowdenbeath, June 21, Mr. Thos. Wildridge chair. Being the final meeting before young bird show, July 5, the sec. was instructed how to proceed with the entries which are to be taken at the hall on show day between two and 3. Robt. T. Campbell, as assist.-sec. for show day, also Thos. Peel as assistant treas. As there are three classes for British, two of which are for Hardbill, it was decided to put every bird with Finch as part of its name into one class, and the remainder into the other, as recommended by Mr. John Steel (Dalkeith). Mr. J. W. Holme promised to get a few fanciers in Cowdenbeath to assist him with the staging. Mr. G. Malcolm promised to keep the door for first hour, and the president was to get someone to release him. Show closes at 7. Decided to hold a smoker on Aug. 2 to pay over the prize-money. Meeting closed with vote of thanks to the chair.—Jas. Cordery, Sec.

N. COUNTIES NORWICH P.H.C.

Meeting held June 14, Mr. Topping chair; a fair company present. The new sec. being unable to attend, Mr. W. Curry, the late sec., kindly took his place. Letter read from Mr. W. H. Butler, of Stanley, thanking us for the honour of electing him president. The following have kindly accepted office as vice- pres.: Messrs. R. Tindale, T. C. Crawhall and J. Mackenzie. The following societies applied for patronage: Morpeth, Newcastle, Blaydon, Hartlepool, Haltwhistle, Chester-le-Street, and Gateshead; those successful were Morpeth, Oct. 11; Newcastle, Oct. 17 and 18; Hartlepool, Nov. 8; Haltwhistle, Nov. 21 and 22; Gateshead, Dec. 12 and 13. We still required another to make our number (six), so it was proposed that the sec. write Darlington for their classes and judge, and, if suitable, to allot same to them. Table show at next meeting, July 16: three classes: Cl. yell., cl. buff, ticked or varieg. yell. or buff. Birds staged by 7.30; judge, Mr. R. W. Smith, Gateshead. Fanciers, please take note of this and let us have a good turn-out, as it helps to encourage new members. Anyone in the four Northern counties wishing to join may do so by applying to me at 55, Colston Street, Benwell. I will forward full particulars.—F. W. Laidlow, Sec.

GLASGOW WEST END C.B.C.

A Noted Scottish Judge and some birds he has seen.

Meeting held in Co-Operative Hall, St. George's Cross, June 13, Mr. C. Campbell presiding over a fair attendance. A large amount of business was transacted. Decided to have "declaration papers" sent to each members to be filled up with all the birds he has bred this year and returned to the sec. not later than September 30. This will be compulsory, and members failing to return these papers properly filled up will be dealt with by the committee and members combined. Decided that all arrangements for annual members' show be left in the hands of the committee and secretary. Mr. C. Newgreen, Anniesland, was nominated for membership. Specials and prize cards for March show were paid out to winners present. List of classes for F.F. show will shortly be in the hands of each member. Business now being over, the members present were entertained to a very interesting and instructive lecture on "Norwich Plainheads and Birds I have seen," by one of Scotland's all-round leading judges, Mr. C. Campbell. In his introductory remarks, he said he would give them his views of the birds of the present and of the past, though it was a very difficult job, as there was so much written now in bird papers dealing with everything relating to bird life. However, he would give his opinion of them, as he had seen them. He had conversed with some of the genuine old fanciers of about 15 to 20 years ago, and asked them if they thought we had made any progress, and they seemed to have no doubt that we had made great progress; but as far as he (Mr. Campbell) could remember of the birds of the past, he did not think we had made much. The bird of the present was certainly bigger, but in his opinion, had more feather, and was much coarser than these birds of 15 or 20 years ago. The birds of that time had quality, and this is what we lack very badly in at the present time. Mr. Campbell now singled out in his mind some very prominent birds of that time, and among them were both yellows and buffs. These were extraordinarily successful on the show bench, having a run of no less than 7 or 8 seasons, and were very seldom defeated. In his opinion the present-day Plainhead has sacrificed quality and every other good point, for size, but at the same time he questioned very much whether they had got the size after all, as the feather was longer and coarser, and hung looser on the body, which gave birds of this description a larger appearance. Proceeding, he said there were some grand birds of the present day, but fewer of the good ones than in the days gone by. Mr. Campbell also made reference to the Crest section. This, he said, had made great strides in head properties, but had sacrificed the type of 15 years ago. The bird of the present had no type; the "Crest" is certainly larger, but the body is small, with the feather much longer, and more loose, which, as in the Norwich Plainhead, gives it a larger appearance. The same remarks applied to the Crestbred. Mr. Campbell also touched on Borders; regarding this neat little bird, he said it was not so many years ago since classes for them were given at the shows, but the Border Fancy of the past, in his opinion, was more uniform in size and shape than the bird of the present day. Condition, as you will know, is a point that counts well in a Border at shows, and we in Glasgow are at a disadvantage, as we have to wash for every show; but the country fancier scarcely ever washes his birds, and they have therefore a better chance to be in that fine feather and condition that we all desire to have on the show bench. After a number of questions had been asked and answered, Mr. Campbell was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks for his very interesting lecture, and a most enjoyable evening was brought to a close. First feather show 12 July. 20 classes.—A. Miller, Acting Sec.

METROPOLITAN C.B.A.

Meeting held at headquarters, Kelvedon Hall, Walham Green, June 19. Mr. Plank presided. Owing to Putney Regatta there was only a small attendance of members. Decided that a letter be sent to Mr. Fisher, M.P., asking him to become President, also Lady Birch, inviting her to become a Vice-Pres. Mr. Plank very kindly presented a gold medal for points at N.F., Y.B., and annual shows. Members please note this, as it is not in nest feather show schedule. Mr. Ward and Mr. Bowring were elected stewards for show, which promises to be a record. Mr. Jeffries and Mr Whiteman kindly gave donations to cup fund. Messrs. Thrower, Whiteman, Rorke, Peverall, Lathbury, and Hart were elected members. Fanciers should not fail to pay us a visit at our N.F. show June 28, when the finest selection of "Wee Gems" ever seen at any London members' show will be seen.—F. Moore, Hon. Sec.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/8, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1. PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time be should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which me must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangement, the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pay the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

APPLIANCES.

SPECIAL OFFER TO "CAGE BIRDS" READERS

The Finest Illustrated Canary Book ever Published to be sent "On Approval."

LOVERS of cage birds have a great opportunity to-day. The opportunity is that of looking over the finest book on "Canaries" ever published, profusely illustrated with coloured and other plates

This volume, "Our Canaries," will pay for itself over and over again in the First and other Prizes that those who follow its advice will be enabled to win.

Those who do not exhibit at Shows will yet be able to learn what the leading authorities know about Canaries.

The Editor of "Cage-Birds" regrets there are not sufficient volumes for all his many thousand readers, but those who apply at once can secure one of these magnificent illustrated volumes "On Approval."

Send Coupon below, asking for Booklet descriptive of "Our Canaries."

But do not delay as there are not enough "Our Canaries" volumes to serve all our readers.

You had better send the "On Approval Coupon Deposit" at once—to-day—to make sure.

In the accompanying drawing (which is true to scale) notice the relative size of the hand and that of the book. From this you will be able to judge the size of this superb volume. Not only is it the largest volume ever published upon Canaries and the only exhaustive treatise upon these lovely creatures, but it is written by the ablest authorities—men who have devoted a lifetime to the study of their habits, and who have been exhibitors, First Prize Winners, and judges at the principal Shows for many years. The Editor of this volume and the principal contributor is Claude St. John, perhaps the best authority on Canaries in the world, and among the other well-known contributors are those well-known judges, C. A. House and G. E. Weston.

JOE THOMAS'S CONDITION FOOD.

This food is the result of over 35 years' practical experience in breeding and rearing Canaries. It is a genuine egg-food, and is unequalled for rearing strong robust young birds, or for bringing birds into full song and breeding condition, and for tempting hens to feed. Will keep for any length of time. In large tins containing about one and a quarter pounds, 1/- each. Smaller tins, 6d. and 9d.; 3 lbs., 2/6; 7 lbs., 4/9. Sample anywhere on receipt of 1d. stamp.

"The Red Feed"

The greatest colouring food in the world. This wonderful Pepper cannot be excelled, and with Hot Natal and another ingredient, which not only gives brilliant colour, but that beautiful sheen which is so delightful in one's birds, the Red Feed must become distinguished. A change from one Pepper to another in anticipation of finding "the ideal" is well worth making. A trial will convince you that the change is for the better. No "perhaps" about this feed; it is absolutely IT. Sold in tins, 2/6 and 4/9: Judge Silk, The Norwich Specialist, Whitstable.

Sandiford's Royal Red Colour Feeds and Egg Crumbs, etc.

Best in the World bar none. Every noted winner at every leading show moulted on them. Crystal Palace, 1913, seven champion firsts in Norwich, every winner in Cinnamons, and Championship Diploma, every other first in other classes, was moulted solely on Royal Red. Just fancy, the record at Palace in Norwich with birds that have never eaten any other. Championship, diploma, L. and P.O. Challenge Cup, Victorian Society special, special second best, also Norwich Plainhead (cup £20) winners, Southern Norwich Cup winners, open Norwich Club Cup winner. I could fill this paper with praise for Royal Red. It's mostly used with my Honey-made Egg Crumbs. Prices: Royal Red, 2/- lb., 2lbs. 3/6, 5lbs. 7/6, 14lbs. 17/-, 28lbs. 32/-. Hot Natal, 2/- lb., 2lbs. 3/8, 5lbs. 8/3. Honey-made Egg Crumbs, as used by all leading breeders for rearing and moulting. 1/- lb., 2lbs. 1/6, 5lbs. 3/-. All carriage paid. Established 50 years. Also the proper Egg Grinding Mill, 2/6; Seed Mill, grind in three grades, 1/6. Patent Syringes, worked with pipe and ball, fit any bottle, 1/9. Feather Beautifier, 4d. box. Beautiful enamelled Box Cages, sand drawer, 2/-; single breeding Cages, 3/-; double ones, 5/6; beauties. Wire Fronts, 18 x 12, 7d.; 14 x 12, 6d.; 12 x 12 or 12 by 10, 5d. any sizes made. MEDICINES.

YOUNG BIRDS DYING.

Wanted, a trial. We are confident our medicines will give you satisfaction. If you are having bad luck with your young birds, try our Tonic Drops. They aid digestion and prevent going light, so common with young birds. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are undoubtedly the grandest pick-me-up ever introduced for young birds. They are invaluable when getting young birds on hard seed. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for soft moult, not singing, going light, dullness, feather-plucking, and inflammation of the bowels. In 7d. and 1/1 (treble size) bottles. Special size, 2/-. For bringing birds into breeding condition, and for birds that are run down or gone off song, this medicine is absolutely unequalled. Fanciers note, if our medicines fail to do as we advertise, we guarantee to return full money. For bronchitis, wheezing, loss of voice, hoarseness, and inflammation of the lungs, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic, the grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds. Also in 7d. and 1/1 bottles. As an advertisement we will send a 7d. bottle of each of the above medicines for 1/-, or two 1/1 (treble size) bottles for 1/9. All medicines post paid at our risk, per return. Two valuable seed recipes, how to feed Linnets and Rollers for contest singing, given free to all purchasers of our medicines.—Frank Ditchfield, Bird Specialist, Oldham. (749) solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

Making Friends with the Birds.

An American bird-lover finds mealworms supply the key to the confidences and goodwill of certain wild birds.

An article of considerable interest, written by Mr. I. Alden Loring, and apparently taken from an American source, is dealt with at length in the June 14th issue of "Popular Science Siftings." In this it is laid down that to be a successful tamer of birds one must be a naturalist; he must know the habits and disposition of his subjects as nearly as possible. Mr. Loring says, "as nearly as possible," for experience has taught us that the individual characteristics of animals are as varied as with the human species. For instance, he has noticed that in a flock of half a dozen birds of the type he has found tameable, there are always one or two that cannot be tamed to come to his hand, and so with the more timid species of birds one will occasionally discover an individual that is tamer than the rest. But as food is the main secret to successful taming, it is absolutely necessary that the tamer should know upon what his subject feeds before he can hope to tame it.

Then, again, the time of the year must be considered. During the winter food is scarce, and the few birds that do not migrate can then be more easily tamed than in summer, when insect life and other foods are abundant. But one will have success during the nesting season when the birds are brooding their eggs or young. Having once found a brooding bird, it is easy to approach her, for the parental instinct is strong, and by using caution one can approach very close to the nest before the owner will desert it. At such times the bird is so occupied with rearing its young that it has little time to hunt for food, consequently food is always acceptable. This is particularly true when there are five or six little stomachs to fill.

Cultivating Close Acquaintanceship.

At other times than the nesting season you must attract the birds in some manner before you can hope for a close acquaintance. This may be done by placing drinking and bathing dishes about the grounds; scattering bird seed, corn meal, or oat flakes about the doorway; hanging from the clothes line bushes or branches of trees, such nesting material as pieces of cloth, string, horse hair from the tail or mane of the animal, and cotton batting, and in the winter by nailing pieces of suet on the trunk of a tree near your window or cracked peanuts or cocoanut on the verandah or window sill. Of course, you will not fail to put out bird houses and nesting boxes.

Some birds may be called very near by imitating their song or call note. "I have hundreds of times called them to within four or five feet of me and held them there for ten minutes or so. But only twice or three times has one actually flown to my hand the first time I offered it a mealworm. Probably I should have met with better success had I always been provided with the proper food—mealworms; for a good, juicy mealworm is by far the best bird-taming bait.

A mealworm is a creature about an inch long when he casts his first vote; after that he turns into a little flesh-coloured mummy about half his voting size, and from a mummy into a little black beetle, which is actually his adult stage. His wife then deposits her eggs in meal of different grains, and after they have hatched into mealworms, those that don't get into flour and are then made up into bread, you will find in the stable about grain bins, meal sacks, and the chaff in the hay loft.

You can raise mealworms without yeast, too. Take a wooden box with a tight lid, cover the bottom two inches deep with corn meal, bran and barley meal mixed. Now rub an old pair of trousers in the meal until they are thoroughly dusty, throw it on top and sprinkle on more meal. Now send to a bird store for three hundred mealworms. Dump them into the "hatchery," and place it in some dark corner, and your incubator will hatch mealworms indefinitely. I have had one running five years, and it is still doing a thriving business.

Pets that Remain for Six Years.

Now the mealworms are your foundation to success; the rest is patience and stealth. Your first step in taming birds is to secure a slender pole eight or ten feet long—a common bamboo fishing rod is the best, as it lacks knots or twigs that catch on limbs when it is thrust through the branches—and make a slight split in the tip of the rod. Have a small box of, say, a dozen mealworms handy, and when you hear your birds about, go into the yard, and, having crowded a mealworm in the split, follow the birds about until one has descended within reach of the pole, and then offer him the worm. If he ignores it, do not get discouraged, for the chances are that he has not spied it, for once he sees the food he will waste little time manoeuvring.

After he has accepted a mealworm, your battle is half won, and while he is busy eating it, place another in the split, and be ready for him again. Probably he will not wait for you to push the pole within his reach, but will begin to hop towards it as soon as he sees it approaching. If he does not seem inclined to come forward, let the butt of the pole slide through your hands, thus shortening it somewhat. You can tell about how much coaxing he will stand, by the way he acts. If he seems eager, make him come close; still, it is better not to urge him too much at the beginning, but let him take two or three of the worms, until he becomes thoroughly acquainted with your tactics. Don't get discouraged if he takes four or five mealworms and then flies off, for he has had enough for the present, and when he returns he will come to the pole more readily.

Continue this method from day to day, and keep shortening the pole as the bird becomes tamer, until at last you can discard it altogether. Now use a stick three feet in length, and continue to shorten it in the same manner until the Chickadee (a North American name for various species of Tits.—Ed.) alights on the end, a few inches from your hand. Then shorten the stick to six inches and hold it between your fingers and a mealworm between your thumb and first finger. The next time the bird comes he will first fly to the twig and then hop down to your hand, or reach over and take the worm. You might do this three or four times before discarding the stick altogether and offering him the worm from your fingers alone.

Some of the shy birds will not come to the stick, but they will learn to catch meal worms thrown into the air. The so-called taming, according to Mr. Loring, is not necessarily a lengthy matter. In half an hour he has so coaxed birds that they have accepted food from his fingers, and even flown from a tree trunk to his hand. Some birds would spring on to the edge of his newspaper or book, or hop on his head or shoulders. Some of his pets have remained with him for so long as six years.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY

I have a letter from a Cage Birds League member, residing in Kent, asking if the League can do anything to stop the slaughter of wild birds by farm labourers and others who kill birds by the hundred, not only in the open season, but during the breeding season. The people referred to are acting in the interests of, or by cognizance of, the farmers upon whose lands the slaughter takes place, and, unless the birds are mentioned in the schedule of birds protected by the Act of 1880, or in any addition to such schedule as may have been made by the local authorities in pursuance of powers vested in them upon application to the Home Secretary, they may slaughter birds in any number.

The absurd anomaly exists that though an occupier of ground may kill or take any bird not so protected, yet, under the Act of 1881, any one who has in his possession any wild bird recently killed or taken is liable to penalties "unless such person shall prove that the said wild bird was either killed or taken during the period in which it could be legally killed or taken." So that although a farmer, or any one by his permission or authority, may kill or take any bird not scheduled or especially protected, yet anyone purchasing or accepting such a bird is liable for having the same in his possession.

My correspondent says: "It makes my heart bleed to see the terrible murder carried on by the workmen on the farms in my district, and in the close season too. I know of one man working at the so-called 'bird-minding' who killed two-hundred in nine days, including Blackbirds, Thrushes, Starlings, and Hawfinches, to say nothing of the young which perished of starvation in the nest. I have picked up in my garden birds with broken wings and legs. Some I have managed to get all right, and have afterwards let them loose, but most of them I have had to kill to put them out of their misery.

"Sunday is the day when the most of the murdering of the birds takes place by a lot of blood-thirsty farm labourers, and, if any one wants a dish of Blackbirds or Thrushes, a peck or half-a-bushel can always be got during the fruiting season. In the winter they are out shooting Bullfinches for twopence a head."

The only hope I can see of interference with these people lies in the fact that my correspondent says that the men are not licensed to carry a gun. If he knows this, the local policeman would soon settle the matter, for, although you may slaughter any number of birds by permission of the occupier of the land, you may not use a gun for the purpose unless you carry a license granted by the Inland Revenue authorities.

The irony of it all is that birds may be slaughtered by the bushel, but not a single one may be taken for the purpose of keeping as a pet.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

JUNIOR MEMBERS.—Members under the age of fourteen years at the date of joining shall pay an annual subscription of One Shilling.

For subscriptions of Vice-Presidents, Patrons; the League Badges, Certificates of Membership, etc., see page 535, last week.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of Cage Birds have written to say that they would like to join Cage Birds' League, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the League, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is either to sign the coupon herewith, and send the same, together with sevenpence, or to get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of Cage Birds League, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the League. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same

Annfield Plain C.B.S. is holding a member's show only this year, writes Mr. R. Peart, the sec.

We have close on 180 entries for our young bird show on Saturday, writes Mr. V. Wynn, hon. sec. City and Suburban A.C.B. Norwich and Yorks are very good.

Mr. J. Critchley writes that Mr. R. Chaloner, 17, Elizabeth St., Hightown, Manchester, has been appointed secretary of Pendleton and Salford O.S., and that all should be addressed accordingly.

The Rochdale O.C., owing to the expense of having to move (our present premises having been bought over our heads by a club) will not hold an open show this year, writes Mr. R. Blincoe, the sec.

We hear from Mr. G. Morton, sec., Birkenhead C.F.A., that Mr. C. Houlton has been selected to judge the Nest Feather Show of the society, July 12, and Mr. Cowgill the Old Show, Nov. 22.

Mr. W. E. Fairey asks us to notify his change of address from 89, Wellington St., to 21, Upper Duke St., Kettering, where he is starting in business as bird specialist, cage-maker, and fanciers' provider.

Mr. A. Wake, hon. sec., writes that the first Feather Show of the Middlesbrough Tees-side C.B.S. will be held July 12 at 2.30, at the Crown Hotel. All fanciers and friends are invited, admission free.

Luton C.B.S., writes Mr. E. Bloomfield, Hon. Sec., are holding their Young Bird Show, July 9, in the Band Room. Pleased to see any fancier visiting the town on that day.

I have a pigeon with ring No. NURPA11, 7154, the bird is black, and was caught at Lake Vyrnwy Hotel on June 27. I will look after it until I hear who is the owner.—W. B. Johnson, Postman, Gown-Oer, Llanwddyn, via Oswestry.

Messrs. Redpath and Walker, joint secs., Anfield, Everton C.B.S., write that a general meeting will be held at Prince Hotel, Moss Street, on July 8, at 8.30. Final arrangements will be made for Nest Feather Show. Subs. are due.

Mr. M. Wigglesworth, sec., Wallsend and Mid Tyne C.B.A., writes that there is a mistake in the Nest Feather Show schedule. Instead of Class 13 reading Border Fancy Green, Yellow, or Buff, it should be Class 13, Border Fancy Green Yellow; Class 13a, ditto Buff.

Through the kindness of Lady Gibson-Craig, writes Mr. J. Napier, sec., the members and friends of Colinton and Currie Parishes O.S. will have a ramble through the grounds of Riccarton on July 12, leaving the Drill Hall, Juniper Green, at 3. Mr. J. Steel, of Dalkeith, has kindly consented to accompany us.

Visitors to the City and Suburban Society's Young Bird Show will again have an interesting time of it, with London's prospective champion Canaries to scrutinise, and bird-lovers should see that to-day (Saturday, July 5) is set apart for that purpose. The Church Institute, 60, Paddington St., off High St., Marylebone, where the show is being held, is easily reached by motor 'bus, or tube, to Baker St.—Advt.

Will you kindly notify, writes Mr. F. Thomas, sec., Ramsgate C.B.S., that we purpose holding a Table Show for members only, for young Canaries and British birds, on July 10, in the Brotherhood Hall, Leopold Street, Ramsgate. Mr. H. E. Taylor, Canterbury, has kindly consented to judge. Particulars of the sec., Frank Thomas, 29, Chatham St., Ramsgate, or Mr. T. W. Brown, assist. sec., 55, Buckingham Road, Margate.

To Society Secretaries, Advertisers and Correspondents generally.

Will all correspondents, and secretaries and officials of societies in particular, please note that CAGE BIRDS now goes to press on Wednesday afternoon so that all matter for publication in our Issue of the same week MUST reach us on TUESDAY TO BE CERTAIN OF INCLUSION, or first post Wednesday at latest.

It would much facilitate our work if Secretaries and others would kindly write out their club reports, notices, etc., in the style in which they see them printed. Write on ONE SIDE ONLY of each sheet of paper used.

Kindly publish in Cage Birds, writes Mr. H. Cross, that members of Tonbridge F.A. are having a country ramble on July 6 to Mr. Golding's estate, Westweald. Train from Tonbridge Station about one o'clock. All fanciers have a hearty welcome to join us. We hope to see our brother fanciers of Tunbridge Wells.

Hull C.B.S. second Nest Feather Show of Canaries, also Hybrids and British, is at the Oddfellows' Hall on July 5; judges, Mr. W. Clews, Grimsby; Mr. Geo. Harland, and Mr. Chas. Stephenson, Hull; all birds to be staged by 2.30 prompt, write Messrs. Heseltine and Lambert, hon. secs., 37, Blundell Street, Hull.

Kindly announce, writes Mr. J. Cook, sec., that Leicester C.B.S. members are having a ramble on July 5 around Tur Langton and district. Members cycling will meet at the Old Horse Hotel, facing Victoria Park, at 2.30. Those going by train will take the 3.5 train. Midland Station, to Kibworth. All fanciers invited.—J. Cook. sec.

Desiccated yolk of egg, the article supplied by Liverine, Ltd., of Grimsby, to all important dealers, in 2d. packets, and 6d. tins, is recommended as a perfect base for the colour feed. During the moult it is necessary for the birds to have something sustaining, and desiccated yolk of egg is just the thing to keep the birds robust.

OBITUARY.

It is with feelings of very keen regret, writes Mr. J. R. Colville, Sec., Ashton-under-Lyne O.S., that I have to inform you of the severe loss sustained by our worthy chairman, Mr. W. Foxall, whose wife passed peacefully away on Saturday, June 28. For many years she has been more or less an invalid, and latterly serious complications set in which left very little room for hope. The heartfelt sympathy of the members of this society, and a large number of fanciers in the town and surrounding district will be extended to Mr. Foxall in his sad bereavement. May he be granted the needed strength to bear his trial is all our wishes.

The "Yorkshire Evening Press" publishes the following account of the death of Mrs. Warley, of Middleton, Yorks:—"The death occurred very suddenly, on Thursday morning, of Mrs. Warley, widow of George Warley, joiner. Mrs. Warley was beloved by all who knew her, a kind, clever, and good nurse, and ever ready to go to any case of sickness either day or night. She has for many years been the one in this village to go to help in time of need, and will be very much missed. Much sympathy will be felt with her daughter, who has lived with her, and also with all the family. Mrs. Warley was in her 74th year." In sending us the cutting Mr. G. J. Warley, son of the deceased, writes: "Many fanciers knew her as one of the best, always an open house and a helping hand, and loved by all who knew her. It was a sad blow to me when I got the wire, she was found dead in bed."

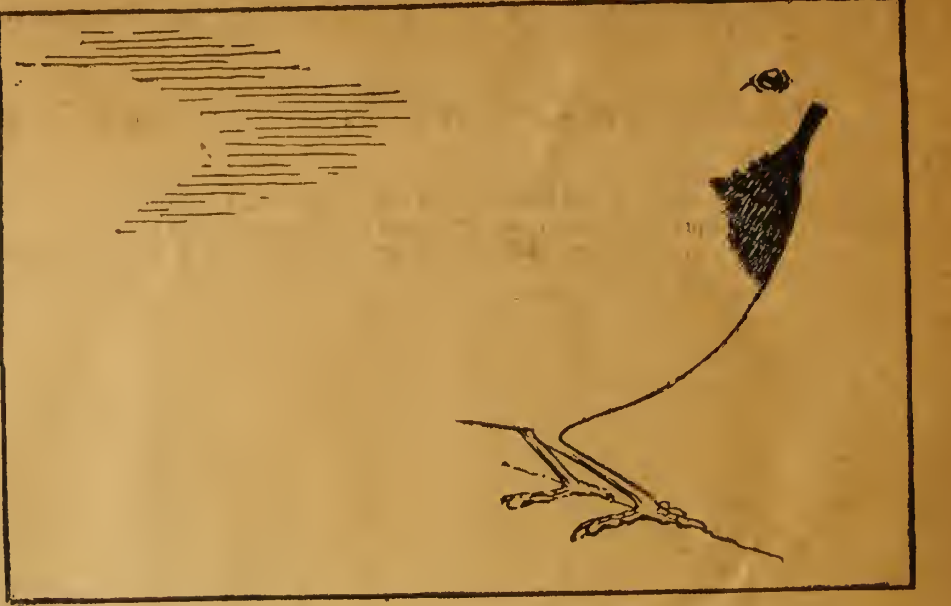
Edinburgh N. and M.B. Society writes Mr. J. Stormont, sec., is holding its annual N.F. Show in Buccleuch Halls, July 5, doors open at 3. From reports of a good breeding season we are expecting a large turnout of young birds.

Many thanks for your report, which was splendid, writes Mr. R. Peart, sec, Annfield Plain, C.B.S.: Our society is going very strong just now, as we have doubled our membership in twelve months. Our neighbours of Beamish C.B.S. are holding a Nest Feather Show on July 5, and I hope they have as big a success to report as we had.

Please announce through Cage Birds, writes Mr. Tallantyre, sec., Haltwhistle C.B.S., that we are having our F.F. Show July 5 in Mechanics' Hall, birds staged at 2.30. Mr. W. Pennington, Wigton, will judge; we are expecting a good turnout as we have some nice specials to be won by the best and second best birds, also medal for best bird bred and exhibited by a novice.

Will members, writes Mr. J. Gibbons, hon. sec, Wolverhampton C.B.S., note that we have selected July 19 for our N.F. Cup show. Mr. J. Andrews, West Bromwich, will judge. Yorks. and Mr. H. T. Collier Norwich, and to get judging over quickly they have decided to divide the British classes. I am looking forward to seeing a real good show as these two gentlemen are specialists in their respective varieties.

Ramsden's pure peppers are unsurpassable for quality and excellence of colour. They hold the field against all comers. Sold in canisters only, with a full guarantee under the foods and merchandise acts. Fanciers should colour feed on Ramsden's peppers only. Ramsden's "Lacphos" the new tonic food, keeps birds in health and strength through the moult. A teaspoonful mixed with a cupful of colour food is all that is required.—(Advt.).



A "Phantom British Bird" Puzzle.

Five Shillings Cash (or Books) for the Successful Solver.

The above sketch represents the "ghost" of a certain well-known species of British bird. We will forward 5/- cash (or our bird books to value, as may be preferred) to the reader who correctly identifies this bird. We give competitors the gentle hint that it may not be so easy as it looks; think it over carefully. In the event of a tie, the winner will be drawn for by an independent person.

RULES: Write the bird's name on the back of a postcard and write your name and address clearly underneath. Address your postcard to the Editor, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., and post it to reach us not later than first post Thursday, July 10th. Only one effort is allowed each competitor.

Two Eggs Like Peas.

I have a hen Canary which has laid me two eggs about the size of a pea, writes Mr. James W. Daly, of Oakes, Huddersfield.

Buck Up Barnsley!

We hear that members of the Barnsley and District C.B.S. have been very lax this year in their attendances at meetings (vide letter in the correspondence columns this week) to the annoyance and dissatisfaction of the excellent chairman and secretary. We hope they will take this intimation and "come out of their shells."

Northampton Fanciers Undismayed

We hear that the plucky fanciers comprising the Northampton Good Intent Ornithological and Fancy Stock Society are again considering the question of the holding of an open show despite the fact that they have lost £200 in ten years by similar ventures. We hope their stout-hearted policy will be favoured with better financial results in the future.

Country Rambles.

The following rambles have been arranged: Larkhall C.B.A. July 19, to Bonnington, Falls of Clyde; Cumnock C.B.S., July 12 to Lorn Estate, meet at Auchinleck Station Road End; Longton C.B.S., July 13, to Cheadle, meet Longton Station 9.15; Leicester C.B.S., July 5 to Tur Langton, train to Kilworth leaves Midland Station 3.5; Tonbridge F.A., July 6, to Westweald, train leaves Tonbridge 1.0 p.m.

A Point for Exhibitors.

We note that at the last meeting of the Provincial Roller Club, a discussion arose respecting exhibitors entering birds at shows, and marking them N.F.S. (i.e., not for sale) instead of putting a price upon them. The conclusion arrived at (reports the secretary of the P.R.C.C.) was that any exhibitor adopting this method lays himself open to be objected to, if he wins a prize, as not having won it according to the rules given in the schedules of the show.

Judges at City of Glasgow O.A. Show.

I shall feel extremely obliged, writes Mr. J. Young, sec., City of Glasgow O.A., if you will intimate through the columns of your valuable medium, that the following gentlemen have kindly agreed to judge in the Scotch Fancy and Belgian sections, at our forthcoming Show, Oct. 17-18, viz., W. Thornton, Midlothian; A. M. Baird, Paisley, A. Allardice, Wishaw; T. Todd, Partick; D. Caldwell, Baillieston, and A. Clark, Rutherglen. Thanking you in anticipation, and wishing Cage Birds every success.

"Cage Birds" 1913 Annual: A Few Copies Now for Sale

Some time back we had to announce the fact that our very successful "Annual" for 1913 was out of print. We have now, however, succeeded in getting together about 50 copies from various agents, and these can be obtained direct from our offices at the usual price; viz., 8d. post free. Orders should be sent early, as there is no possibility of more of this splendid edition being on sale. Please note that these copies can only be obtained through the post, direct from 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

RESULT OF OUR SECOND "BEAKS AND TAILS" COMPETITION.

A Stalybridge Competitor Identifies Every One Correctly.

The interest taken in our second "Beaks and Tails" competition proved to be even greater than in the first, and hundreds of attempts at solution were received. The task of allotting the beaks and tails to their proper owners seems to have been somewhat more difficult this time, for, although there were only seven birds represented in the puzzle, only one competitor placed all the beaks and tails correctly, whereas in the first competition three competitors named all of the ten. The successful competitor is Mr. S. Nield, 15, Cheetham Hill Road, Stalybridge, and the prize of five shillings has accordingly been awarded to him. Will Mr. Nield let us know whether he prefers books or cash, and, if the former, which books? The correct solutions were:—Beaks: 2, Hawfinch; 4, Bullfinch; 7, Linnet; 8, Yellowhammer. Tails: 1, Greenfinch; 3, Magpie; 5, Goldfinch; 6, Yellowhammer.

It will be noticed that both beak No. 8 and tail No. 6 are of the same bird, the Yellowhammer. Quite a large number of competitors missed the point that only seven species were represented, and allotted the tails and beaks all to different birds, making eight in all. These solutions were of course hopeless, as it was distinctly pointed out that the four beaks and four tails belonged to seven birds only. In a great many cases the mistake made no difference, for there were other mistakes in the same attempts, but in two of the cases the chance of the prize was lost by the error. These competitors gave seven of the eight solutions correctly, and curiously enough, they both gave No. 8 beak as that of the Chaffinch, instead of the Yellowhammer. The angle at the gape, which is characteristic of the beaks of all the Buntings, was clearly shown in the drawing, and it is curious that these and many other competitors missed this peculiarity. One competitor had seven solutions correct, but lost his chance by assigning tail No. 1 to the Wall Creeper. If this reader and some others who made the same mistake in No. 1 had kept their back numbers of Cage Birds, they would have found in our issue of May 24 last a drawing from life of this beautiful bird, and they would have seen that the tail of the Wall Creeper is very different from that of a Greenfinch as depicted in No. 1. Quite a number of competitors, too, missed the point that the beaks and tails were stated to belong to British birds, and included foreign birds and Canaries in their attempts.

[We place another little "puzzle" before our readers this week. Look it over, and tell us what you consider to be the solution.]

REVIEW OF SCHEDULE.

Bugle F.A.—July 23, Show Grounds. Judge, Mr. G. Gardner. 16 open classes: Nor. 4, Yorks. 4, A.O.V. 1, Mule 1, Brit. 3, For. 1, Sell 2. Prizes 6/-, 4/-, 2/-. Fee 1/-. Ent. close July 18 to A. L. Pearce, New St., Bugle.

THE PROGRESS OF OUR CHAMPIONSHIP COMPETITION

Its Merits Commend it to Societies all over the United Kingdom.

SINCE we penned our notes of last week we are pleased to be able to announce that a number of the leading societies of England, Scotland, and Wales, have expressed their approval of our great Championship Competition, and enrolled their fixture amongst our Diploma Shows.

All of them, too, have sent along substantial orders for coupons, for the use of their members, an especially notable order being that of ten dozen from the secretary of the Bradford East O.S. The Bournemouth C.B.A. sends for four dozen, Glasgow Queen's Park and District C.B.S., three dozen, and Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A., three dozen, while one and all express the opinion that they will be sending on even larger repeat orders in the near future. Many secretaries write eulogising our scheme, and saying that they are taking the earliest possible chance of bringing it officially before their respective societies in the belief that it will be of great assistance in helping them to make their shows a financial success and more interesting than ever before.

Be In Time For This.

In our next issue we shall publish a complete list to date of Cage Birds Diploma Shows, and any secretary notifying us between now and first post next Wednesday that his society accepts the conditions attaching to our scheme may have his show included therein. The additions during the past week have been:—

Bradford East O.S.
City of Glasgow O.A.
Glasgow Queen's Park and Dis C.B.S.
Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A.
Portsmouth and Southern Counties C.B.S.
Sheffield O.S.
Swansea and Dis. C.B.A.
Torbay (Paignton) O.S.

We would remind secretaries that our pamphlets giving particulars of the scheme have now been sent out; if any secretary has been inadvertently overlooked, we shall be pleased to forward him one if he will be good enough to notify us to this effect. We have also ready our pamphlets explaining the scheme from the exhibitor's point of view, and shall be glad to post a copy to any interested fancier who sends a postcard applying for one. We invite anyone in doubt upon any point concerning the scheme to write us at once. All letters should be addressed to The Editor, Cage Birds, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

More Laudatory Opinions.

Mr. R. Heggie writes that the members of the Queen's Park (Glasgow) and District C.B.S., unanimously approved of our scheme and had pleasure in accepting the conditions of the Championship Competition.

I hope you will meet with the success you deserve with Cage Birds grand prize scheme, writes Mr. F. E. Joiner, joint sec. of the Portsmouth and Southern Counties C.B.S.

I trust the scheme may prove a great success and shall be glad to distribute exhibitor's pamphlets if you send any.—J. A. Crawshaw, hon. sec., Bournemouth C.B.A.

I am sorry to have to inform you that the Wrexham and Dis C.B.S. does not intend holding an open show this year. We are rather short of members, but hope to pull together again after this season. Personally, I am much in favour of the Championship Competition, and wish it every success.—B. Bennett, hon. sec.

This cat belongs to Mr. Claude St. John, our Canary specialist, and is on the best of terms of friendship with his birds (see letter on page 552.)

Our Intentions.

We have received suggestions and criticisms from Messrs Crawshaw, W. H. Pyke and A. J. Rea, and thank these gentlemen for the interest they evince in our scheme. We hope next week to deal with the points they raise. Our scheme is one that we intend to benefit both individual fanciers and the hobby as a whole, and we are naturally desirous of making it acceptable to the widest possible circle of our supporters. Every exhibitor will be given a fair chance and a wide range of opportunity to secure a diploma and to share in the cash prizes, which will probably total well over £200. We would point out that our rules are few and clear, and that the method of competing is simplicity itself, the affixing of a coupon to an entry form being as simple as the sticking of a stamp on an envelope—there is nothing to "fill up."

The View of a Well Known Fancier.

Sir,—I was surprised to read the adverse comments of the secretary of the Cardiff Society on your Championship scheme. I think it is one of the finest schemes ever brought before the Fancy, and is worthy of adoption by any society. It is difficult to understand the attitude of the Cardiff Society. Has it never occurred to them that they may lose a great amount of entries by not adopting the scheme? I notice their view is that Norwich, Yorkshires, and Borders will have no chance of the cash prizes against such birds as Crests, Hybrids, and Foreigners. With a good judge, however, each bird is handled on its merits. A hundred-point Norwich or Yorkshire will always beat a ninety-seven-point Crest or Hybrid, if the judge knows his business. Of course, it is to be expected that the birds which do win will be birds of merit. Another point to be considered is that no one exhibitor can win more than one diploma in one section, or more than two cash prizes. So you see that those birds which don't win at early shows will have a great chance at the later shows. I offer my congratulations on the scheme and predict for it a huge success. May I suggest that another season might see the scheme in part devoted to birds of the current year?

T. Johnson.

A Brief Outline of the Scheme.

The main idea of Cage Birds Championship Competition is to discover which are the Twelve Best Birds of the Season. The Competition is open to every Show appearing in Cage Birds List of Guaranteed Fixtures (this covers every quarter of the United Kingdom) provided application is made to us by the management of that Show before the end of July, 1913.

Two Prizes of 10s. Each, one for novices and one for champions, will be offered (under certain stipulations), at each accepted Coupon Show.

Twelve Diplomas of Honour will be offered, in addition, at each Coupon Show, such diploma to be given for the best bird in each of the following sections:—

(1) YORKSHIRE CANARIES.
(2) NORWICH.
(3) CRESTS AND CRESTBREDS
(4) BORDER FANCIES
(5) SCOTCH FANCIES AND BELGIANS.
(6) GREENS.
(7) LANCASHIRES AND LIZARDS.
(8) ANY OTHER VARIETY CANARY.
(9) MULES AND HYBRIDS.
(10) BRITISH, HARD-BILLED.
(11) BRITISH, SOFT-BILLED.
(12) FOREIGN

The winner of any one of the foregoing diplomas will have the right to compete with not more than four birds, on payment to the Palace Show Authorities of the usual entry fee, in our final championship competition at the Crystal Palace show of 1914.

By special arrangement with Mr. J. W. Ramsden, Show Manager, and the London and Provincial O.S., Cage Birds offers the following handsome cash prizes, solely for Coupon birds, in each of the 12 sections mentioned above at the Palace Show:—

FIRST PRIZE, £3; SECOND PRIZE, £2;
THIRD PRIZE, £1; FOURTH PRIZE, 10s.

The following cash prizes will also be offered for competition at the Crystal Palace Show:—£10 10s. for the best Coupon bird exhibited in the Champion classes in the above twelve sections; £10 10s. for the best Coupon bird shown by a novice other than the winner in the Champion Section. We shall also offer A Ten Guinea Challenge Shield, to be won three times in succession, for the best bird at the Crystal Palace Show entered in our Competition.

For details of the Rules tentatively adopted, see page 533 last week.

Where Vibration Did Not Kill.

I have never been inclined to think that there is much in the view that vibration constitutes a danger to eggs undergoing incubation—or, that is to say, to the young life within them. It is obvious that the eggs of a number of species of wild birds must be subjected to a considerable amount of movement in the ordinary nature of things, though not, of course, necessarily the short and sharp kind of movement we associate with the term "vibration." I have never hesitated to hammer in my bird-room—when something or other has needed tinkering up—despite the fact that hens have been sitting at the time. At one of my early homes, too, we had the main line of the Midland Railway about twenty yards from the front door, in a deep cutting. The constant passing of expresses to the North, to say nothing of the heavy goods trains, set up a practically continuous vibration, at times so severe that all loose windows and our crockery rattled like anything—we had visitors, in fact, who found it impossible to sleep in the place. My bird-room was an attic, and this used to vibrate beautifully, I can assure you! Yet I had no trouble with addled eggs. Further, in the whole of my experience I have never noticed thunderstorms bring me any ill-luck in the way of addled eggs, or young dead in the shell.

The Effect of Thunder and Explosions.

Of course, this is purely a personal view. It is very unsafe to become dogmatic and lay it down that because a thing does not happen within the restricted circle of one's own experience, this said thing cannot and will not happen. I have met fanciers who literally have been in a sweat of fear over the effect a passing thunderstorm was likely to have upon the eggs of their birds; that the majority of poultry-keepers, too, dread thunder is well-known, and makers of incubators warn buyers against the ill-effects vibration may have on the working results of their machines. I note also in the newspapers that when recently hundreds of bodies of sea birds were washed ashore in Argyll, their deaths were attributed to the concussion (an effect of vibration) produced by the firing of big guns by warships practising in the neighbourhood. I read also that some of the species frequenting Ailsa Craig, that pretty islet off the Ayrshire coast, are very scarce this year (Puffins, Guillemots, and Razorbills in particular) and the point is being raised that concussion may have something to do with this state of affairs. It is said that the awful explosion at the dynamite works at Ardeer (near Irvine, Ayrshire, and not so very many miles from Ailsa Craig) caused a large number of sittings of eggs in the vicinity to "go wrong." It must be admitted that if abnormal vibration can compass the death of birds in the prime of health and vigour, it is by no means an unreasonable assumption that thunder can bring about the death of birds when in but an embryotic state.

The Use of Grit With Young Softbills.

I see that Mr. J. Steel is of the same opinion as myself, viz., that one could not expect to find in the droppings of Finches seeds which would germinate when planted. He has the great advantage, however, of being able to speak as the result of actual experiment undertaken to determine the point. I will endeavour to bring his letter to the notice of Mr. W. E. Collinge; maybe he will be good enough to favour us with further information concerning the experiments he quotes as having achieved the exact opposite. I found one matter of great personal interest in the observations of Mr. Collinge. Writing of the food of the Starling during the nesting period, he states that a pair he watched in May averaged about 350 visits to the nest during the day. They brought, amongst other things, insect larvæ, small beetles, slugs, earthworms, a few spiders, and some bread. The droppings of the young Starlings were also examined at different stages. After the nestlings were ten days old the remains (wing cases, legs, etc.) of ladybird, weevil, and other beetles, wireworms, centipedes, and caterpillars were found, also fragments of plants and (note this) grit. I have for many long years held the opinion that a little fine grit is an excellent thing to give to Softbills (Hardbills too, of course) which are being hand-reared, and have made a practice of supplying it when they have been about twelve days old.

One Sometimes Learns by Accident.

I have noticed, too, that adult birds of quite a large number of insectivorous species (this applies to delicate and hardy alike) delight to pick about amongst a supply of grit; doubtless other bird-keepers have observed the same thing. I always see that at frequent intervals they have access to a supply of garden mould and fine grit (mixed). To me, one of the most surprising sides of bird-keeping has been the revelation of individual idiosyncracies in the matter of feeding, etc. This has always been my despair when confronted by questioners who wanted, for instance, to know the seed mixture—a pinch of this, a pinch of that, and a dash of something else—which would keep Goldfinches in health. Many bird-keepers do not seem to realise that it is possible for one bird to live and thrive upon a seed or seeds upon which another bird of the same species will merely exist, as it were, or even die. It is the same with insectivorous birds: some will greedily eat what others will barely condescend to look at. And the manner in which birds will modify their feeding habits under certain circumstances is also astonishing. I once had to "thin out" some pugnacious Wagtails, and was compelled to put one, a Yellow, into a very large flight cage with some seed-eaters. The latter soon commenced to taste the Wagtails' soft food. In a very short period it was a case at feeding time of Chaffinch, Bullfinch, Siskin, Goldfinch, etc., quarrelling to get first choice of the insectile mixture, while Mr. Wagtail complacently devoured the canary and certain other seeds. The latter thrived amazingly, too. This incident gave me a very valuable "tip"—how to get Hardbills to eat soft food for colour-feeding purposes.—G. E. Weston

Questions and Answers.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who receive letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. Mules and Hybrids—H. Norman. British Birds—H. J. Fulljames. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S.. Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES

MOULTING ACCOMMODATION (J. E. L.).—Of course, it stands reasonable that the more space you can give, and the smaller the number of birds in each cage, the greater must be the comfort and hygienic conditions of the birds. But still, where space and time are limited, I think you might quite safely moult four birds each in the size cages you mention—19ins. by 8ins. by 12ins.—provided that you clean them sufficiently often to prevent any undue accumulation of droppings. Three in each cage for moulting would, therefore, be quite permissible, and well within the limits of safety.

TOE STICKS UP (A. W.).—Leave in the cage one of the thin perches of a round shape, nearly, but not quite, as thin as an ordinary lead pencil. Make the other perch of the usual thickness, but trim it to a narrow ridge on top, somewhat triangular in shape, with the base forming the under surface of perch. In addition to this, get once a day for a week or so a saucer of moderately hot water—about as hot as you can comfortably bear the front of your wrist in for some time. Beside this place a saucer of cold water in which you have dissolved a large pinch of common salt. Catch the bird and hold the foot immersed in the hot water for a minute or two, then remove it and place it immediately in the cold water. Keep it immersed there for a minute or two and transfer it back to the hot water. Repeat these moves until the foot has been in each water alternately five or six times. Be careful to finish in the cold water. Then dry foot carefully, and slightly paint over it with a feather dipped in tincture of arnica. For the soft condition give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add twenty drops of Chemical Food to its drinking water.

ORPHANED YOUNG (M. B.).—You really ought to have put this youngster in a nursery, or any small wire cage would have done at a pinch, and hung it on the front of the breeder when the hen or cock, or may be both, would have continued feeding it through the wires. The hen must have been a rather poor feeder or the youngster should have been almost able to feed itself when you removed it. Its present trouble is probably due to constipation, arising most likely from unsuitable food supply. Make sufficient of the soft food you are using into a fairly moist, but not sloppy, paste to last for the day each morning, and when not in use keep it in a cool place. To the food given at each of the first three "meals" each morning add an equal bulk of green vegetable food, freshly mashed—either the extreme tips of groundsel shoots, crisp young lettuce, or watercress, finely minced. Again during the afternoon add a rather smaller proportion of green food—say a third part of the bulk—to three or four "meals." Give two drops of water, not more, from end of feeding stick at end of "meal" three or four times a day. At other times you may add a fourth part of the bulk of food of well soaked, or scalded, mashed rape, but in making this addition you must watch food closely, as it turns sour exceedingly rapidly in warm weather, and would prove harmful in that condition.

CAUSE OF CLEAR EGGS (F. F. N., U.S.A.).—Whatever the real cause, you may rest assured the absence of a claw has practically nothing whatever to do with the infertility of the eggs. It is scarcely possible to say what is the actual cause of failure in such cases without a very full knowledge of all the circumstances surrounding them. Some cases of the kind appear to be due simply to lack of affinity betwixt the individuals. You say nothing about the ages of any of the birds. If the cock is a last season bird and there still remains time for a last round, I would advise you to mate him with a hen over a year old, which has already had full eggs this season. Also, to fully test whether the cock is the failing partner, you should have mated the hens with cocks which have been filling eggs well this season.

BARE OF FEATHERS (Rex, Blackpool).—It is a rather common trouble, and treatment is often unsatisfactory unless it coincides with the natural moulting season. As we are now getting very near that period, you should have a very fair chance of curing the bird by following up this treatment for a month. See that insect pests do not become troublesome; keep bird in a bright healthy position, but not in direct draughts; strew cage floor regularly with clean gritty sand; and allow bird to bathe as freely as it desires. Give a staple diet of two parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day give in addition half a teaspoonful of crushed stale sponge cake slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give twice a week a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle. Give a little green food of varied kinds daily, and a few seed heads of dandelion at any time. On each of the days you give the sulphur add to the drinking water as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece and the same quantity of chlorate of potash. When the moult commences, if the weather has become chilly, keep bird in a fairly warm and equable temperature during its progress.

A PLAGUE OF LICE (Nullite).—In ordinary cases hand washing is about the best way of dealing with this pest, but unless you are quite expert at the job I do not advise it in your case. Using insecticide on cages as you would for red mites is also useless, as these insects live permanently on the bird's body. If the infested cages are isolate—that is, with some space between them and any other cage all round—the lice will not spread very quickly provided you are very careful not to mix up appliances, or transport them either by moving birds about or by any other action of your own. Catch any bad cases and dust them liberally with fresh pyrethrum powder, working it well into the plumage with a small bellows or dossil of wool. Then wrap up bird in a small handkerchief, leaving only the beak free for breathing, and lay bird in a spare cage for ten or fifteen minutes. Then release it, and after it has shaken the powder out of its plumage give it a bath in which sulphuretted potash in the proportion of a teaspoonful to a pint of water has been mixed. Give all the affected birds a bath of this kind three times a week, and wash sand trays with the solution once a week, until all trace of the pest has disappeared.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canories" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Romsden's 'Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each: No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border ancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London E.C.

HOARSE AND SNEEZING (A. Mee).—Assuming that bird is quite free from draughts, see that it is also as free as possible from extreme fluctuations. Do not allow it to hang near or above burning lights in the evening, nor high up near the ceiling. In addition to the seed diet, give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight. On the intervening days add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecac. wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, and shake well together.

SMALL MULING HEN (Bevanel).—A St. Andreasberg, or any German without any specific cognomen, would be preferable to a Lizard for your purpose. A Border Fancy would answer quite as well, or even be a trifle better, being better bred as a whole. There is practically nothing to choose in respect of size between these breeds, and if you have a large choice you can easily select an exceptionally small, neat, and cobby hen in either breed. Both are quite hardy.

A DUET (W. M.).—(1) The immediate cause of death was undoubtedly an apoplectic seizure, probably due to the rupture of a blood vessel in the brain. I should say the bird was naturally a weakling, and consequently predisposed to attacks of this kind. Nothing you could have done when the attack occurred would have been of any avail. (2) The sample of hemp you enclosed is just fair. It is very small, and some of the kernels are quite bad; but the bulk of it is of fair quality, and the bad not sufficiently abundant to prove a material source of danger, as the birds would doubtless reject these grains, having plenty of good sound grains available.

SPARTAN TREATMENT (Desperandum).—When there is any suspicion of birds carrying contagion, as in your case, and one is inclined to take the risks of a "kill or cure" treatment, there is certainly some method in the apparent madness. The fits which supervened later on I am inclined to think were merely symptoms of a bacillary disease, which could only be definitely ascertained by a post-mortem. If another bird becomes affected in this way, you would be well advised to send the body for post-mortem. If my surmise is correct, the bromide treatment is useless. In prescribing drugs for addition to drinking water in these replies, all quantities named are intended for one ounce of water.

WHAT IS WRONG? (J. Coathup).—You would have helped me to understand the case of your birds if you had told me what in your opinion is wrong. You should have described your treatment of them, and said as clearly as you could how they were acting generally. You simply say the hen wants to sit badly, but will have nothing to do with the cock. As a matter of fact, when a hen is broody and wanting to sit badly she has passed the stage when, in the natural order of things, she needs the presence of the cock. Before this stage is reached there are the nest-building and egg-laying periods to be got through, and it is during these periods that the presence of the male is essential. Perhaps your hen has taken to sitting continually in the nest and missed the previous stages in the cycle of reproduction. If this is so, considering the lateness of the season, the only thing I would advise you to attempt is to give the hen a clutch of common eggs to hatch and rear, if she will do so. If you cannot get a clutch of common Canary eggs, a clutch of any British Finch will do just as well. It is useless expecting anything otherwise from such a hen this season. For the rest, you cannot do better than get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and digest its contents before next season arrives. It is impossible to go properly into the question here. Your feeding is just tolerable. The above handbook will show you how to improve it.

HEN SITTING ALONE (A.J.G.).—You did quite right to remove this vicious cock and leave the hen to hatch and rear the next brood alone. As to whether it would be safe to keep the cock where the hen can see and hear him after a week's absence out of ear-shot, depends entirely upon the temperament of the hen. Some hens would pay no attention to him whatever, but there are others which would be more or less disturbed. A few would even leave the nest in response to his calls. Unfortunately, only the actual experiment will reveal these idiosyncrasies. Altogether, I would advise you to endure the slight inconvenience of the present arrangements until the young brood are safely on the perches.

MANY DEATHS (W. East).—In view of postmortem report which I note appeared in last issue, it seems somewhat worse than useless to attempt to treat these birds. With the type of cage you describe anything infectious, and probably also much that is contagious, would spread sooner or later over the whole collection of cages. It is, in fact, a thoroughly unwise system to adopt. If you decide to clear out these birds, you would be well advised to convert the shelves into Brewood and thoroughly disinfect the cage fronts, partitions, etc., and the wall, and whitewash the latter. Then put in new shelves, and use them only as shelves on which to place single or double breeding cages, as you may prefer, to recommence next season. If you really wish to attempt treatment, the best plan would be the Spartan one of turning them all into an open-air aviary to take what chances they possess. It would weed out the unfit more rapidly and allow you to select the fittest, which would naturally be the survivors, for future work. If treated indoors, the cage floors should be strewn with sanitary sawdust, and gritty sand provided in tins. Give a staple of plain canary seed supplemented with a fairly liberal supply of varied green food and freshly gathered wild seeds. Occasionally a little bread and milk, maw seed, or crushed dry biscuit food may be given as a variant. Every second week for a time add as much sulphate of soda and twenty drops of lemon juice to each drinker every second day, and when diarrhoea is troublesome, add to the water for a few days five drops each of dilute sulphuric acid and tincture of opium.

LOSS OF YOUNG (Anxious Enquirer).—The most likely cause of this trouble is some error in feeding, but you give no idea how you are feeding the youngsters when the trouble begins. I should imagine you take them off soft food too early or too suddenly. If you follow the system of feeding advised to "L.B.J." in last issue, and keep on the soft food daily in limited quantities as stated, until the young are six weeks old, and then only begin to withdraw it gradually, I do not think you will be troubled with this complaint. When cases actually arise, cage the birds alone in a moderate-sized cage; keep in an equable and cosy place, well ventilated but free from draughts, and give a diet of plain canary seed, with the addition of a third of a teaspoonful of maw, and a piece of bread and milk the size of a small walnut daily. For one day add half a teaspoonful of Fluid Magnesia to each ounce of drinking water, and afterwards substitute six drops of dilute sulphuric acid and three of tincture of opium daily for a week. Give no succulent greenstuff whilst the trouble lasts, but if any undue constipation occurs whilst giving the opium, omit it for a day and give in its place ten drops of syrup of buckthorn.

ON SOFT FOOD AT SEVEN WEEKS (G.H.T.).—Provided the birds are normally healthy they will take no harm by adhering to soft food so long. The time is really not so very late, as you say they do take rape and hemp. I presume they are caged separately from their parents. Place a supply of good sound canary in the hoppers. Each morning place on top of this a teaspoonful of dry summer rape for each four birds and more or less in proportion to number of birdsl in cage. Also give a heaped teaspoonful of soft food—not more than this quantity—each morning per four birds. In the afternoon throw out any remnants and add a similar quantity of cracked hemp. As soon as you see the birds are eating a moderate quantity of dry rape or canary, begin to drop the soft food by missing it once or twice a week and substituting a little soaked or scalded rape, and vary the hemp supply by substituting occasionally a mixture of equal parts hemp (not cracked), inga, millet, teazle, and broken groats, eventually reducing both items to a small teaspoonful per bird twice a week. For green food, give a limited supply of half-ripe plantain stalks, seedy heads of shepherd's purse, dandelion, or seedy chickweed, two or three times a week.

A TRIO (Ginger).—(1) To get an opinion as to cause of death that was worth anything, you should have sent the body to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem. It is utterly useless amateurs opening up dead bodies and expecting anyone to give a reliable opinion from their description of the condition found therein. It appears to have been acute inflammation, but the cause of this I cannot speculate about. It might certainly have been due to a severe chill, but I doubt whether the grass seed was an equally likely cause. One thing seems pretty clear to me—that by giving two drops of castor oil at once to a bird in the condition described you hastened on the end. (2) The system I advise for feeding young birds after leaving the parents is the one given in detail to "L. B. J." under heading "Sleepy Babies" in last issue. (3) The fact of two six-weeks-old youngsters caged together being continually quarrelling does not necessarily mean they are both of the same sex, although they may quite possibly be two cocks. If caged separately they may soon decide this point by starting to warble challenges to each other.

WATERY EYES (Rita).—It is not necessarily infectious or contagious. Most likely a slightly inflamed condition which will quickly yield to bathing once a day with a lukewarm solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of the acid dissolved, or as much of it as will dissolve, in a saucerful of warm water. Use a small pledget of cotton wool for bathing, and do not wet plumage more than is unavoidable. See the bird does not hang in irritating fumes from burning lights, or a dust-laden atmosphere. As regards your other question, it is, on the whole, perhaps best for an inexperienced person to ask a chemist to perform the office of putting a hopelessly sick bird out of its misery with chloroform. Probably any chemist would do it for a very few coppers. Still, it is quite simple, so if you prefer seeing the job through yourself, here you are. Get a drachm of pure chloroform—considerably less suffices for a Canary, but as it is best in such a case to err on the side of thoroughness a novice should use this quantity—and a piece of cotton wool the size of a large hazel nut. Catch the bird and hold it securely in left hand with the thumb and forefinger holding the head securely so that it cannot turn its beak aside. Now pour chloroform on to the wool and completely swathe the beak and nostrils with it, and continue holding it in position for some little time after the sensation of collapse tells you that all is over. Then, to make doubly sure, wrap a scrap of paper round head to hold wool in position and lay body aside in this condition for a few minutes. If job is skilfully done, unconsciousness will take place in a few seconds, and death occur in about half a minute.

MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

FEEDING YOUNG CANARY-BULLFINCHES (Good Luck).—Feed on insectile food as advised to (Constant Reader); it is undoubtedly the best for rearing Hybrids, but the Canary hen must be fed on it before the young arrive.

MOULTING CANARY-BULLIE (Bad Luck).—I would advise you to hand-wash the Hybrid hen to get rid of the grey lice, and place in a clean cage and hang in fresh position. The bird is evidently below par, and requires a course of chemical food or tonic, such as five drops of infusion of gentian in the drinking-water. As you are going to move in the autumn it would be as well to get her through the moult first. Partly cover her cage, and give saffron in the drinking water, but do not start her until she is better in health, or you may lose her. Sorry you have not had a successful season.

LINNET-CANARY (J. Binks).—Yes, you have time to get a brood of young ones from a Linnet and Canary providing the hen does not drop into moult. Feed them well on a mixed seed diet, with egg food and wild seeds. Let them bathe daily, giving the bath in the early morning, and removing as soon as used. Encourage the hen to go to nest by giving a nest pan and building materials. I presume you have had them flying together, so that they are quite used to each other: if not, try them, and if they do not settle down hang the Linnet in a cage close to the hen.

MOULTING HYBRID (Constant Reader).—There is plenty of time yet to moult your Hybrid, and I see no reason to force it, but if he commences to drop feathers it would be as well to let him go through it. If you are anxious to get it over quickly cover him up and put saffron in his drinking water. Before you start him you must get him well on to colour food, the secret of good colour is to get it well into the blood before the bird moults. A little hot natal pepper mixed with the tasteless is supposed to improve the tint, and give a finer gloss to the feathers. Your British bird query should have been on a separate sheet of paper. Most judges agree that a Siskin is rather improved by being slightly colour fed. By your description he is evidently over-feeding, and his way of resting on the perch points to a little internal trouble. Give him sweetened bread and milk, made in the usual way, with the milk squeezed out; this should relieve him. Has he a large cage to exercise in, and do you give wild food?

CHAFFINCH-BRAMBLEFINCH (A.D., Kilsyth).—You have eggs from cock Chaffinch and hen Bramble, and have placed the eggs under a Canary. The best food to rear the young (if any) with any hope of success is a high grade insectile food. You should get your hen used to this before the young arrive. I would advise you to give her a small quantity each day while she is sitting, most hens eat it readily, and you should have no trouble. If the eggs hatch, add a small quantity of hard-boiled egg to the mixture, and in addition to this soft food give plenty of wild food, such as shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, grass, etc., but only the seeding tops, as these are most likely to contain minute insect life that would be beneficial to the young. Hope you will be successful.

Answered by H. J. FULLJAMES.

DOVE'S EGGS AND INCUBATION (A Reader).—The incubation period with Doves is the same as with fowls—twenty-one days.

FAVOURITE THRUSH DEAD (F. G. Clifford). I am very sorry to hear of the death of your old favourite. The case was almost a hopeless one. When a bird gets into such a bad condition as was indicated in your original letter, there is usually very little hope of effecting a cure. All that may be done is to ease the trouble for a while, but the end is generally inevitable. Birds are very fragile creatures, and their little troubles should be taken in hand before they get to be big ones. We are always glad to advise, and hope you will not hesitate to write us immediately you fancy there is anything wrong with any bird you may get to replace your pet that is gone.

THRUSH FOODS (F. Hudson).—The first named food may be bought at most bird-dealers' or corn chandlers' shops where bird foods are sold. The others, we believe, are made by a local firm in Cardiff. You will find foods for the purpose advertised in our columns, and any of these will answer your requirements, especially if you add some extra "ants' eggs" and a little chopped hard boiled egg. You will, of course, give the bird live food of some sort, in addition to the stock food. Grubs of almost any kind, small caterpillars, spiders, house flies, garden worms, mealworms, gentles, etc. Also, if at all possible, give at least one snail a day. You may, at first, have to crack the shells of the snails, but the birds will soon learn to do this for themselves if you supply a good sized stone in the cage bottom. You should get Nutshell No. 26, "The Larger Insectivorous Birds," price twopence from your local dealer or newsagent, or twopence halfpenny, post free, from our publisher. This contains much information on the proper feeding of insectivorous birds.

TAMING A LINNET (W. R. R., Leytonstone).—Bird differ very much in disposition; some become tame and confiding in a very short time, others are constitutionally nervous, and their taming is a question of much time and patience. I fear your Linnet is one of these latter. Keep him in a box cage which is deep enough from front to back to allow him to get a certain amount of privacy when strangers are present. He should gradually get to learn that no harm comes to him from visitors any more than from his master. If you find he is particularly fond of some particular "tit-bit," or of any particular kind of seed, make a point of giving him a little as a treat every time you approach the cage. Unless he is so wild as to be likely to injure himself, you may bring him to a better frame of mind than his present one by placing his cage where members of your family are frequently passing, and if you adopt this proceeding you might do well to partially screen his cage by hanging some light material, such as a piece of muslin, over a portion of the front, removing this gradually as he gets tamer.

A REDPOLL THAT RETURNED (Bulldog).—It is possible that your Redpoll has been badly mobbed by Sparrows or other wild birds during his absence, and has been lucky to preserve his life by finding his way back. If this is the case, he should gradually recover from his injuries. You should let someone see the "yellowish lump which closes up one eye." If this is an incipient tumour it will probably gradually harden, and ultimately drop off. You cannot do better than bathe the inflamed eyes as you are doing. If the bird does not improve, and you will let us know, I shall be pleased to advise you further. Your feeding seems to be about right, but it would be as well to give a change from time to time. There is much useful information as to feeding, etc., contained in our Nutshell on "The Linnet," price 2d., from your local dealer or newsagent, or 2½d., post free, from our publisher.

YOUNG BIRDS AND FITS (Brabote).—It was very bad luck to lose your young birds after they had done so well. I think there is little doubt that the fits were caused by your exposing them to the sun, although the raw meat may have had something to do with it. Raw meat is a very undesirable food for small birds, and the diarrhoea with which you say the last survivor was affected, seems to have been a consequence of this. All the same, I think the sun was the main cause. Birds are very impatient of exposure to the direct rays of the sun, and are easily injured by such exposure.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

WHAT PARRAKEET? (Parraquet).—I think the birds you describe must be Quaker Parrakeets, but if you know your bird is not of this species, please repeat query with full details, and I will try and assist you further.

WHAT BIRD? (F.E.N., U.S.A.).—I think the bird of which you send part of a skin is a Purple Finch, and I do not think it is a probable hybrid breeder, but nothing is impossible to perseverance—Linnet, Twite, Redpoll, and Canary.

REASON THEY DON'T LIVE (J. Bridgman).—I cannot attempt to give you one on the information to hand. Repeat your query in full, and also describe your aviary, its aspects, etc., and state how you've been feeding and treating generally, and I hope then to be in a position to give you definite help.

WHAT BIRD? (R.S.B.).—I will look the matter up and give you a reply next week. It would help me if you would state how long it has been in your aviary, and the source from which you obtained it.

JAVA SPARROWS (J.T.H.).—(1) These birds have used in my aviary a small closed box with a hole in one side for entrance, rush nests, husks, Hartz travelling cages; there are few birds that are not fond of the latter. (2) Canary, white millet, and spray millet; also, in smaller quantities, oats, paddy rice. Greenfood, grit, and cuttlebone, with water, etc., must be regularly supplied. Supply hay, moss, and fine grass as nesting material. (3) They are alike in plumage, but the upper mandible of the male is much arched on the ridge or culmen; the beak of the female is narrower at the base, and more wedge-shaped than that of the male. Your cages are nice and roomy, and the birds ought to do well in them. Give your birds plenty of light and air, but do not subject them to draught.

SEXING BIRDS (Foreign Birds).—The plumatic distinctions of Pope Cardinals are almost nil, but all the hens I have possessed have been a wee bit smaller, and have had the grey feathers of the nape more mottled with white than those of the male. Bulbuls are a large family, and I can only speak generally. Choose a large brightly coloured bird, and one a wee bit smaller and less brilliant. This applies to very many of the species. Lovebirds would agree with Budgies in the aviary. The cock Blue-wing may be distinguished by the rich hue on the wings and lower back. The cock Madagascar has a grey head, the hen is all green. Nothing definite is known yet of the plumatic distinctions of Black-cheeked Lovebirds. The cock Red-headed may be told by the black underside of the wing, which is green in the hen. Fruit and live food, also a little soft food, as well as seeds, must be supplied for Cardinals and Bulbuls.

LEMON-CRESTED COCKATOO (J. Williams).—It is difficult to prescribe for such a case from a distance, and a vet. ought to see it. However, if you wish to treat it yourself, foment the swelling regularly with a hot decoction of camomile flowers; also, keep the bowels moving quite freely with occasional dose—one teaspoonful in drinking water—of Dinneford's Magnesia. If the skin is unbroken, then after the fomenting paint the swelling with tincture of iodine, or if the skin be broken, anoint with some healing ointment, and do not paint with iodine till skin has healed. I should also give hypo-phosphates (half teaspoonful in drinking water) two or three times a week. Seed mixture: One quart each Canary seed, hemp and oats; one pint each maize, sunflower, and paddy rice; half a pint each white millet, shelled nuts, dari, and wheat, well mix and keep supply in the cage. Also supply regularly ripe fruit, greenfood, plain biscuit, piece of dry potato, raw carrot, and keep cuttlebone and grit continually in the cage.

JAVA SPARROWS, ETC. (Thos. Wiliamson).—Grey Java Sparrows have been bred in captivity many times, but they are not so ready to go to nest as the white variety, and if you put two Grey cocks and two White hens in the aviary together, and leave them to follow their own course, young will follow in due course, and the progeny can be allowed to mate among themselves. The bulk of the progeny from the crossed varieties would be pure Greys; what few white birds are reared are usually very handsome. Give your Waxbills unlimited greenfood and fresh air, without draught, encourage bathing, and keep up a liberal supply of spray millet as well as canary and white millet. Keep their bowels moving freely, not watery loose, with occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful in the drinking water, and two or three times a week put half a teaspoonful of hypo-phosphates in the drinking water. Report progress a month hence.

BUDGERIGARS, &c. (E. G. B.).—I do not think either Budgerigars or Madagascar Lovebirds would crossmate if they had mates of their own species, so if you keep sexes equal of the respective species I do not think you need fear any "mesalliance." I have had a young Budgerigar-Madagascar Lovebird hatched and although it lived to leave the nest, it did not live long enough to fend for itself, but the young bird was the result of the crossmating of odd birds having no mates available of their own species.

CARDINALS NOT LAYING IN NEST-BOX (Cardinal).—I am afraid you can do nothing in the matter, and I fear there is small prospect of these birds successfully breeding in a cage. They are none too easy to breed in roomy aviaries, owing principally to the fact that for the first seven days they feed almost entirely on live food. Of course, breeding them in a cage is not impossible, but, it certainly is unlikely, and I fear that having supplied them with a nest-box, all you can do is to leave them to their own devices, and, if any young should be hatched out, to supply live ants' eggs, well scoured gentles, and mealworms liberally, and the unexpected may happen, as it very frequently does in aviculture. In addition to live insects, keep a piece of some kind of ripe fruit in the cage; also the usual seeds and greenfood.

CANARIES REARING FOREIGN FINCHES. (F. E. N.).—There is no reason why Canaries should not rear many kinds of Finches, but there are some of the fledglings of Foreign species which have bright spots and bars in and about the gape, and this might scare the Canaries. Again, while Canaries ought to rear Zebra Finches, the method of the young Zebras backing away from their parents when about to be fed, followed by their wild squalling for food, is so startingly different to the customs of young Canaries that from this cause the Canaries might refuse to feed. Apart from such considerations, Canaries ought to rear such as Bengalese, Silverbills, any of the Serins, Zebra and Ribbon Finches, and also very probably Cordon Bleus and Firefinches. I am afraid advertising for eggs would not be a success, and I consider your best means would be to find out some local keeper of Foreign Finches, and ask him to assist you in making the experiment, making some reciprocal arrangement if the experiment proved a success. Certainly an advert. might put you into communication with such.

CAN IT BE USED FOR AVIARY? (W.B.).—Yes, and should prove a success. It appears to me that the simplest way to convert it would be to use the building as it stands as a shelter, covering all glass on the inside, and also the gratings, with half-inch mesh wire netting, and erect an all-wire netting flight in front of the shelter and plant same with evergreens, creepers, and turf part of it. A flight 8ft. or more wide on the S.W. front would make it into quite a useful and practical aviary at very small cost. In such an aviary many species should build and thrive, especially as the shelter would be roomy enough to shut the birds up in during the worst periods of the English winter. If you care to send me, per editor, a diagram (enclosing an addressed envelope for reply), showing aspect and giving an idea of available ground adjoining the shed, I will mark up the diagram as to best means to use, as it appears to me, and return it to you.

AN AILING GREY PARROT (T.H.S.).—So far as I can gather there is nothing seriously wrong with bird, though the present conditions may so end if not checked. Give it one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day for a month, and on other days, that is, when not giving the magnesia, but half a teaspoonful of Hypo-phosphates in the drinking water, allowing clean water one day per week. Also several times weekly give a little honey and borax in whatever way you can get the bird to take it, either by letting it suck it from the end of a stick or by taking advantage of opportunity and putting a stick in its mouth which is smeared with same. Of course, if the bird is quite tame and allows itself to be handled you will easily be able to contrive some means to administer it without distressing the bird. In lieu of the present seed mixture, give the following: One quart each canary and white millet seeds, one pint each oats, paddy rice and hemp, half-a-pint each dari, wheat, sunflower, shelled nuts, and a few chillies. Well mix and keep supply in cage. Also supply ripe fruit (any kind it will take) regularly, plain biscuit, small piece of Madeira or sponge cake, and green food. Cuttlebone and grit must be continually in the cage. If more serious symptoms supervene, write again at once; otherwise, report progress in a month.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

C. Lattimore.—We could not discover any specimen in your letter; did you forget to enclose it?

Ignorant.—If the matter were left to a judge to decide, in all probability he would hold that, as no specified period was agreed upon, the parties were bound by the approval period commonly in use, viz., 48 hours (vide the rules of the Fancy Press). Much depends upon the circumstances, however; for instance, whether you at once notified the sender that the Roller was suffering from cold and that in consequence you were unable to judge of its singing abilities; also what the owner of the bird said in reply.

Once Bit, Twice Shy.—Write to Messrs. Wyman, Ltd., Printers, Fetter Lane, London, E.C.; enclose two penny stamps and ask them to send you a copy of the latest Wild Bird Act for Nottinghamshire. This answer applies to any county or borough; Messrs. Wyman are the official (Government) printers, and any desired local Act can be obtained from them at one penny each, plus postage. You would also find the "Catchers' Guide," (published by Messrs. Trower and Co., 442, Caledonian Road, London, N., price 7d., post free) very useful to you.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

F. G. B.—Septic Peritonitis, due to infection from the oviduct. Cause, retention of soft shelled egg, due to inertia or lack of tone in the muscular walls of the oviduct. Too close confinement, lack of sufficeint exercise, all predispose. Give your birds a good tonic, such as Sympus Glycerophosphates, containing strychnine, prepared by Messrs. Allen and Hanbury, in 5 drop doses daily in drinking water as a preventive.

C. Derbyshire.—Ptomaine poisoning, brought about by ptomaine poisons generated in the food.

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1913.

Good News from Edinburgh.

From reports received, members seem to have had a good breeding season.—J. Stormont, Sec., Edinburgh N. and M.B.S.

Bad Times at Hirst.

Members have had such a poor breeding season that we have to abandon our F.F. Show, arranged for July 5.—W. Hall, Hon. Sec., Ashington and Hirst C.B.S.

Rochdale Good Intent in the Dumps.

Several members have no young birds; others only a few. The complaints seem general throughout the country.

Excellent at Portsmouth.

We hear from Messrs. King and Joiner, hon. sec., Portsmouth and Southern Counties C.B.S., that members have been so successful that the F.F. Show has closed with 166 entries, a record for the society.

NORTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

On June 28, some 14 members and friends had a picnic to Clitheroe, where we were met by Mr. J. Southworth, the genial secretary of Clitheroe C.B.S., who acted as guide. We were taken around the district in a wagonette, Mr. Southworth pointing out the various places of interest. We arrived back at the Station Hotel, Clitheroe, ready for the splendid dinner provided for us by Mr. W. H. Whipp, to which we did justice. Afterwards we visited the birdroom of Mr. Southworth, and saw some promising young Norwich. He informs me that they are very short of Yorkshire fanciers—a section we are strong in. Then we had a ramble through the fields along the Ribble Valley—a splendid sight indeed. We caught the 8.17 train for Manchester, where we arrived at 10.15. It was the opinion of all that it was the best outing we had ever had, and I tender to Mr. Southworth our best thanks for his services as guide.—John Davey, Hon. Sec.

SUNDNDERLAND C.B.A.

Members had a ramble to Corbridge, June 14. The weather was all that could be desired. Arriving at Corbridge, we made straight for the woods, and were soon amongst the wild flowers in full bloom, with the birds flitting about everywhere. We soon got to business, and a nest with four young Blackbirds was found. A little further on we discovered four Thrushes' nests, each with four eggs. On approaching another nest several young Chaffinches flew out, quickly followed by one of the parent birds. A Titlark's nest was next found with eggs in, and the most remarkable thing was that the nest was lying on the short grass in the open, without any cover whatever. We next saw two partridges' nests, each with ten eggs, and further on several Chaffinches' nests, generally with three or four eggs. During the afternoon we saw a pair of Titlarks only just building. Mr. J. M. Walker took his camera, and obtained several interesting pictures. We had a new fancier with us, and also a Linnet fancier, who, naturally, would have enjoyed being among the Linnets, but this, I think, was his only disappointment. After having enjoyed a capital tea, we took it easy until train time, and eventually arrived home at about eleven. Although this was our second visit to Corbridge within a fortnight, we have decided to have a third, so fine is that particular district, and so thoroughly has it been enjoyed by all. In closing, might I ask the following question: Who it was (while travelling in the train) explained to the judge of our nest feather show, the various points and marks of his birds, and then forget to show them!—J. Peacock, Assist. Sec.

Memorable Visit to the Renowned Collection of a Lady Aviculturist.

About twenty members had a lovely outing on June 25, when, by the kind permission of Mrs. Noble, a visit was made to Park Place, Henley-on-Thames. Leaving Reading about 2,30, the journey was made by Emms Green and Binfield, a splendid ride through country lanes, with hedgerows covered with wild roses and blossoms of all sorts. On arrival, Mr. Timms took charge of us, and conducted us through the aviaries, where we saw a splendid collection of birds, numbering about 300, one and all in grand condition. Amongst them we soon spotted a perfect Greenfinch, one of the finest we had ever seen, and Mr. Yates, who was with us, is not a bad judge of British. In the same aviary with a lovely collection of small foreigners was a pair of pied Blackbirds, with young in the nest, but too young to show their plumage, also a pair of Bleeding-heart Pigeons with a nest of eggs. Descending the terrace, we found some more aviaries containing mixed collections, amongst them being Green and Yellow Budgerigars, Pheasants, Doves, and Pigeons, and a rare hybrid was seen here between a Pigeon and Turtle-dove, believed to be the only one in England. Further on was a magnificent Magpie in perfect condition. A fine pair of Ceram Lories were seen, also a Blue Sugarbird and Hangnests. Leaving these, we started for the lake, on our way finding a very large pair of Lemon-crested Cockatoos in a large aviary by themselves. Several amusing tales were told about these two, and members had a rare job to tear themselves away from them, but eventually the lake was reached, and a very valuable collection of Fancy Waterfowl were seen. As it was feeding time, we had a grand view. Mr. Timms then handed us over to the care of Mr. Stanton, who took us through the greenhouses, explaining the specially interesting plants as he went along. Then through the magnificently laid out grounds, where we had at one spot a view of seven counties. Time being up, we had to say goodbye to Mr. Timms and Mr. Stanton, and get back to tea. Here we had another pleasant surprise, when we found tea laid out on the lawn under the trees, which made it doubly acceptable. Coming home, we changed our route, and went by Wargrave and Twyford, having a good view of the houseboats, etc., on the way. We arrived home about 9.30, after a really enjoyable day. Our thanks are due to Mrs. Noble for her kindness, also to Mr. Timms and Mr. Stanton for taking such pains to make our visit agreeable, and I can assure them it was greatly appreciated.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

Shall the Barnsley and District C.B.S. Flourish or Die?

Sir,—A meeting of the above society will be held on Saturday next, July 5, at headquarters, the Clarence Hotel, at 7.30 p.m., to consider the affairs, and decide as to what shall be done, for we cannot get any meetings. We have had two meetings in six months! We cannot go on like this. I would like to ask each member if he thinks it fair and honourable to our worthy chairman, and myself, and the few members that do turn up to these meetings. I appeal to every member to make a special effort to attend and express his views as to what shall be done. I think members will agree with me that it's high time some definite decision was arrived at.

A Cat that Makes Friends with the Birds.

Sir,—Mr. Fulljames' reference in Cage Birds League notes recently to a trusty old feline friend of his which kept his room clear from mice, reminded me of a similarly valuable ally of my own, who was absolutely trustworthy with birds, either in or out of cages indoors, provided only that any new addition was introduced to him, so to speak, before being allowed to fly out of its cage, so that he was in a sense familiar with its appearance. The enclosed photograph, which shows him with one of his feathered companions, is an enlarged detail of a photo, in which this "unmatched pair" were sitting on the shoulder of yours truly, who, as you may guess, is quite too retiring to appear; therefore, that part has been "touched out." But the cat and the bird, I assure you, are absolutely untouched, and unfaked in any way whatever.

A Record Donation.

Sir,—Members and all well-wishers will be glad to know that this society has just received a very large donation from a distinguished nobleman; probably the largest ever given to any cage-bird society. In addition to the list of promised donations, previously notified in the report of the Society's first meeting, I am glad to also be able to acknowledge two guineas from A. Ezra, Esq., 10s. 6d. from Rev. G. H. Raynor and 10s. 6d. from Miss Lydia Clare. Two medals have also been kindly promised by Mr. Collingbourne.

The Future of Sale C.B.S. Now Assured.

Sir,—My appeal to the members of Sale C.B. Society, I am pleased to say resulted in a record meeting. It was unanimously agreed that the Society should continue, but owing to the bad breeding results not to hold any first feather show, but to wait and make our open show one of the best in the North of England. A committee meeting will be held in due course to consider Cage Birds. Prize Scheme, also to appoint judges for open show. I think we have got over our troublesome time, as every member seemed determined to do his best in the future. Several specials were promised for open show. Thanking you for your kindness in publishing the appeal and wishing Cage Birds every success.

Birds as Distributors of Weed Seeds.

Sir,—With reference to Mr. Weston's notes of last week, my investigations convince me that if the sterilisation of the soil has been thorough and droppings have been obtained from a source which precludes any possibility of seeds being included which did not properly form a part of same, there will be no germination. My method was to run birds overnight into a thoroughly clean cage, having a sheet of paper in lieu of sand tray, and get droppings from same. I had previously given the birds a good supply of various wild seeds. The excreta I sowed in a pot containing soil which had been subjected to a temperature of 212 deg. F. for four hours, covering the same with a bell glass, and the only growths to make appearance were moss and fungus, the former probably having its origin in the water supplied (I supplied moisture by capillary attraction from a spring supply). The fungus, I think, had its origin in the pot, as I neglected to sterilise it, and the fungoid growth was confined to the sides of the pot. That birds can distribute fruit-bearing plants I am quite convinced, the regurgitated pips of briar, yew, hawthorn, mistletoe, wild-cherry, etc., being quite unimpaired by the short retention in the crop necessary to assimilate the fleshy covering. I, however, prefer to submit contents of crops of the various species and at various seasons, to a microscopic examination as being the most definite method of ascertaining the the food partaken of. Of course, I endeavoured to find the value of such foods, as I am firmly convinced that though certain foods may be largely partaken of, and are suitable to birds in a state of liberty, such foods (both seeds and insects) may be quite unsuitable to such birds in confinement. I am supported in that contention by the fact that in many instances the captive birds refuse to eat them, the earth-worm being often rejected by species which in freedom devour fathoms thereof. I hope to publish the results of my experiments when I have concluded same, and as I am likely to give the faddists some home thrusts, I am taking the precaution of having a reliable witness.

In conclusion, can any of those who believe that birds distribute weeds explain how islands only separated by fifty or sixty miles of water can possess a distinct Botanical group, despite identical conditions of soil, temperature, and elevation? I append a table copied from Darwin's "Voyage of the Beagle," dealing with the Botany of the various islands of the Galapagos Archipelago, and which, in view of their proximity, negatives the theory advanced by Mr. W. E. Collinge of birds being seed distributors. That they might convey weeds by particles adhering to their bodies is quite feasible, that being the only method whereby newly-made ponds become stocked with fish.

Another Case of "Twin" Canaries.

Six Youngsters from Five Eggs.

Sir,—A pair of Yorkshire Canaries of mine hatched four young from four eggs on April 21, and reared same. On June 3, the same pair had five eggs, and from the five eggs six fine strong healthy young birds were hatched. Two of the young are a little smaller than the other four, but up to date all are doing well and ready to leave the parents. I may say I always test every nest of eggs the day before they are due, and on this occasion I had between my own finger and thumb the five eggs from which were hatched the six young. The following morning I was feeding my birds at five o'clock, and I saw that only two of the eggs remained to hatch, and never troubled any more about the remaining eggs, as I knew they would be all right. But, to my surprise, after eight days it was found by my wife that six young birds were in the nest. I was so much surprised at her statement that I had not time to have my dinner until I had solved the mystery for myself. On going to my bird-room and taking out the nest, I counted six. At first I thought my eyes had surely deceived me, but it remains true. I am certain no other egg was placed under my hen, nor any young bird from any other brood, as my nest broods are 5 and 4 in number and 9 days younger than the above mentioned. I may state that the parents are a pair of birds I purchased from Mr. L. Dykes, of Bradford, early in this season. After the hen had laid her third egg I ran the cock bird with another hen. She has now three fine young from four eggs. If any other breeder has had the same experience will he kindly say so through Cage Birds.—I wish Cage Birds every success.

E. O. Ashbridge.

How Goldfinch-Twite Hybrids were Bred.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. D. E. Alexander I may state this can hardly be called a new cross, although I think he is perfectly correct when he says that up to the present there is no record of one of this cross appearing on the show bench. I obtained one youngster of this cross in July, 1911, an article on which was written by Mr. Rosslyn Mannering. This young one died when only one day old. Then my hen Twite died sitting on five eggs. She laid fifteen eggs in all that year, reared a nest of Twites and died, I feel sure from either grief or jealousy. I had them in a three compartment, breeding cage, and I ran the Goldie to a hen Canary in full view of the Twite, and I found her dead one morning sitting on the nest of eggs, after appearing to be in the best of health the day before. Last year, 1912, I also obtained one young from this cross, which lived fourteen days. The same Goldie was used, and a 1911 young hen Twite caught when just able to fly. This year I have one young one from the same pair, hatched on June 18, so I see Mr. Alexander is ahead of me, but it is through my sheer ill luck. I had one hatch out on the last day of May, which died on the 4th of June and now I have a hen Canary sitting on five eggs from the same pair, due out on July 7. My birds are in cages and the hen Twite will not go to nest in anything but an ordinary Norwich nest box. If I take that away and put in anything else she will merely carry stuff into a corner of her cage and build a nest there. The other one which died would only build in a Roller travelling cage, with grass woven closely in and out between the bars. She would not use an old nest, but build her own, and would only take "Charpie," although I gave her plenty of stuff to choose from. All my hen Britishers will feed from my hand. I have seen several notes lately on the size of cages, and here I think a mistake is made. Please do not think I am an advocate for those miserable things termed back cages: far from it, as the smallest cage I use is 16 x 12 x 9 outside measure. On the other hand, if fanciers used cages and had them a little on the small side (mine are all double compartment cages 32 x 16 x 10) I think far more Hybrids would be obtained. Keep the birds in these all the winter, and let them run together all the time: most important point of all, only keep "kind" birds. If fresh caught birds will not stand on the perch within ten days whilst I put in a bit of choice green food they are known to feed on between the bars, out she or he goes, as there are plenty to be obtained. There seem always some who try to break a wing or leg as quickly as possible! My young one is coming on nicely, but is very much darker than a Greypate; in fact, his head is almost jet black. If you think it would be of any interest I will let you know later if I am successful in rearing this one, or more. Just one word on grass before I conclude, I was really delighted to see Mr. Weston's notes on grass, as I use plenty of it, and don't stop to find out which is which when I am picking it, but just gather it anyhow and use it for Britishers and Canaries, young and old. I am also going in for the Greenfinch-Bullfinch, Linnet-Bullfinch, and (possibly a forlorn hope) Chaffinch-Bullfinch. I should like to hear more from Mr. Alexander.

Kinsale, Co. Cork. E. Southwood

Sir,—Goldfinch-Twite Hybrids have been bred by a coastguard employed at the Kinsale light-house. He bred last year a Goldfinch-Twite Hybrid, but lost same when ten days' old. This year he has successfully reared another Goldfinch-Twite in an ordinary Canary breeding cage, which I hope to have the pleasure of seeing soon, and will report on later. Last year's bird has been preserved and I, believe, identified by an expert to be a genuine Goldie-Twite Hybrid.

E. Carroll Dawson.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

More "Mules" Bred from a Linnet Mule.

Sir,—Kindly insert in Cage Birds that young birds have been bred from a Linnet Mule at Tyldesley. I have had four young ones from four eggs, but one died when 2 days old. The other three are doing well at the time I am writing, and are 3 weeks old on June 26. Two are dark, and one is a clear. I should like to know if there is a name other than Mules for these young birds.

F. Kennedy.

[We trust our correspondent is quite satisfied that the parentage of the young birds is as stated. We do not know whether he is experienced in Mule breeding; or whether the birds have been seen by anyone who is expert in such matters.—Editor.]

The Fixing of Front Perches in Box Cages.

Sir,—I enclose sketch showing the method I use in fixing the front perch in box cages. First I cut the perch about a quarter-inch less than cage, and then drill a hole in each side of cage where perch is to be fixed, and a hole in each end of perch about an inch deep. Then I get two pieces of cage wire and bend as shown in sketch (A). My reason for having perch smaller than cage is that it is much easier to re-fix after being taken out for cleaning purposes and does not encourage red mite as it would if it fitted close to sides of cage. Hoping my method will be of use to readers of Cage Birds.

Novice Border Fancy Classes in the South.

Sir.—I am pleased to hear that Portsmouth and Southern Counties C.B.S. leads the way for the novices. They pay the best; as a rule 40 entries in a class. They can always give a £1 away for £2, which helps to pay for the professional, 8 or 9 in a class. It takes a good bird to win in a novice class, and a good man in the professional. All novices should see what novice classes there are for them in their society, before paying their subscriptions. Specialist clubs want as many classes as possible, but if a class does not pay, they won't pay the balance to that society. I see in the Fancy Press (if I am right) that Blaydon and Chester-le-Street have not got the patronage of a Norwich club, novices should join Blaydon and Chester-le-Street, also Wallsend. These societies will not regret it if they put on novice classes; they pay well, and especially when they have not the club patronage. I am going to try, if I can spare time before the show season comes round to make a schedule of all societies for novices, which will enable all novices at a glance to exhibit at the best shows. Either I shall publish it, or do so through the Fancy Press, which will save societies' postage, if I can get the old schedules and catalogues of the undermentioned shows: Portsmouth, Bradford National, Scottish National, Sheffield and District, Crystal Palace, Glasgow City, and others.

A Chance for Makers of Show Staging.

Sir,—I should esteem it a favour if you would inquire through the medium of Cage Birds for a maker of patent collapsible staging; or, in fact, any kind of staging suitable for a cage bird show. The Bradford National Show Committee are desirous of acquiring suitable staging for our next annual show on Dec. 5, 6, and 8 next. Any information on this question will be heartily welcomed by me.

Hybrids from the Cock Bullfinch.

Sir,—Please say if there have been any Mules bred from a cock Bullfinch and a hen Canary, as I have always understood that it is impossible to get youngsters from this cross, but a friend tells me that they are very common this season.

B. C.

[Possibly the friend is thinking of Hybrids between a hen Bullfinch and a cock Canary; these are fairly common. Hybrids from the cock Bullfinch we do not seem to be able to get.—Editor.]

Deformed Claws.

Some Likely Methods of Dealing with an Annoying Trouble.

There appears to have been an unusual number of birds hatched this season which have developed, or been born with, deformed hind claws. Where the hind claw takes a forward position, as "A" in the sketch, the deformity is not very difficult to deal with. A piece of rubber tubing passed over the front claws and left over the hind claw and leg, as at "B," will, if worn for a few days, generally effect a cure (or even court plaster bound round will answer).

A Serious Defect.

The "slip" claw, as shown at "C," is a more serious matter. The bird is quite unable to grip the perch, and the foot is consequently continually slipping off it. Sometimes one can effect a cure by binding all the claws together as at "D," keeping them in that position for a few days, and then, when they are released, substituting small round perches for the usual oval ones, or the type of perch shown at "E," which has been highly spoken of in this connection. Although this matter of dealing with the "slip" claw is frequently effective, it is not an absolutely reliable cure, and such a one has yet to be found. As a proof of this we frequently see birds deformed in this manner used for breeding purposes in fanciers' rooms, and occasionally see them on the show bench. A good deal depends upon the trouble being dealt with at the earliest possible moment.

It has been suggested that inbreeding has possibly something to do with it, but although young birds are frequently hatched deformed in some way when very closely inbred, I feel convinced that the cause of the "slip" claw must be sought for in some other direction. The only case occurring in my own bird room within the last five years was that of a young bird bred from parents quite unrelated.

Two Lots of "Twins" in One Nest.

Sir,—A neighbour of mine has had 4 young Canaries in one nest of two eggs. I don't know if this is a record or not.

Belfast. Thomas Williamson.

Why the Blackbird Had a White Head.

Sir,—As the subject of albinism is so interesting, I send you the following, which was recently forwarded by Francis Heatherley to "Country Life": "My friend, Mrs. Judd, of Oxton, Birkenhead, who keeps a breakfast table, tells me that one year a constant visitor was a Blackbird with a bald head. This bird was doubly identified by also having a crippled foot. The following year a constant visitor was a white-headed Blackbird with a crippled foot as noticed before. This is interesting, because in the human subject baldness, due to parasitic disease of the scalp, is sometimes followed by a temporary growth of white hair."

Miss T. Moore.

The Third Time Paid for All.

Sir,—I got a great surprise on Friday night to see my bird flourishing on the front page of my paper. I thank you very much for your kindness. This was the third time I had shown birds at the Scottish National Show. The first they were put on the top shelf, the second I got a third prize and a commended card; the third time (this year) I was more successful, as I got a first. He was the best first prize bird in the four unflighted classes, and he won Hyde's teapot. I think that is not bad for a novice in his third year in the Fancy. I have gained a lot of knowledge through your paper, Cage Birds, and Cage Birds Annual, and wish you every success.

SOMETHING ABOUT MY NIGHTINGALES.

By

THE following morning Tom looked all right, but refused a mealworm—a thing he had never done before within my recollection. I said—"What's wrong, Tom?" but, instead of replying, Tom gasped and shut his eyes; his chest heaved convulsively; then he called out "Steward!" and up came a very nasty looking object. It was the original piece of millet-spray, but densely coated with slime. Then Tom looked meaningly at me with his bright eye, as who should say—"Now you will understand, my boy, that I was swabbing out my crop—and I'll trouble you for that mealworm." He got it.

Specifics For Digestive Troubles.

If you have any insectivorous bird at all out of sorts from digestive troubles, reader, just throw down half a handful of millet seed husk before it, and I think you will find that it will take some, and greatly benefit by it; Wagtails will swallow a quantity. Every animal probably has certain remedies, certain antidotes, certain dodges for aiding digestion. Some snakes swallow stones, crocodiles swallow large stones; the poet Cowper found that hares swallowed sand greedily. The difficulty is to discover what are the particular remedies of a particular species. Of this, however, you may be absolutely certain, namely, that if you do not find "castings" (pellets of indigestible matter) on the wires or back of your Nightingale's cage, you are feeding it wrongly, and disease will soon step in.

The Merits of Dried "Ants' Eggs."

In my previous notes I said that (after many experiments) I did not think that dried ant pupae were of any value as a food, though most useful in cleansing the crop; but I shall now have to retract that statement. A skilled keeper of Nightingales, Mr. Harrison, of Tiverton, who came to see my young Sprossers, told me that he had a Nightingale which was very fond of this particular diet, and he believed could be kept for some time on this alone. I wagered a cock Roller that his bird would not live for one week on ants' eggs alone. I lost, and duly forfeited the Canary. Since this event I have looked upon ants' eggs with much more respect; still, it should be noted that those used were the very best that money could buy, and this particular bird had a special liking for them. I would not advise anyone to repeat the experiment.

I have lately hit upon a new idea in the matter of preserving the pupae, which, if a success, will, I hope, materially simplify the keeping of the smaller softbills in captivity; I want to give it a thorough twelve months' test before recommending it, however.

One Bird's Meat is Another Bird's Poison.

These are the days of the food specialist; you write to him, and he will tell you exactly how to feed your Nightingale—what the proportions of the soft food should be, how many mealworms a day to give, etc. Now, the specialist may feed his own Nightingale very wisely, and he may tell you exactly how he feeds his own birds, but I submit with all due respect that he cannot possibly tell you how to feed your bird—and for a very simple reason. That reason is that in its diet, as in all its habits, not only every species, but every individual bird, is a law unto itself. Probably more Nightingales have been lost in the attempt to force them on to some particular diet than in any other way whatever. When you receive a new Nightingale, tell yourself that you are just a learner; dismiss from your mind anything that you ever read or heard on the subject, and just try to ascertain for yourself what your particular bird requires. Bear in mind that, though the specialist may know a lot about the diet of the Nightingale, the Nightingale himself knows much more, and wise old Mother Nature much more still. Let me again repeat what I said at the commencement of these notes that "aviculture cannot be taught."

The Importance of Dry Feeding.

It is impossible to over-estimate the importance of feeding insectivorous birds on as dry food as possible. To a certain extent this system depends on the general principle that one should not dilute the digestive fluids more than is normal in the case of the particular species, but there is also the desirability of keeping the crop in good order to be thought of. It is surprising to what an extent this system can be carried with success. I once paid a visit to a Paignton fancier, who showed me the food he used for his Blackcaps. It certainly did not look promising, for it consisted mainly of Quaker Oats mixed with small seeds. Nevertheless, I bought a small quantity for experimental purposes, and I was surprised to find that a Blackcap would not only eat it in its dry undamped state, but would do well on it. Do not let us forget that probably all, and certainly most, insectivorous birds have alternative foods, but for which they would never survive a time of scarcity. I have recently seen Dartford Warblers greedily eating the petals of certain flowers and young Whitethroats feeding on grass seeds. Some ornithologists have told us that a March Cuckoo must be an imaginary object, because it could not in that month obtain the class of caterpillars to which it is partial, but Mr. Phillipps has recorded the fact that in his aviary a Cuckoo used to devour the growing shoots of corn.

Certain species, as for instance the Tanagers, which eat a good deal of fruit in a state of nature, are frequently fed in captivity on "sop" (or, as I call it "slop"), but if anyone will try the experiment of feeding a Tanager for a fortnight on "slops," and then for a fortnight on perfectly dry sponge cake with a little Horlick's Malted Milk in a separate vessel, I think he will be surprised at the improvement in its health, and its tighter feathering, although the ingredients of the food have not been materially changed. Everyone who has done any athletic training will have been told to keep off "slops," and not to drink much fluid with meals.

The Simplest Food is Best.

For all the smaller softbills I still use the same soft food, namely, grated sponge cake with a small quantity of dried flies or dried ant pupae, because I have not come across a simpler food; but I feed them chiefly, when possible, on "live bait," and this is varied to suit the requirements of each individual bird. For some of the more difficult experiments with softbills I have used nothing but the above. For instance, this spring I have had the Long-tailed Tit nesting in the aviary, and I have clean moulted all my Barred Warblers (three)—a difficult species to moult successfully.

I have not the least doubt that Nightingales will do fairly well for some considerable time on some of the richer foods, such as silkworm cocoons and cream-cheese, but let us recollect that the Nightingale is, or ought to be, a long-lived bird, and we certainly should not be satisfied with getting only a couple of seasons' song from it. The Hon. Mrs. Bourke wrote me recently that her Nightingale is five years old, and Mr. Frost tells me that a Sprosser, which was at least three years old (and possibly much more) when I parted with it in 1911, is still doing well in a Calcutta aviary. A Nightingale should have at least six years' vigorous life in captivity, and what I ask myself is whether this can be secured on anything but a very simple diet. However, this is a matter on which we must all think for ourselves and act as we think best.

Club Reports.

ASHINGTON AND HIRST C.B.S.

Meeting held June 28, in Harmonic Hall, Mr. Jas. Miles presiding over a fair attendance. Owing to such a poor breeding season, it was decided to abandon Nest Feather show, arranged for July 5th, hoping we get along better for annual show, November 8. Judge, Mr. R. Bewick. Next meeting to be published later.—Wm. Hall.

CRAGHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting held June 28 Mr. Davinson chair. After a lot of discussion it was decided to hold annual show Nov. 15. Mr. J. Stanger, Pelton Fell, judge. Mr W. Knowles, Grange Villa, was elected a member. All fanciers are invited to our F.F. show, held at Punch Bowl Inn, July 12, we have 20 classes, have been promised a good few specials, and expect a good turn out of birds. A. G. Dawson, Sec.

YORKS. C. & C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Meeting held July 25, Mr. Dowling chair, and a good attendance. One new member was elected—Mr Nolan. A communication was received from Bangor Dis. C.B.S., asking for patronage, which was granted. Mr. Power proposed that Mr. Sholedice might give a lecture on the mating of Yorkshires at the members' meeting, July 7. Mr. McGee seconded, and Mr. Sholedice consented to do so. C. Lattimore, Hon. Sec.

LONGTON C.B.S.

Meeting held at Roe Buck Hotel, Mr. J. Davies chair. Messrs. Lockett, sen., and Leadbeater, were elected members. After a discussion about three competitors in the classes for the cup, it was decided, on the proposition of Mr. James, seconded by Mr. Dale, that it be reduced to two. Prize money was paid out, and specials were given. Decided to have a ramble to Cheadle on July 13. Mr. Hickman has kindly consented to snapshot the party. Fanciers desirous of going please be at Longton Station by 9.15, all are welcome. P. E. Barker, Hon. Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Monthly meeting held at Old Boar's Head Hotel, Manchester, June 29. Mr. W. Massey presided over a moderate attendance. Mr. C. W. Wilson, Grimsby, was elected a member. A members' show was fixed for November 30, with three classes—champion, amateur, and novice. Birds to be rung 1913. Messrs. Lyons and Massey judges. A discussion arose respecting exhibitors sending birds to shows, and marked N.F.S. instead of having a price put upon them. The conclusion arrived at was that any exhibitor adopting this method lays himself open to be objected to, if he won a prize, as not having won according to rule in schedule.—Andrew Percival, Hon. Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Meeting held headquarters, Oldham Hall, Renshaw Street, June 26. There was a fair attendance to hear the discussion on moulting Green Canaries and other business. Mr. Young, as arranged, was present to open the discussion, which he did in a very able manner, dealing with the subject in a very practical way. After giving his methods, he was questioned by the members present, and replied from his own experience. Mr. Hadwin presented two silver medals to be competed for by the Wee Gems. We hope the Northern fanciers will do their best in this section by way of specials this season, so as to push forward their own variety. Patronage date for the champion sections is not later than July 17. Nest feather show, July 19. See advert. in next issue.—F. Handley, Hon. Sec.

NORWICH, CREST, AND Y.C.C. OF ULSTER.

Meeting held at headquarters, Clarence Place Hall, May Street, Mr. Adams chair. Being the date for members to be clear on the books, there was a record attendance. One or two had overlooked the matter, and it was decided that the secretary should remind them by postcard. The club has made a good many new members this season, and, by reports, members have had a fairly good breeding season, and we are holding a two-day show, which should be a record one. A member has promised a 10s. special for the best rung bird in Norwich section; members using closed rings please note. This special will be given irrespective of number entered. As matters of great importance may turn up, members please attend meeting, July 2nd.—Walter Conielly, Assist. Sec.

NORTH WEST GLASGOW C.B.C.

Monthly meeting held Blythswood Halls, Gt. Western Road, June 26, Mr. Phillips presiding over a fair attendance. Messrs. A. W. Naismith and E. Holliday were elected members. The membership now totals 38. The classification, drafted by the committee for annual show, was submitted for approval. There being very little alteration, we got through a fair amount of classes, leaving one or two until next meeting. Members please note: F.F. show, July 5, 3 p.m., at above address. Bring out your birds, we have quite a large amount of specials, including three medals, one for best bird shown by a novice, one for best bird shown by other than a novice, one for best second prize bird, given by Messrs. E. Taylor, R. B. Gibb, A. Wilson. Other specials by Messrs. Thorn, Adams, Pinnock, Phillips, A. Brown, J. D. Brown, Paterson, and Houston. Fanciers desirous of becoming members should communicate.—Wm. Loan, North Bank Coachhouse, Kelvinside, N.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C.

Committee meeting held Market Tavern, Bradford, June 28, Mr. W. A. Cowgill chair. Mr. W. Graham (Leeds) was admitted to membership. Patronage of the club was granted to Doncaster and Dis. C.B.S. for January 10, thus bringing the number of club shows up to ten. Following is a list of prizes for competitions promoted by the club. Open section, 1st prize, trophy value £10 10s. (presented by the club); 2nd, trophy value £5 5s. (presented by Mr. W. A. Cowgill); 3rd, trophy, value £3 3s. (presented by Mr. E. Clegg). Each trophy to be won three times before becoming the property of the winners; with them go club medals, value 20/-, 12/-, and 8/- respectively, except when the trophies are won outright. 4th prize, pair of boots, value 10/6 (presented by Mr. J. Chippendale); 5th, medal, value 10/6 (presented by Messrs. R. Sutcliffe and Son). Ramsden's special (open). Mr. W. Ramsden will again give a silver-plated teapot or cruet (at winner's option) for most points gained by birds fed on Ramsden's pure peppers. Amateur competition.—Members who have not won more than three first prizes. First prize, gold medal, value £1 1s. (presented by Mr. J. Bailey); second, case of cutlery (presented by Mr. T. Sandiford); third, pair of vases, value 10/6 (presented by Mr. H. Hill). Junior novice competition.—As the Y.U. shows are to be divided into 2 sections for the forthcoming show season, it was decided to offer specials value 15/- and 7/6 for each of the two sections. The money specials will be given as in previous years for 4th and 5th birds at the club's patronage shows, and Mr. C. E. Morrison will give a trophy value 25/- for most points gained by third birds in the open section at club shows. As I have the Year Book for 1913-14 in course of preparation, I should be pleased if intending members would send on their names at once to ensure inclusion in same.—J. Chambers, Hon. Sec., 22, St. Ann's Mount, Burley Hill, Leeds.

ROUND THE YOUNG BIRD SHOWS.

BINGLEY O.S.

Show held June 21. Mr. S. Denby, of Bingley, judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. Most points were made as follows: A. M. Craven 13, T. Smith 13, W. Dean 11, H. Shaw 10, Butterworth and Hardy 9, H. J. Priestley 9, S. H. Bailey 3.—H. Shaw, Sec.

HEYWOOD O.S.

We have received a list of awards at the Y.B. show held June 28, from which it appears that the principal winners were: YORKS.: Howarth, Greenhalgh, Barlow, Scholfeld, Waddington, Meadowcroft. NOR.: Lees, Dewhurst, Greenhalgh, Hordern. NOV.: F. Howarth. BRIT.: Schofield, Lees, Meadowcroft. Special winners were: Cap, Lees; best bird, Greenhalgh; most points in Yorks., Howarth; Nor., Lees; Liz., Dewhurst; Brit., Schofield.

PERTH CITY AND COUNTY O.A.

N.F. show held June 28, in Laidlaw's Temperance Hotel. Mr. W. Mitchell judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. NOR. YELL.: 1, sp. 2, Blythe; 3, Mrs. Banks; 4, Crawford; 5, Kirk; 6, 7, Mooney. PAIGNTON (Torbay) O.S.

F.F. show, was held June 24 in Lower Public Hall. The entries were stronger than before, Yorkshires alone numbering 32, the quality being excellent. Norwich were not so strong as usual, but very good in quality, while dark Mules contained some promising birds of the Goldf. Can. cross. Mr. F. Redwood, of Newton Abbot, judged satisfactorily.

METROPOLITAN C.B.A.

It would appear from the entries at the annual N.F. show, held June 28, that members have had a successful breeding season generally. Quite a fine show of birds graced Kelvedon Hall, a splendidly lighted and eminently suitable room. The hon. sec., Mr. F. Moore, had been most painstaking over the arrangements, and met with great success. His method was as complete as if he had been a veteran at the post, and the staging and general management of affairs left nothing to be desired. The quality of the exhibits generally was excellent; in one or two cases it was quite apparent that with ordinary luck the winners must make a wider name in the coming show season. Yorks. were a splendid collection, and Borders were a show in themselves, both as to numbers and quality. It is remarkable, and at the same time gratifying, to find so many breeders taking up "the wee gems," and judging from all one can see, they promise to become as popular down south as even the Yorkshire. There were some nice Norwich staged, and British made the best show the society has yet held. The show was visited by quite a number of fanciers during the evening. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and his awards appeared to give every satisfaction. Specials were won as follows:—Champ. Section: Best Yorks., also diploma for best bird in section, W. Whiteman, with a rattling upstanding bird; best Border, Mrs. Moore, with a sweet little ticked eyed bird. Novice: Best Yorks., H. F. Bowring; best Nor., W. Nichols; best Border Fancy, and diploma for best in nov. section, E. Pegg, with a lovely little bird that was generally voted the best Border in the show. Best Brit. or Mule, Mr. Mower, with a charming Siskin.

ROCHDALE (Good Intent) C.B.S.

F.F. show held June 21, at the Parish Church Schools, with only a moderate entry. Owing to the weather having played havoc amongst the breeders, several of them have none at all, others just a few. But of the birds what were staged, many were of high quality, as is usual with this show. The show was patronised by many visitors from other districts, and they had the pleasure of seeing some good young ones, notably Mr. F. Hartley's and Newell's Lancs. Mr. J. Dewhirst has a good Lizard or two, but, unfortunately, he had no competition. In Norwich, again, Mr. Dewhirst led the way, very closely followed by J. Lees, J. Francis, and A. Howarth respectively, the best bird in the show being found in this section a cl. yell Nor. shown by Mr. Dewhirst. In Yorkshires, Messrs. Coupe, Barlow, and Butterworth staged a few gems. Amateurs were represented by Mr. Francis, and British by Mr. Lees. The gate was up to the usual standard, and, by way of a change, we had two old members judging, Mr. G. Adams, Milnrow, judging Lancs. and Lizards, and Mr. R. Schofield the remainder, and they gave satisfaction in their new role. Mr. F. Hartley won challenge cup for most points gained with three birds.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Y.B. show held June 25 under ideal conditions, the only regret being the poor season the members had with the birds. Out of 72 members only 16 were able to show 70 birds, but Yorks. were a fine display; the British section was far above any yet seen at the society's shows, several Crystal Palace winners being staged, including Mr. K. Beasley's grand Skylark; unfortunately, the competition was not keen in Softbills. The show was well patronised during the evening, and the chairman, on behalf of the members, presented Mr. J. Wright with a handsome travelling bag, as he is leaving the society for a berth in London; he will be greatly missed, being an ideal show manager. Mr. J. H. Roe judged. The following have commenced their run for the cups with points as follow, all under cup rules:—CHAMP.: Burke 15, Kidner 13, Clay and Andrews 9, Adcock 7, Hughes 3, Murray 1. NOV.: Field 13, Bayliss 10, Swindon 8, Matthews 6, Rees 4, Luckman 1. BRIT. AND MULE: Barnett 12, Raby 11, Beasley 7, Matthews 3 (please note rules, there must be competition). Special winners: Best champ. Yorks., Burke; novice, Field; best 1913 bird, Field; nov. Nor., Yardley; Border, Murray; best Novice, Matthews; best Mule, Kidner. The society wish to tender thanks to Mr. Leckie (host) for loan of room, also for kind spread for stewards and judge. YORKS. CHAMP., CL. OR TKD. YELL.: 1, Clay; 2, vhc, Andrews; 3, 4, Kidner. A.O. CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Annual F.F. and British bird show held June 28. The birds were well staged, in a good room, with plenty of light, and moving space. Considering the bad breeding season, entries came up very well, and were a large advance on last year. Norwich turned up in the largest numbers, and some grand birds were staged, especially Mr. Houghton's marked yellow, and Mr. Mitchell's buff in the novice section. The owner is fortunate in breeding such a bird, and it should be heard of later. In British and Hybrids, some very good specimens were shown. Mr. Madagan's Siskin Mule was a picture, and well deserved its place, and a nice Linnet Mule (1913) of Mr. Brown's should develop into a good bird. Novice classes were, generally speaking, above the average. Although a class was provided for foreigners, only four were entered, and belonged to the hon. sec. Mr. J. H. Payne judged.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

F.F. show held at Market Hall, June 28. 96 birds were staged, including some promising youngsters. Yorks. and Norwich were exceptionally good in number and quality, but British were not so good. In Yorks., the exhibits shown by J. Pritchard were true to type, and show great promise. The buff marked shown by G. Morgan was a bird of exceptional quality of feather, and should be heard of again. The clear yellow shown by A. and H. Parfitt was again a bird of good quality, and a credit to the owners. Yorks. all round were a warm lot, and the above-mentioned birds were pressed very hard by other good birds, the classes being very strong in number. In Norwich, Messrs. Thomas and Durham, Blaenavon, put down a fine team in faultless condition, and won the silver rose bowl for best bird, also special for best novice bird, with a buff ticked of good type and feather. It is an honour to these young fanciers, seeing that they are only novices, and I am sure all members will congratulate them. The show was well attended, some old fanciers being present. The officials worked hard, and everything was in good order, the exhibits being staged to perfection. That one time old exhibitor and fancier, Mr. J. R. Leach, made the awards, and gave entire satisfaction, seeing that he had a hard task set before him in some of the classes.

EALING AND HANWELL F.S.

First evening show held June 25, at St. John's Hall, Leeland Road, West Ealing. 130 exhibits were staged. Several of the exhibits have already won premier honours at the open shows. All cups, six in number, were in competition, and now is the time for fanciers to join this progressive society, so as to be in the running for them. The society is fortunate to be able to pen and stage 450 exhibits with its own property. A 10 guinea challenge cup is open to all sections of the Fancy. Next show, July 19, when the sec., Mr. Rowland Bamber, 78, Whitestile Road, Brentford, will be glad to answer any enquiries. Mr. J. Dewhurst judged.

BRADFORD WEST C.B.A.

F.F. show held at Shoulder of Mutton, Girlington, June 28. There was a record entry, 93 young birds being staged. Mr. A. Shaw, Allerton, was judge, and gave complete satisfaction. There was a very good gate, and everything went off splendidly. All things point to a very successful and prosperous year.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Annual N.F. show, held Montgomery Hall, June 28. Entries were in excess of last year, and quality well above the average. The winners in the Yorks. section, both champion and novice, were birds of great promise. Another pleasing feature was the increase in the British and novice Norwich exhibits. British were a treat to behold, many of them being in perfect plumage and many open show winners were amongst them, while the novice Norwich, which scarcely filled one class last year, had three classes well filled. Winners of specials are: Most points members, J. Woolhouse; novice D. Pickering; most points members' Yorks., C. Tomlinson; ditto, Norwich, J. Woolhouse; novice Yorks., D. Pickering; ditto, Norwich, L. Woolhouse; best Yorks., W. T. Furniss; Nor., J. Woolhouse; Brit., P. Walsh; best novice bird, A. White. The stewards, Messrs. Kelley, Curley and Blunt, assisted by the President and Secretaries, Messrs. Jones and Hobson, had everything well in hand, and the judge, Mr. T. Bishop, gave every satisfaction. The attendance was very good.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

From the sheet catalogue received we gather that the principal winners were:—MEMBERS' YORKS., Messrs. Furniss, Tomlinson, Webster, Jones, Champion, Butler. NOR., Woolhouse, J., Dunford. BRIT., Walsh, Baxby, Falding, Bailey. NOVICE YORKS., Fowler, Blunt, Carr, Maynard, Wardley, Hartley, Webster, Pickering. NOR., White, Bailey, Woolhouse, L., Curley, Hobson.—Ed.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

N.F. show, held June 21, at Horse and Jockey, Attercliffe. About 87 birds were staged, being below the average of former years, owing to the bad season which most of the members have experienced. Some grand teams were on view, Mr. Webster taking premier honours with a splendid yellow, this bird taking special for best member's Yorks. Novices came up strongly, some grand all-round birds were staged, notable amongst these being a Green exhibited by Mr. E. Palmer, this bird taking two specials. Messrs. Eason, Dyett, Exton and Hogg also staged some grand birds. British were much admired, Messrs. Duce, Ritson, Green, Bearder, Harrison, Dailow, and Hailstone putting some fine teams down. The awards were placed by the following gentlemen, who gave every satisfaction, viz., Mr. Taylor (Nor.), Mr. Champion (Yorks.), Mr. Walsh (Brit.).

MUIRKIRK.

The first young bird show, under the management of the winter show committee, was held June 28, in the Lesser Temperance Hall. The hall is a good one, although on the small side, the cage birds being staged in too close proximity to the other live stock, which at times had a disturbing effect on the young birds. The date also is somewhat early for the majority of breeders, nevertheless there were some really good youngsters staged. Mr. A. Loggie had charge of the secretarial duties, which he discharged in his usual able manner. Mr. James Garrow, Loanhead, judged, and got through his work in good time. Mr. T. Findlay had a grand team of Borders forward, and secured the Montgomery cup for the most points over the entire show. He also secured the medal for the best young Border with his winning buff cock and the corresponding special over hens with his young yellow hen. He also won special for best third prize bird with a yellow cock of fine qual. Mr. Logan secured the special for best second prize Border, with an immaculate young ticked buff cock.

HAWARDEN C.B.S.

2nd annual N.F. show, held at Glynne Arms Hotel, Hawarden, June 21. The room is a capital one for the purpose, leaving nothing to be desired. Entries totalled close on 100 birds, competition being exceptionally keen in the first two Yorkshire classes, which contained 16 entries each, which, being of a very level order, caused the judge some trouble to separate. Some really smart exhibits were put down in British and Mules, which for condition and staging could not be improved upon by the old hands, and we expect to see some of these figure in the open shows later. Special prizes were given by Messrs. G. Bellis, J. Blackham, W. Priestnall, F. Poole, B. Dutton, J. Bakewell, H. Durham, W. Davis, L. Chilton, T. Cole, J. Jones, J. Lomax, H. Powell, and E. Stafford.
